Just beneath them the red bird's mate sat moping on her nest. She had been proud of her voice. Now she sat on her four little blue eggs without eating anything and brooded all day long. When a tribe of Periwigs hopped to the limb beside her she was so startled that she fluttered her wings and fell to the ground. She struck the ground so hard that a grain of wheat that had lodged in her throat flew up and struck Captain Periwig in the eye. It bowled him over, but, being so thin, he fluttered down like a leaf. He picked up the grain of wheat and gave it to the red bird's mate. She swallowed it, threw back her head and burst into song.

Then the queer little people, having found the bird's lost voice, smiled at one another happily and went to let the pert little Periwig out of the guard house.—Youth's Companion.

RAWLES.

On February 10, 1925, Deacon John Thomas Rawles, of Nansemond County, Va., departed this life at the age of 82 years, 6 months and 3 days. He united with Liberty Spring Christian Church on April 13, 1871. He was afterward elected to the office of deacon in this Church. He performed the duties of his office with good judgment and deep spiritual interest. It was his great purpose to do good and live a clean, spiritual life. In his dealings with men he sought to be fair, truthful and honest. A man of guarded speech, his conversation was free from any indecent language.

Whereas, the Board of Deacons of Liberty Spring Church will lose the continued blessing of his counsel and fellowship; and,

Whereas, said board desires to record, in some measure, its high regard for the life and labor of our co-worker; therefore, be it resolved:

1. That the board of deacons record our sincere appreciation of his wise counsel, his sincere spirit of fellowship and his lovable Christian character.

2. That Liberty Spring Church bow, with us, in humble submission to this dispensation of our Heavenly Father; and that a sense of gratitude remain in our hearts for such a splendid Christian.

3. That we cherish his beloved memory and seek to carry forward the work of the Church, so dear to his heart.

4. That we express our deep sympathy to the members of the bereaved family.

5. That a copy of these resolutions be entered upon the Church record, a copy sent to the bereaved family, and a copy sent to The Christian Sun for publication.

INGRAM.

On Saturday, March 21, 1925, just as the sun was sinking in the West, the soul of Charles Ingram took its flight into that unknown realm from which none return. He had been sick seventeen days, and though relatives and friends knew that his condition was serious, yet his death was a shock to his loved one and to all who knew him. All that his physician and tender nursing could do was done to stay the hand of death, but God deemed the time best to call his spirit home.

Charlie was a consistent member of Ingram Christian Church, and was secretary of the Sunday School. He was faithful and regular in attendance to both his Church and Sunday School. In each of these places he will be missed, and in the community in which he had always resided, a vacancy has occurred which can never be filled. He was a lover of children and will be missed greatly by all the children of the community, as well as by the older people, who will remember his kind voice, genial manner and his willingness to grant favors. He is survived by his father, his stepmother, three aunts, a brother and a sister.

His body was laid to rest Monday, March 23d, in the family burial ground at Ingram, while a host of sorrowing relatives and friends listened to the last sad rites, read by Rev. J. E. McCauley, his former pastor. The floral offerings, many and beautiful, attested the popularity of this young brother who has gone from us.

May God send His comforting spirit, which is never beyond the reach of the tears of His friends, to bless and comfort the sorrowing ones in their sad hour of bereavement.

MAYNARD.

Sarah Elizabeth Maynard came to the end of her earthly existence March 22, 1925, at the age of 72 years, 6 months and 22 days. She was the wife of our beloved Robert Maynard, and to them were born eight children, three of whom survive her—Mrs. Nora Wade, of North Carolina; Mrs. Lora McDonald Blackwell, Robert Stanly Maynard. Sister Maynard had been a member of the Bethlehem Christian Church, Altamahaw, N. C., for some forty years. She leaves to mourn their loss a husband, three children, three grandchildren, and two great-grandchildren.

A large congregation was in attendance at her funeral, and the floral offerings were abundant and fine. Her body was placed in the Bethlehem Cemetery. Funeral and burial services by the writer, assisted by Rev. Bro. Frank Apple.

Most headaches due to lack of internal cleanliness

WHEN you are constipated, poisons form in the accumulated food waste and are carried to all parts of the body. Headaches follow. Biliousness, insomnia, lack of energy, all result from constipation, which if unchecked will lead to serious results.

Avoid Laxatives—Say Doctors

A noted authority says that laxatives and cathartics do not overcome constipation, but by their continued use tend only to aggravate the condition.

Medical science has found in lubrication a means of overcoming constipation. The gentle lubricant, Nujol, penetrates and softens the hard food waste and thus hastens its passage through and out of the body. Thus, Nujol brings internal cleanliness.

Nujol is used in leading hospitals and is prescribed by physicians throughout the world. Nujol is not a medicine or laxative, and cannot gripe. Like pure water, it is harmless.

Take Nujol regularly and adopt this habit of internal cleanliness. For sale by all druggists.

ALLEN.

Ersula Ann Allen, daughter of William and Martha Masten, was born in Indiana November 11, 1851, and passed from this life March 13, 1925, age 73 years, 4 months and 2 days. She was united in marriage to Simon E. Allen, November 26, 1867. To this union were born four sons—William H., M. Eddie, Chas. E., and Oscar, the last named having died in infancy. Her husband also preceded her in death just one year ago. Besides the three living sons whom she leaves behind, Mrs. Allen is survived by five grandchildren, three brothers, one sister, a number of relatives and a host of friends.

She made a profession of faith in Christ about the year 1886, and at that time became a member of Pleasant Ridge Christian Church. Such was her devout Christian walk that she was the confidence of all, and in going she has left full assurance that she was passing to her heavenly reward in triumphant faith. She was laid to rest in the cemetery at Pleasant Ridge, in the presence of a large company of people. The funeral was conducted by the writer, assisted by B. B. Buller. JOHN M. ALLRED.

APPLE.

Mrs. Laura Ann (Wagner) Apple was born May 26, 1871, and was called to her reward after a lingering illness at her home in Reidsville March 15, 1925. At the time of her death she was 53 years, 9 months and 17 days of age.

On October 16, 1892, she was married to our dear Bro. Alfred Apple, and to them were born fifteen children—ten boys and five girls. Nine of this number survive her, seven boys and two girls.

Sister Apple was a member of Apple's Chapel Church at the time of her death, having been a member of this Church since her girlhood days, when she gave her heart to God and united with God's people. It was also from this Church that her funeral was conducted by the writer, assisted by Rev. T. J. Green, the pastor, on the afternoon of March 17th, and her body assigned its final resting-place in the Church cemetery.

It was only during her last illness that I knew her, but the patience with which she bore her affliction, testified to her sweet Christian character, and it was a pleasure to visit her. Besides the testimony that she leaves behind in the hearts and minds of loved ones, friends and neighbors combine in praise of her gentle Christian spirit. She being dead still lives. Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord from henceforth: yea, saith the Spirit, that they may rest from their labors, and their works do follow them.

THE SUN'S OBSERVATORY

By Rev. S. M. Lynam.

TO DRINK IS TO LOSE $10,000.—

On a trip through Texas on his private car, the president of the Baldwin Locomotive Works, Samuel M. Vauclain, revealed a legal contract to forfeit $10,000 if he drank while in this country. Mr. Vauclain was celebrating his sixty-eighth birthday when he made known this agreement made with three officials of the same enterprise who were to forfeit $1,000 if they drank. Mr. Vauclain said that they wished to keep the Volstead act because it was law, but more because it was moral and would contribute to health and ability to work.

SOME INTERESTING FIGURES.—

At birth a man may expect to live for fifty-six years in the United States. In Australia, he has fifty-five years to live; in Germany, forty-five, and in India he has only twenty-two. When a man in the United States has lived for fifty-two years he has a further expectation of twenty-one years yet to live. The figures are compiled from the census figures of 1920. It is pathetic to notice the vast difference in the life span between the American and the Hindu. Whatever Christianity touches, it vitalizes. He came into the world that we might have life, and that we might have it more abundantly. This is literally true, even of the bodies of men.

A UNIQUE DEDICATION.—

The College of the Pacific, a Methodist institution, is having a unique dedication of its new campus. On the first day the new buildings are being dedicated to civic purposes; on the second, to music; the third day will be set aside for religious education; on the fourth day there will be a dedication to education; on the fifth, to youth; and on the sixth, to dramatics; and on the seventh day of the series of services, the plant will be dedicated to religion.

Thus, in the series of services every phase of human life will be touched upon. This illustrates in a striking way the duty of a college. It owes a debt to the whole of life, and must fulfill to it the whole obligation if it is to survive in this day of strenuous demands.

THE WEALTH OF THE NATION.—

According to recent figures given out by the United States Department of Census, the total wealth of the nation is $320,803,862,000 at the end of 1922, which are the latest figures. This is an increase of 72.2 per cent over the figures of 1912. The total wealth in that year was $186,-299,644,000. In classifying the wealth by items, real estate ranks first, being worth $155,908,-625,000. Clothing, furniture, vehicles, etc., rank second. Manufactured products comes third in the list. Taking up the wealth by States, New York leads with $37,035,262,000, and Pennsylvania, Illinois, Ohio, California, Massachusetts, New Jersey, Michigan, and Iowa appear in the order named. At the bottom of the list comes Nevada, with only $541,716,000.

GERMANS FAVOR JARRES.—

The result of Sunday's elections in Germany seems to point to Karl Jarres as the choice of the German people for President. The elections of March 29th passed quietly, with only a few street brawls by the younger members of the parties. The German constitution requires that a candidate, to be elected, must poll a majority of the votes cast. This, Herr Jarres failed to do, necessitating, therefore, another election, which has been set for April 26th. There were seven candidates in the race for the presidency to succeed the late President Ebert. Karl Jarres was formerly minister of the interior. Dr. Jarres represented the combined Nationalists and Conservatists' Bourgeois parties; Otto Braun, Socialist; former Chancellor Marx, Centrist; Ernest Thaelmann, Communist; Premier Hellpach, Democratic party; Dr. Held, Bavarian People's party; General Ludendorff, Fascist. At the next election, the candidate having the majority will be declared elected.

THE ROLL OF HONOR.—

Thirty-eight States of the Union earned places on the non-lynching roll of honor of the Federal Council of Churches during 1924. This means that in ten States mob violence was practiced. Three new States appear on the honor roll—Arkansas, Oklahoma and Virginia—while four States lost places—Illinois and Kentucky, which had been free from lynchings for two years, and South Carolina and Tennessee which had a clear record in 1923. The number of States having lynchings was one more than in 1923, but the number of the victims of mob violence was cut in half, there being but sixteen in 1924, which is the smallest number since the records of the terrible practice have been kept. It is pleasing when we can find a sign of increasing civilization. It makes us hope that we are living in a better world. Let us hope that fewer and fewer suffer at the hands of mobs. We know that this year's record will not be clean—Georgia has already stained her name.

MISSION BOARD USES RADIO.—

The Home Mission Board of the Presbyterian Church has established a radio service as a means of spreading Christianity, and have placed at its head Edmont Haynes, formerly an actor. Mr. Haynes was reached in an evangelistic campaign some time about fifteen years ago. He went into evangelistic work, and after studying at Drew Theological Seminary, he went into the Presbyterian Church. He is delivering a straight evangelistic message over the radio, and is also pastor of the Parsippany, N. J., Church. He has received much warm congratulation for his work. Many cities are using the radio for broadcasting sermons. New York, Rochester and Chicago and others are engaged in this work. There are, too, many ministers of individual Churches broadcasting their sermons. Dr. S. Parkes Cadman's afternoon services are one of the most attractive features of the radio programs. The Presbyterian Board is the first to establish in a definite way a radio service.

FOURTEEN POINTS ABOUT ALCOHOL.—

Dr. Haven Emerson, former Commissioner of Health of New York City, now with the school of medicine of Columbia University, pointed out in an interview the other day that before prohibition in New York City there were on an average six hundred deaths from alcoholism each year. He then showed that in the year following the adoption of the eighteenth amendment this death rate fell to one-tenth of its former number. He handed to his students the other day the following fourteen points about alcohol, which are most interesting: (1) Alcohol is a cause of death. (2) Alcohol is a cause of primary disease. (3) Alcohol causes disabilities through inheritance. (4) Alcohol lowers resistance to infection. (5) Alcohol increases susceptibility to poison from heavy metals. (6) Alcohol increases the mortality rate of infections. (7) Alcohol increases severity, complications and time of recovery from industrial accidents. (8) Alcohol increases the prevalence of venereal disease. (9) Alcohol increases the general morbidity and mortality from other diseases than those due directly to the use of alcohol. (10) Alcohol shortens the span of life. (11) Alcohol is a depressant drug; a protoplasmic poison. (12) Alcohol delays and renders inadequate neuro-muscular reactions. (13) Alcohol reduces judgment, discrimination, endurance and precision of action. (14) Alcohol reduces the consumption of milk in the United States.

These fourteen points of Dr. Emerson are well worth careful consideration, for the battle against alcohol is still on, and there must be no let up in the fight. We have made it illegal, but we have not banished it, nor have we destroyed its grip on many men, and the possibility of its getting a hold on the children of the land.

NOTES-PERSONALS

Rev. J. W. Wellons has stood the winter in fine fetter, and expects to be back at Elon again soon. His health is good.

Rev. W. T. Scott, of the Norfolk Memorial Temple, preached for the Holland Christian Church last Sunday evening in the absence of the pastor.

Rev. J. H. Lightbourne, of Holland, Va., is conducting services for "Enlistment Week" at Waverly, Va., Christian Church this week for the pastor.

The Sunday School and Christian Endeavor Convention of the Western North Carolina Conference will meet this year at Shady Grove, Montgomery County. Will give the announcement of the time in an early issue.

Rev. H. S. Hardcastle, pastor of the Suffolk Christian Church, preached for the pastor, Rev. W. T. Walters, D. D., at First Christian Church, Richmond, the anniversary sermon, last Sunday being the fifth year since the organization of the Church.

Rev. L. E. Smith, D. D., Norfolk, is in the midst of a great revival. Rev. Reba Crawford, "the Angel of Broadway," is the preacher. Capacity audiences of 2,000 filled the vast auditorium of Christian Temple at each service, and many are turned away unable to gain admittance. The meetings are to conclude Easter.

The Cypress Chapel Church, Rev. J. W. Roberts, pastor, is being remodeled. When this shall have been completed, it is said, the congrgation will have one of the handsomest country Churches in Virginia. This Church dates back to beyond 1780, at which date Rev. James O'Kelly preached there, and fourteen years before the organization of the Christian Church.

President Coolidge has directed William M. Jardine, the new Secretary of Agriculture, to conduct the administration's drive against speculation in wheat and other necessities of life. One of the weapons by which officials may combat speculation is the power to withdraw the license of any market the facilities of which prove to have been used to cause unnatural fluctuations.

Mr. and Mrs. Sam Leonard Davis, our most efficient pastor's helpers, are with Rev. V. W. Bargamin, of St. Paul's M. E. Church of Richmond for three weeks, from April 5th to April 17th. They will then assist Bro. A. L. Franklin, of Grace Methodist Church, for two weeks, also of Richmond. Other denominations are recognizing their worth, and are using their wonderful talents to the glory of the Lord.

Rev. G. D. Hunt, Wadley, Ala., writes April 3d: "We had a fine dedication service at Cavers Grove last Sunday. This is the new Church Bro. Amerson has recently built. It is in Randolph County, north of Wedowee. Revs. Hughes, Dollar, Veazey, Carter and Lankford were all present and had a place on the program of dedication. It was a great and good occasion. A sumptuous dinner was served in the grove at the noon hour."

TO CONVENE AT SUFFOLK.

There will be a called meeting of the officers and department secretaries of the Convention of Sunday Schools and Christian Endeavor Societies of the Eastern Virginia Conference at the Suffolk Christian Church, Tuesday afternoon, April 21st, at 1:30 o'clock. It is very important that all officers and secretaries attend this meeting. They are: officers—Col. E. E. Holland, Rev. B. J. Earp, Rev. J. H. Lightbourne, Mr. W. S. Beamon, Mr. W. K. Wagner and Mr. J. W. Falk; secretaries—Mr. W. H. Baker, Mrs. R. P. Bradford, Mrs. C. C. Rawles, Mrs. J. E. Harris, Mrs. H. H. Drewery, Mrs. Herbert Harrell, Mrs. J. M. Raby, Mrs. O. A. McAbee, Mrs. R. B. Wood, Rev. W. T. Scott, Mrs. M. L. Bryant, Prof. P. J. Kernodle.

Miss Lucy M. Eldredge will attend this meeting, and it is especially hoped we can there work out a program of activities and standards for the departmental secretaries.

Jas. H. Lightbourne,
Executive Secretary.

BIBLE CLASS ENTERTAINS.

On Sunday afternoon, March 22d, the Men's Bible Class of the Bethlehem Christian Church was host to a large group of visiting men representing the Men's Bible Classes of the Suffolk Baptist, Methodist and Christian Schools, the Berea, Liberty Springs, Holy Neck, Christian Temple and Oakland Christian Schools, the Holland Baptist and Christian Schools and another Baptist Church.

In all, between 250 and 275 men composed the visiting group, with the Suffolk and Holy Neck Christian Schools being the best represented. Mr. W. E. White is the Bethlehem superintendent, and presided over the exercises in a very fine manner. Mr. Hersey Woodward, of Suffolk, led the singing, which was engaged in with good spirit by the men. Dr. N. G. Newman offered the prayer, and Rev. J. H. Lightbourne pronounced the benediction. The address of the occasion was made by Col. E. E. Holland, teacher of the Men's Bible Class of the Suffolk Christian Church. The colonel's theme was "The Resurrection of Christ, from the Standpoint of a Lawyer," and from the first word to fall from his lips to the dying echo of the last word he uttered, the colonel had the attention and the conviction of his hearers. It was in the estimation of many one of the very finest oratorical efforts of the colonel's long career. It was a great Christian occasion, and the Men's Bible Class of the Bethlehem Church is to be commended for promoting it. The Sunday School interest in the Churches of Nansemond County is developing, and gives every indication of permanency.

THE SOUTH TO THE FRONT.

Southern States and counties moved forward in the textile ranking contained in the annual report of the U. S. Census Office for the year ended July 31, 1924, in which are listed all counties having more than 100,000 cotton spindles.

Georgia, with 2,798,242 spindles, a gain of 104,707, took fourth place, passing Rhode Island, which showed a decrease. North Carolina, with 5,266,378, is third, while Massachusetts still holds first place, with 11,792,160.

Gaston County, N. C., with 1,110,260 spindles, a gain of 157,208, is the first Southern county to pass the million mark, and is now the fourth county in the United States in number of spindles, being exceeded only by three New England counties, each of which showed a decrease for the year.

Of the 73 counties in the United States with more than 100,000 spindles, 21 are in North Carolina, 14 in South Carolina, 8 in Georgia, 5 in Alabama, and 1 each in Louisiana, Tennessee and Virginia. Four Southern counties—Gaston, N. C.; Spartanburg, S. C.; Greenville, S. C., and Anderson, S. C.—have more than 500,000 spindles in each county.

The relative prosperity of the industry in the South is shown by the fact that North Carolina worked 17,332,650,667 spindle hours and South Carolina 16,605,845,707, while Massachusetts, with more spindles in place than the two Carolinas combined, worked only 17,762,675,016 spindle hours.

These figures have been abstracted from the census report by the development service of the Southern Railway System.

Tentative plans for the erection of an interdenominational institution of religious education were recently discussed at a luncheon attended by twenty representatives of six Protestant denominations. The project would cost approximately ten million dollars. It was unanimously agreed that there is a strong need for such an institution and that Washington is the most logical place for its establishment. Under the plan, the institution would give post-graduate training in religion just as is available to the scientist or the medical man. It would have facilities for between two hundred and four hundred young men and women. The graduates might be ministers, research workers, religious directors or missionaries.

INTERDENOMINATIONAL CONFERENCE.

Interest in the Interdenominational Conference and District Convention of the Laymen's Church League grows more marked as the date for the meeting approaches. This interest is not limited to the laymen of the United States, as other countries are already arranging to have representation both as delegates and on the program.

The Union Laymen's Organization in Hawaii, with headquarters in Honolulu, has recently changed its name to the Laymen's Church League of Hawaii. This was done that they might be in position to unite with the parent body in America when a definite declaration of policy is announced following the Columbus conference, May 8th to 11th.

In writing of the change in name, the representatives of the Honolulu organization said the members felt the best way for them to express their hearty endorsement of the Laymen's Church League and to show their desire to co-operate in its program was by taking this step preliminary to the actual union of the two bodies. A representative from the Honolulu group is planning to attend the Columbus meeting.

Hon. A. O. Dawson, president of th Montreal Board of Trade, says an effort is being made to secure a delegation from Canada to attend the convention.

Hon. Newton W. Rowell, of Toronto, Canada, has accepted a place on the program, provided his duties as king's counselor permit his leaving at the time of the convention.

Dr. O. R. Avison, president of Chosen Christian College and Severance Medical College of Seoul, Korea, will be present and address the conference on "Christian Education."

PRINCIPLES OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

(1) The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.

(2) Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.

(3) The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.

(4) Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship, and of Church membership.

(5) The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by, all.

THE PURPOSE OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

The purpose of this Church is to cultivate a spirit of union among the followers of our Lord Jesus Christ of every persuasion, and to secure, if possible, the associate efforts of all true religious teachers in pointing the wicked to "the Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world."

The peculiar doctrines and tenets which have confused and distracted the Christian world are remanded to private judgment, and hence cease to be matters for debate, only in so far as may be necessary to prevent a sectarian influence from entering the Church.

This Church requires no compromise of faith on the part of any child of God in order to communion or fellowship; here denominational distinctions cease to exist, and Christian love binds the brotherhood together.

The purpose of this Church will be consummated in the conversion of the world and the union of all Christians.

SEEKING THE LIVING AMONG THE DEAD.

It is exceedingly difficult to convince the world that Christ lives and is not dead. Mary and the others on the first resurrection morning sought Him among the dead, and they heard these words, "Why seek ye the living among the dead? He is not here, but is risen" (Luke 24:5). Each Easter since that day emphasizes that fact, and celebrates that event, but the world—even the Christian world—learns with great difficulty that He is the risen and living Christ.

He lives today to solve every problem and surmount every difficulty that confronts mankind, if only men and women will seek and accept Him as their living, and not their dead, Redeemer and Deliverer. War, famine, pestilence, industrial oppression, exploitation, drunkenness, coveteousness, idolatry—these are comprehensive terms and signify danger and disease, and poverty and death; but our living Christ is equal to their solution. And the only reason He has not solved these problems and abolished them from the earth is because we have not given Him a chance at them. We have not been willing to believe that He is alive to these issues and have left Him out of our reckoning when dealing with them.

If we wish to find Christ today, we must look for Him not in the dead issues and the barren tombs of the past. We must look for Him as He walks among the living events and issues of our time, and as He yet works at the unfinished task of reaching and redeeming men. No one has yet reached and won the world's heart. And our risen Christ is not only one who is seriously bidding for the world's heart, seriously seeking to win all the world to the right way of thinking, acting, living. The world outlives and outreaches other teachers, explorers, heroes; but it never outlives or outreaches the Christ. Our God is moving on, and He bids us follow Him through the precepts of a living and a risen Saviour. That is the lesson of Easter.

STUDENT WORLD CONFERENCE.

It is proposed that during the Christmas holidays 1925-'26, the students of the world should be called into conference to consider the present situation as it affects the religious life of the youth of the Churches.

Preliminary meetings of leaders in the student work of the Churches have resulted in the appointment of an executive committee with Stanley High as chairman. On April 10th, in New York City, this committee will convene a representative body of adults and students of each denomination to settle finally the whole undertaking. Our Church is to be represented by Rev. P. S. Sailer and Mr. A. Lucius Lincoln, a graduate student in Columbia University.

The purpose of the conference has been set forth tentatively as follows:

Aim.

1. To see the mind of Jesus as the record reveals it.

2. To see what conformity to the mind of Jesus involves for us as individuals and for the Church and State.

Typical Questions Likely to Arise.

1. Has historical Christianity reflected the mind of Jesus?

2. Does the Church today reflect the mind of Jesus?

3. Can society be so organized as to reflect the mind of Jesus?

Mr. Stanley High is the well-known author of that stirring book, "The Revolt of Youth." He is the guiding genius of this proposed conference. He knows the youth of the world and may be depended upon to bring to bear upon any discussion not only an accurate fund of information, but what is more to the point, a genuine Christian attitude.

CHRIST, THE MISSIONARY MOTIVE.

By Rev. E. Stanley Jones, D. D.,

Lucknow, India.

There is a good deal of misunderstanding as to what constitutes the missionary aim and motive, and never have we needed to clarify the issue as now. We are told that we are "International Meddlers," that we are "Creedmongers to the East," that we are the religious side of imperialism, that we are the forerunners of capitalism, that we represent a great hunger to see an ecclesiasticism prevail around the world.

We ought to face the problem squarely and, under the closest scrutiny, tell just what we are trying to do. We can determine this in the quiet of the study where we brood over human motives and aims, or we may determine our objective in the thick of the struggle on the field where ideas meet ideas and civilizations meet civilizations. My personal conclusions have been reached in the thick of the battle, by the sheer exigencies of the struggle itself.

When I first went to India eighteen years ago I was trying to hold a very long line—the line from Genesis to Revelation, on to Western civilization and the Christian Church. There was no well-defined issue. The non-Christian invariably pitched the battle at Moses or at Western civilization. He always seemed to ignore the central point.

Then I saw that I could shorten my line, that I could refuse to know anything save Jesus Christ and Him crucified. I could take my stand there and make Him the sum total of the aim and the motive of my message.

The situation cleared when we took the one central theme. The Indian people found that we were not there to make them pale copies of the West; we respected anything fine in their civilization, in their struggle after God. They learned that we were there not to wipe out that struggle, but to give them a person, Jesus Christ, whom they could interpret through their own genius and national past and could express in a living way.

Up to that time in India, we seemed to have been up against a stone wall. We were making great progress among the outcastes, but we were scarcely making any progress among the educated classes. When we clarified the issue and made Christ the one issue, then there was a new burst of power. We found ourselves in the midst of a revival of interest in Jesus as a person who captivated the thought of the East. The people had thought that if they took Christ, they would have to take Western civilization also, but when the revelation dawned upon the minds of the East that they could have Christ with as little or as much of Western civilization as they desired, then there was a new outbreak of spiritual power and interest in Jesus Christ that far surpasses anything that we had seen.

In thinking over this matter and trying to discover what the different systems were trying to produce, I saw that each religion had its own peculiar aim: Greece said, "Be moderate; know thyself." Confucianism said, "Be superior; correct thyself." Buddhism says, "Be disillusioned; annihilate thyself." Hinduism says, "Be separated; merge thyself." Mohammedanism says, "Be submissive; bend thyself." Shintoism says, "Be loyal; suppress thyself." Judaism says, "Be holy; conform thyself." Modern materialism says, "Be industrious; enjoy thyself." Modern dilettantism says, "Be broad; cultivate thyself." Christianity says, "Be Christ-like; give thyself."

Now, if the aim of Christian missions is to produce Christ-like character that it may give itself as Jesus gave Himself, then we have no reason to apologize for that aim and motive, for there is nothing higher than to be Christ-like.

The aim of Christian missions, then, is not to propagate Western civilization around the world—they may take as much or as little as they wish; we are not there to project an ecclesiasticism throughout the world, but we are there without apology, openly and without the slightest hesitation, to say that we think it is worth while to make men like Jesus Christ.

First of all, that is a worthy aim for our own lives, we would like to be like Him. We, too, would like to catch His Spirit, His thought, His purpose, and His power. We would like to give ourselves as He gave Himself. If this is the end of Christianity, then there is not the slightest reason why we should hesitate to make that the aim of the Christian missions.

Jesus is not a way of life—He is life itself. He came not to set certain truths alongside of other truths. Jesus came to be Truth itself. In Him, truth looks out at me from understanding eyes, touches me with redemptive hands, and loves me with a warm, loving heart.

Jesus came not to bring a religion, as Dean Inge says, "to set alongside of other religions"—Jesus came to be a religion itself, and if we go deep enough into religion, we must stand face to face with Jesus, who is religion itself in its final expression. Jesus Christ sums up the finest in the East and the finest in the West.

Greece said that three things caught her attention in worship. They were the good, the beautiful and the true. That sums up the finest thinking in the West. The East, brooding over these same problems, has come to the conclusion that there were three ways out, namely: the gyan marg, the way of knowledge; the bhakti marg, the way of devotion; and the karm marg, the way of works.

Jesus said, standing midway between East and West, "I am the way, the truth and life." I am the way—that is, the good; I am the truth—that is, the true; I am the life—that is, the beautiful. He is what the Greeks unconsciously desired.

He turns to the East and He says, I am the way—that is, the karm marg, a way of life, a method of working; I am the truth—that is, the gyan marg, the way of knowledge; I am the life —that is, the bhakti marg, or the way of devotion. He is what India has unconsciously desired.

Jesus then stands midway between East and West and fulfills everything that life strives for, and East and West will one day find in Him what they need.

A lawyer rose in the crowd in India and said, "Is that what you are trying to do? Do you want to give us Christ and Christ alone?" I said, "My brother, I have nothing else to give."

He replied: "I do not see how we Indians can hate Him. I thought you had come here to wipe out our past and all our Indian culture. If your aim is to give us Christ, let us take Him and interpret Him through our own genius and life, I do not see how we Indians can oppose it."

Let Jesus Christ touch men with His own vital presence and power, and there will come a new vitality, for Jesus appeals to the soul as light appeals to the eye, as truth fits the conscience, as beauty speaks to the aesthetic nature. Christ and the soul were made for one another, and if we can bring the soul of any human being in contact with Jesus Christ, that soul will see in Him not only a way of life, but life itself; not a truth, but truth itself.

India has become my home; India's people are my people, her problems are my problems, and her future is my future. I would bear upon my heart her sins if I could lift her to my Saviour. One day I said to a group of prominent men: "Brothers, what are we going to do with these 60,000,000 outcastes? They are a millstone around our national neck, and we can never be strong until we lift them."

A non-Christian replied: "Sir, it will take a Christ to lift them."

"Yes, my brother," I said; "a Christ to lift them and to lift me, to lift the rest of us."

That non-Christian, searching for some redemptive force to solve his problems, put his finger upon Christ as the one way out.

Some years ago, Dr. John R. Mott, speaking in Victoria Hall, Madras, was hissed when he used the name of Christ. Nine years later in that same hall, Jesus Christ and Him crucified was the one topic for six nights. The crowd increased every night until they were standing around the windows and doors. I asked men publicly and openly to give themselves to Jesus Christ. If one had responded, I should have been grateful; if five had come, I should have been overwhelmed—but between 100 and 150 came and took their stand frankly and openly as followers of Jesus Christ, in the very hall where nine years before the name of Christ had been hissed.

The change was not due to a difference in the speakers or their presentation. In that nine years a new revelation had dawned upon the mind of India, a new revelation that Christ belongs to her as much as He belongs to the West. Christianity is breaking out far beyond the borders of the Christian Church, and the question that we must face is this: will the Christian Church be great enough and Christ-like enough to be the medium through which Christ will express Himself to the non-Christian world? If so, then there must be a finer and more utter abandon to Jesus Christ, with more of the spirit of service and less of racial patronage.

If we go to India to serve in the spirit of Jesus Christ, the whole East is wide open, and will respond. If we come full of patronage, the East is closed.

A Brahmin gentleman said to a friend of mine, "I do not like the Christ of your creeds and the Christ of your Churches." With a swift intuition, my friend replied, "Then, how would you like the Christ of the Indian road?" The Christ of the Indian road, with long, flowing garments, with the crowd about Him, touching blind eyes, and letting the light stream in, His hands upon the heads of unclean lepers and sending them back to health, announcing the good tidings of a new kingdom to stricken humanity, and telling of His dying upon a wayside cross for men, and rising again from the dead. How differs this Christ of the Indian road from the Christ of the Galilean road?

Christ must be naturalized upon the Indian road, and upon the Chinese pathways and upon the highways of Japan, so that every nation will find in Him the true expression of its own national thought and outreaching of heart and will see in Him what they have craved through the weary centuries.

One day, speaking to Mahatma Gandhi, I said: "I am very anxious to see Christianity naturalized in India, not something identified with foreign people and foreign government, but a part of the national life of India and contributing its power to India's uplift. What would you suggest that we do in order to make that possible?"

He thought a moment, and then said: "If you are going to do that, I would suggest to you four things: First, that all Christians, missionaries, and all, live more like Christ."

Through his eyes, three hundred and twenty million people were looking, and through his voice, those millions were speaking. He said: "If you come to us in the spirit of Jesus Christ, then we cannot resist you.

"Second, I would suggest that you practice your religion without adulterating it or toning it down."

We might have thought that India would desire Christianity toned down in order to meet the non-Christian world half-way. But no! the non-Christian world has discovered the high challenge, and the amazing appeal of Christ, and says to us: "Do not adulterate Christianity; give it to us in its rugged simplicity and its high demands, and live out the life—then we cannot resist it."

Some one has suggested that we are too often "inoculating the world with a mild form of Christianity, so that it is practically becoming immune against the real thing." We are not interested in giving India a mild form of Christianity. Let her take Christ just as He is in His mighty, saving, overwhelming power to change human nature and to make men new.

"Third," Mr. Gandhi said: "I would suggest that you put your emphasis upon love, for love is a central thing in Christianity."

He did not mean love as a sentiment, but love as a working force. If God is Love, then the highest power is love; the highest power of omnipotence is Calvary, and the one way out of our world's difficulties is to catch the spirit of love that Jesus Christ manifested and embody it in race relationships, in international relationships, in every other relationship of life.

"Fourth," said Mr. Gandhi, "I would suggest that you study the non-Christian religions more sympathetically to find out the good that is in them in order to have a sympathetic approach to the people."

We should be unafraid of truth wherever it is found. Christ is the fulfillment of all truth, and truth is a signpost that points toward Him who is the truth.

Note those four things. Be more like Jesus Christ; practice Christianity without adulterating it; put your emphasis upon love; be unafraid of truth anywhere. "If you will come to us in that spirit," said Mr. Gandhi, "we cannot resist you."

As Christians, that challenges us and sends us to our knees. Some of us who went to the East as teachers are staying as learners. We believe that the one great need of India and of the whole world, East and West, is Christ Himself. The great pathetic lack of the non-Christian world is that they have no Christ. Do we see any one who is getting along well without Him? We make no apology, then, for being Christian missionaries, for Jesus Christ is the supreme and controlling motive for our lives.

We need to lift up, not an emasculated Jesus, but a Jesus able to do all things that human nature needs, a Christ who is sufficient and compelling. If there is a new Christocentric emphasis upon this whole missionary work, then I believe that there will be a new burst of spiritual power around the world. Stone walls will suddenly open for Christ to enter as the risen and triumphant Lord. O majestic Christ, Thou who art walking across the nations, and bidding for the heart of the world, give us something of Thy touch, Thy presence, and Thy power.

I see no other way out for East or West than the way that Jesus offers, namely: Himself. I see no other hope for human character save to be made like Jesus Christ. I see no other way out of the world's troubled situation than the way that Jesus points. There is no other way except Jesus, who Himself is the Way, the Truth, and the Life. The best life of the East and West is revolving around Jesus Christ as the center. If we have slipped off that center into denominationalism, or have felt that our business was to create a kind of supremacy of the white race through Christianity, then we must come back to that center. Christ must be real to us. We must take Him to India and other lands. As a leading thinker in India said one day, "There is nobody else who is seriously bidding for the heart of the world except Jesus Christ." We have many critics in all this, but no rivals; we have many critics, but no one else with such an aim, namely: an aim to make this a Christ-like world, that it may give itself for the sake of our fellow-men as Jesus Christ gave Himself for the sake of all. If the motive and aim of Christian missions is to produce Christ-like character which will give itself, then we have no apology to make for Christian missions.—Missionary Review of the World.

Had the world known and fully felt the issues, the hours Jesus lay in the tomb would have been the most tense in the long flight of time. Even now it fills one's heart with awe to read: "And Joseph took the body, and wrapped it in a clean linen cloth, and laid it in his own ne wtomb, which he had hewn out of the rock; and he rolled a great stone to the door of the tomb, and departed. . . . So they (the Pharisees) went, and made the sepulchre sure, scaling the stone, the guard being with them." Can the seal ever be broken and the stone rolled away? Faith waited, hope trembled, love wept and then—morning came.

"O what a night was that which wrapt
The heathen world in gloom!
O what a sun which rose this day
Triumphant from the tomb!"

Easter is the supreme day in the history of the world, because on that day it was demonstrated that death does not end all.

SUFFOLK LETTER.

Nature furnishes no amusement. Science has discovered nothing funny. Nothing is ridiculous in the Word of God. In these three realms truth in its purity, its plainness, its usefulness, and its beauty is seen throughout. All of these contain pleasing elements; but there are two kinds of pleasure. "The Lord taketh pleasure in them that fear Him"; that is, the Lord is satisfied with those that fear Him. Paul speaks of "high-minded lovers of pleasures more than lovers of God." These words seem to imply two kinds of pleasure. Moses chose "rather to suffer affliction with the people of God, than to enjoy the pleasures of sin for a season." Satisfaction in right is a higher type of pleasure than the enjoyment of pleasure in wrong. There is a difference between entertainment and amusement. There are really two types of entertainment—there is entertainment that satisfies and exalts, and there is entertainment that dies in regret.

The modern world has made pleasure, amusement, light entertainment, a social hospitality an intellectual attraction, a religious activity. In many places and in many institutions it has taken the heart out of society, school, and Church. Its widest influence is exerted over the young. It has led the young into the wide road of pleasure, and closed the door to the higher and more important things of life. No sane person, no religious person would rob the young or the old of enjoyment; but artificial methods can never give as permanent satisfaction as the real and sacred things of life. No amusement is equal to useful knowledge, and no play is equal to honest work for satisfaction. Even children, when nature has fair play in their lives, imitate realities. Little girls keep house, attend to babies, visit one another, make garments, conduct school; while little boys ride horses, keep store, act soldiers, build railroads, plant seed, build houses and treat patients. Their world to them is a real world, as real as the blade that grows into the full harvest. The best art is a reproduction of real objects. The landscape, the sunset, the winding river, the highest conception of the best in the world, in humanity, and in Jesus Christ, give the greatest and most lasting satisfaction to mankind. The finest in education is the appreciation of the truest, the most useful, the most elevating for the mind and the heart. Diversion, amusement, frivolity, may have a small place in human society, but intemperance in such things robs life of happiness and hope. To be intoxicated with pleasure is to unfit men and women for marriage, business, leadership, and useful service. It is more deceptive than to be drunk with wine, and it is more universal. Men ought to learn that the greatest pleasure is in the best Christian life. "Remember now thy Creator in the days of thy youth, while the evil days come not, nor the years draw nigh, when thou shalt say, I have no pleasure in them." W. W. Staley.

ELON LETTER.

The Richmond (Va.) Alumni Association has set a most worthy and commendable example for others to follow in sending to the Carlton Library a fine collection of books, all of them valuable and some of them exceptionally so.

The books came by the hand of Mrs. P. J. Kernodle, the moving spirit of the undertaking. Mrs. E. E. Moffitt sent eleven volumes of the Southern History Association, given in honor of Dr. E. L. Moffitt, former president. Dr. and Mrs. W. T. Walters donated a family Bible in the German language, printed before the Declaration of Independence in 1767.

The librarian has expressed appreciation to the Richmond alumni for their well-conceived gift to their alma mater, but I felt public expression of our gratitude should be expressed in this way. Let other alumni in organized form or as individuals emulate the example of their Richmond brothers and sisters. The library is in especial need of books on historical and scientific questions and standard reference works and general classical literature. Books treating in any way the Christian Church or its institutions or by its members will be greatly helpful.

The college library has been made the official repository of the records and publications of the Church. Any Christian Annual sent us or college catalogue or bulletin will be serulously preserved in this fire-proof building, and we feel it will be absolutely safe for friends to send us books or other publications.

Of course, gifts of money may be sent too. The more recent books have to be purchased outright, and it requires money to buy them.

The Carlton family has given Elon and the Church a splendid library. We know of none anywhere so well appointed as ours. The rest of us will wish to show our appreciation by sending books or money. W. A. Harper.

FIFTY YEARS WITH THE BIBLE.

There is no doubt that Abraham Lincoln's conception of manhood and character was build up from his study of the Bible. In his childhood and youth, it was the one Book of the community; in his father's house it was constantly read, debated, quoted. He grew to know it textually as few men do. It colored what he wrote and cropped out in his daily conversation. Many of his keenest and most widely quoted comments on public matters during the Civil War were direct or adapted quotations from the Bible. Thus, there was his dismissal of the Fremont boom in 1864. Fremont was a "protest" candidate for the presidency. His supporters loudly claimed that at the Cleveland convention, held in the spring of that year, he would draw "thousands." But it turned out that there were only some four hundred persons present. When this was reported to Lincoln, his only comment was to pick up the Bible, which always lay on his office desk, open it without hesitation and read: "And every one that was in distress and every one that was in doubt gathered themselves unto him, and he became captain over them, and there were with him about four hundred."

But Lincoln knew the Bible spiritually—felt its truth; and particularly did he understand the type of character that the Bible holds up to man and strives to make him love and emulate. I think it is quite clear, both from Lincoln's words and actions, that he believed that it was only the kind of man that he saw portrayed in the Bible who could ever be of any lasting and powerful influence in building up democracy.—Ida M. Tarbell.

A FREAK BIBLE.

Professed friends of the Bible and religion do some strange things in order to carry out their idea of what the Bible ought to be. The latest instance of that which we have seen is what is called "The Prohibition Bible." It seems that some prohibition enthusiasts has issued an edition of the Bible from which he has eliminated every reference to wine, or else has retranslated such passages so as to change their meaning. It seems strange that any student or even any casual reader of the Bible should overlook the curse pronounced by God (Rev. 18:19) upon any one who shall take away any part of the Bible. He says: "If any man shall take away from the words of this prophecy, God shall take away his part out of the book of life, and out of the holy city, and from the things which are written in this book." This is very plain teaching. While the Bible has a good deal to say about wine, it never encourages its use as a beverage. On the other hand, it has a great deal to say of the evil of drinking wine. The Bible recorded facts as to the doings of people whom it mentioned. If all references to any form of sin are to be cut out of the Bible for fear they will encourage some one to commit these sins, the Bible will be of little value to men. It seems strange that any man should think he can make a better Bible than God made.—Presbyterian of the South.

RICHMOND CHURCH OBSERVES FIFTH ANNIVERSARY.

The fifth anniversary services of the First Christian Church, Richmond, Va., were well attended last Sunday. Rev. H. S. Hardcastle, pastor of the Suffolk Church, preached the anniversary sermon, on "Church Loyalty."

Church work for the year is considered to have been very successful. The membership has increased 87 per cent and the average attendance in the Sunday School 43 per cent, it is reported. Contributions for all purposes during the year amounted to $103.08 per member.

Starting with a Church membership of forty and a Sunday School enrollment of seventeen five years ago, the Church has grown to 131 and the Sunday School to 118. The official board of the Church is composed of P. J. Kernodle, J. W. Price, D. W. Darden, P. J. Carlton, F. S. Gardner, J. T. Kernodle, D. J. Kelly and Mrs. C. W. Woodward. Rev. W. T. Walters is the pastor.

The anniversary sermon by Rev. H. S. Hardcastle was in part as follows:

"If I forget, O Jerusalem, let my right hand forget its cunning; if I do not remember Thee, let my tongue cleave to the roof of my mouth."—Psa. 137:5-6.

Religion is man's most vital concern. For religion at its best is a matter of personal relationship between a man and God. And certainly there is nothing in all the world that surpasses in significance or importance the matter of a man's personal relationship with his Creator. It affects his usefulness and happiness here and his destiny hereafter. All other things, however seemingly important, take second place to this supreme fact of life, and he who neglects this all-important factor does so at his peril.

Other organizations can and do do many of the things that the Church is doing. But, after all is said and done, the Church of Jesus Christ is the one institution that is primarily and exclusively concerned with religion.

If, then, religion is man's most vital concern, and if the Church is primarily concerned with religion, man's most vital concern, it follows that we are under moral obligations to give the Church our loyalty. There are four general ways in which we can express our loyalty.

The Church has many critics. And these critics are of two kinds—those without the Church and those within the Church. And it would seem at times that the latter outnumber the former. Now, it must be admitted that the Church is open to criticism. She has many faults and certainly she falls far short of the divine ideal. Made up, as she is, of folks like you and me, it is inevitable that she be imperfect. Without being blind to her faults or excusing her shortcomings, we should boost her and dare to hope for better things; we should use a tone of optimism and hope when speaking of her.

Attendance is Real Question.

The matter of Church attendance is a real question with many people. Their lives are so crowded through the week, Sunday is the only day they have free. Churchgoers fall into two groups—those who go as a matter of course, and those who do not. For the former group, the question is recognized as a duty or a regular appointment, and only providential circumstances will prevent such people from going to Church.

The kingdom of God is a spiritual enterprise, and it can never be established by raising money; but it can never be maintained and extended without raising money. And as an agency dedicated to the establishment and extension of the kingdom, the Church has a right to expect money.

The Church has the twofold mission of developing men who reproduce the character of Jesus Christ in their lives and who express His spirit in their conduct. Much of the criticism against the Church has been on the grounds that it has failed in each of these tasks. One of the most practical and helpful ways in which we can show our loyalty to the Church is to try to be like Jesus Christ and to carry His spirit into every phase of our lives, personal and social.

CHURCH NEWS.

The Church work in my field is interesting and active. At Haw River, we have an excellent Sunday School and Christian Endeavor Society, and the prayer meetings are well attended. The Church and Sunday School have recently purchased song books and the choir has three musical instruments in addition to the organ.

The missionary society is an earnest, working group. Its workers are deeply interested in the great subject of missions. We have a nice congregation here, and in it are many young people. The Sunday School here outnumbers the Church membership. One member was received into Church fellowship recently.

A group of Christian Endeavorers motored to my home a few evenings ago and remembered their pastor and his wife with a nice donation. It was a nice and joyous group. Their thought and kindness are much appreciated.

The work at Long's Chapel is opening up well. They have a nice, remodeled Church building. The audiences are growing and much interest is manifested. In this congregation are quite a number of young people. The Church grounds and cemetery are in excellent condition. Three members have been received this year. The Sunday School has been reorganized, and we hope a missionary society will be organized at an early date. Two deacons, excellent young men, have been recently ordained.

Union is one of our old Church organizations. As a place of worship, it must date back more than a hundred years. They have a nice concrete-block Church building. The congregations here are large and increasing as spring opens up. We have an interesting Sunday School and a growing missionary society of interested workers. The Church is contemplating the purchase of Church hymnals at an early date. There are quite a number of young people in this community, and they attend Church.

A SPIRITUAL AWAKENING.

A short time ago, writes a friend, a young man who has not gone to Church or read his Bible for a long time, but who recently began to take a great interest in good literature, came to me full of enthusiasm over something that he had read in a magazine.

"Listen to this," he said, opening the periodical. He read for a few minutes, and there was a new note of reverence in his voice as he ended with: "Or ever the silver cord be loosed or the golden bowl be broken or the pitcher be broken at the fountain or the wheel broken at the cistern. Then shall the dust return to the earth as it was, and the spirit shall return unto God who gave it." His face glowed as he exclaimed: "Isn't that wonderful?"

"It is," I agreed. "Would you like to read more by the same author?"

He nodded, and I handed him my Bible that lay on my desk.

He stared at me. "You don't mean to say that's from the Bible?"

I nodded and opened the book at the 12th chapter of Ecclesiastes, and he read: "Remember now thy Creator in the days of thy youth, while the evil days come not, nor the years draw nigh when thou shalt say, "I have no pleasure in them."

"I didn't know that was in the Bible," he said quietly. "Are there any more passages like that?"

I turned to the fifty-third chapter of Isaiah and then passed on to other beautiful passages both of the Old Testament and of the New. He listened to them eagerly.

A few days ago he said to me: "I'm going to Church now." He had found his God again through reading the Bible.

It has been a real joy to watch the spiritual awakening of that young man who had been rejecting the spiritual food for which he really hungered because at some time in his youth it must have been served to him unattractively.—Youth's Companion.

WHY IS AMERICA GREAT?

De Tocqueville, the distinguished French statesman, was commissioned to visit America for the purpose of studying the genius of our institutions. In reporting to the French Senate, he said:

"I went at your bidding and passed along their thoroughfares of trade; I ascended their mountains and went down their valleys; I visited their manufactories, their commercial markets, and emporiums of trade; I entered their judicial courts and legislative halls—but I sought everywhere in vain until I entered the Church. It was there, as I listened to the soul-elevating principles of the Gospel of Christ, as they fell from Sabbath to Sabbath upon the masses of the people, that I learned why America was great and free, and why France was a slave."

"Heart-keeping," says Dr. Cuyler, "is very much like housekeeping. There must be a continual sweeping out of dirt, a daily washing of dishes and a perpetual battle with all sorts of vermin. If heart-cleaning could be done up once for all, then the Christian might have an easy time of it. And just because the assaults of subtle temptations are so constant, and the uprisings of sinful passions are so frequent, and the task of keeping the inward man what it ought to be is so difficult, many a one who begins a religious life gets discouraged and makes a wretched failure. The question with every Christian is: 'Shall these accursed Amalekites of temptation burn up all my spiritual possessions and overrun my soul? Shall outward assaults or inward weakness drive me to discouragement, and disgrace me before my Master and before the world? Or shall they drive me to Jesus, who will give me the victory?' "—Selected.

STEWARDSHIP AND PROMOTION.

By Warren H. Denison, D. D., Secretary.

A Stewardship Conference.

The new publishing house of the Christian Church is to be dedicated with appropriate exercises April 22d. Of course, large numbers of our people will attend. On the following morning (Thursday, the 23d) a stewardship conference will be held for all stewardship officials who may be present. Some important matters will be discussed, and all Convention, Conference and local Church stewardship secretaries are hereby invited to be present. In case a local Church does not have a stewardship secretary, yet the chairman of the finance department, or committee, is invited.

Warren, Ind.—Reading Contest.

We spent Saturday night and Sunday, March 21st and 22d, in a stewardship institute with the Warren Church, which closed a most interesting and profitable stewardship reading contest in which three hundred or four hundred people participated. The universal testimony was that it had been a great blessing. Some fifty tithers were enrolled. The contest lasted for a month. We recommend such contests to any Church.

Church Budgets.

1. Be sure to have your budgets oversubscribed. There are always some who have misfortune. Some die. If you seek just to get your budget subscribed, you may come short of real needs and have the undesirable annual deficit.

2. The benevolent budget is usually a minimum budget—the least that the Church feels that it should give. This budget should be added to when possible. It should be supplemented on the special days; that is, opportunity should be given to make additional gifts to the regular weekly gift. When the pastor preaches an inspirational sermon on some phase of Christian work, a sermon full of information, setting forth special needs, the members should have an opportunity to express their interest by additional gifts if they care to do so. Pressure need not be brought but opportunity should be given. When a deep impression is made, opportunity for expression should be given.

3. In a rapidly growing number of Churches the local current expense budget and the benevolence budget should be equal. As much for others as for ourselves should be the aim of many of our Churches. Is your Church in that list? There are thousands of Churches in the United States whose benevolent budgets are larger than their current expense budgets.

The annual United Stewardship Council meeting will be held April 28th in New York City. This council is made up of the stewardship men of some twenty or more denominations.

CAVINESS MEETING.

The great evangelist, Rev. H. C. Caviness, started a series of meetings at Liberty, Vance, March 22d, and the meeting has only begun. The revival has not come, and the evangelist will hold on till the victory is won. The messages have been filled with power and the spirit of God. Mr. Charles Yelton has truly brought the gospel in song. We know these men are of God, sent to us for a great awakening to the salvation of lost souls. We invite all people in reach to come to hear them. Service at 3 P. M. and 7:30 P. M. each day. Come and bring others.

Mrs. R. J. Newton.

THE MOONEY CHRISTIAN EDUCATION BUILDING.

By Prof. S. A. Bennett, Director.

When we think of the work of the Christian Church and its contribution to American Church life, there are many achievements that give us just cause for satisfaction. In looking at the splendid new buildings at Elon College, with their equipment, it seems almost like a dream. But I enter them and in them go about my work day after day and am made to realize that they are real buildings, not merely a vision, but rather the realization of a vision. None of these magnificent structures mean as much to me as the Mooney Christian Education Building. I shall try and explain its arrangement and interpret its uses in our program of Christian education at Elon.

The first floor is in two units and is designed to provide facilities for the social and religious activities of the college young people. The South end of this floor is given to the work of the young women. Here is provided a commodious and neatly furnished assembly-room for the Y. W. C. A. There is a stage with curtains, piano, and speaker's stand. On one side there is a dressing-room with toilet facilities and on the other a well-arranged kitchen with running water, sink and electric range. At the front of the building are four parlors for the use of the social clubs organized among the young women. This convenient equipment provides in an admirable way for the social and religious life of the young women.

At the north end of the first floor there is exactly the same arrangement of rooms for the use of the young men. Here the Y. M. C. A. meets and the social and religious life of the young men are brought together in a fine way. The entrance to the men's part of the building is at the north; the entrance for the women at the south, with no connecting openings between the units, thus giving to each the exclusive use of their unit.

The second and third floors are reached by an entrance at the center on the west side. The second floor has a chapel that will seat 400, with a furnished stage, dressing-room and organ room. Adjoining the chapel, there are two fine offices for the pastor and the director of the week-day religious school. There are also on this floor four light, well-arranged recitation rooms for the use of the college professors who teach in the School of Christian Education. Here the classes in the departments of the School of Christian Education meet daily, and the chapel is used for the daily chapel service for the Elon student body and faculty.

On Sunday, these college class rooms and chapel provide accommodations for the adult department of the citizens' section of the Church school. The chapel is also used for the Endeavor Society on Sunday evening, and for special lectures and entertainments given for the student body.

The third floor provides space and equipment for a thoroughly graded departmentalized Church school. There is a special room for the babies of the cradle roll. Adjoining this is the beginners, or kindergarten, department, thoroughly furnished. There are also the primary, junior, intermediate and senior departments, each with its assembly-room for worship and individual class rooms. Each of these departments is furnished with a piano, superintendent's desk, cabinet, coat room and needed furnishings. There is also a secretary's supply room where material is stored for use in the varied work of these departments in the various sessions of the Church school. On Sunday, the children under eighteen years of age meet on this floor for Sunday School. Through the week, these rooms are used for the respective departments of the week-day religious school. The children of the Elon public schools and of the Christian Orphanage come for this work in religious education according to a schedule agreed upon with the superintendents of the schools and of the Orphanage. This provides laboratory work for the college department of religious education.

Here every week, fifty of our college students are at work as officers and teachers going about the practical work of religious education under the supervision of the director of the week-day religious school.

There are two rooms in the basement of the building that are designed for manual training and practical art and handcraft work among the boys and girls of the week-day religious school. There is also an automatic electric elevator for use of the mothers and smaller children. This gives us a building unique in its purpose and arrangement. It is a college building designed to meet the needs of the School of Christian Education in a modern small college plant. Here the college work of the department, with its practical laboratory work in religious education and the social activities of the student body, are all brought together and correlated with the regular Church school work.

As I go about my work in this magnificent and well-equipped building, I feel the thrill of united effort in a great spiritual achievement. The lives of those who work there are joined in spirit and purpose with great souls who have toiled, sacrificed, achieved, and passed on to us their unfinished task. To them we are debtors. We shall work and try to pass to others the noble ideals and rich spiritual heritage that has come to us.

The Mooney Christian Education Building did not just happen. Some one has worked, struggled and prayed. Some one has dreamed dreams and seen visions. Some one has planned and hoped. Some one has worked and sacrificed. Out of all of this there has grown a beautiful, commodious structure—a great achievement in the spiritual aspiration of noble and loyal Christian souls.

Among those who have seen visions, who have planned, prayed and worked, I must mention the president of Elon. For years, Dr. Harper has had the work of Christian Education upon his heart. As the needs of Elon pressed close upon his life, he felt the need for such a building as this. Could it be accomplished? It must; and with prayerful earnestness he set himself to work it out.

We should indeed be grateful for men and women of sterling Christian faith who look upon life as a co-operative task. God and man working together for larger and better things in human life. The donors of this building, Mr. and Mrs. M. Orban, Jr., look upon life and its possessions as a sacred trust to be administered for the achievement of God's own purposes in human life. This building has been made possible out of the benevolence of their Christian purpose and the recognition of their stewardships before God. This benevolent gift has made us all debtors to this fine Christian family, which has so freely made possible this building and its equipments.

The Mooney Christian Education Building is to be dedicated as a memorial to the Rev. Isaac Mooney, a pioneer minister of the Christian Church in Kansas and the father of Mrs. Orban. In recognition of his fine Christian service and in appreciation of his loyal faith and life, the family has freely offered this benefaction to Elon College as a memorial to Bro. Mooney. Fitting it is that such a life should thus be honored and revered.

As I go about this noble structure, my spirit holds converse with the spirits of just men made perfect. To me, the Mooney Christian Education Building stands as a monument to the faith and work of the pioneer. It speaks to me of the Christian heritage that is ours; it stands as the fruitage of the love, devotion and faith of a long line of faithful Christian workers. Among the pioneers in the ministry of the Christian Church in Kansas three men stand out as great but humble servants in the work of the Church—Rev. E. Cameron, Rev. Henry Cole, and Rev. Isaac Mooney.* These men began their work under hardships of pioneer life in a new country. The young people of our day cannot realize the hardships and sacrifices made by the pioneer preacher of those days. For years, these men with others, spent themselves in tireless service to establish and nourish the religious life of Southern Kansas. Bro. Mooney and Bro. Cole have gone on to the great beyond, but their works still live and their spiritual children rise up and call them blessed. Bro. E. Cameron still remains a faithful veteran of the cross, feeble in body and eyesight, but strong in courage and spiritual vision. The Mooney Christian Education Building speaks to us of the noble sacrifice and loving lives of such men as these. When we think of the long line of Christian workers that have made this building possible, words fail us and we feel that indeed "others have labored and we have entered into their labor."

We are debtors; upon us has been bestowed the rich heritage of other lives. When I think of all that this building represents and the opportunities it offers to us, I pray for guidance and strength that we may be enabled to use this equipment and all its possibilities for training in the same spirit of love and faithful devotion that inspired those who have made it possible and to whom it is lovingly dedicated.

UNITED CHRISTIAN CHURCH, LYNCHBURG, VA.

CHURCH ORGANIZED AT LYNCHBURG.

In May, 1924, several families in the suburbs of Lynchburg, Va., organized a Community Church, and employed the Rev. M. F. Allen, formerly a Presbyterian minister, as pastor.

During the summer, services were held under a brush arbor. From the arbor, the congregation moved into an old store building, where they worshiped till the first of February this year, when they moved into the new building shown on this page.

The building is 32x60 feet. It is a stucco structure, plastered inside, and has a solid concrete wall eight feet high in the basement. At present, all services are being conducted in the upper room, but it is planned to equip the basement for Sunday School and young people's organizations during this year.

The building represents an investment of about $6,000 as it now stands. The work to be done on the basement will be extra of this amount.

There are forty-eight members of the Church, and one hundred and two on the Sunday School roll. The young people are doing splendid work through their organization, which meets every Sunday evening.

The congregation is made up of persons from the Episcopalian, Presbyterian, Methodist, Baptist, Disciples, and two members who had belonged to the Christian Church at Liberty, N. C. For the good of the Church it was deemed wise to unite with some larger association, conference, or presbytery. Upon investigation, it was found that all could unite as Christians, and subscribe to the principles of the Christian Church.

On March 18th, the pastor, in company with three members of the Church, motored to Elon College, where he was examined and ordained by committees representing the North Carolina and Virginia Christian Conference. The Church was also formally received by the Conference.

The prospects for this Church are bright. The location is ideal, and the principles of the Christian Church will surely appeal to many in this section.

F. H. DUNN, Secy.

It is said, according to the New Testament, the crucifixion and resurrection are both illustrated in baptism. Paul writes in Romans 6:4: "We were buried therefore with Him through baptism into death: that like as Christ was raised from the dead through the glory of the Father, so we also might walk in newness of life."

Easter day will bring us many beautiful things—flowers, music, beautifully dressed children, glad fellowships, wonderful sermons, grand worship and more; but none of these will mean more and none be more beautiful than the baptism of those who have died to the old life through faith, repentance, and confession of Jesus Christ. When one has risen from the experience of baptism, he has commenced the resurrection life.

RELIGIOUS EDUCATION

By H. S. Hardcastle.

MISS PATTIE COGHILL, Field Secretary, 11 East Newton St., Boston, Mass.

INTERNATIONAL UNIFORM SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON.

April 19, 1925.

Subject: "Life in the Early Church."

Golden Text: "The multitude of them that believed were of one heart and soul."—Acts 4:32.

Lesson: Acts 4:1-5, 11.

Devotional Reading: Psa. 133.

We cannot reproduce the conditions in which the early Church had its rise and growth. We would not if we could, for that would mean turning the clock back nineteen hundred years. But even in our modern, twentieth-century life we can apply the principles which the early Church applied. And as I read through the lesson as given for today (Acts 4:1, 5:11) I was impressed with five outstanding facts or principles which characterized the early Church and life in the early Church.

1. The early Church was made up of men of conviction. They believed something. And they believed it with an intensity and enthusiasm that was inspiring and contageous. We do not know the details of their beliefs and we do not need to know them. For he who reads the opening chapters of Acts can easily see the central fact of their belief. They believed that Jesus Christ was the Son of God. Both in Peter's preaching and in the testimony of the disciples, the center and circumference of their faith was in Jesus Christ as the Son of God. They knew whom they had believed and were persuaded that He was able to keep that which they had committed unto Him against that day.

There is a danger of being bigoted and dogmatic in religion. But in our day of creeds and beliefs it is quite possible that we need a little more of a vital faith in Jesus Christ and less speculation and theories about Christ. It is well enough to try to explain Christ; it is far better to believe in and on Christ. And in this day of free thinking and broad liberalism we need more of the abiding convictions of these men of the early Church. We need to be able to say from personal experience, "I know whom I have believed."

2. The early church was made up of men of courage. Because they feared God they did not fear men. Out of a personal experience of the Lord Jesus Christ there was born the highest type of courage—moral and spiritual courage. It is a significant fact that "when they saw the boldness of Peter and John" they took knowledge of them that they had been with Jesus. Jesus had told the disciples that they were to be witnesses for Him. And when the rulers and the priests forbade them to speak at all or to teach in the name of Jesus, they bravely replied "Whether it be right in the sight of God to hearken unto you more than unto God, judge ye. But we cannot but speak the things which we have seen and heard." In a later episode they say, "We ought to obey God rather than men." And when they had been released with a threat, they prayed that "with all boldness" they might speak the Word. We need more of this spirit of courage in our modern church life. There is a danger that we deny our Lord in word and life.

3. The early church was made up of men of co-operation. They worked together. They did not all think alike. The writer of Acts makes no claim for that. He did not say they were all of one mind. He said they were of one heart and one soul. They found in Jesus Christ that which united them in spite of class differences and differences in thinking. They were one in devotion to the Lord Jesus Christ and they were resolved to love. Perhaps this is one of the reasons why they gave witness "with great power." Jesus said that "they might be one, that the world may know that Thou hast sent me."

4. The early church was made up of men of compassion. Their religious faith found expression in loving service. When they found that there were those in their midst that lacked they were moved to help them in a practical way. They were doers of the word and not hearers only. And one of the latter wrote, "But whoso hath this world's goods and seeth his brother in need, and shutteth up his bowels of compassion from him, how dwelleth the love of God in him?" We need to learn what this meaneth, "I desire mercy and not sacrifice." We need to be members of the great sect of the Good Samaritan, who when he saw the man whom the robbers had beaten and left for dead, he had compassion on him, and he expressed that compassion in a practical way.

5. The early church was made up of men of consecration. They were willing to sell what they had and give to those that needed it. "Not one of them said that aught of the things which he possessed was his own." They realized that they were the stewards of possessions as well as of life. This is no argument for comunism or socialism in the modern sense. It is simply the natural expression of the life that is consecrated to Jesus Christ. Men who acknowledge Him as Lord and Master do not have to give all they have away; but they must feel that what they have does not belong to them. It is simply held in trust for God and others.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

April 19, 1925.

Subject: "My Denomination and Its Work."

Scripture: 2 Tim. 3:14-17, and Acts 1:1-8.

Suggestions for Leader's Talk.

The leader may begin the meeting by discussing briefly the early Church. This discussion may be based on the following facts:

(Matt. 28:1-20) The resurrection of Jesus (which made the Church a historical faith based on a great personality).

(Acts 2:1-8) The day of Pentecost (when so many confessed faith in Jesus Christ).

(Acts 4:1-4; 8:1-4) Persecutions.

(Acts 6:1-7) The first deacons.

(Acts 7:54-60) The first martyrs.

(Acts 11:18-26) "And they were first called Christians at Antioch."

The leader should follow this with a discussion of the five main principles of the Christian Church (they are printed in The Sun each week).

Suggestions for Topics.

1. What My Denomination is Doing.—This should be discussed by a member of some other Church appointed ahead of time, or extemporaneously by members of other Churches who may be present for the meeting.

2. The Colleges of the Christian Church.—These are Palmer College, Albany, Mo.; Union Christian College, Meriam, Ind.; Defiance College, Defiance, Ohio; Starkey Seminary, Lakemont, N. Y.; Elon College, N. C., and Bethlehem College, Wadley, Ala.

This topic may be discussed by some one who has attended Elon or Bethlehem. Letters from these colleges published in The Sun from time to time tell of the progress which is being made. Clippings from these may be read.

3. The Orphanages of the Christian Church.—These are Carnersville, in Pennsylvania; one for Japanese boys and girls, in Japan, and the Christian Orphanage in Elon College. All of these are doing a wonderful work. News from the Elon Orphanage appears in The Sun weekly, and clippings can be used for this meeting.

4. The Christian Church Summer Schools.—Now is the time to begin thinking about money to send at least one representative to either the Elon or Bethlehem Chatauqua this summer, and whom you will send. Special emphasis will be put on young people's work in both places, with courses in Bible, Christian Endeavor, missions, and life investment. Worship will be conducted by the young people themselves, and there will be personal and group conferences with leaders of young people's work. Mr. Hermon Eldredge will teach a course especially for young people and a young people's division of the Chautauqua will be organized. The dates are: Elon, July 27th to August 5th; Bethlehem, August 10th to 17th.

THE EASTER MESSAGE.

"For though He was crucified through weakness, yet He liveth by the power of God."—2 Cor. 13:4.

Dr. Dale, of Birmingham, great thinker and great preacher, was once walking along the street in a deeply despondent mood. Suddenly the thought flashed across his mind, "Why should I despair? Jesus is alive! Jesus reigns! He is the King Eternal and Unconquerable!" The thought of Jesus as still living and still powerful cured his despondency. He went on with new courage and new hope.

At this Easter season, we should read anew not only the story of the resurrection, but the affirmation of such a man as Paul, in these words: "Though He was crucified through weakness, yet He liveth by the power of God." That Christ was crucified is history. His weakness was voluntary. He "emptied Himself," that He might be in all things a merciful high priest. "He liveth!" This, too, is history—past history and current history. Christ's victory over death lies at the basis of our faith. His resurrection is the fact which makes the ground we stand upon like solid rock.

"He was crucified." Let us not forget this. God's only sinless Son was earth's supreme sufferer. He exemplifies the beauty of submission. the strength of weakness, the exaltation of humanity. "He liveth!" With this word, the infant Church shook the world. "I have seen the Lord," said Mary Magdalene. "The Lord is risen indeed," was the familiar salutation.

We may stand with bared heads before the crucified Christ, but we bend our knees to the living Christ. He is declared to be the Son of God, with power, by His resurrection from the dead. "He liveth by the power of God." "The power of the Highest" enabled Him to burst the bars of death. Christ liveth in us by that selfsame power. Can we live the life of faith? Can we have peace in the midst of trouble? Can we put down the things that hinder us? Can we face the future serenely? Yes, by the power of God. "Though He was crucified through weaknesss, yet He liveth in us by the power of God."

A MESSAGE TO HUSBANDS AND WIVES.

Last week, a Chicago jurist, Judge Joseph Sabath, presided over his ten-thousandth divorce case in a period of four days. The judge has spent thousands of hours listening to the weary recital of those who either never loved at all or, through some mistake or failure, had ceased longer to care.

The judge is not proud of the civilization that displays such a social condition as this reveals in one American city.

I feel that his ideas are well worthy of spreading all over the United States.

While the rural home has been more secure from the separation disease than the city home, it is well for us to ponder the sage and practical advice of this judge.

To husbands, these words are addressed:

"Make your wife a real partner. If no children are born to you, adopt some. Supply your wife with sufficient funds to maintain the household. Work together, play together, grow up together, and share the responsibilities together."

To wives, the judge says as follows:

"Do not allow yourself to be treated as a weak, dependent little thing. Do not be afraid to soil your hands. Do not be afraid of the one really big thing in your life—motherhood. Make your husband feel that he is the one man in your life. Do not flirt. Make your husband share in the responsibilities of home life."

To both man and wife, the judge gives this parting advice:

"Avoid heated quarrels. Speak out frankly, but do not develop arguments. Differences should be settled on the very day that they develop. Sympathy, good humor, and a desire for mutual understanding are the supporting pillars of the home. One of the fixed rules of every household should be: good humor in parting in the morning, and a cheerful meeting in the evening."—The Progressive Farmer.

WILLING WORKERS.

Listen! What kind of Willing Workers are you? Are you getting a beautiful mission story every month about Chinese boys and girls? Keep your pennies going into those mite-boxes, too. That helps a lot. Keep all your members coming to the meeting every month! Do you do that? How? Oh! what about a pretty little party this month—it's so springy and the flowers are growing fast. Oh-oo! it's a fine time for your party—and, listen again: all of us like to be doing things. Have a contest next time your Willing Workers meet. Ask a load of questions about our own missionaries. Their pictures have been posted, and it would be great to see who is who in our own mission work.

Boys and girls are so smart! They can do anything! Willing Workers— how splendid that some one selected that name for your society; because boys and girls are real workers, and they are most always willing to work. That's the reason they are always so happy. Work makes us happy. So, Kiddies, keep working and keep happy and stick fast to your society—as fast as a postage stamp to a letter. You will, won't you?

Our Chaplain in the United States Navy.

MONDAY.

THE TEMPLE OF THE HOLY SPIRIT.

"It is written, And my house shall be a house of prayer."—Luke 19:45-48.

While it is true that we can each one decide for himself the way he will go in life, it is just as true that having decided on a course of action we must accept the results which mark the end of that course. There is moral authority in the world, and the end of the journey is marked from the beginning. Jesus did not make the punishment of evil; He simply stated what that punishment is. His Father's house was a house of prayer and men had made it an evil place. He did not temporize or seek to persuade, but drove the evildoers from the temple, that good men might come and worship. Thus we must cleanse our lives. We cannot keep evil thoughts and holy ambitions in the same heart. Let us cleanse the temple of the Holy Spirit!

Prayer.—Almighty God, our Father, create within us clean hearts. Drive out all unholy desires and passions. Make Thou our souls fit companions of Thy Spirit. Let us feel dependence upon Thy word. May Thy authority rule in our lives. In Christ's name. Amen.

TUESDAY.

"The stone which the builders rejected, the same was made the head of the corner."—Luke 20:9-18.

Each one is responsible for making fundamental choices. We cannot be both friendly and selfish, envious and generous, we must be one or the other and each one must decide for himself. A mere compromise amounts to nothing in life's great adventure. So with Jesus Christ—we must be either for or against Him. Shall we reject the Saviour or make Him the pattern of our lives?

"So I must make my choice. Shall I travel north or south, which of the two opposites shall I love. . . . God or the world's evil. Whichever love I choose will quench and drive out the other. And thus if I choose the love of God it will destroy every worldly passion and the river of my affections will be like 'the river of the water of life, clear as crystal.'"

Prayer.—O God, our Father, we are sincerely thankful for Jesus Christ. We would choose Him and make his life our daily pattern. Fill our hearts with a great love for Christ. Let us sense the eternal significance in our daily work and in our opportunities of service to Thee and all mankind. Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

"Jesus, therefore, six days before the passover, came to Bethany, where Lazarus was . . . so they made Him a supper there."—John 12:111.

(N. B.: No record of events of this day. It is supposed that Jesus spent the day in the home of His friends—Mary, Martha and Lazarus—at Bethany.)

It is easy to picture Jesus in the home at Bethany on this day of retirement. While there is nothing in the record to tell us how He spent the day, we know that He had two sources of refreshment, prayer to God and quiet companionship with those who loved Him. How he needed strength! To be able to give Christian hospitality to those who visit our homes is a high virtue. True hospitality does not consist in loaded tables or brilliant entertainment, but in gracious, sympathetic companionship which is possible to give to all who enter our homes, however humble they may be. Let the crown of our homes be hospitality.

Prayer.—Our Father, bless, Thou, the homes of Thy people. Give them true ideals of helpfulness. Let all that dwell therein have a real sense of the responsibily that rests on each that the earthly home may reflect the blessedness of the eternal home. May our homes be such that the Spirit of Christ may find a true welcome and that He may often be our guest. Amen.

THURSDAY.

THE LAST SUPPER.

"This do in remembrance of me."—Luke 22:7-23.

In this last meeting with His disciples, Jesus sought to bind the hearts of His intimate friends to Himself and to God forever. He had learned through the years the way to God and had been strengthened again and again by the Holy Spirit. In this hour, He gave His disciples an opportunity to share His communion with the Father. As we join in this sacrament in memory of Him, His Spirit comes to our souls, and we learn the true value of things. No one can partake of the communion in truth and retain a frivolous or flippant spirit.

"Always when my soul has surrendered itself to the divine will I am refreshed. The laying down of self is the taking up of God. When I lose my will I gain the Infinite. The moment of surrender is also the moment of conquest. When I consecrate my weakness, I put on strength and majesty like a robe."

Prayer.—Eternal God, may the presence of Thy Spirit in our lives give us strength to do Thy will. May we have true communion with Thee and come to know Thee as our Father, infinite in love and tenderness. Let us be as faithful gardens bringing forth all manner of good fruit in the Spirit. O abide with us, in Christ's name. Amen.

FRIDAY.

THE CRUCIFIXION.

"And when they came unto a place which is called The Skull, there they crucified Him."—Luke 23:26-38.

The seven last words of Jesus on the Cross.—And one of the malefactors said, Jesus, remember me. And He said unto him, Verily I say unto three, today shalt thou be with me in paradise.

When Jesus, therefore, saw his mother, and the disciple standing by whom he loved, he saith unto His mother, Woman, behold thy son! Then saith He to the disciple, Behold thy mother!

And about the ninth hour Jesus cried, My God, why hast Thou forsaken me?

After this, Jesus saith, I thirst.

When Jesus, therefore, had received the vinegar, he said, It is finished.

And Jesus, crying with a loud voice, said, Father, into Thy hands I commend my spirit.

Prayer.—Most merciful Father, we pray that we may be faithful companions of our Lord. Let us never be found among the mockers, but in lowly submission may we take our place at the foot of the cross of Christ. Give us grace neither to forsake nor to deny our Lord. May we find our life in Him. Amen.

SATURDAY.

VICTORY THROUGH DEFEAT.

"We remember that that deceiver said, while he was yet alive, After three days I rise again."—Matt. 27:62-66.

The mob thought they had won, but right is never lost, and goodness endures past all the power of evil.

"Is not this the meaning of the crucifixion? That which seems to have conquered has been conquered, and that which seems to have been conquered has conquered. Evil has been trampled underfoot, though it boasts itself to be master of the world. God has smitten evil, although good seems to have been trodden underfoot by sin. Victory has come by defeat. Overcoming has been attained by undergoing."

"Tragedy runs through all history, but out of the tragedy comes the triumph. That is the law, via crucis, via lucis. The way of the cross is the way of light."

Prayer.—Our Heavenly Father, open our eyes, that we may see the mountains of the Lord round about us, that we may point many doubting and weeping souls to the way of strength and life through Christ. Amen.

SUNDAY.

THE RESURRECTION.

"Why seek ye the living among the dead? He is not here, but is risen."—Luke 24:1-12.

In the resurrection of Jesus we have the final seal of God's approving love. The life Jesus had lived, a life of utter and complete abandonment of self to the highest interests of others, this was the life of God's Son on earth. This kind of a life God has promised shall continue after the incident of death, through far ages, blessing and helping in the spiritual kingdom of Our Lord. To this sort of life all men are called. He is not far from any one of us and when the veil is lifted we shall see Him by our side. He is the King Eternal, the vicarious Saviour of the world, and in Him all the nations of the world shall be blessed.

"What think ye of Christ Friend?
When all's done and said—
Like you this Christianity or not.
It may be false, but will you wish it true?
Has it your vote to be so if it can?"

Prayer.—Eternal God, we pray that we may be conscious of Thy presence with us. Let the fruits of Thy spirit be evident in all that we do. In the heat of the day, may Thy spirit be our refreshment, and in the long watches of the night may we be comforted by Thy presence, through Christ. Amen.

MY CHURCH.

What is my Church to me? is a question every one ought to ask himself most earnestly. If it is only a social club, it does not amount to much, for it does not offer as much along that line as some other organizations. If I belong to the Church simply because it is respectable to do so, I am not getting much out of it, and am probably paying a good price for what I get. If I recognize the Church as God's establishment on earth for the welfare of the human race, that Jesus Christ is its Head, and that I have been chosen a member of it in order that I may receive the benefits of salvation and be in a position to do the most for the good of my fellow-men—then I have the right conception of the Church. Do I act in accordance with this conception? Do I show my pride in it, as I do in other things, by which I am greatly benefited? Do I support it faithfully by my attendance, my prayers, my gifts? Do I try to extend its influence by making known to others what it stands for and what it does? Am I trying to increase its membership by bringing others to accept Jesus, its Head, as their Saviour? Am I deriving from it the personal benefits that I ought to receive? What is my Church to me anyhow? And what am I doing for it? Let us all consider these questions seriously.—Presbyterian of the South.

Kiddies' Korner

MADGE FLEMING MOFFITT, Editor.

DEARS:

Mrs. Marilla and her dolly had a visitor yesterday. You couldn't ever guess who it was, so I'll just tell you now. Yes, it was; it really was —Peter Rabbit. He came all the way from South Carolina in a big ol' box, and he can hop and skip around. And, yes indeed, his fur is gray, and his eyes are so shiney black. And to tell the truth, he plays with Mrs. Marilla and her dolly all day long, and never gets tired, because—listen now: he is made out of sawdust and fur, and his eyes are two big, black beads. But he is a dear little rabbit just the same, and we all like him a lot.

But, listen, dears: once Peter Rabbit had ears no longer than a cat's, and one time his tail was long and bushy. Next week I'll tell you a story about how Mr. Owl pulled Peter Rabbit's ears out as long as they are now. Watch your Kiddies' Korner next week. Who is it that wants an Easter egg hunt. All of us? Fine! It's lots of fun to see how many beautiful eggs we can find. It's lots of fun to play all the rabbit games your teacher knows. Oh-oo! isn't Easter a happy time anyway?

Come on, dears, begin now. Play and sing and romp—outdoors we go in all this pretty weather. But be careful; watch for that April shower. It will come again, sure as the world! And after the shower there—what's that? Why, goody! it's the big ol' round sun. What fun April is anyway! YOUR EDITOR.

SURPRISES FOR TWO ON A FINE DAY.

By Frances Margaret Fox.

Once there were two little school-girls about seven years old who wished one morning that the day would be dark and rainy. When the clouds rolled away and the sun came out, they were so disappointed that they were ready to cry. The teacher noticed how sad the two little girls looked when the sun began to shine so bright that it made the sunbeams dance.

At recess she said to Ruth, "My child, don't you want the sun to shine today?"

"No, if you please," replied Ruth; "I never had a ride alone in a street car in my life, and today my mother gave me a street-car ticket and said, 'If it rains this afternoon when school is out, you may come home on the street car.' Our chauffeur can't meet me today as usual, but if the sun shines Aunt Genie is coming for me with her car."

"And you, Peachie," the teacher said, turning to the other little girl; "don't you wish the sun to shine?"

"No, ma'am," answered Peachie. "I never had a ride in an automobile in my life, and since the school-house burned in our ward I have to walk six long blocks and come to school on the street car. My Uncle Ivan is visiting us now, and he has a new automobile; and if it rained so that he couldn't go on a trip, he was going to come and get me."

Because both little girls were disappointed in the weather, they walked away hand in hand, talking. That is how they became acquainted; they had never thought of speaking to each other before.

When school was out, they walked together to the policeman's corner, and there they waited in the glorious sunshine for an automobile and a street car. The automobile came first.

"Hop in, Ruth darling," said the prettiest woman that Peachie had ever seen, as the automobile door was opened wide.

"But first, though, Aunt Genie, if you please, this little girl is Peachie and she is just as disappointed as I am."

"What is the trouble?" asked Aunt Genie.

"It is the sunshine," answered Ruth, with a deep sigh. "If it had rained, her Uncle Ivan, who has come visiting, was going to take her home in his new automobile, and Peachie says she has never so much as steppd a foot in an automobile in her life! Aunt Genie, will you take the little girl home and let her have a ride with us?"

"Why, certainly," Aunt Genie answered. "Hop in, Peachie, and tell me where you live?"

Peachie hopped in quickly, but instead of telling where she lived she said she was sorry Ruth was disappointed about her street-car ride.

That made Aunt Genie laugh aloud. "The street car is coming, Ruth," she said, "so you walk over and stand with those other little girls beside the policeman and get in with them and ride all the way to the car barns at the end of the line. I'll meet you there."

Ruth did as she was told, and soon two little girls were traveling down the avenue, one in a street car, the other in an automobile. They both looked as happy as queens in fairy tales. At the car barns, Aunt Genie and Peachie were waiting for Ruth.

"Hop in, Ruth darling," said Aunt Genie as she opened wide the door, "and now we shall take Peachie to her home. Did you have a good time?"

"Yes, I thank you," was the answer; "I had a delightful drive. It was such a surprise!" Ruth smiled and smiled and smiled.

When Peachie climbed out of the car at her home, Aunt Genie said, "And did you have a good time?"

"Yes, I thank you," answered Peachie; "I had a delightful drive, and it was such a surprise!" Then Peachie smiled and smiled and smiled.

Ever after that, those two little girls smiled when they met on the steps at school and said, one to the other, "Good morning!"

DORIS HELPS MRS. PEARL CRESCENT BUTTERFLY.

By Blanche Siher.

"Oh, goodness!" Doris cried when she spotted the lovely little reddish-brown butterfly hovering over her garden. "You are a beauty! I wonder what kind of a butterfly you are?"

"I'll tell you that if you'll tell me something," laughed the gay butterfly. "Where are the asters in this garden? I'm so bewildered! I'm Mrs. Pearl Crescent Butterfly. See the lovely crescent on my hind wings?" And Mrs. Pearl Crescent Butterfly closed her reddish-brown wings so Doris could see the lovely pearly crescents on the underside of her hind wings.

"Oh, but you are pretty!" Doris exclaimed. "Indeed, I'll show you where the aster flowers are.

"But tell me, little butterfly, is aster honey any better than any other?"

"Certainly not," laughed Mrs. Pearl Crescent Butterfly. "I'm not searching for honey just now. I'm looking for a proper place to lay my eggs, and aster plants are the only place, to my way of thinking. Now, some of my butterfly friends lay their eggs on carrot leaves. My, it makes me shiver to think of it."

By this time Doris and Mrs. Pearl Crescent Butterfly had reached the aster bed, and Mrs. Pearl Crescent Butterfly placed her little yellow eggs all up in a pile on one of the aster leaves.

"Some folks in Butterfly Land lay their eggs singly, but I don't. Sometimes I'll have as many as a hundred in a pile," the merry butterfly chatted.

"But I should think they would have a hard time hatching out, all piled up so high like that," laughed Doris. "Don't the ones you lay first hatch out first?"

"Isn't that funny," replied Mrs. Pearl Crescent Butterfly; "they do not. The eggs on the very outer edge of the leaf hatch out first. That way, they don't disturb the others. By the way, haven't you ever seen those little blackish caterpillars dotted with yellow with a yellowish stripe or band on each side? Well, now," as Doris shook her head, "you just look for them is about a week's time."

"But won't they spin webs all over my aster plant?" asked Doris, looking at the yellow eggs all piled on top of each other; "will they eat up my aster plants?"

"The caterpillars from Pearl Crescent Butterflies never spin webby houses around the leaves like some do," replied Mrs. Pearl Crescent Butterfly. "But they do eat the leaves sometimes. But look at the number of plants yo uhave here. Surely you can spare one plant, can't you?"

"Indeed I can," laughed Doris. "Go right on, Mrs. Pearl Crescent Butterfly, and don't you worry about your children. I'm going to watch and help take care of them until they turn into lovely butterflies like you are."

Mrs. Pearl Crescent Butterfly thanked Doris, and spreading her reddish-brown wings, she sailed away into the sunshine and Doris ran into the house to tell her mamma about the new nursery in the garden. (Copyright, 1925, Newspaper Feature Service, Inc.)

NEEDLES AND PINS.

By Ruby Weyburn Tobias.

Ezra the tailor is little and pale;
He works at the back of the shop.
He has talkative eyes and a quaint little smile,
And fingers wound up like a top
Sticking needles and pins,
Needles an dpins—
When one long seam ends, then another begins.

Nat, the proprietor, stands by the door
And welcomes the customers there;
He is portly and bland with a quizzical eye,
And he smiles and makes promises fair;
But its needles and pins,
Needles and pins—
Where Nat's promise ends, Ezra's hurry begins!

Ezra's a goal for his thrifty young soul;
He toils thirteen hours a day.
He watches fine ladies come anxiously in
And sally delighted away.
Thanks to needles and pins,
Needles and pins—
When they smile their approval his fortune begins.

His fingers make pause at their seam;
Let him dream if he will of a home by and by (So many coats to a dream),
For the needles and pins,
Needles and pins—
They know how to bide when a wooing begins,
Wise little needles and pins!

RASCOE.

James Sanders Rascoe was born August 18, 1859, and died March 21, 1925, aged 65 years, 7 months and 3 days.

He was married to Miss Mary Elizabeth Rascoe December 18, 1879. He leaves to mourn their loss a wife, seven children, eighteen grandchildren and two sisters. He had one son to precede him to the grave. His funeral was conducted at Bethel Christian Church by his pastor, assisted by Rev. Mr. Martin, of the Primitive Baptist Church, and Dr. W. C. Wicker. He joined this Church soon after it was organized. He loved his Church and was faithful to her. The large crowd that attended his funeral was an evidence that he was known far and near and that he was well thought of.

A good man has gone to his long, long home. He will be greatly missed in the home, in the community and in the Church. The Masons buried him, as he was a prominent member of that lodge.

May the good Lord bless all the sorrowing ones, and may we all bow in humble submission to Him who doeth all things well. J. F. APPLE.

REID.

Mrs. Cora Virginia Reid died at Lakeview Hospital, Suffolk, Va., April 2, 1925, aged 45 years. The funeral services were conducted at Holland Baptist Church by the writer, assisted by Revs. L. F. Paulette and J. H. Lightbourne. The burial was in the Holland Cemetery.

Mrs. Reid leaves a husband, C. T. Reid, Holland, Va.; a mother, Mrs. Mary Virginia Holland, Holland, Va.; two sons, Guerny H., of William and Mary College, and Owen, of Holland; two stepsons, J. M. Reid, Holland, and D. T. Reid, Elizabeth City, N. C.; six sisters—Mrs. Thomas Howell, Holland; Mrs. G. A. Piland and Mrs. Isaac Piland, Suffolk; Mrs. C. A. Piland, Holland; Mrs. S. P. Pruden, Suffolk, and Mrs. R. E. Howell, Holland; and one brother, Rufus Holland, of Holland.

Mrs. Reid was a member of Holy Neck Christian Church. May her life be a precious memory to her loved ones, and our Heavenly Father their strength and comfort. N. G. NEWMAN.

WHY NOT VOTE?

In the year 1920, only about half of the qualified voters of the United States voted. Various reasons have been advanced for this, none of them very satisfactory. But there is no doubt that some voters take the attitude that there is little to choose between the different parties and their policies. Many are undoubtedly of the opinion that the candidates have been "hand-picked," and therefore not the choice of the citizens as a whole. This is bad for the country, and, therefore, bad for themselves, but in the absence of immediate effects it is difficult to convince them of this.

There are some who would make this willful abstention a crime, and inflict severe penalties, but this is a drastic measure which would not appeal to the people at large. It would be too much like an interference with personal liberty. It is suggestive of the old saying that "You may drive a horse to the water, but you can't force him to drink." In the event of voters being driven to the poll by the power of the law, they may be compelled to vote, but they are free to vote for whomsoever they please. There is no one who can control any resentment they may harbor. They may blame some one for undue interference with what they may consider their rights, and act accordingly.

It must also be considered that a large proportion of those who fail to put in an appearance at the polls are too ignorant to grasp the questions at issue, and when compelled to exercise their privilege are apt to vote with the same blind indifference that impelled them to stay at home.

The only reasonable remedy seems to be the education of the people in the duties of citizenship and in taking a laudable pride in their country's welfare. But who is to do the educating; where are the impartial instructors who will undertake the task of directing those defaulting citizens along the right path? Free lectures might be invoked, with educative motives as part of the program. But here again there might be trouble. Who is to choose the program?

This is a matter which must right itself in due time. Nothing can be gained by coercion. It must be remembered that a large proportion of the citizens have not yet had time to absorb the atmosphere of this country, and until they do, this trouble will remain.—Editorial in Dearborn Independent.

Most headaches due to lack of internal cleanliness

WHEN you are constipated, poisons form in the accumulated food waste and are carried to all parts of the body. Headaches follow. Biliousness, insomnia, lack of energy, all result from constipation, which if unchecked will lead to serious results.

Avoid Laxatives—Say Doctors

A noted authority says that laxatives and cathartics do not overcome constipation, but by their continued use tend only to aggravate the condition.

Medical science has found in lubrication a means of overcoming constipation. The gentle lubricant, Nujol, penetrates and softens the hard food waste and thus hastens its passage through and out of the body. Thus, Nujol brings internal cleanliness.

Nujol is used in leading hospitals and is prescribed by physicians throughout the world. Nujol is not a medicine or laxative, and cannot gripe. Like pure water, it is harmless.

Take Nujol regularly and adopt this habit of internal cleanliness. For sale by all druggists.

DARDEN.

William Surry Darden died suddenly in Washington, D. C., March 27, 1925, aged 54 years and 19 days. The remains were brought back to his old home Church, Holy Neck, in Nansemond County, Va., and the funeral services conducted by the writer, assisted by Revs. J. H. Lightbourne and L. F. Paulette. The body was laid away in the Church cemetery, where rest so many of his family and kin. Mr. Darden had a large and influential family connection in this and adjacent counties, and the funeral was largely attended.

The deceased was the only son of the late Dempsey L. Darden. He leaves a widow, of Washington, D. C.; a son, Dempsey Gorrell Darden, Wilmington, N. C.; three sisters—Mrs. E. L. Gray, Waverly, Va.; Mrs. J. K. Jones, Holland, Va., and Mrs. C. W. Parker, Portsmouth, Va.; a stepmother, Mrs. E. S. Darden, Portsmouth, Va., and five stepchildren.

Surry, as he was familiarly called, attended Elon College in the early nineties, and will be remembered by the students of that period. The writer was one of these, and so shares more keenly the grief of his many friends.

May our loving Heavenly Father comfort his loved ones in their sorrow and guide their destiny in the future.

THE SUN'S OBSERVATORY

By Rev. S. M. Lynam.

LAST E. S. C. MEMBER DIES.—

Mrs. Lizzie Warner, aged eighty-six, the last of the five charter members of the Order of Eastern Star in America, died recently at Phoenix, Ariz. She was a pioneer to that State. Mrs. Warner was the sole surviving member of the five women who were members of the order when its charter was secured.

ACCEPTS WILSON'S OLD CHURCH.—

Rev. Frank C. Morgan, son of Dr. G. Campbell Morgan the famous divine, who is now pastor of the Presbyterian Church of Sparta, Ga., has accepted the call to the pastorate of the First Presbyterian Church of Augusta. The First Presbyterian Church was the Church which Woodrow Wilson attended when his father was its pastor years ago. Mr. Morgan is expected to take charge of this famous old Church on the first Sunday in September, when his father will preach the installation sermon.

NEGRO HOLDS CHURCH-GOING RECORD.—

It is interesting to note that John P. Green, a negro lawyer of Cleveland, Ohio, has not missed a Sunday morning Church service in twenty-five years. Nothing has been allowed to interfere with a promise he made himself when he joined the Church twenty-five years ago. The lawyer is now eighty years old. He attended once when his son lay dying, and he has been to Europe four times, but he has always attended Church at St. Paul's, Westminster Abbey, Notre Dame, or in the cabin of the ship at sea. His record is one which might well be envied, and he deserves the honor.

ENDOWS CHAIR IN CITY GOVERNMENT.—

Adolph Ochs, the owner of the New York Times and the Chattanooga Times, has recently given fifty thousand dollars to the University of Chattanooga, Methodist, for the endowment of a chair in city government. Mr. Ochs believes that if affairs of national and international import are to be settled amicably, that local leaders who are both honest and skillful must be developed. Mr. Ochs has recently agreed to assist the Berry Schools of Rome, Ga., by raising nine hundred thousand dollars on condition that Georgians raise one hundred thousand. This condition has been met.

GEORGE EASTMAN RESIGNS.—

George Eastman, the builder and president of the great kodak company which bears his name, announced his resignation of his position as president and general manager of the corporation, an office which he has held since 1919. It was announced also that the directors of the company had created the position of chairman of the board, to which Mr. Eastman will be elected. In this position, he will continue his active relations with the company. At an early meeting of the board, William G. Stuber will be chosen president, and Frank K. Lovejoy, general manager. Mr. Eastman made a large gift to a number of educational institutions some months ago, and at that time made known his intention to resign his position.

WOMEN AND PEACE.—

Two organizations of women in this country will carry on drives for world peace. The Woman's International League for Peace and Freedom will carry on their campaign under the slogan that neither workers nor capitalists investing in foreign lands should be able to utilize the army and navy for protection. Never is war and bloodshed legitimate. The other organization is that of the Woman's World Court Committee, who will urge the participation of the United States in the World Court. They will send out speakers to counteract opposition utterances.

Such campaigns will keep the need of international peace constantly before the people of the country, and that is what must be done if we are ever to have the peace and harmony among the nations which we all desire.

CALIFORNIA LEADS IN AUTO KILLINGS.—

Since automobiles have become so destructive of life that they are actually a menace to society, it is interesting to note that California heads the list of the States in automobile fatalities. There were 1,239 persons killed in that State in 1923, which are the latest available figures. Mississippi stands at the foot of the list, with only sixty deaths. Atlantic City, N. J., made the poorest showing of any city its size, and only one city in the country reports no deaths. That city of fortunate people is Cicero, Ill. It is a pleasure to note also in this connection that definite steps are being taken to dispose of the one-armed driver. The motorist who attends to the car with one hand and to his lady friend with the other arm is now become a positive menace, and motor clubs all over the country are taking steps to put him off the roads. Let us wish for them much success in their very worthy undertaking.

DEFEAT FOR METHODIST UNION.—

The action of the Baltimore Conference of the Southern Methodist Church in defeating the Methodist unification plan seems to forecast the defeat of the plan throughout the South. The conference defeating unification was presided over by Bishop Warren A. Candler, and the method of voting required by the bishop has been protested by the supporters of unification. They believe that a secret ballot, unobserved by bishops known to oppose the plan, would show a different result. The college of bishops, however, are not expected to reverse the results. Throughout the North, the Methodist conferences are adopting the plan by overwhelming majorities. If the Baltimore conference could not pass the plan, it is scarcely to be expected of the other Southern conferences. What a pity it is that men cannot dwell together in peace, even brethren of the same name and household of faith with a common origin.

HEBREW UNIVERSITY OPENED.—

There seems to be a great deal of disturbance in Palestine over the attendance of Lord Balfour on the opening of the Hebrew University at Jerusalem. The Moslem-Christian population of Palestine has issued a manifesto to the effect that a repatriation of Palestine will mean the ruin of its present inhabitants. It is reported that the orthodox Greek patriarch has declined to receive the British delegation, and has some thought of excluding Lord Balfour from the holy places. In spite of these developments, however, Lord Balfour has been cordially received. It was Lord Balfour, then the Rt. Hon. Arthur Balfour, a member of the Cabinet during the war, who issued the declaration giving British sanction to the Zionist movement to make Palestine again the land of the Jews, and to establish there a center of Hebrew culture. In a speech in Jerusalem, he reiterated his belief in the project and his faith in its accomplishment.

BIBLE REMAINS BEST SELLER.—

It is no surprise that the Federal Council of Churches in America announces that the Bible maintains its long-held place as the best seller among books. It is selling at the rate of three million copies each year. The announcement of the Federal Council came in connection with the fact that the quadricentennial of the New Testament translation by William Tyndale would be initiated to continue throughout the remainder of the year. The quadricentennial celebration will be participated in by libraries, colleges, publishers, and Churches. It is a most interesting fact that William Tyndale gave to the English-speaking people the New Testament in their own tongue in 1525, just four hundred years ago, while it was almost a century later that the King James Version came into being. The Bible, more than any other book, has influenced English literature and has refined English speech. It is a most excellent thing for the uplift and refinement and thinking ability of the people of the world that the Bible holds so pre-eminent a place among the books which are being bought and read by men and women.

NOTES-PERSONALS

The Woman's Missionary rallies are being very largely attended, and much interest is being manifested.

The new and spacious building of the Christian Publishing Association, Dayton, Ohio, is completed, and the formal dedication is to take place with elaborate ceremonies on April 22d.

Mr. and Mrs. Everette Walter Neville announce the approaching marriage of their daughter, Grace Virginia, to Mr. Glenn Turner Sykes, to take place some time in the early summer at Chapel Hill, N. C.

Ham-Ramsay began their revival meetings in Burlington, N. C., on April 12th. Dr. W. A. Harper has been chosen to herd up the evangelistic committee for the campaign which covers the entire county.

Mrs. W. A. Harper, of Elon College, has been chosen president of the North Carolina Federation of Music. This is an honor of no small significance, as the most talented and cultured women of the State are in it.

Will not all subscribers to Men and Millions bear in mind that April 30, 1925, terminates the period of five years since pledges were taken. How glorious it would be if all who are in arrears could and would pay at least something on their pledges!

To our subscribers, we mailed requests for names of those who might be interested in THE SUN and to whom sample copies might be sent. Some have replied and many have not. March 2d was the date of our last request. Please give us the desired information.

In this issue is advertised "Individual Communion Ware." Churches not supplied with a set of this service will find good values here offered. The aluminum ware is attractive and will not tarnish. Those who want something more costly will find the silver-plated equal to the best in style and finish.

Our Sunday School in the new United Christian Church, Lynchburg, Va., begins its career in the right spirit and with a fine program and a glorious prospect. Bro. W. T. Dunn, the wide-awake superintendent, writes: "At our Sunday School last Sunday we decided to accept the proposition you and Bro. Johnston make, and the remittances—one Sunday a month for missions, and one Sunday a month for the Orphanage—will be coming along, beginning with next Sunday." A Sunday School with that program will not fail, and here is predicting that it will make a splendid report and have a good delegation at our annual Sunday School Convention in July.

PLEASANT HILL.

On May 17, 1925, the Pleasant Hill Christian Church, Alamance County, N. C., is planning to have a centennial and memorial service. At 11 o'clock, the centennial service will be held. At this hour a brief historical sketch will be given by one of its members. Following this, Dr. W. A. Harper will deliver an address.

At the noon hour, dinner will be served by the members of the local congregation. In the afternoon, a memorial service will be held. Dr. W. S. Alexander, college pastor of Elon College, will be the speaker on this occasion.

All members, former members, and ex-pastors are especially invited to be present on this day. With the above-mentioned speakers, together with the plans which are being made by the local Church for the music and other features, the day promises to be one of inspiration and Christian enjoyment. The public is cordially invited.

MT. OLIVET CHURCH.

We held an evangelistic meeting at Mt. Olivet (R.) March 22d to April 1st, which resulted in much good. Each service was conducted by a group of Codle's Crusaders, assisted by the pastor. There were sixteen conversions and seventeen accessions to our Church, one coming from the M. E. Church, South, of McGaheysville. The soul-stirring messages and personal work of the Crusaders produced a profound impression not only upon outsiders, but also upon the Church.

On Sunday, April 5th, we filled our regular 11 o'clock preaching appointment at this Church, and baptized sixteen candidates. Immediately after these services, as the pastor was getting ready to leave, friends helped him to load his Ford with a "carload" of groceries which the members and friends of Mt. Olivet Church had left in the home of Mr. C. M. Life, across the road from the Church, as a "pounding" for the pastor. This pounding consisted of such things as sugar, rice, raisins, cocoa, cocoanut, cornflakes, oatmeal, maccaroni, canned fruit, dried fruit, prunes, beans, pickles, apple butter, etc. The entire Crumpler family are exceedingly thankful to all of these friends and to our Heavenly Father for these favors.

The new Church building which Bro. E. Herring is having erected and which he will donate to the local Church and to the denomination, is being rapidly constructed, and we hope to have it ready for dedication within the next five or six weeks. The work at this point looks very promising.

R. P. CRUMPLER.

BEREA, NORFOLK.

Ever since the organizing of the early Church, in the days of the apostles, to the present time, I suppose every Church all through the ages has had some downsittings and uprisings, some discouragements and some things to encourage. We, as a Church, have often found it that way. Last Saturday, April 4th, in our Church Conference we realized some of that experience. We were getting along very nicely in our business, attending to various items of interest, one of which is the building of a parsonage. For a long time we have felt a parsonage, occupied by a pastor for all time, would add a great deal to the progressiveness and upbuilding of our Church and community. Until recently, though, we have let the idea lay dormant, but now the brotherhood is quite active and enthusiastic, and it seems we are going to do something. This and other things in our conference gave us joy. But it seemed some gloom had to come our way. Two of our members—some of our best—asked for letters of dismissal. Of course, we granted them. Then our pastor, Rev. B. F. Black, sprang a surprise in tendering his resignation as pastor, to go into effect May 1st.

After some discussion, we accepted it, providing we, through his help, can get a supply by that time. Bro. Black has been handicapped in his work because of ill health a good deal of the time since he has been with us, but he has been very loyal and faithful in his service, notwithstanding the disadvantages. He has proven himself very pleasant and social in our homes and elsewhere, thereby endearing himself very much to us. He has preached the Word plainly, convincingly and frequently inspiringly. He has impressed us especially as being very consecrated in the service of his Master. He seems to be unwavering in faith, and so trustful that he can commit all things unto Him who is able to keep them unto the end. He shall have our best wishes and prayers for his success and happiness in his new field.

M. W. HOLLOWELL.

FROM REV. P. T. KLAPP.

It was indeed a great pleasure for me to visit the Danville Christian Church, of which I was its former pastor. I don't remember that I ever have had a happier greeting and welcome than was received there the fifth Sunday, March 29th. At 11 A. M. I preached to a splendid congregation; subject, "Mountain-top Experience." Text, "Lord, it is good for us to be here"—Matt. 17:4. At 7:45 I preached to another fine congregation; subject, "Are the Young People Safe Under the Present or existing influences?"—2 Sam. 18:32—namely, Darwinism or "monkey evolution," modernism, they who deny the divinity of Christ, the theater, moving-picture shows, vaudeville, the modern dance, the card table; are the young women safe with their modern style of dress? Their modern style is a challenge to the opposite sex. We quote from Plain Talks, as follows: "It is well known that many of the Parisian fashions are started by the fallen women, who throng that gay capital, and these fashions clearly bear the impress of their origin. Satan himself, I believe, would be puzzled to invent devices more deadly and devilish than many of the popular fashions of the present day. Suppose men were to dress as do some of our women? why, the morning papers would promptly, and justly, too, denounce the thing as simply an outrage." Has not a man just as much right to expose his body as a woman? Let our women answer.

Another thought: Is the young man safe with the cigarette in his mouth? This habit, or curse, is defeating the future of three times as many of our young men as whiskey or strong drink ever did.

The next thought was, who is responsible? We parents must admit that we are, first of all. There are three ways by which we can be responsible for a habit. First, by practicing it; second, by advocating it; and, third, by consenting to it. Train up a child in the way which he should go, and when he is old he will not depart from it. (Prov. 22:6.) Do many of us train our children, or do we turn them over to the modern society for training? Answer.

The following Friday, at Farmers, at 8 P. M., we preached to another splendid congregation. On the first Sunday, at Sandy Creek Baptist Church, we met a fine congregation, and delivered to them a message from God's Word, and they expressed their appreciation in two ways, namely: first, by what they said; secondly, by a nice purse. The organization has been here for more than one hundred years. The same evening, at 3 o'clock, we preached in a private home—a Mr. Neal's—for a young man who has been lying on his back for six years and cannot move a joint in his body. His affliction has taken his eyesight from him. The young man's father is skeptical, and does not believe in the Bible. Pray for the young man, as he wants to be saved.

From there, back to Danville, and attended a splendid service given by the Endeavor Society, under the leadership of that splendid young man, Percy Ricketts. God bless this Church in all its enterprizes.

Elon College, N. C.

AN APPEAL FOR ELON.

Why not grasp the opportunities that are at home? There are educational advantages in our own county that are going unheeded by many of the boys and girls. Perhaps one reason for this sparsity in representation is that they are in the dark as to these advantages. It is for this purpose that this article is written—to enlighten them so that there will be a greater attendance for Elon College in the near future.

Elon offers nine different courses leading to an A. B. degree, not considering the special departmental courses, namely: music, the fine arts, expression, public speaking, physical and commercial training. Especially does it have a splendid ministerial course, one of the best that can be had in the State. Prospective students intending to pursue this line of work need not go from their own county to receive it, not when it lies at their thumb's ends. For every ten students, there is a faculty member; and this is a decided advantage; in fact, it offers more individual coaching and instruction. The college, altogether, has thirteen buildings devoted to its conduct, five of which are modern, spacious, and fireproof in design. The equipment is also up-to-date and replete throughout. The five buildings devoted to the college work are as follows: the Administration Building, the Mooney Christian Education Building, the Duke Science Building, the Carlton Library, and the Whitley Memorial Auditorium; all the rest are devoted to the housing and dining of the students.

From the charred ruins has risen a new institution. The Administration Building, being the first to be donated, by the good Christian hearts of Alamance County, it will always stand as a memorial for her, trying to pay its debt by instructing her sons and daughters. The building is a three-story structure, and contains the recitation rooms, administrative offices, literary societies, and several departmental rooms.

The Mooney Christian Education Building is devoted absolutely to religious work and is the only one of its kind in the United States. On the first floor are the Y. M. C. A. and several fraternity rooms; the second comprises the chapel, the recitation rooms for Bible, Greek, religious education, and Church history; the third and last floor contains the week-day school of religion, which is essentially a graduation of the community's public school pupils into classes, ranking from kindergarten to adults. These classes are taught by the college students enrolled in the Christian workers' course (A. B. IX). This experience as teachers, affords the practical value of those intending to engage in social or religious activities.

The Duke Science Building, as its name will imply, was donated by Messrs. J. B. and B. N. Duke, and contains a full floor for each of physics, biology, geology and chemistry. The equipment for laboratory purposes is among the best along scientific lines.

The Carlton Library is a spacious building, devoted to the recreation and supplementary tasks of the students. On the first floor are the library and reading-rooms, one for each sex, each of which will seat a capacity of one hundred readers. The stack room contains approximately 17,000 volumes, and room for over 187,000 more. Besides the offices and work-rooms for the library force, there are fourteen professors' offices and research rooms on the third and second floors.

The Whitley Memorial Auditorium contains a beautiful chapel and departments for music and expression. It is only used for special occasions, as recitals, visual education, dramatics and vesper services.

When one comes to Elon, he is immediately struck by the fine structures of architecture, the beautiful campus in progress, the curriculum; but best of all, the college spirit. It is an excellent spirit and will permeate the lives of the students wherever they go, for Elon stands for "Christian character, first, last and always."

It was decided by the board that the Convention would meet with the Oak Level Christian Church, near Yanceyville, N. C., Franklin County, on the 14th, 15th, and 16th of July. The following departmental secretaries were appointed by the board:

Organization and expansion, Rev. J. E. Franks, Raleigh, N. C.; missions, Mrs. Carl Whitaker, Cardenas, N. C.; literature, Prof. L. L. Vaughan, Raleigh, N. C.; music, J. Beale Johnson, Cardenas, N. It is the earnest desire and expectation of your Executive Board that we may have the best Convention in 1925 ever. In order to have the best Convention ever, it will require the co-operation of every Sunday School and Christian Endeavor Society in the Eastern North Carolina Conference. We are depending upon you. Don't disappoint us.

FOLLY OF TRESPASSERS.

The folly of trespassing on railway property, a practice to which the American public is still addicted, is strikingly brought out by figures just made public by the Southern Railway System's safety department, showing that 130 persons were killed and 174 injured while trespassing on the tracks and trains of the Southern during 1924.

The casualties among trespassers were divided as follows:

While walking on tracks, 90 persons were killed and 72 injured; 37 were killed and 97 injured while stealing rides or "hopping" trains; and 3 were killed and 5 injured in miscellaneous accidents.

On all the railways of the United States, 2,621 trespassers were killed and 3,129 injured during 1924.

"A distressing circumstance in connection with casualties to trespassers on railway property is that such a large proportion of the killed and injured are school children and useful citizens who, despite all warnings, insist on using railway tracks as walkways," says a statement issued by the Southern.

PRINCIPLES OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

(1) The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.

(2) Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.

(3) The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.

(4) Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship, and of Church membership.

(5) The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by, all.

THE PURPOSE OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

The purpose of this Church is to cultivate a spirit of union among the followers of our Lord Jesus Christ of every persuasion, and to secure, if possible, the associate efforts of all true religious teachers in pointing the wicked to "the Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world."

The peculiar doctrines and tenets which have confused and distracted the Christian world are remanded to private judgment, and hence cease to be matters for debate, only in so far as may be necessary to prevent a sectarian influence from entering the Church.

This Church requires no compromise of faith on the part of any child of God in order to communion or fellowship; here denominational distinctions cease to exist, and Christian love binds the brotherhood together.

The purpose of this Church will be consummated in the conversion of the world and the union of all Christians.

CHRISTIAN UNITY.

We are hearing much about a divided Protestantism. There is also frequent discussion of the multiplicity of denominations. Moreover, the Methodist, South, seem to be having difficult sailing in trying to unite with the Methodist, North. Then, again, the Baptist, South, do not seem to be seeking to unite with any denomination, and the Baptist, North, do not seem to be disturbing them in their supposed indifference to union. There are pleas and pleas for denominational cooperation and affiliation, and no little is said about the waste from overlapping and of denominational rivalry. On the face of such a situation, it might seem that the Churches were divided and that denominationalism was rampant and that sectarianism was about to devour the whole body of the Church.

The writer doubts seriously if the Churches of Protestantism were ever as near together as they are today. The most of the talk that he finds about denominational and sectarian division and bigotry is on paper and in the imagination of over-sensitive minds and hearts. The Churches are co-operating, and the spirit of unity is abroad in the land. We have not heard in any quarter of Presbyterians fighting Methodists or of Baptists fighting Lutherans. The fact is, we do not recall in any community, town or city where the sects fight each other or where the spirit of sectarian bigotry seems to denominate.

Has the Federal Council of Churches and the United Missionary Conferences brought this about? Something has.

In a small town, not long since, a member of a denomination—and there were two or three doing business in the town—said: "Our Churches dwell together in brotherly love and work harmoniously side by side or one with the other." We told our brother that his town was no exception; the day of sectarian fights and denominational prejudices had largely passed. All of which means that whether men and women will acknowledge it to themselves or not, there is a desire to be Christian—that is, to accept Jesus Christ as Saviour and Redeemer and Lord of all, to take the Bible as sufficient rule of faith and practice, and as brethren and sisters in a common cause, labor for the advancement of the kingdom of our Lord. Denominational lines and sectarian differences are already broken down. Time was when our distinctions and differences were emphasized. The time now is when the things on which we agree are emphasized.

We are naturally devoted to names and formulas and polity with which we are and were familiar. But the Christian world is outgrowing sectarian differences and denominational distinctions. We look at the uplifted Christ and we forget these minor things and think only of His power to save and realize that in Him we all have one who is sufficient.

So it has come about that the plea for unity and co-operation has been lost, well nigh, in the actual fact of unity and co-operation. The denominations are not calling themselves by the same name, but let the individual talk heart to heart with his neighbor of another denomination and the two are not divided along denominational lines any more than along other lines, and often not as much. In the quadrennial meeting of the Federal Council, where practically all denominations are in conference, the thought is that of a common Saviour and all His followers are one in Him. It is a Christian conference or convention on a large scale. A North American or international conference is of the same type, and in the discussion and how the entire world may be reached for Christ, all claim to be Christians with Christ only as head and leader and the Bible only as a sufficient rule of faith and practice. In name and superficially, the Churches may seem to be divided; in fact and fundamentally, they are united and are co-operating for the salvation of mankind and the redemption of the whole race.

MEN AND MILLIONS' FIVE YEARS.

On April 30th, this year, the five-year period of our Men and Millions' program terminates. Many who pledged have been loyal, sacrificial, faithful. Many more would pay if they could. There are a large number, however, who have been indifferent, even after their pledges were made. It would certainly be better for all if some effort—supreme effort—could be put forth to close up these pledges this month. In many Churches, because the movement was misunderstood, there has been the coldest sort of indifference. Somehow, many who pledged either will not, or cannot, be persuaded that it is the wisest and best course for themselves and the Church to meet these obligations or pay these pledges.

Last week we sent to all who were in arrears and whose names and addresses we had, the following:

Good Friend:

Your name is with the esteemed, the loyal and the liberal. You wrote it there.

You and others who care and want to see the kingdom of our Lord advanced and the Church go forward have been the stay and support ,as well as the hope, of our Church enterprises the past five years. Thank God, you were liberal and loyal enough to write your name with that faithful number who made a pledge to Men and Millions.

That was five years ago. Changes—yes, misfortunes, sickness, unexpected but inescapable expenses; yes, but the pledge was made. For that, good friend, thank God and take courage.

But, listen! The five-year period will end April 30th—this month. How does your account stand? We are so anxious that just as many as possible pay in full before April 30th. Can you join this number? If not, and if you have not paid anything recently, can you pay some on your pledge this month? It is needed, and will be so much appreciated. If you have paid in full, this letter need not be answered. If not, please remember we are asking all who pledged to pay something this month, that the five good years may have a happy and a glorious ending. Thank you, dear friend. Cordially and fraternally,

J. O. ATKINSON,
Mission Secretary.

A thought for meditation: "What would Jesus have me do?"

Accompanying this, a little leaflet was sent explaining the movement and showing the benefits and blessings thereof. If any CHRISTIAN SUN readers who pledgesd to Men and Millions did not receive one of these letters, it is greatly to be desired that this line will be sufficient. Both for the sake of the cause and the great needs upon the Church in all of its enterprises, every subscriber, great and small, to Men and Millions should make a desperate effort to pay something on the pledge, and if possible pay all before April 30, 1925. Let us finish this great work in the noble spirit in which it was conceived and be grateful that we had a part in a movement that has meant so much to our Church life and which has resulted in the salvation of many, many souls, the building up of the Church in many quarters and the enlargement of the kingdom of our Lord in a marked and marvelous manner.

AN EMBARRASSED MINISTER.

There is one minister in the New Jersey Christian Conference who is ashamed of himself. That minister has done a great deal of talking about the glorious principles of the Christians.

The Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America is, as most of us know, making it easier for us as a people to make our appeal to those who know nothing of our history. Only those who have had experience in trying to establish our work in some great populous center can know of the round of explanations which one must engage in to make clear our reason for calling ourselves Christian only, in place of the only Christians. So many people seem ready to conclude that we use our name invidiously; that, were it not for the unifying work which the Federal Council is doing, we would suffer greater embarrassment than we do. It is most gratifyingly interesting to note the growing number of people who seem to rejoice in the fact of unifying forces emerging in the Protestant world.

But what is the source of this minister's embarrassment to whom reference has been made above? His Church sent no offering to the work of the Federal Council last year. He was appalled when he received from Rev. J. F. Burnett, D. D., Secretary of our General Convention —the man who disturbs the slumbers of so many of our ministers—a little folder, giving the contributions of our Churches by Conferences. One hundred and thirty-nine Churches out of a total of 1,138! There were only 999 missing, and mine was one. Excuse me, but my typewriter got that "mine" written before I was aware of it. No use to erase it now, however, for I can't change Dr. Burnett's record.

Why should we keep a man like Dr. Burnett in office who so frequently reminds us of our failures? It is awfully embarrassing! If our people don't turn him out at the next session of our General Convention, I, for one, am going to get my "Dutch up" and have an offering sent for that Federal Council, and maybe for some other things too. Yours in penitence,

P. S. SAILER.

VII. THE NEW MEANING OF EDUCATION.

Transition and change have been evident in the educational world for centuries. Wild guesses have been expressed, various ideas have been advanced, and sundry opinions have been recorded touching the meaning of education. History makes it perfectly plain that the thinkers and educators of the world have not arrived at any fixed conclusion regarding education. With all the changes of standards, methods, and motives, we have not come to the point that we can truthfully call education a settled science.

While the meaning of education has undergone many changes, these changes have been precipitated by the changing times. We can understand these changes only in the light of their highest development.

There was a time when the highest aim of education was the assimilation of knowledge. For the general diffusion of knowledge, the early primary schools and colleges were established. It was felt that knowledge, freedom, and civilization must go hand in hand. The general diffusion of knowledge is a good thing generally. Everybody agrees that knowledge is power; but the kind of power will be reckoned by the content of the knowledge obtained. Books are looked upon as a medium through which the written words, changing opinions, and the current ideas of men are transmitted. These direct the student to the mastery of form, the development of the mind, and the pursuit of truth, which may lie outside the pale of ecclesiastical approval. This being true, the master of form, the happy recipient of knowledge, and the proud possessor of academic truth may be the most worthless man in the entire community. This depends on the motive that actuates the acquisition of knowledge.

For many years it was thought that the adjustment aim was the motivating power in education. Milton said: "A complete and generous education fits a man to perform justly, skillfully and magnanimously all the offices of peace and war." To be able to adjust one's self to prevailing conditions is no mean aspiration. To be ill at ease and out of harmony with men and society is an unfortunate condition. But to say that the highest aim in education is to prepare man to adjust himself to society is just as amusing as it is absurd. There are places where the educated and the uneducated man fit in and find congenial fellowship. And the natural instincts of men lead them in that direction. Many a man has adjusted himself to society without being educated. It is easy, therefore, to see that the adjustment aim is not sufficiently broad in scope. It reaches only the surface of life.

In the advancing system of the educational process, many have concluded that the development of a good citizen was the supreme objective. A good citizen is fundamental in the assets of any community. No community is better than its worst citizen. A community is thwarted or advanced by the ideals of its citizens. If society is ever reformed, it will be accomplished by the concerted action of the majority of the best citizens. But in the face of this fact, I disown all faith in the power of education to produce a good citizen. It is impossible to educate people into being good. Some of the most lamentable conditions exists in the most cultured communities. While education may serve as an antidote, it can never serve as a transforming power, culminating in a good citizen. The majority of our bandits and burglars are well educated, many of them having been trained for burglary. Therefore, it may be said that the making of a good citizen is not the ultimate aim in education, though good enough in itself. I quite agree with President Coolidge: "Those who are worthy of being free, are worthy of being educated. Those who have the duty and responsibility of government, must necessarily have the education with which to discharge the obligations of citizenship." But this reduces education to its proper level. It is only a means to an end.

There was a time in the history of education when character-building was regarded as the meaning of education. To say that every citizen is entitled to a liberal education is to restate a principle upon which our government was founded. But to say that education is a character-producing machine is to prove ourselves careless custodians of the truth. No one denies that character is a most desirable element—a fundamental element—in manhood. But it must be kept in mind that the word character is handicapped by prodigious restrictions. Character is an entirely different thing from moral character, and moral character occupies a subordinate place to Christian character. It is very doubtful if even moral character can be developed aside from the principles of Christianity. Eliott once said: "Exclude religion from education and you have no foundation upon which to build moral character." If this is true, and I do not doubt the validity of this claim, it is perfectly clear that a secular school cannot function as a character-producing institution. This country is filled with the products from our secular schools. We find them playing the leading role in our social, political, and industrial life. Some of these men have great rating in character, but they are lacking in the practice of the principles of brotherhood and fair play as taught by Christ. We are not always proud of some of our chief captains of industry, our silver-tongued politicians, because their lives are often very poor in the essential elements of manhood. Just as no life is complete that is not tempered with the manhood of the Master, so no education is complete that does not take into account the value of Christian ideals. But to say that character-building is the meaning of education, is to restrict the meaning of education. While character-building is a worthy motive, it is not the last word in education.

Many good people have been lost in the swirl of changing conceptions and the smoke of educational barrages that have been set in motion. In an effort to settle the question of the meaning of education, many educators have seized upon the idea that efficiency is the ultimate aim. For a while, efficiency was thought to be the panacea for all ills. But this aim is likely to be narrowing rather than broadening in its tendency. The efficient worker is a most desirable asset in any enterprise. He is the key to success in an industrial enterprise. But efficiency is no criterion of manhood. The man who wears the stripes may be able to unlock a safe that a perplexed business man cannot unlock. He may play a piano and entertain thousands, but his efficiency in these lines is no indication that his education is of the highest type. To make efficiency the leading aim in education is to place emphasis on a minor point. The efficiency aim of education sounds its own death-knell because it looks only to the improvement of material things.

The limitations of these conceptions in education have caused the thinkers to seek a new meaning for their educational efforts. During the middle ages, education was thought of in terms of spiritual and intellectual discipline. For a while, mind and matter occupied the attention of the world. Students were subjected to the most rigid rules of mental discipline. No sacrifice was regarded too great for the individual who craved intellectual attainments and distinctions. In an effort to acquire spiritual ideals, the individual yielded to the most drastic methods of discipline. Home ties were severed and individuals entered monasteries. But this method of advancement was a fallacy.

The welfare of the State or the country is not the meaning of education. While no one loves a slacker, it must be acknowledged that he who gives himself to extensive preparation for the perpetuation of the country has chosen for himself a very low ideal, if that is the only purpose he has in securing an education. The weakness of this theory has reached a reduction to absurdity. We can see the ripe fruits of this doctrine when we look at Europe with her teeming thousands of pale-faced widows, her innocent multitudes of starving children, her once fruitful fields so recently drenched in human blood.

I have no desire to wholly discredit the conceptions by which advances in education have been made. I have no desire to encourage a return to these old ideals. Neither would I suggest that we hold them fast without change, lest they crumble in our hands. But I am desirous of saying that with our evolution of thought, with our passionate desire for new truth, and with our spirit of adventure, we have discovered the new meaning of education. We no longer bow at intellectual shrines at which our forefathers bowed. But the influences of these shrines reflected in modern life have helped us arrive at the point that we think of education as the complete development of the individual for service to God and humanity. Just as the ideals of our forefathers varied and thus changed the educational systems and ideals of their times, so our changing life and ideals will necessitate a change in our conception of education. But the above conception is as far as we have gone to date.

The results of this new meaning of education may be seen in the self-realization of individuals, the emancipation of humanity, civic reforms, the fellowship of reconciliation, the fellowship of peace, the fellowship of the whole Church, and the fellowship of service. In the school room of Eden, God began to educate man to serve. And we are just beginning to learn that our greatest task is the continuation of this educational process. The greatest opportunity before any nation is not to become the supreme mistress in air, land, or sea, or dominate the world of commerce and industry; but to unlock to the world the fairest product of all educational endeavor—the new meaning of education. When this is done, the effectiveness of its service will be felt in hearts and homes, its influence will float in the parliaments of men like the flags blown by the earth's free breeze. Desperate leaders will then cease to rally their forces; the desire to break a lance for selfish cause will be eliminated; moral and material powers shall once more be unified; stern opposition and unholy ambitions shall crumble beneath the sweet music of good will; superstitions and wars shall fade as the darkness of the night in the kindling glory of the sun, and the world's tired heart shall once more throb with the joyous charm of new life, because men have learned to live and fashion their lives in keeping with the ideals of God and the needs of the world.

The first clear ray of the star that shone out above the manger of Bethlehem was the truth that God cares for men. He had not left us in hopeless and unthinking darkness. The fact that we care even enough to doubt and question, is evidence that he cares. Our very questionings are half-answers, affirming that the God who made us to doubt and question is himself the answer to our quest.—William E. Barton.

SUFFOLK LETTER.

Saving is the road to fortune; and it should be reduced to a system. People should begin to save when they begin to earn, and continue the habit through life. Most dependents could have been independent had they saved of their earnings and been liberal toward God. Economy and liberality are not competitors, but partners. "He that soweth sparingly shall reap sparingly." The best system for saving with small beginnings is a savings account in a good bank; and modern banks are educating the people in this method. There was never such a large percentage of the people with savings accounts as at the present time. Economy is growing, but it is far behind what it should be, and it is easy to see that this generation grows faster in spending than in saving. It would be fine for young people whose parents can give them spending money to place part of it in a savings account in order to form the habit. They may need the habit some day.

To form the habit of giving is just as important as the habit of saving, for "no man lives to himself and no man dies to himself." The individual is a unit in humanity, and has no value unless he contributes to such interests as Church and State. These represent the spiritual and the material benefits to mankind. Both need support, and no man can be of much value unless he contributes to both; and economy is the basis of liberality. The taxpayer has been the saver, and he is saver first. The spendthrift is neither a producer nor a saver, and hence has little value as a member of society. The liberal man is not the man who gives the most, but the man who gives of his living; that is, who divides with the Lord and man. "A poor widow threw in two mites; and Jesus said to His disciples, this poor widow hath cast in more than all who cast into the treasury: for they cast in of their abundance, but she her living." Jesus gave His life, and we should give of our life to Him; and money represents life. Men should save to give.

The habit of saving should include more than the saving of money, important as that habit is. It should include the saving of time. There is as great a waste of time as of money. When a person has lived seventy years, he has lived ten years of Sundays. By attendance at Sunday School and Church regularly from seven to seventy, one would have nine years of the best education it is possible to have; and yet many people waste these years and then claim they did not have much chance for education. Some thoughtless people save money and waste time. Then, men waste so much of the week-day time. If people would work more and eat less, material and spiritual prosperity would be greatly increased. By a proper use of time, talents, and means, all human needs could be met, and present prosperity would be eclipsed a hundredfold. There is enough of time, energy, and opportunity unused to transform mankind and the world. Spiritual opportunities are neglected to the destitution of the soul. Offerings for Church purposes have to be pumped up when they ought to come like a flowing spring. "The liberal soul shall be made fat," and "the liberal deviseth liberal things; and by liberal things shall he stand."

ELON LETTER.

The Christian Church in North Carolina began its co-operative conference life one hundred years ago. The North Carolina Conference is to meet this year in the one hundredth session of the organized work of the Christians in this State. The session will be with the First Christian Church of Greensboro, December 9-11, 1925.

The second day of this session, or December 10th, will be given over entirely to the centennial celebration. Special recognition is to be accorded the Churches that are a hundred years old or more and a program that is worthy of the great occasion is to be rendered. Already some of our ablest men are at work in earnest, painstaking research for the addresses they will give on this centennial day.

The program, as at present constituted, includes the following:

History of the Conferences and Churches of the Christians in North Carolina, by W. E. MacClenny.

History of deceased prominent laymen and women of the Conferences, by Prof. P. J. Kernodle.

Statistical history of the Conferences, by Dr. J. O. Atkinson.

Educational history, by Dr. W. W. Staley.

Orphanage history, by Superintendent Chas. D. Johnston.

Literary history, by Rev. Stanley C. Harrell.

The principles of the Christian Church, by Dr. W. D. Parry.

The Christian Church facing the future, by Dr. G. O. Lankford.

Each speaker has been asked to prepare his address in manuscript form for permanent preservation. These addresses will make history in our Church, since they will be based on history already achieved. Of course, the Churches in Virginia that have always been affiliated with the Christian Conferences of North Carolina are to be included in this centennial celebration.

We should have twice as many people in Greensboro on December 10th as our Church there will seat. Churches should begin now to plan to be represented there then in mass, and not simply by their voting delegates. Let us make this centennial celebratoin a red-letter day in the history of our Church and a day likewise of high resolve for forward-looking work for the kingdom of Christ.

OUR WOMEN'S WORK EXPLAINED.

At a session of the Southern Christian Convention, held at Suffolk, Va., 1912, a Woman's Board for Home and Foreign Missions was organized. The organization has steadily grown since then, until it numbers twenty-seven woman's societies in the Eastern Virginia Conference. "The Annual" gives forty-four Churches listed; some of them, however, are very small. At any rate, room for developing is plentiful. The plan for raising funds is as follows:

(a) An annual membership fee by all members of the Church auxiliary societies. This is usually 10 cents a month or $1.20 a year, though in some cases it is fixed at a less figure.

(b) Many of these woman's societies raise what is known as a life membership fund ($10.00), and send it in honor of some member of their society. Any member can take the membership by paying $10.00. It is often sent as a memorial of some departed worker in the society. To all life members a beautiful lithographed certificate sixteen by twenty inches in size is issued.

(c) By missionary mite-boxes.

(d) By personal missionary offerings of $1.00, $5.00, $10.00, $25.00 or more. The women's dues are sent to our General Board, at Dayton, Ohio, to carry on the work of the whole denomination.

In our entire Conference last year the woman's societies raised $3,748.04. Their goal this year is $3,900, a very slight increase, not intending to work a hardship on any one. Our specials in the woman's work, which are known as home and foreign special funds, or apportionments this year are $1,200 each. These specials are used on the Richmond work as home, and Japan work as foreign. Besides this, several of these woman's societies support orphans, in whole or in part, at our own Elon Orphanage; others help support with definite sums Sunday Schools at certain places in Japan. Others give certain sums to support our mountain work, which is cared for by the Young People's Societies. Others support native workers in different foreign fields.

Society dues are essential as forming a basis and assurance of financial income. But some women cannot and, more, ought not to be satisfied with the paying of the $1.20 annual dues or the small amounts usually placed on collection plates. Through the woman's literature department, quite a number of thousands of missionary tracts and leaflets have been put into the hands of our people. These leaflets or tracts are often used in the monthly meetings. These agencies have, with God's blessing, helped much in enlarging missionary sentiment and increasing funds. One week, usually in the month of January, is observed for prayer and study of the work of both home and foreign missionaries, having special prayer offered for these. Most organizations observe the thankoffering, usually in November. A special program is arranged, the public invited, and the privilege of contributing to this great cause given them, often amounting to a goodly sum. This offering is used for definite purposes, which the Woman's Board names.

The greatest sacrifice, where there is any, is not always made by those who give the most. Perhaps God gauges sacrifice not so much by the amount given as by the amount left for self after the giving. Five years ago, the Woman's Board being anxious to increase interest, knowledge and progress in the great missionary cause, deemed it wise and profitable to have once a year what we are now taking a part in—a school of missions—that we might become better acquainted with and gain greater inspiration in this work that the Master commissioned His disciples when He left this world, "Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel to all nations."

Elberon, Va. Mrs. Otho M. Cockes.

LOVE WINS.

He was a little chap, possibly three years of age. He had been born of parents from some foreign country who had come to seek freedom in this country, which had been pictured to them as one of great opportunity. He had been using that only playground which some children in city slums have—the city streets. Some small accident had happened to him, and leaning upon the ample bosom of a sister, scarcely two years his senior, he was giving vent to his feelings in that most natural and effective way that man has found—the free flowing of tears. I wish you could have seen the expression on that older sister's face as I caught it passing. A real mother, with all her experience, could not have put more love and sympathy into a look than this little girl of five was registering all unconsciously. I walked on my way feeling better because of this sight of two little children on the street of a city slum.

I went on, feeling better because I felt again the inherent love grounded in the human heart and the dependence of man, whether he be three, thirty or ninety, upon the force of love. God knew this need of man for love. He knew the natural way in which man turns to the influence of love. So He sent His Son as an expression of His love, depending upon that expression to win man from sin and death to life and righteousness. Hatred, bigotry and selfishness crucified that Son, but love conquered hatred and Jesus came from the grave a living victor.

Now, when tree, bird, plant and animal are feeling with renewed vigor the surge of life which has lain dormant for a while, we may turn mind and heart back to that great event when messengers from heaven said, "He is risen, He is not here." And we may feel the thrill of that triumphant statement, "Because He lives we shall live also." Love, through Christ, has won the victory over the enemies of man and made him a triumphant being.

With these thoughts in mind and heart, shall we not make this Easter time a real resurrection time for ourselves? Let that love of God, that triumphant, conquering love of God which Jesus expressed in His death and resurrection, take hold of your heart and life. Then you will arise with Him into a new and powerful life. A force of love lies in your nature. May rays from the rising sun of righteousness strike the dormant spark and cause it to spring into action. The intellect of man is an important gift, and we cannot afford to underestimate its value. But, after all, the heart of man must rule his life. Where the intellect alone rules, man is cold and indifferent to the warmer side of life, which really makes it worth living. But when the heart works in harmony with the intellect and love warms and softens the whole being, then is man living in the image of God. The great need of our age is this softening, enlivening, conquering force of love. Without it we will go backward into barbarism and savagery, in spite of all our intellectual power and culture, in spite of all things which men generally call civilization. But with it we shall move on toward that glorious time when the kingdom of God shall come. The message of Easter, for the Christian, is a message of the conquering power of love. It is a beautiful and triumphant message because of that fact. So long as there is selfishness, bigotry, suspicion and hatred in the world, there will be sin and suffering and death. Man will arise into new life when he catches the spirit of his Creator, as it is expressed in Jesus Christ, and goes forth to scatter it abroad. And in order to do this, man has but to bring himself, just as he is, into the sunlight of God's love. The force is within his nature. It needs only to be awakened and started into action. And just as that little boy turned instinctively to the love and sympathy of an older sister, so man, wherever he may be, has the natural tendency to turn to the comfort and consolation of love. Love will win though all things else shall fail.—Christian Vanguard.

DISREGARD DANGER OF INFECTION.

"Most people are foolishly afraid of infection from tuberculosis or disregard entirely the danger of infection from tubercle bacilli," said Dr. P. P. McCain, superintendent of the North Carolina Sanatorium, speaking of the infectiousness of tuberculosis. "I hope," he continued, "the time will come when the pocket sputum cup will be as common as the pocket handkerchief. When a person has a cough, no matter what may be the cause, he should cover his mouth when he coughs and use a sputum cup to expectorate in.

"The germs are found by the millions in the spit of tuberculous persons. It is through this spit almost alone that tuberculosis reaches uninfected persons. If we could collect and destroy all the spit of tuberculous persons and get them to cover their mouths when they cough, we could greatly limit, and in time almost wipe out, the disease. There is no danger from the ordinary breathing of a tuberculous person.

"Tuberculosis is not inherited, but is always gotten from some person or animal that has the disease. In the home, especially where there are children, the tuberculous person should be very careful. Children are very susceptible to infection, and they may become infected in childhood and, years later, break down with tuberculosis from the early infection.

"There is danger from infected rooms that are not properly disinfected. In sweeping, damp sawdust should be strewed on the floor before it is swept. Working men often ignorantly infect one another by carlessly spitting on the floor. Children should not be allowed to play around on the bed or on the floor of the room where a person with tuberculosis stays. Other sources of infection are: milk from tuberculous cows—especially for children, the kissing of consumptives, careless use of the unwashed dishes and clothing of the tuberculous, and the unwashed hands of consumptives.

"When the body becomes infected, the disease does not always become active, but may lie latent in the body from one to twenty years or more. When the body is weakened from any cause, the germs may become active and, if the body is not strong enough to resist them, active tuberculosis results.

"Destroy all spit carefully, cover your mouth when you cough, do not kiss, keep your hands clean, and boil all milk your children drink unless it comes from tuberculin-tested cows, and you safeguard yourself and your community against tuberculosis infection."

HOW DO YOU TREAT YOUR MINISTER?

The attitude of many otherwise good people towards ministers of the gospel is often the result of thoughtlessness. There are multiplied thousands of Christian people who revere the "man of God" who ministers in Christ's stead among men for their salvation. But there are others, both within and without the Church, whose thoughtless criticisms of the ministry do great harm to the cause of Christ. Sometimes these criticisms amount to vicious attacks cloaked under the thin veneer of witticism or love for "frankness." We should seek to lighten the burden of the minister of the gospel by kindly thoughtfulness and commendation whenever possible.

Commenting upon this subject, a Texas paper has the following, which is far from an exaggeration: "The preacher has a great time. If his hair is gray, he is old. If he is a young man, he hasn't had experience. If he has ten children, he has too many; if he has none, he isn't a good example. If his wife sings in the choir, she is presuming; if she doesn't, she isn't interested in her husband's work. If a preacher reads from notes, he is a bore; if he speaks extemporaneously, he isn't deep enough; if he stays at home in his study, he does not mix enough with the people; if he is seen around the streets, he ought to be home getting up a good sermon. If he calls on some poor family, he is playing to the grandstand. If he calls at the home of the wealthy, he is an aristocrat. Whatever he does, some one could have told him to do better."

How do you speak about ministers of the gospel is a question each of us should frankly ask ourselves, and, if censurable, let us at least correct a habit all too easily formed.—Selected.

AN INSPIRATION.

However the battle is ended,
Though proudly the victor comes
With fluttering flags and prancing nags
And echoing roll of drums,
Still truth proclaims this motto,
In letters of living light—
No question is ever settled
Until it is settled right.

Though the heel of the strong oppressor
May grind the weak to dust,
And the voice of fame with one acclaim
May call him great and just,
Let those who applaud take warning
And keep this motto in sight—
No question is ever settled
Until it is settled right.

O man, bowed down with labor!
O woman, young yet old!
O heart oppressed, in the toiler's breast
And crushed by the power of gold!
Keep on with your weary battle Against triumphant might—
No question is ever settled
Until it is settled right.

MISSIONS

Rev. J. O. ATKINSON, D. D., Field Secretary.

STEWARDSHIP AND PROMOTION.

By Warren H. Denison, D. D., Secretary.
Your Entire Constituency.

In making your annual every-member canvass, pass none of your constituency by. It includes all members of your Church, all the members of the family, unless they belong elsewhere; those persons and families that attend your Church or its various departments; the boys and girls of your Sunday School. It is your duty as a Church to do so. It is not a question merely of the needs of your Church; it is far more than that—it is for the best interest of the persons concerned that we urge this. Paul gives explicit directions about this: "Upon the first day of the week, let each one of you," each man, each woman, each boy, each girl. Early in life, very early, children need the experience and blessing of giving to God's cause, and to do it regularly and definitely. It helps to save them from self-indulgence. It sets their feet in a right path. They should have an allowance and be given an opportunity to earn money. If they are too young for this, their parents should subscribe a definite amount in the child's name, both for current expenses and benevolences, and he should have his own envelopes. Never let your child remember the time when he began this any more than you would when he began saying, "Now I lay me." Every home should be visited, no matter how regular and faithful the family is at Church. Pass no home by from your visit as canvassers and pass no child by if they look to your Church for ministry and light.

The pastor of a Church that carried the every-member canvass to the Sunday School pupils testifies: "It was one of the most helpful and interesting features of our whole financial effort. It afforded us an opportunity to inform the youth and children of the world-work of the Church. It opened the door to carry this information into the homes of many non-Churchgoers. The Sunday School children in our Church homes started discussions which made their parents sit up and take notice.

We gave our youth and Sunday School teachers some much-needed lessons in missions, stewardship and the conscientious use of money; then all through the year we followed this up with instruction on how their money was being used and on prompt fulfillment of pledges as an evidence of loyalty to Christ and the Church.

We suggested to the children many ways in which they could earn the money, and found many keen to do it.

Of course, this meant work, but it is wonderfully worth-while work. Let every Church and pastor realize that this every-member canvass is a bigger thing than getting money subscribed to meet expenses. It is great to be a Church that puts this canvass on rightly; and to be one of the canvassers who has been trained to make it.

BENEVOLENCES.

In the promotion of the principles of Christian stewardship, the United Stewardship Council, representing twenty-four Protestant communions in the United States and Canada, is planning a series of fifty interdenominational conferences in as many cities throughout the United States, to be held in the spring of 1926. The idea of such conferences originated at the semi-annual meeting of the Stewardship Council held at Louisville, Ky., in the fall of 1924. At that time a committee was selected to study plans and report them to the next meeting of the council. This committee is composed of H. S. Myers, Baptist, North; A. C. Zumbrunner, Methodist, South; L. E. Lovejoy, Methodist, North; M. E. Melvin, Presbyterian, South; W. E. Lampe, Reformed Church; C. G. Shatzer, United Lutheran; R. A. Latshaw, Y. M. C. A., and C. E. Burts. This committee will report at the next annual meeting, to be held in New York City, April 28th. It is probable that at this meeting cities in which the conferences will be held will be selected with dates and tentative programs.

The United Stewardship Council is composed of the stewardship and promotional secretaries of twenty-four Protestant communions. This council represents a total Church membership of 21,909,675. The annual report of the council indicates an average per capita gift on the part of the communions represented of $4.11 to benevolences and $15.76 to congregational expenses, including pastors' salaries—a total per capita of $20.68; total gifts for regular budget benevolences of $90,169,172, for congregational expenses $307,355,903, and total gifts to all purposes of $453,277,266.

OUR MOUNTAIN WORK.

While visiting Hillsville with Miss Brown a few days ago, Mrs. Howlet gave me an invitation to visit the convict camp near there. On returning home, I wrote Sergeant Wade, asking for two appointments each month. He immediately gave a favorable reply. On Sunday, April 5th, two of the Elk Spur young men went with me to the camp. We arrived at the camp about 10:30, which is about two miles west of Hillsville. A Mr. Edwards met us, giving us a cordial welcome. He took us to the office of the sergeant, and after meeting him we had a conversation with him, and in the conversation learned that he had been with the State for eighteen years, and we were not at all shocked. I may say here that he was just as nice to us as any one could have been, and made the visit a real pleasure. At 11 o'clock he took us to the barracks, where we found forty-two anxious, waiting men for us, the majority being colored people. I apologized to them for not having a part of the Elk Spur choir, then asked if any of them could lead a song, asking the rest to help him. Some one with a handkerchief about his neck replied that he usually led in singing, but had not been well for a few days, yet he would try. They began singing, and after a song or two I was glad that we did not have the Elk Spur choir. The singing, with a choir of forty-two, was almost equal to any Church choir. After Scripture reading and prayer, I gave them a talk on "The Risen Christ." As best I could, I brought to them the facts that our faith, salvation and deliverance from sin depend on the risen Christ. I especially emphasized regeneration by the blood of Christ. But, best of all, at the close of my talk, I asked for a decision, and the majority took a stand for Christ. Then the colored brethren sang "Sweet Chariot" and other good old pieces. The meeting was a real inspiration to me as well as a great joy to see the men take a stand for Christ. I am asking the readers of The Sun to remember me in their prayers as I go out to work with these people.

In the afternoon we had Sunday School at Elk Spur at the usual hour. The attendance was very good, and the teaching especially good. Miss Morey is to be complimented for her ability as a teacher. At the regular evening service Mrs. W. C. Strickland was ordained deaconess. We feel sure that she will discharge her duties well and is worthy of the position. She has been a faithful member of the Church as one of its charter members and is loved by all. We are wishing her well in her work. She is the first person to be ordained to this office at Elk Spur.

We have not yet been able to begin our Rocky Ford Church building, owing to the lack of funds. I feel quite sure, could all realize the great need for this building and the anxious, waiting people for it, we would have no trouble in securing the necessary funds. A donation at this time would be greatly appreciated and placed to a worthy cause. Send your donation to Miss Morey or Dr. Atkinson, marking same for Rocky Ford building.

THE CRUCIFIXION.

The story of the crucifixion of Jesus Christ is a simple, short record of fact, which is not denied and is most effective when left without comment or discussion as given in the sacred, authentic record.

The greatest struggle of a perfect, ideal, holy life of love, of service, of sweetness, of sympathy, was over; but, as the world counted and judged success, that life was a failure. The people had not accepted Him, religious leaders had declared Him an imposter, the court had decreed His death, and He was delivered to the heartless Roman executioners, who crucified Him between two malefactors, staging, on Golgotha, the greatest tragedy the world has ever known.

At His crucifixion, all nature blushed with shame and sorrow, the sun hid his face, and the earth quaked with condemnation. But out of the womb of trouble and sorrow and sadness and unappreciated love and service are often born the sweetest and best and most potent results.

Upon the cross, Jesus said: "It is finished." Isaiah prophesied: "He shall see the travail of His soul, and shall be satisfied."

But the thought in mind when this article was planned was that theologians have told us "That Jesus died for the sins of the world,"etc. But have we stopped to think of the plots and plans and persons and powers that put Him to death?

As we meditate at the cross we may realize that the publicans and harlots and thieves and murderers had but little part in causing those nails to be driven. Above these classes—up in society, up among high officials, up in the Sanhedrin, up among the doctors, up in the Church—we may look for and find the persons, the power, the dynamic that drove the personal Christ Jesus, by way of the cross, out of human society.

I am not sure but that the greatest suffering of the incarnate Son of God was endured in Gethsemane the night before He was crucified—heart suffering. But even these are not the saddest reflections to me. After nearly two thousand years, the philosophy and love and religion of the immaculate Christ, whose divinity was verified by His resurrection, and His teachings having stood the acid tests of time, and agnostics, and infidels, nevertheless, in His mediatorial office, even yet, His anguish of soul is incomparable.

Not that His mission to earth was a failure, for a few shall be saved. Not that his Satanic majesty, the devil, shall conquer, for He shall be subdued; not that the kingdom He established through blood, wrought in love, shal lbe set aside, for the gates of hell shall not prevail against it—but that the kind of sins which seem to have had so much to do with the death of Jesus the Christ on the cross were those of social, selfish, stoical order, and where these abound today in Church or State they continue to make it impossible for Jesus to dwell; yet He, doubtless, repeats in heaven what He said on the cross: "Father, forgive them."

Oh! the immeasurableness, the incomprehens ibleness, the eternity—eternity; eternity of God's love.

RELIGIOUS EDUCATION

By H. S. Hardcastle.

MISS PATTIE COGHILL, Field Secretary, 11 East Newton St., Boston, Mass.

INTERNATIONAL UNIFORM SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON.

April 26, 1925.

Subject: "Stephen the First Martyr."

Golden Text: "Be thou faithful unto death, and I will give thee the crown of life."—Rev. 2:10.

Lesson: Acts 6:1-7:60.

Devotional Reading: Psa. 27:7-14.

Stephen was one of the seven men who corresponded to what we now call deacons. They were to give themselves to the practical matters of the Church, while the apostles gave themselves to prayer and the ministry of the word. It is not unlikely that the modern minister would do more of the latter if he had deacons who would do more of the former. In any event, a Church would take on new life and power if it had more deacons like Stephen.

For Stephen was good and wise and spiritual man. It is said of him that he was full of faith and of the Holy Spirit; that he was full of grace and power, and that he spake with wisdom and spirit. And he had a passion for truth and righteousness. As a matter of fact, he argued and preached so effectively that he aroused the antagonism of certain Jews from other parts of the world, and failing to cope with him by reason, they did what so many small-souled men do—they resorted to slander and force. They suborned false witnesses, who testified that they had heard Stephen blaspheme against the temple and against God. That was the unpardonable sin for the pious Jew, and they promptly brought him to trial. With a face that shone like an angel, he made his own defense.

Stephen's defense is a masterpiece. It was indirect in its method, but very direct in its effects. He begins with the call of Abraham and traces the history of the Hebrew people down through the prophets. It all sounded so orthodox at first, but gradually it dawned upon his hearers that a very prominent theme in the sermon was the fact that God had revealed Himself to His people in places other than the temple, and that His people had been unruly and disobedient. With fine insight and with still finer courage, Stephen tells his hearers bluntly that with their fathers of old they had persecuted the prophets and refused to keep the law. That was the straw that broke the camel's back, and being cut to the heart, they gnashed their teeth, and stopping their ears lest they should hear more of the "blasphemy," they rushed upon him and cast him out of the city and stoned him to death. And all this was done in the name of religion!

Stephen had probably heard of Jesus' words to the effect that His followers should be hailed before kings and judges, and being full of the Holy Ghost, he looked steadfastly into the heaven. A vision of the Son of Man, standing on the right hand of God, greeted him, and he calmly faced his fate. Like his Master, he commended his spirit into the Father's hands, and prayed for his enemies. And he fell asleep. His enemies thought he was dead. But he that liveth and believeth on Christ shall never die. And Stephen had simply entered upon a larger life of infinite possibilities.

One of the witnesses who gave his consent to the mob violence was a young man named Paul. We shall hear more, yea much, of this young fellow later. And perhaps one of the factors which entered into his momentous change in attitude and action was the memory of that face resplendent with glory, and that heroic witness faithful unto the end.

The word martyr really means a witness. But witnessing became such a real test, and resulted so often in death, that the word gradually came to mean one who dies for the truth or for the faith. We will do well to remind ourselves that the Lord Jesus Christ still needs martyrs in the sense of witnesses. As a matter of fact, Jesus told His disciples that they were to be His witnesses. And there is still persecution and cruel taunts, and sneers, and bitter words, and sacrifice to be endured. To lay one's life down in unheralded ways is the opportunity of all. On the ordinary levels of ordinary days, our own way may be as heroic as one extraordinary heights of extraordinary opportunities which come but seldom. As some one has said—

"'Tis as hard at duty's call
To lay one's life down day by day
As to lay it down once for all."

Sidelights on the Lesson.

1. That Church is most efficient in which the division of labor is best worked out.
2. Ministers of God should give themselves to prayer and the ministry of the Word.
3. Deacons should be men of good report, full of faith and of the Holy Spirit.
4. The Church which has the spirit of God will increase.
5. Evil is not able to resist wisdom backed by faith and power.
6. Many wrongs are committed in the name of religion.
7. Inner-holiness will be reflected in outward appearance.
8. Sermons are sometimes most powerful when they are indirect.
9. God had a great purpose and plan for the Hebrew race.
10. The question is not as to how Stephen saw the heavens opened and Jesus at the right hand of God, but as to whether we see it.
11. There is need for witnessing today.
12. Witnessing costs today as ever.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

April 26, 1925.

Subject: "Educational Missions and Friendliness."

Scripture Reference: Acts 18:1-11; 19:8-10.

Song: "Lamp of Our Feet, Whereby We Trace," or "Faith of Our Fathers, Living Still."

Leader: "Go ye, therefore, and make disciples of all the nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father and the Son and the Holy Spirit, teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I commanded you."

All: "And lo! I am with you always, even unto the end of the world."

Read the first verse of "O Zion, Haste Thy Mission" in unison; have some one sing the other verses and all sing the refrain each time.

Scripture reading: Have the two suggested readings read by two different people, each calling attention to the different kinds of people with whom Paul worked, the length of time and his message.

Prayer.

Song: "Fling Out the Banner, Let it Float," or "From Greenland's Icy Mountains."

Plans for the Meeting.

This is a subject which should be of interest to all, and every one present should have something to say about it. In order that the members may think the subject through before the meeting, announce the topic a week ahead and ask that each one try to read something about it during the week or think it out for himself. A list of questions may well be used. Special topics may be assigned to several people.

Suggestions for Leader's Talk.

The leader may emphasize the importance of the subject for discussion in its relation to the affairs of the world today. Friendliness is what the world needs in its present state of affairs. It needs this spirit of friendliness and a constructive educational program. The youth movements for peace throughout practically every country are definitely studying and trying to educate the people for a warless world. It is very fitting that friendliness in relation to so many different things have been the topics for the Christian Endeavor meetings this year. The subjects should be enumerated. Are we, as Americans, friendly enough with other countries to give them and to share with them the good things which we have had the advantage of.

Perhaps the biggest contribution that American missionaries are making to Japan, China, India, Africa and many other countries at the present time is the movement for leadership training among the natives. Schools are established for this purpose. Home training is given to mothers in order that they may assist in the training of their children. Hospitals are putting more emphasis on training Christian doctors and nurses among the natives than any thing else. They realize that when the people have the proper knowledge they will be better Christians and more prepared to serve, and that these people will be in a much better position to help their own people than outsiders could ever be.

The Place of Bible Women.

Our own Church and all other denominations are supporting Bible women in foreign countries. These Bible women do mostly evangelization work among their own people, preaching, teaching, visiting, etc. But perhaps the most important educational work they do is to visit the homes and teach the women to read. This is a splendid thing because it gives the women a chance to read the Bible, to teach the Bible to their children, and at least in a measure to keep up with the progress their children are making.

Girls' Schools.

Mrs. Fry's school for girls in Utsunomiya, Japan, has helped to give many Japanese girls an education. It has been the means of sending a number of girls to our Christian colleges, several of these coming to Elon College. Such schools as this one have been the means of more freedom for the women of other countries and have made higher education for women possible. They have indirectly made industry more tolerable for girls and women. They have tried especially to interest the girls in making Christian homes.

Schools for Boys.

The caste system in India is such that boys of the highest class will not do anything in the form of manual labor; they will not even swim, because of the physical exertion. One missionary in India (Punjab) revolutioned the thinking of a number of the boys of this higher class by teaching them to be useful citizens, and to respect honest work and the laboring class of people.

Christian Orphanage

DEAR FRIENDS:

We have just two items we want to call your attention to this week.

We want your Church to make a special Easter offering to help support your Orphanage. We must have your co-operation if we care for and train the one hundred and ten children we now have.

The other item is this: It is necessary to build a new building to care for the number of children pleading for a place, and it takes money to build. The question for you to ask yourself is, "How much do I want to invest in the new building, to give a home to the fatherless children?" When you have made up your mind, write out a check and mail it to the Christian Orphanage, Elon College, N. C. You certainly would not feel good to not have a part in this undertaking.

Home Mission Work Educational.

Our work at Fancy Gap, Va., is educational, since our workers are teachers in the schools as well as helpers in the Sunday Schools. (Write Rev. M. T. Sorrell, Fancy Gap, Va., for information about this work.)

I had the privilege recently of visiting Miss Marguerite Youmans in her Americanization work in Haverhill, Mass., and of attending her Campfire Girls' meeting and one of her classes in English for the women. The class for the women was most interesting. It met in the home of one of the women, and they were happy to have an opportunity to study and to learn to read and write. Their children learn English in the schools and their husbands in the business world. The foreign women in America are to be pitied more than either the children or husbands, because they soon became not only outsiders in the community around them, but outsiders in their own homes.

THE BLESSING OF A HARD WAY.

A Prayer by Arthur W. Newcomb.

God of common sense, I give Thee thanks for the heavy blows of pain that drive me back from perilous ways into harmony with the laws of my being; for stinging whips of hunger and cold that urge to bitter strivings and glorious achievement; for steepness and roughness of the way and the stanch virtues gained by climbing over jagged rocks of hardship and stumbling through dark and pathless discouragement; for the acid blight that has burned out of me all thought of easy victory and toughened my sinews for fiercer battles and greater triumphs; for mistakes I have made, and the priceless lessons I have learned from them; for dissolution and disappointment that have cleared my vision and spurred my desire; for strong appetites and passions and the power they give when under pressure and control; for my imperfections that give me the keen delight of striving toward perfection.

God of common good and human brotherhood, I give Thee thanks for siren songs of temptation that lure and entangle and the understanding of other men they reveal; for the weakness and failings of my neighbors and the joy of lending a helping hand; for my own shortcomings, sorrows and loneliness that give me a deeper sympathy for others; for ingratitude and misunderstanding and the gladness of service without other reward than self-expression. Amen.

TUESDAY.

THE RIGHT ANSWER TO A GREAT QUESTION.

"What shall I do to inherit eternal life?"—Luke 10:25.

The lawyer who asked this question to tempt our Master was made to answer it himself; and Jesus said his answer was right. Read Luke 10: 25-37. There can hardly be framed a more important question for us to seriously consider. If the question is answered correctly so that the lawyer might have eternal life, the same answer would be correct in our case.

The lawyer raised another important question: "Who is my neighbor?" Again Jesus makes his question return answer, and a second time he is right. Your neighbor is not necessarily the one who lives next to you, nor yet, as many suppose, the man who is in need. Your neighbor is always, and only, the person who helps you in your time of need. Of course we are always to help those in need. But we are to love as ourselves our neighbors—those who show us mercy and help. This makes the commandment to love our neighbor as ourselves easy to obey.

By no means is Jesus excluded in the great answer to the great question. He is the very heart of it; for He is the greatest neighbor, who has shown mercy and helped us all in our need.

Prayer.—We thank Thee, our Father, for our neighbors who help us in our need, and for Jesus who helps us most of all. Help us to be neighbors to our neighbors and to those who need our help, that we may inherit eternal life in His name. Amen.—T. E. White.

WEDNESDAY.

GOOD AMONG MEN.

"God hath visited His people."—Luke 7:11-17.

God has given us much, both within our own inner lives and in the world about us, to remind us of Himself. There are deep in all men "intimations of immortality" and a reaching out for kinship with the Great Spirit that rules the universe. We know He is by the testimony of our own souls. In the world about us, how often are we reminded of Him. Earth, with its thousand voices, praises God; the height of mountains calls the soul to reach upward; the broad sweep of the sea invites the soul to widen its horizon, and to these voices of nature our spirit responds. Jesus came revealing the God of our own souls and of the universe as a Father, infinite in love and mercy. God was in Christ renewing and comforting the souls of men. In Christ, God visited His people in a new way, that we might have a saving knowledge of our Father in heaven.

Prayer.—Eternal God, we are ever thankful that Thou didst reveal Thyself in Jesus Christ. We would always think of Thee and love Thee as the Father Eternal. Let us walk with sure and kindly fellowship with Thee and all Thy children. Amen.

THURSDAY.

THE CRUCIFIXION OF JESUS.

"And when they were come to the place, which is called Calvary, there they crucified Him."—Luke 23:33.

Why is it that the story of the horrible tragedy of the death of Jesus on the cross will not die? Other people have suffered a like torture and have been forgotten. Was it because He was innocent? That is unsatisfactory, for other innocent persons have been tortured to death, and somehow we have forgotten them. Here is a tragedy that occurred in the long ago, and we can't get rid of it. Go where we may ,and a thousand things seem to remind us. In sermon, in song, in literature, in art—everywhere we are reminded of the shameful death of Jesus, and we can't forget about it. Again, why? I suggest two reasons: First, He was the Son of God. He was more than man. If He were not, I believe I could forget. But I can't think about God without thinking about His Son. And I can't get away from God. Second, my implication in the tragedy. Somehow I have been made to feel that, for me He was crucified. It was a case of a guilty world, escaping punishment by placing their guilt upon an innocent party. That fact must forever terrify and haunt the conscience of a guilty world. And the further fact that "it pleased the Lord to bruise Him," and that He did it willingly adds even more to the unforgetfulness of the cross.

Prayer.—Our Father, Thy great mercy and love in forgiving us when we were guilty has won our hearts. Help us to show Thy love to the world, and our love to Thee by crowning Jesus in our lives. Amen.—T. E. White.

FRIDAY.

CONTAGIOUS CONVICTIONS.

"For I know whom I have believed."—2 Tim. 1:10-12.

Paul knew, and knew that he knew. Such men are powers in the world—powers either for good or for evil. We all say with Goethe, 'Give us your beliefs, we have doubts enough of our own." We want the positive note, and are willing, if necessary, to forgive a little dogmatism.

True convictions, those which make a man ready, if need be, to die for the faith held, always command our respect. The man who can stand today and proclaim with utter finality the message which he brings will always have a hearing. Who has not seen groups swept into action by men who have convictions, but whose convictions were wrong? Simply to believe and to believe with all our hearts is not enough. Convictions may come from little study or from much.

Nothing breeds conviction like convictions. Once Christian people become real convicts of the gospel they profess, Christianity will go forward by leaps and bounds. The world needs nothing more than "a contagious conviction of the character of God."

The essential conviction, the one which will always make true leaders toward better things, is that of Paul, who knew whom he had believed. If we are gripped with the God revealed in Jesus Christ, and our hearts are touched with the Spirit who will lead us into all truth, our influence will be both powerful and good.

Prayer.—Lord's Prayer, all the circle joining.

SATURDAY.

THE SURE REFUGE.

"Underneath are the everlasting arms."—Deut. 33:25-27.

In times of national danger and defeat, it was the comfort of the old singers and prophets of Israel that underneath them were "the everlasting arms," that the eternal strength was round about them. Into such a confidence of the nearness and power of God does Jesus lead those who follow Him. It is one of the rewards and results of discipleship that men walk with Him into the very heart of God.

National leaders die, but God still reigns, and "underneath are the everlasting arms!" Jesus knew that He was carrying on the great stream of God-consciousness and God-action that was in the law and the prophets. He knew that this would run through history as one eternal purpose until its will was accomplished. God cannot be defeated. He can be delayed by the unwillingness of men; but ever He is waiting to renew His purpose whenever mankind turns again to Him.

By action, faith grows into knowledge. Faith is doing the thing men say cannot be done. We must believe in our religion; we must zealously follow its demands. "You can't change human nature," is the blind, foolish cry of matter-of-fact people, but those who, with Jesus, work with God, continually find that there results from their efforts new men and a new manner of living. When all things else fail, there is still God, and "underneath are the everlasting arms."

Prayer.—Lord's Prayer, all the circle joining.

SUNDAY.

THE GREAT SERMON.

"And as ye would that men should do to you, do ye to them likewise."—Luke 6:20-38.

When we fear what others may do against us, we should remember that what comes to us is ofttimes but the return of acts and words we started long ago. One of the beautiful things of life is that kind words and deeds travel from one person to another until finally many return with rich increase. One of the sobering facts is that evil deeds frequently pass on from life to life until they, too, return to the source. Let us strive to pass on the good that comes to us in life, but not the evil.

"Evil for good is devil-like; evil for evil is beast-like; good for good is man-like; good for evil is God-like. Yes, that lifts me into the heavenly places in Christ Jesus. Then I have the 'mind of Christ.' Then do I unto others as my Saviour has done to me."

Prayer.—O God, our Father, teach us how to ease the burden of evil in the world. May we do good to all men. Should any do us ill, may it not change our natures, but may we change evil into good that our lives may be as springs of living water in dry and weary places. Amen.

DEARS:

Did you ever take your Dolly to a Doll Festival? Oh, my! oh, my! It's the most fun in the world! And, then, you wouldn't believe it, Dolls stuffed with sawdust can enjoy it; the little Dollies and the big Dollies, all of them, have the very best time a Dolly ever had.

We washed our Dollies' dresses and we washed their faces, and their ears, too; and oh, my! when we put them all up in their places, it was the prettiest sight in the world. Then the Dollies' mammas played games, and sang a lot for their dear children; and the boys showed the Dollies how to make a shoe—that's just like a boy—and every one had such a good time that we can't hardly wait till next time—for, yes indeed, we are going to have another Doll Festival some day, after the next time Santa Claus comes. I 'spect, though, when we can take some bran-new Dollies to see all these pretty things.

I forgot to tell you, though: the Dollies get awfully sleepy! Some of their mammas had to rock them to sleep right before all the people. But please forgive them, 'cause really that's just like a Dolly.

Kiddies, who found the most Easter eggs? Please, oh, please! write me about your Easter-egg hunt, won't you now? I want to know so badly! Did you see any Easter Bunnies?

Here is a story about one I know. Gee, whiz! I must run now and give the little Ford a bath—it's not shiney at all today; it's a little, muddy Ford, but soon now it will shine again.

Can't you come and help me, dears?

Your editor,

MADGE F. MOFFITT.

PLAIN MARY.

Promptly at 5 o'clock, Judy returned from the dolls' party, bringing only "Plain Mary," the rag doll.

"Mother," she said, in explanation, "I was the only girl there who had two dolls with her, and Emily had invited that little girl down at the end of the street, whose father is in the hospital. You know, her mother comes to wash for Emily's mother. She hadn't any doll, and she looked so lonesome that I gave her Gloria."

"But, mother," said Judy, "if you could have seen her and seen how happy it made her, you would have been glad, and you know, I never cared for Gloria the way I do for Plain Mary. I could never give Plain Mary to any one. I've had her so long that I could never be happy without her. She's so plain and good."

"Well," said mother, "if you feel that way about it, I guess it is all right. You know which doll you love the best."

"But, mother," said Judy, "everybody thought that I was so brave and unselfish to give Gloria away and keep Plain Mary, and they made such a fuss that I was awfully ashamed, because really I gave away the doll I did not love so much, and kept my favorite. That is why I didn't want to be praised. It was not very hard to part with Gloria."

"Well," said mother, "those things will happen sometimes, and then sometimes you will give something away that is a real sacrifice and nobody will realize it, and you will get no credit for it. So you must remember that God knows the truth, and that is really all that matters!"

After that, Judy felt better about it.

"Now," said mother, when supper was over, "we are going down to the dock to visit that tramp schooner. I am on the boat-visiting committee this month with three other ladies, and we have just learned that that boat leaves in the morning, so we must go tonight."

Judy loved to visit the boats. Some of the sailors were so lonely because they could not have either their families with them or be with them, and they liked to have callers.

So, with Plain Mary in her arms, Judy went to visit the tramp schooner. A tramp schooner is one that goes to any place where its owner can find a cargo to carry, and sometimes it is a long time before it gets back home again.

"Oh, mother," said Judy, "there is a little girl at the back of the ship. I'll go over and talk to her."

The little girl was very glad to see Judy, and Judy learned that she had always lived on the ship and that she had no one but her daddy, who owned the ship. She said that on this trip they were going away over to Japan.

"What a lovely doll you have," she said to Judy, as she looked wistfully at Plain Mary. "Could I hold her for just a moment?"

"Do you really think she is beautiful?" asked Judy, so pleased to have some one admire Plain Mary.

"Oh, I think she is beautiful. I had a doll once a very, very long time ago, when I was quite small. I left her on the deck one night and there was a terrific storm in the night and the poor thing was washed away. I guess I will never have another, as daddy says that everything goes wrong nowadays and he has no money at all."

So they talked on about Plain Mary and the poor doll that was washed away years ago, until it was time to go.

Then Judy saw the little girl's eyes fill with tears as she laid Plain Mary back into her arms, and, in spite of her great love for Plain Mary, she was too tender-hearted to take her away from her.

"Wouldn't you like to keep her?" she asked, offering to give Plain Mary back.

There was no need for words. The little girl's face was enough for Judy.

"I know you will be good to her," said Judy.

Then one of the visiting ladies came up to them.

"It's too bad you didn't have a better doll with you to give her," she said; "that is not much of a doll."

Judy's heart was too full to speak, and she walked away with the lady. As she was about to leave, she turned back to the little girl.

"I shall always watch for your ship to come back, and I will come and see you and Plain Mary. Good-by."

She walked silently home beside her mother.

"Anyway, God understands," she said to herself; "God and mother."—Junior World.

A BARNYARD DIALOGUE.

By Robert Palfrey Utter.

Says, "Rooster, how do you do?
Moo, moo!
Rooster, how do you do?"

Rooster jumps up on the fence post,
Says, "This is the way I do:
Cock-a-doodle-doo!
This is the way I do."

NO "IF."

A little girl who lived with her grandmother used to go out each day and sell the stockings the old lady would knit. In one home where she was successful, as the lady paid her the money the child said, "This will buy the bread and butter for supper."

"What if you had not sold anything?" asked the lady.

The child shook her head. "You see, we prayed, 'Give us, this day, our daily bread,' and God has promised to hear folks pray; so I guess there wasn't any 'if' about it. When He says things, they're sure and certain."

Prayer and trust will take all the "ifs" out of our lives and put the peace of God there instead. A "peace, peace" which will shine in our faces and show in our actions and sing from our lips the sweet redemption story.

FALSE KINDNESS.

The softest little fluff of fur,
The gentlest, most persuasive purr—
Oh, everybody told me that
She was the "loveliest little cat!"
So when she on the table sprung
And lapped the cream with small, red tongue,
I only gently put her down
And said, "No, no!" and tried to frown.
But if I had been truly kind,
I should have made that kitten mind.
Now, large and quick, and strong of will,
She'll spring upon the table still.

And, spite of all my watchful care,
Will snatch the choicest dainties there,
And everybody says, "Scat! scat!
She's such a dreadful, dreadful cat!"
But I, who hear them, know, with shame,
I only am the one to blame,
For in the days when she was young
And lapped the cream with small, red tongue,
Had I to her been truly kind,
I should have made that kitten mind.

TO SHOW FORESTRY IN SOUTH.

To demonstrate the results that can be obtained by applying scientific forestry practices to timber lands in the South, the Southern Railway System has put an expert forester and three assistants in charge of approximately 12,000 acres of standing pine in Dorchester County, S. C., and will market the full-grown timber while preserving the young trees for future growth. As the present loblolly stand is cut, slash pines will be planted so as to produce turpentine as well as timber in the future.

In explaining the purpose of the project, Mr. Lincoln Green, assistant to the president of the Southern, said:

"The South has the opportunity to meet a national need with great profit to itself by prepairing now to provide a permanent source of timber supply. The rapid depletion of our forests makes reforestation imperative. Timber can be produced in the South in half the time required in more northern latitudes and by introducing slash pine we can extend the naval stores industry into territory where it is now unknown.

"The Southern is undertaking a demonstration of what can be done in the South, operating on lands which were originally purchased as a source of fuel supply for the old South Carolina railroad, now our Charleston division. We shall conduct our operations strictly as a business enterprise and expect to make them show a profit."

DORSETTE.

Grover Cleveland Dorsette was born March 31, 1884, and died March 31, 1925, age 41 years, dying on his birthday. The deceased was married to Mattie Gardner January 22, 1914. To this union were born five children, two of whom died in infancy. The living are William Lynn, who is now in a hospital in Ashboro as a result of a serious operation; Velma Louise and Sherla Mae.

Bro. Dorsette was a Christian man, loyal and devoted to his Church and home. His going is a great loss to his family and to his community. He leaves a widow, three children, a mother and father, one brother and one sister.

His body was laid to rest in Parks Cross Roads Christian Church Cemetery in the presence of a great throng of sympathetic friends and sad relatives. He was a member of the Ramseur Christian Church. Funeral services were conducted by his pastor, the writer, assisted by Rev. T. J. Green.

After services at the Church, the Jr. O. U. A. M., of Ramseur, took charge of the body and bore it to the grave where, with their impressive ceremonies, it was laid to rest.

May God richly bless and comfort the bereaved family. J. H. DOLLAR.

YARBOUR.

Bro. Ellis Yarbour died March 21, 1925, at the age of 63 years. He was first married on November 6, 1884, to Miss George Anna Buras, and to them were born ten children, five having died. The living are Walter Yarbour, of Central Falls, R. I.; Ernest Yarbour, of Newport, R. I.; Roy Yarbour, of Hebron Ville, Mass.; Mrs. Lester R. Laurence, Lippie, R. I., and Howard H. Yarbour, Louisburg, N. C.

After a married life of twenty-six years, his first wife died. He returned from Rhode Island to North Carolina, the home of his boyhood. After some time, he married Miss Martha Gupton, of Louisburg, who survives him.

Bro. Yarbour confessed his sins during a meeting at Mt. Gilead last September, and enjoyed the abiding presence of our Saviour thereafter. He was a member of Mt. Gilead Church only a little while, but I am sure that his name is recorded in the Lamb's book of life. This gave him victory in his last weeks of suffering. That was very comforting to his friends and dear Christian wife, whose prayers God wonderfully answered in the full salvation of his soul.

I visited him about one week before his death. A happier time I never spent in a sick room, as I witnessed the joy that filled his heart to overflowing.

Service was conducted by the writer.

JOHNSON.

Mrs. Martha Johnson, wife of William Johnson, of Lee County, N. C., was called from labor to reward April 1, 1925, at the age of 84 years. She leaves a husband, four sons and a number of grandchildren to mourn their loss. She was a very faithful member of Zion Christian Church for about forty-five years.

Sister Johnson was a tither for a number of years, paying a tenth of all she had to the Lord's cause. I have known Sister Johnson from a child. She was a good girl, a good woman, a good mother, and a good member of her Church. She will be greatly missed from her home, Church and community. On the 3d day of April I conducted her funeral services, and she was laid to rest in Zion Cemetery to await the resurrection morning.

The host of friends that gathered there and the quantity of flowers that was put on her grave attested the love and affection the community had for her.

Bro. Johnson, the bereaved husband, and four sons and other relatives have our sympathy and prayers.

Sanford, N. C. J. D. WICKER.

DUCK.

In loving remembrance of my dear father, Mills H. Duck, who died February 29, 1920.

Just a thought of sweet remembrance,
Just a memory sad and true,
Just the love of sweet devotion
Of the ones who think of you.

Days of sadness still come o'er us,
Hidden tears so often flow;
Memory keeps my father near us,
Though he died five years ago.

You are gone, but not forgotten,
Never shall your memory fade;
Sweetest thoughts shall ever linger
'Round the grave where you are laid.

His loving daughter,

PHENIE.

Most headaches due to lack of internal cleanliness

WHEN you are constipated, poisons form in the accumulated food waste and are carried to all parts of the body. Headaches follow. Biliousness, insomnia, lack of energy, all result from constipation, which if unchecked will lead to serious results.

Avoid Laxatives—Say Doctors

A noted authority says that laxatives and cathartics do not overcome constipation, but by their continued use tend only to aggravate the condition.

Medical science has found in lubrication a means of overcoming constipation. The gentle lubricant, Nujol, penetrates and softens the hard food waste and thus hastens its passage through and out of the body. Thus, Nujol brings internal cleanliness.

Nujol is used in leading hospitals and is prescribed by physicians throughout the world. Nujol is not a medicine or laxative, and cannot gripe. Like pure water, it is harmless.

Take Nujol regularly and adopt this habit of internal cleanliness. For sale by all druggists.

JOHNSON.

Mrs. Neeley Dupree Johnson departed from her earthly tabernacle to inhabit the mansions prepared by her Saviour on March 11, 1925. Born December 17, 1857; married to J. D. Johnson 1876. To this union were born six children—Mrs. A. B. Montague, Mrs. H. E. Hamilton, and Miss Stella Johnson, now living to mourn the loss of mother; Everett Johnson, who died at the age of nine; one who died in infancy, and Mrs. M. J. Carpenter, have gone and were waiting to greet mother on the other shore. The husband, too, surviving, makes the family equally divided.

Sister Johnson professed faith in Christ at the age of seventeen years. She joined Hayes Chapel Church, Garner, N. C., where she spent her earthly life as one of the most faithful members this Church has ever enrolled. She has rendered much service in the sick room, and has given council and comfort to many bereaved ones. She had many friends. For six years as her pastor, and for many years in addition I have known her and have heard others express their knowledge of her, and I yet have to hear anything but a good name given her by any one.

She was in bed fifteen weeks, as the end slowly approached. She was so sweet, gentle, and resigned, and often expressed the desire to depart and be with her Lord, the children and loved ones who had gone before. She earnestly requested that friends and family should not grieve when she was gone. Truly a good and useful friend to all; a loving, kind mother, and a devoted wife has been taken; but our loss is her gain. Earth and her Church is poorer, but heaven is richer now and will be enriched as many gather there that her life has meant so much to by leading them out of the paths of sin into the narrow way that she so faithfully traveled. Rev. J. F. Johnson assisted the writer at the funeral, and her body rests in the family burying ground.

JOHNSON.

On Sunday evening, April 5th, Sister Lydia Jones Johnson, wife of W. L. Johnson, of Raleigh, departed this life. The husband and two sons survive her. Also four sisters, Miss Lover Jones, Mrs. C. H. Stephenson and Mrs. Z. M. Caviness, of Raleigh, and Dr. Weatherspoon, of Louisville, Ky.; and three brothers—T. O. Jones, of Greenville, Ky.; Prof. B. A. Jones, Wake Forest; Dr. H. R. Jones, New York.

Sister Johnson was a member of Wake Chapel Christian Church and much loved by her many friends. The interment was in Wake Chapel Cemetery, the grave being covered by a gorgeous display of flowers. The great crowd of witnesses spoke for her louder than human words. The services were conducted by the writer, assisted by Dr. A. J. Ellis, of Pullen Memorial Baptist Church, of Raleigh.

May God bless and comfort the ones remaining. J. LEE JOHNSON.

BARRETT.

Mrs. Nancy Barrett was born September 21, 1841; departed this life April 7, 1925, suddenly. In September, 1863, she was united in marriage to John Burrell Barrett, and to this union nine children were born, all of whom are living. She has fifty-five garndchildren and twenty great-grandchildren.

She was held in high esteem by all who knew her. She had a charming personality, and a way of getting along with everybody. In early life she became a member of Barrett's Church, of which she remained a faithful member until death called her home.

Funeral services conducted by the writer, assisted by Revs. Fuller and Orsborne, of Dendron, Va., and her body was laid to rest in the old family burying ground near the old home. May the Lord comfort the bereaved ones.

THE SUN'S OBSERVATORY

By Rev. S. M. Lynam.

ALASKAN CHRISTIANS A POWER.—

The Presbyterian Board of National Missions is responsible for the statement that the native Christians of Alaska are becoming a power in the territory. A native Christian brotherhood has been organized to minister to the spiritual needs of both natives and whites. Christian education is being urged as the only way to right the wrongs which the people of the territory believe they are suffering.

Indeed, we might say that Christian education is a panacea for most of the ills of earth.

"WAR TO END WAR."—

These are the words of Sir Ian Hamilton, a British veteran of many wars, winner of the Victoria Cross, and a military leader of proved ability. Like the late Lord "Bobs," under whom he fought, he is a believer in preparedness for war, but a stanch advocate of peace. He has no faith, however, in the theory that evil can be overcome by evil, or that fighting the devil with fire will transform the prince of darkness into a good angel. This is not only good logic, but it is sound, common sense. The only "war to end war" which is worth while is that which wars to make war impossible. All nations are potential belligerents, and some are very much like a sun-parched forest, ready at any moment to burst into flame. There is no country that can afford to be indifferent to a possible outbreak of hostilities, no matter how piously it may wish for a lasting peace. Ideals are good, but facts cannot be ignored.

DRUG ADDICTS DECREASING.—

According to the government bulletin, the number of those addicted to drug habits are decreasing steadily. It is reported that there are approximately one hundred and ten thousand such dope fiends in the country, with the largest possible figure forty thousand above. Since 1900 there has been a constant decline in the use of drugs. At that time there were probably 264,000 such addicts in the country. These figures very pointedly brand as false the propaganda of certain anti-prohibition elements who are reporting an increase in the use of drugs since the coming of prohibition in 1920. In spite of what those opposed to it say or do, prohibition is bound to succeed because it is fundamentally right. Reforms are not brought about in a day nor a year, nor even a decade, and we have half a decade yet remaining.

HOW WOULD ENGLAND FEEL?—

Some time ago, a New York newspaper published a dispatch from Bremen, stating that seventeen distillers had been arrested for shipping "good Scotch" liquor to the United States. One was impelled to wonder why Germany was so interested in the Volstead law of America, but upon further reading it was pointed out that the arrests were made upon the complaint of Great Britain, whose own distillers wanted the profitable business of rum-running off the coast of the United States. This makes us wonder how England can hope for the rest of the world to believe her protestations of disinterestedness. It seems that England herself is now suffering from rum-runners. The French seem to be smuggling spirituous liquors into the country. All this makes us wonder again how England would feel should the French establish a line of rum-runners just outside England's territorial waters and send their whiskey into the country. England is threatened with just such a menace, and if it comes she will be suffering just the thing which she is allowing and encouraging her distillers to do to us.

TIME BRINGS CHANGES.—

A correspondent of the California Christian Advocate, San Francisco, tells the story of a Methodist brother who was investigated in his conference for playing ball. He was, according to the report of the committee, reprimanded by the bishop. At the close of the session, he arose and resigned his membership in a conference which could be so narrow. He later became judge of the superior court of one of the largest counties in California, and some of those brethren who investigated the brother for participating in a baseball game lived to receive a part of their stipend from the gates of a baseball game.

Time brings marvelous changes, sometimes for better, sometimes for worse; but certainly changes which are marked. A thing which was beheld with disapproval thirty years ago is now passed unnoticed, and some of those common-place occurrences not even eyed askance in those days are now bitterly condemned. But, on the whole, the world seems, however slowly, to be on the upward climb, and some day His kingdom will come, His will be done on earth as it is in heaven, even as Jesus prayed and taught us so to pray.

JAPAN GETS MANHOOD SUFFRAGE.—

Full manhood suffrage has been granted in Japan. Ever since the granting of any voting power in Japan in 1890 there has been a property qualification. Now this property qualification has been abolished, and with its passage some eight million men have been given the ballot, and it is felt that most of them will exercise their power to vote, and great changes are predicted. There are about twelve million voters in Japan—about a third of whom had the ballot before the extension. Now only a few are excluded from the vote. Those dependent upon public charity in almshouses, and the heads of the houses of peers cannot vote. The voting age in Japan is twenty-five years, while the legal age is the same as it is in this country—twenty-one years. The Japanese felt that a few more years of maturity will aid in the exercise of the vote. So far, there has been no agitation for the ballot for the female population of the country. Illiteracy is at a minimum in Japan, and the authorities feel safe in granting government participation to all the males twenty-five and over in the country.

Japan is moving forward with long strides to take her place fully among the great powers of the world in every way. Democratic government is destined to triumph wherever the foot of the Anglo-Saxon touches ground. He bears it in his blood to be free, and he stands ready to spill his blood to share freedom with all mankind. Could we be so devoted to that other great possession, the faith in Jesus Christ!

KING GEORGE GOES A-BOATING.—

For the first time in fifteen years, King George V. of England has a holiday. He must obey the orders of his physicians. He has had a rather severe touch of influenza, and there is just reason that alarm should exist. It was a cough that carried off his grandfather, the Prince Consort Albert, and his father Edward VII., as well as his elder brother the Duke of Clarence. King George is a plain, unassuming man, and there has been no sensation about him. He is not interviewed, his feelings are never inquired into, but he has weathered the most terrible hurricane that has ever assailed the English throne. His training as a sailor has stood him in good stead. During the war he was fighting within the family circle. The Czar of Russia and the Kaiser of Germany were his cousins, as were the King of Greece Constantine, and his wife Sophy, who was the Kaiser's sister. Germany held high position in England even at the outbreak of hostilities. For a time, King George practically abdicated, and allowed his ministers free hand. The throne foundations were laid anew, and this time in English soil, not in Saxe, Coberg, Gotha or Hess-Dormstadt. The ruling house was changed from the house of Hanover to the house of Windsor, and unlike his cousins and Karl of Austria-Hungary, George came through the conflict seated on his throne, and more firmly there than ever. For the first time in nearly a thousand years, the King of England is thoroughly English. Now, King George goes a-boating in his yacht, the Brittania, which has not been used in fifteen years. Wherever he has been hitherto, official business has followed him; but official business will not go to the south of France and to the Mediterranean with him this time. Kings must obey sometimes, and this is one of the times.

NOTES-PERSONALS

Will your Sunday Schools meet this year in convention? If so, send the time and place of meeting to THE CHRISTIAN SUN.

Rev. W. L. Wells, who is now taking a course of study, preparing himself for more efficient service, called at THE SUN office the past week. His health is much improved, and his visit was appreciated.

The Men and Millions Movement managed to get misinterpreted and misunderstood by many, yet no movement of the Christian Church ever went into or promoted accomplished such great results in so short a time.

The next thing of importance to a subscriber in arrears is to look at his label and estimate how much in arrears, then add to this arrearage enough to put him a full year in advance, and send a check to cover the amount.

Rev. O. D. Poythress and his people are going about building their commodious Church edifice in a most commendable spirit of self-denial and sacrifice. Any SUN reader who can spare a dollar for a most worthy cause can find the opportunity here.

The Sunday School and Christian Endeavor Convention of the Western N. C. Conference will be held at Shady Grove Church on July 18 and 19, 1925. All Sunday Schools and Christian Endeavor Societies should see to it that their delegates are duly chosen.

The Ham-Ramsey meetings at Burlington are being largely attended, and words of high praise both of the messages and the singing are heard on every hand. The meetings are to continue several weeks, and the pastors not only of Burlington, but of the surrounding towns, seem to be co-operating most heartily.

Dr. W. A. Harper, president of Elon College, N. C., was in the city last week, and attended the Christian Endeavor social function at First Christian Church. He delighted the audience with a brief speech apropos to the occasion. This meeting was a get-together meeting of the city Endeavorers. Prizes were awarded and refreshments served.

The following from Sunday's Norfolk Virginian-Pilot will be of interest to many SUN readers: "Dr. and Mrs. N. G. Newman, Holland, Va., announce the approaching marriage of their daughter, Miss Marion Lee Newman, to Prof. Carlyle Campbell, president of Coker College, Hartsville, S. C., son of the Rev. and Mrs. J. A. Campbell, Buie's Creek, N. C. The wedding will take place the latter part of July."

The evangelistic meetings at Christian Temple, Norfolk, beginning two weeks before Easter and closing on Easter Sunday, were largely attended, resulted in a real revival, and fifty-five accessions to the Temple, many members also joining other Churches. Eleven others joined at the Temple last Sunday, making a total of 179 members received into this Church since October. Dr. L. E. Smith is a pastor that works with ceaseless energy and consecration the year around and the Lord seems to crown his labors with abundant results.

It will be a source of keen regret to the people of his Churches that Dr. D. A. Long, with the close of the present Conference year, will close his pastoral work with them. His people at Franklinton, Pope's, Mt. Carmel, and Mt. Auburn, are devoted to him and will have great difficulty in securing one so capable and worthy to carry on the good work Dr. Long is doing with and for them and others.

A subscriber writes as follows: "Please find inclosed check for subscription. I am in arrears; mark me up as far as this will go, and stop paper when it expires. I have got more than I can handle at present." This subscriber had $2.00 more than he could handle, so he paid a year's subscription in advance. Then he says, "I enjoy the paper." What do you think of such quitters? Put off quitting time a whole year!

We wish to express our thanks to Rev. H. H. Smith, Blackstone, Va., for his most excellent contribution to our columns this week, "Our Great Doxology and Its Author." It would be interesting to know just how many SUN readers ever knew before who was the author of "The Long-Meter Doxology." Millions and millions of people have sung the immortal hymn and words, but how many ever knew the name of the good bishop who composed it. Any SUN reader who fails to read this article will miss the best THE SUN has to offer this week.

"I learned recently that THE CHRISTIAN SUN was not being sent to . . . . In my letter of January 9th, I requested that you continue sending it, and that either our Sunday School or I personally would take care of the obligation. In view of the fact that it has been discontinued, I am writing to ask that you again enter the name on the list of subscribers and send me a bill for all arrears, including one year's subscription in advance from date. I will personally become responsible for this financial obligation and hope to be able to continue to send the paper as long as" the party lives. Had the Church more members of this devotion to the enterprises and work of the Church, many things that seem to trail in the dust would go forward with flying colors.

The following attractive announcement in last Saturday's Virginian-Pilot, Norfolk, carries, besides a program, facts that are inspiring: "The door of Christianity is the gateway to happiness. Six years ago, the Christian Temple had a membership of 236. Today we have 1,198. Our edifice then was worth $12,000. Today it is $350,000. We employ nine paid workers now against two then, and our budget is $16,000, compared to $2,800. Program for Sunday, April 19th: Those who were interested in Miss Crawford's meetings are invited to return. Morning service, 11 o'clock, "The Way of Salvation"; night service, 7:45 o'clock, "The Way of Love." Listen for the chimes. Christian Temple, Thirty-fourth and Llewellyn. Rev. L. E. Smith, minister."

Rev. H. W. Elder, Richland, Ga., our inveterate and incurable Church-builder, is now dedicating time, talent, strength, means and more energy than he possesses to the building of a handsome brick Church in his home town, where he has been pastor through unknown years. The old building is torn down and the new brick walls are rapidly going up. If THE SUN's editor is not mistaken in his count and memory, this will make a total of about twenty-eight Church buildings this man of God has erected—and Bro. Elder is by no means an old man yet. It is not given to many ministers to build for themselves that many enduring monuments. Another distinction that Bro. Elder earns is that he is an illustrious example of apostolic succession; he himself, his father and grandfather, the two latter having long since gone to their reward, having preached in the Christian Church now for a period of 115 years.

This week marks an epoch in our Christian Church history. The opening and dedication of our new, ample and splendidly equipped publishing house, Dayton, Ohio, is the event that makes and marks the epoch. Dr. W. W. Staley, President W. A. Harper and THE SUN's editor are attending from the South and are taking part in the program that formally launches the new enterprise on its career of infinite usefulness and service. The Christians have been the most modest and derelict publishers on earth, in proportion to what we had as a people that should be published. Let us hope and believe that with an ample and adequate publishing house, the world will be richer because of our contribution to the printing of Christian literature.

ORANGEPORT NEWS.

Easter was pleasantly spent at the Orangeport Christian Church. The Christian Endeavor decided to hold its meeting in the early morning instead of in the evening, as usual. The attendance was good at this early hour. All present took part in the meeting by reading or speaking.

At the regular hour for service, a good congregation was present. We received eighteen new members into the Church. This was the result of the co-operation of the Church in personal work in the homes. The Sunday School report showed 110 present.

All departments of our work seem to be moving on smoothly. R. H. PEEL.

NOTICE.

All those who expect to attend the Sunday School and Christian Endeavor Convention of the Virginia Valley Central Christian Conference, which meets with the First Christian Church, Winchester, Va., on May 13, 14, and 15, 1925, will please notify Mr. Nelson F. Richards, chairman of the entertainment committee, at once. Please say whether you are coming by train or automobile, and how long you expect to be at the convention. Mr. Richards may be addressed at Winchester, Va.

Yours for a great convention,

J. F. MORGAN.

LETTER FROM DR. D. A. LONG.

To all My Field:

Dear boys and girls of all ages of my charge, may you ever have the grace and peace of the God of love. With this year, my work with you will end. This will give you good time to get a man in my place. My heart is now, and ever will be, truly yours. D. A. LONG.

Franklinton, N. C.

The British and Australian governments have signed an agreement under which 450,000 Britishers are to be helped to emigrate to Australia in the next ten years. Australia is to raise $170,000,000 for low-interest loans to help the settlers get established on farms, while the imperial government is to provide the cost of their passage and to add to the Australian development fund.

Rev. Dr. James Moffat, Glasgow professor, whose translation of the Bible into modern English evoked much comment, has arrived in the United States to deliver a series of lectures.

FIRST CHURCH, NORFOLK, VA.

Concerning the sermons which Stanley Harrell preached here during the past two weeks, I wish to say they were as good as I have ever heard for their intended purpose. It was meant that they should make Church membership and the practical, every-day religion of the Lord Jesus Christ synomymous, and that spiritual power should be awakened in the members by an adequate adaptation of Scriptural conduct. No great phase of the Church's purpose and possibility among men escaped the powerful logic and student-like expositions of the preacher. One felt the thrill of being a Church member, and the mighty challenge to be a real Christian in the meantime. Pastor and people alike were called upon to follow out to their logical conclusion most of the great truths of Scripture. Unique sermons they were, in that the finest students of the Word present, along with those who studied it almost none at all, declared them to be just such sermons as, judging from the reactions of their own hearts, they needed. They were deeply exegetical and scholarly, and yet so cleverly illustrated and so nicely expressed that, while they were long sermons, they held the complete attention of large audiences every night.

Results of such preaching are not to be put in statistical columns, but the Church is radiant with its rich experience. Every class-room in the Sunday School was packed on the closing Sunday, there being 212 on roll and 224 present, which means that the students came and brought new members with them. This was a record-breaker in our Sunday School. Both services on Sunday drew packed houses, although Bro. Harrell returned to his own Church on Saturday. In other words, one can now feel the thrill of having experienced a great meeting. There were no less than 175 reconsecrations, and while the main emphasis of the meeting was not the adding of new members, there were twelve accessions to the Church. This brings our total since Conference up to twenty, and the total of the present pastoral term up to fifty-eight.

Rev. O. D. Poythress was present each evening and led the singing, and also sang a solo nightly. Mr. Poythress further endeared himself to this people. His is one of the prettiest tenor voices I have ever heard. It is a genuine treat to hear him sing "The Old Rugged Cross," as well as many other of the people's favorites. Our own organist, Mrs. W. J. Spence, was present promptly at each service and rendered, as she always does, most efficient service. For a long time the sermons of Rev. Stanley C. Harrell will be ringing in our hearts. JOHN G. TRUITT,

Pastor.

POUNDED.

It is not with a feeling of worthiness, nor an attempt at boastfulness that we choose this method to express our hearts to the good people of Smithwood Church for their loving thoughtfulness toward their humble servant and his family as was shown by them Saturday, April 11th, when a group of representatives from that Church arrived at our home at Elon College, to the surprise of their pastor and family, with cars laden with such things as sugar, eggs, sausage, canned fruit, meat, flour, meal, cakes and the like, making a complete job of it. These people do many good things for their pastor, their Church and community—do "whatsoever their hands find to do," and blow no trumpets before nor after.

Words will not express the thanks of our hearts to these people, because of their substantial expression of appreciation of the efforts of their humble servant, and we only hope we may at least be of some service to the Father's kingdom and his people, and prove ourselves worthy of the place we occupy among them. May the good Lord bless and keep them. Thanks to one and all. M. A. POLLARD.

WANTED.

Having been requested to prepare the history of the North Carolina Christian Conference for the last 100 years for the next session, I very much need copies of the "Annuals" for the years 1865, 1866 and 1867 to aid me in this task. If you have a copy of either year and will loan it to me for a few days it will be returned in good order. It is hoped that some one has saved one for this time. Address— W. E. MACCLENNY,

PRINCIPLES OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

(1) The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.

(2) Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.

(3) The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.

(4) Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship, and of Church membership.

(5) The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by, all.

THE PURPOSE OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

The purpose of this Church is to cultivate a spirit of union among the followers of our Lord Jesus Christ of every persuasion, and to secure, if possible, the associate efforts of all true religious teachers in pointing the wicked to "the Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world."

The peculiar doctrines and tenets which have confused and distracted the Christian world are remanded to private judgment, and hence cease to be matters for debate, only in so far as may be necessary to prevent a sectarian influence from entering the Church.

This Church requires no compromise of faith on the part of any child of God in order to communion or fellowship; here denominational distinctions cease to exist, and Christian love binds the brotherhood together.

The purpose of this Church will be consummated in the conversion of the world and the union of all Christians.

TITHING.

THE SUN'S editor was with a brother not long since who said that he had become a tither, but did not learn his lesson from the preachers, nor the teachers, nor the literature that they sent out. He learned the lesson from studying the Bible on the question, and particularly the book of Malachi.

One wonders why more people do not learn the blessed lesson in tithing either from their Bible, from their God, or from their preachers and teachers? It is exceedingly doubtful if any law or lesson so plainly taught in the Word of God brings more joy and satisfaction to one who obeys the law in letter and spirit than does that of tithing.

Tithing is an old, old topic, but it is winning its way because of the joy and benefits it carries to all who accept and live by it, and because of the results flowing from obeying it. God's laws and teachings do not impose a burden; they bring a blessing. This is certainly true in tithing. One of the happiest experiences one meets in Christian activity and fellowship is that of tithing.

Recently a good widowed mother handed the writer $5.00, to be used in carrying the gospel to those who did not have it. This widow said, in making the offering: "I would not be able to do this if I were not a tither. Being a tither enables me to make many gifts and get great joy where otherwise I could not." This is the experience of thousands.

Not long since, a widow wrote the editor that she had been tithing fifty years, and that it had been a source of constant blessing and benefit and a wonderful comfort in her widowhood.

Preachers, teachers, professional men and women, fathers and mothers, boys and girls who tithe are happy to relate that giving is a joy since they adopted God's plan and method. God loveth a cheerful giver, and tithing enables one to be cheerful in giving. It enables one to carry out exactly the command of the inspired writer, who said: "Lay by in store on the first day of the week as the Lord has prospered him."

Then the results: The churches have great difficulty, most of them, in financing that part of kingdom service they are trying to render and carrying forward the work which God has committed to them. If they would adopt the tithe, the problem would be solved and God's work would go forward as it should go and as He desires it to go.

What a pity indeed it is that we of the Christian Church have given so little heed to obeying this law of the Lord and giving as He has commanded us to!

The census shows that the average income of citizens in the United States during the year 1923 was $568. Figures show that we members of the Christian Church paid to all our benevolences only on an average income of $140 each—that is to say, one-fourth of our tithe. The total paid by us in 1923 was $1,400,000. If we had tithed, we would have paid into the Lord's treasury $5,680,000. What a pity indeed it is that we go contrary to the law of the Lord and withhold for our own use that which belongs to Him.

Will a man rob God? Yet we have robbed Him in tithes and offerings. Do we expect our Church to grow, our enterprises to flourish, our institutions and Churches to build up when we go counter to the plain teachings of the Book and disregard the law of our Lord? He never intended that His kingdom should go begging. He laid down a law whereby it could be adequately financed and all His work done in order and in benefits and in blessings. We are missing the joy of Christian giving and of seeing our Church go forward as it should because we take the matter in our own hands and refuse to do as God has commanded.

THE WOMAN'S MISSIONARY RALLIES.

For the past three weeks, women in the districts of Eastern Virginia and the North Carolina Conferences have been holding their one-day schools of missions. Women have grouped the Churches into districts, and in each of these districts constituted, as a rule, of not over a dozen, sometimes a half-dozen Churches, a one-day school of missions, or rally, is held in the spring. In this way the women are carrying the benefits of a conference to almost every Church, and certainly to every missionary society. These meetings are increasing from year to year in interest and in attendance. Some of them this year were more largely attended than the annual Conference several years ago, and it seems now that within a few years these rallies will be equal in interest, in worth and in attendance to the annual Conferences of the present.

In Eastern Virginia, at least two speakers from the North American Missionary Conference brought messages of great helpfulness. The women discussed their goals and plans and let each society know just what was expected of it, and the plan whereby it could work during the year. The mission secretary was rejoiced at the great rallies in all the districts of Eastern Virginia and was privileged to attend each and all.

In the North Carolina districts, Mrs. L. L. Vaughan, the president of the North Carolina board, has been present and taken a part in each and all, discussing in a very concise and illuminating manner the objectives and plans for the societies for the year. Miss Gertrude Browne, field secretary of the Woman's Board, was also present in all of these rallies and gave a most interesting and impressive account of a recent visit to Carroll County, Va., and her impressions of the work there and the needs. The mission secretary was also permitted to attend each of the rallies in this State. The women and all who attended seemed to enjoy the occasions very much, and all seemed to be benefitted by the program and the exercises of the day.

Our missionary rallies certainly seem worth while, as they give first hand information to many who would otherwise not get it and carry inspiration to societies and to individuals. The women have in this way worked out a plan that the whole Church might profit by, in that the district meetings carry the work of the Church to the very ones who need to know about it and to be in intimate and close touch with it.

OUR GREAT DOXOLOGY.

BY REV. H. H. SMITH.

"Praise God, from whom all blessings flow;
Praise Him, all creatures here below;
Praise Him above, ye heavenly host;
Praise Father, Son, and Holy Ghost."

It may well be called our great doxology, for, as a hymnologist says: "This is the doxology of the Christian Church in all parts of the world where the English language is spoken. . . . It is doubtful if any stanza of religious poetry ever written has been so often, so universally, and so heartily sung in the worship of the triune God as this."

Of the thousands who sing it every Sabbath, perhaps only a few know anything of its origin or authorship. For the benefit of those who would like to learn something of the history of this grand doxology, we set down a few facts gathered from various sources.

It was written by Thomas Ken, a bishop of the Church of England, born at Berkampstead, England, in 1637. It forms the closing stanza of each of his three famous hymns: morning, evening, and midnight hymns. Bishop Ken is referred to as "one of the gentlest, truest, and grandest men of his age." He was appointed chaplain to Charles II in 1680. In this capacity "he fearlessly did his duty as one accountable to God alone, and not to any man. He reproved the 'merry monarch' for his vices in the plainest and most direct manner. 'I must go and hear Ken tell me my faults,' the king used to say good-humoredly."

Macaulay says: "Before he became bishop, he had maintained the honor of his gown by refusing, when the court was at Winchester, to let Nell Gwynn, the king's mistress, lodge at the house which he occupied as prebendary. The king had sense enough to respect so manly a spirit. Of all the prelates, he liken Ken the best."

He retained the confidence of the king to the last, and was his faithful spiritual adviser on his death-bed. He also attended the Duke of Monmouth at his execution.

In 1688, with six other bishops, he was imprisoned in the Tower of London for refusing to publish the "Declaration of Indulgence" issued by James II. After three weeks' imprisonment, he was brought to trial and acquitted.

Macaulay seems to have been deeply impressed with the noble Christian character of Bishop Ken, and paid him this high tribute: "The moral character of Ken, when impartially reviewed, sustains a comparison with any in ecclesiastical history, and seems to approach, as near as any human infirmity permits, to the ideal of Christian perfection."

Dryden said of Ken:

"David left him, when he went to rest,
His lyre; and after him he sang the best."

As noted above, the doxology forms the closing stanza of Bishop Ken's three great hymns. These hymns were originally "written for the use of the students in Winchester College. . . . He thus counsels the young men: 'Be sure to sing the morning and evening hymns in your chamber, devoutly remembering that the psalmist upon happy experience assures you that it is a good thing to tell of the lovingkindness of the Lord early in the morning and of His truth in the night season.' "

Praise and thanksgiving occupied a most prominent place in the spiritual life of the author of the great doxology. "For many years before he died, he headed all his letters with the words, 'All glory be to God'; and these are said to have been the last words he ever uttered." Note the expressions of praise in his morning hymn:

"Wake, and lift up thyself, my heart,
And with the angels bear thy part,
Who all night long unwearied sing
High praises to the Eternal King."

"All praise to Thee, who safe has kept,
And hast refreshed me while I slept."

An omitted stanza of this hymn reads:

"I would not wake nor rise again,
And heaven itself I would disdain,
Wert Thou not there to be enjoyed,
And I in hymns to be employed."

It was his custom to sing this hymn every morning upon waking, playing the accompaniment upon his lute.

The evening hymn sounds a note of praise in the opening words:

"Glory to Thee, my God, this night,
For all the blessings of the light."

Bishop Ken died in 1711, and was buried at Rome. "This had been his expressed desire, and he had wished to be laid in his last resting-place 'under the east window of the chancel, just at sun rising.' There, in the midst of that solemn scene, and as the daylight brightened, they sang his own anthem of praise, 'Awake, my soul, and with the sun.' "

Monckton Milnes (Lord Houghton), touched by the sight of Bishop Ken's last resting-place, wrote some beautiful lines, two stanzas of which we quote:

"Who was this father of the Church,
So secret in his glory?
In vain might antiquarians search
For record of his story;
But preciously tradition keeps
The fame of holy men;
So there the Christian smiles or weeks
For love of Bishop Ken.

"A name his country once forsook,
But now with joy inherits,
Confessor in the Church's book,
And martyr in the Spirit's!
That dared with royal power to cope,
In peaceful faith persisting,
A braver Becket—who could hope
To conquer unresisting."

The author of "Duffield's English Hymns" says: "The composer of the tune, 'Old Hundred,' which is so invariably associated with the doxology, was Wilhelm Franc, a German, whose work may have been revised by no less a hand than that of Martin Luther."

As to the doxology itself, one only need be reminded that every clause of it is based upon important scriptural truth admirably expressed; the triune God is the source of every blessing, then let all creatures here below unite with the heavenly host in praising Him.

"The Methodist Hymnal Annotated" gives this interesting note: "The author was accustomed to remark that it would enhance his joy in heaven if when he reached that happy place he might be permitted to hear his songs sung by the faithful on earth:

" 'And should the well-meant song I leave behind,
With Jesus' lovers some acceptance find,
'Twill heighten e'en the joys of heaven to know
That in my verse, saints sing God's praise below.'

"If saints in heaven can hear the songs of earth, surely then the good bishop's joy is very great."

HONOR THY MOTHER.

By S. L. Beougher.

The second Sunday in May is set apart as Mothers' Day, in honor of motherhood. The wearing of a white carnation is the visible manifestation of the event, which is further celebrated by appropriate sermons in the Churches and by family reunions. The day was first suggested by Miss Anna Jarvis, of Philadelphia. In a public meeting, she crystalized the sentiment now back of its observance with these words: "In honor of the best mother that ever lived—your mother." The name of mother is one of the most sacred of all connected with human relations. No name is more sweet or precious, or expressive of more important duties or relations; and when we think of its significance as related to society and humanity, we are lost in wonder and amazement. The testimony of great men in acknowledgment of the boundless debt they owe to their mothers would make a record stretching from the dawn of history to the present time. Few men, indeed, become great who do not owe their greatness to a mother's love and inspiration. How often do we hear people say in every walk of life, "I never could have done this thing but for my mother; she believed in me and encouraged me when others saw nothing in me."

The woman who merits the greatest fame is the woman who gives a brilliant mind and a noble character to the world. The mothers of great men and women deserve just as much honor as the great men and women themselves, and they will receive it from the better understanding of the coming days. It is the childish impressions that count; the memory of whispered prayers, of bedtime stories, of old ideals held unfalteringly before a boy's gaze; it is half-forgotten songs and dim visions of heroes that a mother taught her child to worship, that make the very warp and woof of the soul. It is the pennies that a mother teaches a boy to save and the self-denial that she inculcates in doing it, that form the real foundation of the fortune of the wealthy. It is the mother that loves books, and who gives her son the love of learning, who bestows the great scholars, writers, and orators on the world. It is the mother that worships science, who turns the eyes of the child to the wonder of the stars, and who teaches the little toddler at her side to observe the marvel of beast, and bird, and flower, and all created things, whose sons become the great astronomers and naturalists, and biologists. The very atmosphere that radiates from and surrounds the mother is the inspiration, and constitutes the holy of holies of family life.

No matter how loving or thoughtful the father may be, the heavier burdens, the greater anxieties, the weightier responsibilities of the home, of the children, usually fall on the mother; and the pathetic thing is that she rarely gets much credit or praise for it. From boyhood, children should be taught to look up to, not down on, their mother. For that reason, she should never appear before them in slovenly raiment, nor conduct herself in any way that would lessen their respect. She should keep up her intellectual culture, that they may not advance beyond her understanding and sympathies.

We often hear the boy of sixteen designate the mother who bore him as the "old woman." How this appellation jars upon the ears and shocks the sense when spoken! If she is old, her very age should be her surest passport to courteous consideration. The aged mother of a grown-up family needs no other certificate of worth. She is a monument of excellence approved and warranted. Upon her venerable face she bears the marks of the conflict in all its furrowed lines. The most grievous of the ills of life have been hers; trials untold, and known only to God and herself, she has borne incessantly, and now in her old age, her duty done, patiently awaiting her appointed time, she stands more beautiful than ever in her youth, more honorable and deserving than he who has slain his thousands, or stood triumphant upon the proudest field of victory. Although her eye is dim, her form bent, and her shadow falls graveward, speak kindly to her and ever courteously, tenderly of her. Others may love you when she has passed away—a kind-hearted sister, perhaps, or she whom of all the world you choose for a partner; she may love you warmly, passionately; children may love you fondly—but never again, never! while time is yours, shall the love of woman be to you as that of your old, trembling mother has been.

It has been said "That the bane of the kingdom of Israel was found in the nurseries of her kings." If material influence is thus powerful for evil, it is equally powerful for good, when rightly and wisely employed. The great and good of our race have derived the elements of their characters from maternal care bestowed on them in childhood. The faith and piety of the mother of Moses, the man who was to be Israel's deliverer and law-giver, was so strong that "she did not fear the king's wrath." Elizabeth, the mother of John, the forerunner of our Saviour, and none greater born of women, "walked in all the commandments and ordinances of the Lord blameless." Among the apostles of our Lord was one distinguished as "a son of thunder," and another privileged to "lean on his Master's bosom" and to receive very special tokens of His love. But when we are told of the piety and holy ambition of their mother, we may account, at least in part, for their distinction among the twelve. And not to mention others from the sacred Scriptures, as Timothy, whose "unfeigned faith dwelt first in his grandmother Lois, and his mother Eunice," on whom, let me ask, has the Saviour's mantle ever fallen, or in whom has His Spirit ever dwelt with peculiar manifestation who may not be added to the cloud of witnesses on this point? In far-gone times, look into the biographies of Polycarp, Augustine, Justin, Gregory, and others of the fathers; and in latter days, look to the childhood of Matthew Henry, Edwards, Dwight, Payson, and the whole army of those, at home and abroad, who are this day owned and hailed as the champions of truth, and you will find them all, without exception, to have been the sons of pious and faithful mothers. They do not come from families where the mother, though she may rule as a queen of fashion, and is perhaps rich in every worldly endowment, yet loves not God, and finds no place for Him in her heart and her labors; but from households where the mother is a Christian; where the nursery of the family is the nursery for the Church; where the first lispings of childhood are accounts of prayer, and the first thoughts of the heart, thoughts of God and of His Christ.

Such are some of the illustrations of a mother's power to do good to those most dear to her, and of the responsibility that springs from it. There is no influence so powerful as hers on the coming destinies of the Church and the world. She acts a part in forming the ministers of religion and the rulers of the land, without which all subsequent

SUFFOLK LETTER.

"There is a tide in the affairs of men"—and there is a tide in creation and human life. The tides of the oceans maintain equilibrium in the waters of the world. In human society it is a real study to note the average that is maintained in the physical, intellectual, and material conditions of the race. If heredity followed progressive or retrogressive lines, men and women would be curious specimens. In such case, the children of corpulent parents would all be corpulent; of lean parents would all be lean; of large parents, the children would be large; and of small parents, small. But nature does not work that way. Some small parents have large children, and some large parents produce small offsprings. In stature, men go up and down like the tides, and equilibrium is maintained. Nature keeps her balance and her variety. As God said to the ocean, "Hitherto shalt thou come, but no further; and here shall thy proud waves be stayed."

The same is true of mind. If the offspring of educated people were all intellectual, it would produce a class of men and women superior to all others; and it would result in such an intelectual aristocracy. From the most intellectual parents come the most ordinary minds; and from the most illiterate parents spring intellectual giants. There is no system of education that can keep the family mind on the upward trend; and there is no illiterate condition that can keep generations down. The intellectual tide rises and falls and the human race maintains a stable condition.

Material values follow the same law; otherwise, the rich would grow richer and the poor would grow poorer. But we know that this is not the case. Wealth rarely remains in the same family more than two generations. The tide of wealth rises high, and then ebbs again. The poor rise from poverty and become rich. Wealth rises and falls. The door of opportunity never closes. The gate to success is always open. The poor boy becomes the rich man, and then his children become poor again. There is no room for self-importance or discouragement.

What is true of individuals and families is true also of nations. The swing of nations is like the tides, else some nation would finally control the world. Rome did for a time, and then fell. It is unwise for any nation to boast of her wealth or her power. David may slay Goliath, and the Huns may conquer Rome. God and nature work together to maintain and keep a balance that prevents pride and oppression, and that keeps hope alive in mankind. Moral conditions seem to follow the same law; otherwise, pride would wreck the Church. God's own Son and daughter fell, and the children of good parents are often bad. "Ye must be born again," is not simply a dictum of the Scriptures; it is a necessity for all, and the son of a sinner can be born again as well as the son of a saint. Stable equilibrium is maintained in the kingdom of nature, of man, and of God. None so good that he does not need Christ, and none so bad that he may not receive Christ. W. W. Staley.

BETHLEHEM LETTER.

The hundred thousand dollar campaign which was inaugurated for Bethlehem College in Randolph, Chambers, Tallapoosa and Clay Counties, of the State of Alabama, has not made the progress that we hoped that it would up to this time on account of an epidemic of influenza which has swept this section of the State; but it has somewhat subsided now, and the solicitation work will be continued with renewed energy until the territory has been thoroughly covered.

The following five-year program has been outlined for Bethlehem College:

1. Liquidation of all present indebtedness of the college.
2. A library of at least ten thousand volumes.
3. A fifty thousand dollar administration building.
4. Another dormitory to accommodate one hundred boys.
5. A vocational building.
6. A home for the president.
7. Beautification of the campus and development of the school farm.
8. Increase of the present annual income to the amount of twenty-five thousand dollars.
9. Construction of at least fifteen cottages as homes for ministerial students and teachers.
10. Expansion of the present equipment, so as to accommodate the eight hundred students who will want to come to Bethlehem College.
11. An adequately equipped athletic field.
12. An endowed chair of Bible and Christian education.

The above program may seem to be nothing but a vision or a dream, but the worth-while things which have been accomplished were at one time only concepts in the minds of individuals who had faith in God, in others, and in themselves to cause them to become facts.

The achievements preconceived in this program can easily be accomplished within this period of time if the entire constituency of the Southern Christian Convention can see their opportunity and feel their responsibility keen enough to do their entire duty for this our youngest educational institution of the Christian Church; together with the help we will be able to get outside of th edenomination. Let us all pray that our faith may not fail us in this hour of opportunity.

MODERN MARRIAGE.

"That something is wrong with marriage today is universally admitted and deplored. The number of celibates, of mismated couples, of divorces, of childless homes, of wife-deserters, of mental and nervous wrecks; the frequency of marital discord, of prostitution and adultery, of perversions, of juvenile delinquency, tells the story. The commonest tendency of those trying to remedy these difficulties is to attack the framework of monogamy and attempt to break it apart.

"To aim at the results, instead of at the causes of an evil is thoroughly in accord with society's customary method of handling difficult problems; it is also thoroughly inefficient, unscientific, and unsuccessful. The evils can be corrected only by removing the causes, not by tinkering with the consequences. . . . This book is, therefore, written from the biological point of view. It takes man as it finds him, and tries to make clear how he can fit himself into the American civilization of the twentieth century in such a way as to provide for his own greatest satisfaction and the progressive evolution of the race. These two aims must go together."

"Modern Marriage" was published last week by Macmillan.

ROSEMONT AND BEREA, NORFOLK.

Sunday, the 12th, was one beautiful and inspiring day. The 5th of April (first Sunday) we had our Easter sermon at Berea. Full house; best Sunday School ever; Communion following sermon. Quarterly conference on Saturday; good reports. All bills paid; money in line for first payment on the new parsonage. Hope to break ground about July 1st. Memorial service to be held at 3 P. M. on the second Sunday in May at cemetery. We hope to have the American Legion represented, as one of our World War boys rests there. An address will be made, flowers placed on the graves of all, and flags will be placed on graves of all soldiers.

The first Sunday in May Rev. O. D. Poythress

will preach at Berea at 3 P. M. Sunday School as usual 10 A. M. April 12th was a splendid day at Rosemont. Communion at 11 A. M. followed by the choir, with Easter music that inspired the well-filled auditorium. The prayer meeting and C. E. Society hold their own.

Our campaign for funds to clear our parsonage debt goes on with assured success. There are enough people in this community to support one Church if all were active. I have tendered my resignation to my people. They have accepted it, to take effect April 30th. I have accepted a call at Phoebus, Va. My friends will appreciate the appeal of this work to me when they remember that the Old Soldiers' Home is located at Phoebus. The G. A. R., the Spanish-American, and World War veterans are there in large numbers. Then there is Old Point, with its active soldiers. Phoebus, therefore, is a soldier town.

Plans are under way for a Church plant that will meet the needs of the soldier and his family, to cost between $75,000 and $100,000. If you grow thirsty for a dip in salt water, come to see us. We will be surrounded by the same—salt water.

Rev. J. N. Cutchins will take charge of Rosemont, and Rev. O. D. Poythress will supply for Berea. As always, in moving on, we will leave behind many friends, but we feel we will have the pleasure of making many more. Our people here have been kind indeed to us.

The Sun will find its way to our home weekly, so we will read with interest the progress of our good people in this part of Zion.

THE COMMUNITY CHURCH.

By Chas. Josiah Galpin.

What is the difference between a State university and an ordinary university? A rather silly question, perhaps, but the answer that came back lightning-like gave me the jolt of my life, and incidentally pinked out clearly in my mind the pattern for the community Church.

A reception for the distinguished regents of the University of Wisconsin at the home of the president. In due time I found myself approaching that awful reception line, terrifying indeed, to me a newcomer. Suddenly I became aware that I was shaking hands with the president.

It was up to me to say something, and so after the manner of a pedagogue, I blurted out a question:

"Mr. President, will you tell me the difference between a State university and an ordinary university?"

President Van Hise didn't hesitate an instant with his answer.

"I cannot speak for all State universities," said he, "but this university is run, not for the students who happen to be here, but for the persons who may never see the university—even to the last man, woman and child in the last community of the State."

I had become unconscious of the reception line, for I was startled with an idea foreign to my bringing up, and I must make sure that I perfectly understand.

"Mr. President," I interrupted, "do you mean to say that the University of Wisconsin is not proud of turning out highly developed personalities?"

"Only as carriers," President Van Hise quickly replied in his characteristic jerky manner; "carriers of ideas and attitudes even to the isolated community and to the unpromising man. The students who are here are here, as it were, by accident. But the university is run for Wisconsin's people at work."

A Great Movement Under Way.

I passed on down the line, and eventually out into a world strange to me, where being a "carrier" of intellectual goods to the "isolated community" and to the "last man" was an academic commonplace.

Fourteen years of that day-by-day commonplace, however, never rubbed the beauty of its bloom off for me.

Having seen with my own eyes these last communities of a State quickened into intellectual fervor through the devotion of university men and women, do you think I do not know what would happen to the spiritual life of these out-of-the-way communities if the supreme love of devoted Church men and women were brought to bear upon them?

I will venture to forecast some of the things that would happen. Every rural community would have a community Church—a Church for the whomsoever, even to the last man, woman and child in that community. If topographically possible, every such Church community would stretch the bounds of its parish to include a thousand souls all told.

In communities of two thousand souls there would be two Churches—two only and both of them community Churches.

In communities of three thousand souls, there would be three community Churches, and three Churches only.

But why am I so foolish as to foretell what would happen when I can tell what is happening?

There are today, we are told by those who keep informed on the matter, a thousand community Churches in the United States, of which the greater part are in rural territory; in fact, it is reported that new community Churches are being organized at the rate, at present, of six a month.

To say that there is a community Church movement well started is no exaggeration. Some States such as Massachusetts, Vermont, Connecticut, Ohio, California, Colorado, Iowa, Illinois, are outstanding in the movement.

Of course, the community Church is not yet standardized, but it is shaping up. To affirm that there are three types, as some say, or five, as others put it, is more or less arbitrary. Still, for the sake of the man who understands better types, I may say that some community Churches like to be known as having arrived at the community ideal by federation of two or more denominational Churches, the new Church preserving connection with a national Church body.

Other community Churches pride themselves on being "union" Churches, each having originated from the organic union of two or more Churches, or having been established as a union Church in a community possessing no Church, but containing families of various denominational connections in the past. The union Church once formed usually stands alone, without any denominational affiliation.

Then there is the regular denominational Church which either just happens to be or has come purposely to be the only Church in the community, and which makes the boast of existing for the whole community rather than for its particular denominational group.

And there are other varieties, which could indeed be dignified into types, if we were pushed to it.

Sixteen Denominations Join Hands.

The important thing, however, is that out of a general unrest and dissatisfaction with Churches that aim to keep breeding up within themselves a highly pedigreed group of personalities which possess decidedly exclusive, if not aristocratic, characteristics, that have arisen over-night, as it were, Churches which admit to the inner circle all the pedigrees and aim at the democratic ideal of acting in the realm of religion for the last man, woman and child in the community.

Here we have before our very eyes, then, a kind of Church which is run as President Van Hise said his university was run.

Look over some of the stories of these Churches which are confessedly trying to find their way to a new expression of social religion designed to prevent the wastes of competitive Christianity.

Here are the high points in an Idaho community Church: Rural in a town of 600 souls. Presbyterian by connection, but with members formerly of sixteen different denominations. Membership, 400. Plant worth $50,000, with eighteen separate class-rooms for Sunday School use. A community house, with gymnasium. Rest room for women and girls. A week-day Church school using one hour a week for school time. In summer, a daily vacation Bible school. A Boy Scout troop. A Camp Fire Girls' organization. Potato growers and fruit men freely using the community hall. High moral standards reflecting the unity of the people.

Take another community Church of farmers in Iowa, in the open country. An architecturally commanding building, providing, like a well-organized school-house, many separate rooms for religious instruction. The Church has deliberately packed into its conception of "community Church," the idea that, assuming Christianity to have contact with every phase of living, the Church has responsibility for providing the auspices under which all social activities of the community take place.

What more natural, then, than that the Fourth of July celebration should be around the Church? Farmers' Institute in the Church? Young people having a place for good times at the Church?

It will require only another thousand of these brave, venturesome community Churches to turn every select-bodied denomination to looking itself over.

The sooner the great Protestant bodies confess their sins of competition and put their houses in order, the sooner the new day will come for the remote community and the last man.

Read these bold words from a group of fifty young Methodist rural workers:

"To the bishops of the Methodist Episcopal Church: We, the undersigned members of the Methodist Episcopal Church appeal to you to give a prayerful consideration to the following suggestions:

"1. That the bishops, district superintendents and other administrative officers of our denomination cordially co-operate with the leaders of other denominations in an effort to so organize rural Church geographical units that not more than one Protestant Church to every one thousand population shall prevail as a standard.

"2. That service to the community rather than to the denomination be the basis on which ministers shall be trained, appointed and promoted.

"3. That the Methodist Episcopal Church take the lead in the give-and-take method with other denominations, even to the extent of encouraging the discontinuance of small, struggling, competing Methodist Churches in the interest of rural Christian service to the communities involved."

Theological students and college students are not to be outdone by their elders in bravery. Read the following document for circulation among the officials of the various Church bodies:

"1. That students preparing to enter the rural ministry refuse to serve charges in overchurched communities.

"2. That we as rural students do all in our power in our communities and in places of leadership that we may attain to prevent denominational Church boards from pouring money and leadership into communities, which are to be used to perpetuate denominational strife that is destroying the religious life of our communities.

"3. That we pledge ourselves to endeavor to substitute the principles and teachings of Jesus Christ for narrow denominational creeds and doctrines. In view of this, we shall try to obtain an atmosphere and physical equipment of rural Churches, as well as Church services themselves, that shall be designed to meet the physical, social, mental and spiritual needs of the people who worship there regardless of their denominations."

The press carries the story that down in Georgia 500 farmers last season dedicated an acre of land apiece with all it grew to the Lord. These pieces of land are spoken of as the "Lord's Acres," and the "Lord's Acre Plan" is hailed as a 100 per cent way to finance the country Church.

The community Church strikes me as a Lord's acre in rural Christendom bearing a crop dedicated to God. And, if I read the returns aright, the comparative yield justifies my belief.—The Country Gentleman.

STEWARDSHIP AND PROMOTION.

BY WARREN H. DENISON, D. D., Secretary.

Many Conference officials are now at work on their Conference programs. We hope that the important subjects of stewardship, Church and kingdom finance, Church organization, will have proper consideration this year. We shall be glad to correspond with program-makers about their importance.

If any Church has so far failed this year to take a real offering for Christian unity and the Federal Council work, so that our denomination may keep an honorable place in this great agency for better co-operation and closer effort in service, it is doing itself an injustice and the cause an injury. We would like to add our word of appeal to any such Church and press upon individuals the necessity of making generous personal gifts.

We have issued a four-page folder of "Tithing Testimonials" by prominent men and women, officials in the Christian Church. It is available for the asking. It will do you good to read it, and it will be helpful to put into the hands of your children. This will tell you what some of our leaders say and practice. Do you tithe? If so, we wish to enroll your name with the long, growing list that we have. If you enroll today you will not forget it.

It is quite noticeable that a goodly number of our pastors and Churches are taking a real pride in carrying out the action of the last Convention in seeking a 15 per cent increase in their benovolent offerings. A goodly number are doing it this year. That plan will make us have a safe, solid, genuine growth. How is your Church ranking in that respect?

The Piqua, Ohio, Church, Rev. J. E. Kauffman, D. D., pastor, Mr. H. E. Sims, stewardship secretary, is putting on a stewardship reading contest in the congregation. It is a most helpful and interesting plan.

Your stewardship and promotion secretary will spend the entire month of May in the Western Convention, beginning at Urbana, Ill., the third and fourth, and closing with the Palmer College and Western Convention Summer School. We anticipate great pleasure with this work among our brethren of Illinois, Iowa, Nebraska, Kansas and Missouri. As soon as the places and dates of the itinerary are announced by Mr. C. E. Booz, stewardship secretary for the Western Convention, we hope that pastors and Churches will invite nearby Churches and workers to be present at each institute.

The Forward Movement receipts for January were $2,405.21; for February, they were $2,713.93; and for March, $2,273.28. There is a fine loyalty being shown by a large number in paying up their pledges overdue. We have extended every reasonable courtesy to those who, for good reasons, were unable to meet their obligations right on time. They are appreciating it and remitting, and with the remittance, in many cases, come words of thanks. In the mail just at hand is this word: "I am inclosing draft for forty dollars, balance due on my Forward Movement pledge, with interest on unpaid balance. We praise the Lord that at least we can meet this pledge in full. To Him be the glory, for He certainly brought it to pass."

Our pastors have a fine chance to show their spirit of co-operation now by speaking a hearty word publicly from their pulpits, showing the actual need for every possible subscriber to continue annually his special subscription to the continuation work of the Forward Movement. Hundreds of loyal members and many new members would readily subscribe if pastors would properly emphasize it.

A PERSONAL LETTER.

Dear Dr. Atkinson:

I had the pleasure of being with Bro. Poythress yesterday at South Norfolk, Va. I have had the pleasure of attending many meetings in cities, towns and the country where the people were laboring to build a new Church, but I want to tell you frankly that I do not believe I have ever been to a place where the congregation was more enthusiastic over building a new Church than our South Norfolk people.

It was planned that on this Easter Sunday everybody was to bring in an offering. It certainly made an impression on me to see the wonderful sacrifice that is being made by this congregation. One, especially, I want to call your attention to—an old lady, a widow—sent in $1.00 and said that was all she had. Another very old lady told her pastor that she wanted to give $25.00 towards building this new Church. She has recently died, and her husband, being so feeble that he could not come to Church, sent for Bro. Poythress and gave him a check for $30.00. He being so old and feeble, Bro. Poythress asked him if he did not need the money, and he said, "No; it is all I have, but I want to give it to the Lord and carry out my wife's wishes, and I feel confident that the Lord will take care of me, dead or alive." I call this real sacrifice.

Other offerings were made, and especially my attention was attracted to the little boys and girls organizing among themselves various little clubs, and these children brought in from $10.00 to $50.00. A little boys' club, from the age of ten to twelve years, and twelve in number, brought in an offering of $35.00.

I wished for you many times during the services. I regret that you were not there. You are aware of the fact that at our recent board meeting I made the remark that the next money voted for our board to spend was going to be at South Norfolk. After visiting them and seeing the great work they are doing, I am more impressed than ever, and I do hope that we can collect some money and help these good people.

Bro. Poythress is going to give me the total sum that was raised, and when he does this I will report to you.

I wish you would go to see this good congregation, and see if you cannot help them in this great struggle.

With kindest regards and best wishes for you and your good family, I am,

Sincerely yours,

Suffolk, Va. J. M. DARDEN.

[Will Bro. Darden forgive THE SUN'S editor for publishing this personal letter? He hopes so, as he wishes others to know something about what Bro. Poythress and his people are sacrificing in order to have that new and long-needed Church building.—Editor SUN.]

MOTHERS' AND DAUGHTERS' WEEK.

What Mother and Daughter Week is.—It is a national movement, observed by Churches, communities, or civic organizations. In some places, instead of observing it for a week, one day is designated as "Mother and Daughter Day." The purpose of the movement is to help girls to have a growing appreciation of their mothers, and to give mothers an understanding of the needs, desires and visions of their daughters and other girls. "Life Builders" is the theme for the week.

When it Is Observed.—If observed for a week, it should begin with May 10th, "Mothers' Day," and continue throughout the week.

General Suggestions.—It should be well advertised ahead of time, in order that the interest and co-operation of the entire Church may be enlisted. This may be done by announcements through the papers, Church calendars, from the pulpit, by posters.

The minister's sermon on Mother's Day might well be on the subject, "Women and Girls in the Church Today," "The Contribution of Women and Girls to the Work of the Church," or some other appropriate subject. The service may be made more attractive by special music by a girls' choir and the Church decorated especially for the occasion. Mothers and daughters may sit together for the service. A red and white rose or carnation will be worn by all, of course.

Discussion Groups.—At least one discussion group in which mothers and daughters meet together should be arranged for the week. This may be a discussion of something of common interest to both, in which one of the following themes is used: "Famous Women of the World" (Mary, the Mother of Jesus; Ruth, Joan of Arc, Monica, the mother of Augustine; Florence Nightingale, Jane Addams, Margaret Slattery, Louise M. Alcott, Queen Victoria), "The Pilgrim Mothers," "Mothers in the Homes of Today," "Mothers and Daughters Working Together in the Home, School, Church, Community and Social Life."

Mothers' and Daughters' Banquet.—This is one of the most important events of the week wherever Mother and Daughter Week is observed. If the Church does not have a dining-room where it can be given, it should be arranged for in some other place, or an informal party for mothers and daughters given in some home. This should be a wholesome affair, with a good time for all who attend. (Women who have no daughters may take girls whose mothers cannot come or are not living.)

Games, music and stunts should be arranged ahead of time. Some prominent woman in the Church or community should give a fifteen-minute talk on "The Girl of Today," "The Girl in the Home, Church, and Community," or some other appropriate subject. Toasts may be given by girls and mothers on different subjects. (These should be very brief.) A white carnation may be worn by each one. (This is symbolic of motherhood—whiteness for purity, fragrance for love, universality for charity, and hardihood for fidelity.)

Worship Service for the Meeting.—Song, "There is Beauty all Around" (home song).

Prayer:

"Lord Jesus, Thou hast known
A mother's love and tender care,
And Thou will hear while, for my own mother dear,
I make this Sabbath prayer.
Protect her life, I pray,
Who gave the gift of life to me;
And may she know, from day to day, the deepening glow
Of joy that comes from Thee.
I cannot pay my debt
For all the love that she has given;
But Thou, love's Lord, wilt not forget her due reward—

Bless her in earth and heaven."

—Henry Vandyke.

Scripture: Ruth 1:1-18; John 15:1-4.

Responsive reading—Leader: "My son, hear the instruction of thy father, and forsake not the teachings of thy mother."

All: "Honor thy father and thy mother, that thy days may be long upon the land which the Lord thy God giveth thee."

Leader: "I thank God, having been reminded of the unfeigned faith that is in Thee, which dwelt first in thy grandmother Lois, and thy mother Eunice."

All: "All that I am or hope to be, I owe to my angel mother."—Abraham Lincoln.

Leader: "Even He that died for us upon the cross, in the last hour, in the unutterable agony of death, was mindful of His mother, as if to teach us that this holy love should be our last worldly thought."—Hymnal of American Youth.

Song: "For the Beauty of the Earth."

A general folder on Mother and Daughter Week, a Mothers' Day worship program, a Daughters' Day worship program, and a song sheet may be ordered from the Christian Education Department, C. P. A. Building, Dayton, Ohio. For the story called "About Angels," taken from the book, "The Golden Windows," by Laura E. Richards, write to the writer of this article. It is a beautiful story, and very appropriate for Mother and Daughter Week.

UNITY FOUNDATION TO MEET.

Plans are being perfected for the Universal Conference on Life and Work at Stockholm, Sweden, next August. Commissions are at work preparing the program on the following lines of thought:

1. The Church's obligation in view of God's purpose for the world.
2. The Church and economic and industrial problems.
3. The Church and social and moral problems.
4. The Church and international relations.
5. The Church and Christian education.
6. Methods of co-operative and federative efforts by the Christian communions.

All the delegates are to be entertained by the Swedish Church. A large hospitality committee has already been set up, with the crown prince as its head, and this committee is preparing to put the whole six hundred delegates in the homes of the Swedish people.

All these are important questions, and their frank and fraternal discussion cannot fail to awaken a deeper sense of the need of a closer unity among Christ's followers in order to accomplish his great purposes in the world.—Ex.

FRANKLIN, VA.

The Franklin Christian Church held a very successful series of meetings during Holy Week. The topic each evening centered around the activities of our Lord during His last week of earthly life. The services concluded on Easter Sunday, beginning at 6 A. M., with a sunrise service. Several new members were received into the Church at this time. At the 8 o'clock service the choir rendered the cantata by Gabriel, "Jesus Lives."

On Wednesday evening, April 15th, one hundred and fifty-two members assembled for Church night. Supper was served at 6 P. M. The men of the Church prepared and served the following menu: chicken salad, deviled eggs, hot rolls, block cream, wafers, salted nuts and coffee—it being their proud boast that no lady had given any help whatever.

Miss Lucy Eldredge was present and took charge of the recreation period. The various monthly meetings held at this time followed the worship period. Church night has proved to be a great success, each month showing an increase in attendance. CORRESPONDENT.

MT. CARMEL RALLY.

The first of the district missionary rallies of the Eastern Virginia Conference was held at Mt. Carmel, Isle of Wight County, March 31st, with Mrs. J. A. Williams, superintendent, in the chair. Franklin, Antioch, Windsor, and Mt. Carmel Churches were represented. Each reported organized Woman's, Young People's and Willing Workers' Societies. Franklin reported Cradle Roll also.

Dr. Atkinson delivered an inspiring address. Revs. I. W. Johnson and J. H. Lightbourne each gave an interesting account of the North American Missionary Conference.

The music of Mt. Carmel entertained the visitors in their usual hospitable manner, and the choir of this Church furnished special music.

The next meeting of this district will be held in Wondsor. MRS. R. A. RHODES, Windsor, Va. Secretary.

The "History of American Music," by Louis C. Elson, has now been brought up to date by the addition of four new chapters written by his son, Arthur Elson. These chapters treat of both old and new composers, and describe the rise of many famous American musicians during the last two decades. Not only are the leading native works mentioned, but space is given to those Americans who have settled in foreign countries. American popular music is also discussed, ranging from negro melodies and ragtime to blues and jazz; while folk-music is given due notice, all the way from Indian melodies to the songs of the American soldiers in the European war.

Ten per cent of the people in the country buy for cash; 30 per cent buy on credit, and 60 per cent make their purchases upon the installment plan.

No female, either animal or human, are allowed on the Athos peninsula in Eastern Macedonia, Greece, to which the patriarch of Constantinople, head of the Greek Church, has retired. Eggs and milk for the monks to eat and drink must come from across the border of this monastic republic.

INTERNATIONAL UNIFORM SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON.

May 3, 1925.

Subject: "The Benefits of Total Abstinence."

Golden Text: "Daniel purposed in his heart that he would not defile himself with the king's dainties, nor with the wine which he drank." —Daniel 1:8.

Devotional Reading: Psa. 65:9-13.

Reference Material: 1 Cor. 9:24-27.

The story of Daniel is interesting reading. And it is as profitable as it is interesting. Every young man would do well to read and reread it. And every young man who became a doer of the Word as well as a reader of it would find an ever-increasing mastery of, and hence increasing joy in, life. For the principles that found application in Daniel's life and made him a winner, will make any young man a winner who applies them to his life.

The background of the story is familiar. The Jews had been overpowered by the Babylonians, Jerusalem had been practically destroyed, many of the Jews had been carried into captivity, and among these captives were Daniel and his three young friends. In keeping with a custom among the kings of the time, the flower of the captives were brought to the palace and trained for service for the king. Among those "children in whom there was no blemish, but well favored, and skillful in all wisdom, and cunning in knowledge, and understanding science, and such as had ability in them to stand in the king's palace" were Daniel and his three friends. (It might be remarked in passing that there is still a great need of men to stand before kings, men who can face big issues, men who can do big things. And as of old the men who have ability to do these things are the men who are without blemish. The world is waiting for men who can deliver the goods. But clean living and thorough preparation is the price men must pay for this honor.) They were accorded their portion of the king's dainties and wine. But they refused to defile themselves or to compromise their religious ideal. And after a test of ten days which proved the wisdom of their course, they were allowed to have as their diet vegetables and water. And so closely was their plain living associated with high thinking that at the end of the three years they surpassed all the other youths, both in appearance and in ability. So much for the general outline of the story.

There are a number of striking truths in the story, and one would like to present them all. But space allows only a few, and I want to present three great truths that have stood out for me.

I. The Value of a Purpose in Life.

If you aim at nothing, you will hit it every time. The man without a purpose never arrives, or if he arrives he does not know it. It is purpose that gives power. And Daniel purposed in his heart. He had thought the thing through. He saw what was involved in eating meat that had been offered to idols and in drinking wine. And he had purposed in his heart that he was not going to defile himself or compromise his ideals. When the temptation came, he was ready for it, for he had already won the fight within. And he was ready to pay the price of his ideals, too. He did not know what was involved in doing what he knew was right. He did not care. Because he feared God, he did not fear man. Some one has said that the reason the lions did not eat Daniel when he was thrown among them was because he was one-half backbone and the other half grit. One thing is sure: he was developing his moral muscle in the daily experiences of life, and thus winning the big battles of life.

We need more of Daniel's spirit and purpose among young men today. So many young fellows are afraid of the crowd. So many of them lack purpose. So many decide their actions in terms of expediency instead of in terms of ideals beforehand determined. And many young men are drifting to uselessness and shamefulness because they have not purposed in their hearts that they will not defile themselves.

II. The Value of Personal Example.

Our actions are to be governed not simply by our own desires and pleasure, but by the influence upon others. It is no far-fetched idea to say that if Daniel had eaten the king's meat and drunk the king's wine, the other three Hebrew boys would have done the same. There is no doubt that his influence inspired his companions to dare to do the right, too. Let no young man think that he can disregard this factor in life. And he who plays the part of a man helps not only himself; he helps others who consciously or unconsciously are being affected by his actions and life. One of the most glorious privileges of life is the power to help men by personal example. Thrice happy is the man whose life is a challenge and an inspiration to the finest things in life to his fellowmen. Do right for your own good. And do it for the sake of others.

III. The Value of Clean Living.

Clean living pays big dividends, physically, mentally, morally and spiritually. Daniel went to the top and remained there because he would not defile himself. Many of the failures in life can be traced to unclean living that sapped the physical strength, dwarfed the mental powers, warped the moral capacities, and blighted the spiritual life. There are many factors in success, but it can be said without fear of contradiction that one of the most important ones is clean living. Keep thy heart with all diligence, for out of it are the issues of life. Paul, in his closing advice to Timothy, a young man, said: "Keep thyself pure." "Blessed are the pure in heart, for they shall see God."

Teaching Points.

1. No man is free who is a slave to himself; no man is a slave who is master of himself.
2. Wanted—young men to stand before kings.
3. A man is often known by what he eats, as well as by the company he keeps.
4. A good complexion is not so much a matter of what one puts on from the outside as what one puts on from inside.
5. Clean living shows—and pays.
6. Clean living and high thinking are blood relations.
7. A heart-purpose is worth two head-purposes.
8. The heart is always asking Christians to pass examinations.
9. By obedience, many are made righteous.
10. "Whatever people may think of you, do what is right."
11. A purpose gives power.
12. He who is determined to "go clean" has God and the whole moral universe on his side.
13. The test of manhood is not size, but character.
14. He who is victor in that which is least shall be victor in that which is great.
15. The world respects the man who has the courage of his convictions.

Plans for the Meeting.

Announce the meeting by making a poster with a family group or some other home-like picture; beneath this print an announcement of the meeting and the program, or some special feature of the program. The meeting might well be held in some home since it deals with this subject. The young people should plan for a social to be given at the Church, or better in some home, for the parents. This social may come during the week before the meeting or after the meeting. Invitations to the parents may be sent, or the social announced by a poster or during Sunday School.

Worship Service.

Song: "For the Beauty of the Earth."

Scripture: Deut. 6:4-9; Eph. 4:29-62; 5:1-2.

Have some one read a brief paper on "The Home Life Into Which Jesus Came" (Luke 1:45-56; 2:1-20).

Prayer for better homes.

Song: "There is Beauty All Around" (home song).

All repeat: "Honor thy father and thy mother, that thy days may be long upon the land which the Lord thy God giveth thee."

Suggestions for Leaders' Talk.

Newspapers are so full of divorces and stories of unhappy homes that it is a good thing for young people to get away from these and discuss some of the things which go to make happy Christian homes. Thinking good thoughts goes a long ways toward doing good deeds, and if we are to have happy homes in the world today we must think about happy homes.

First, we should think about what the family is. Mrs. Bosanquelt, in her book called "The Family," says: "It is not an institution for the care of children alone, nor for the sake of the parents alone that they may preserve their cults, not just for the right to own private property, but a combination of all of these and more, a spiritual binding together of people with common interests." Others have said that it is the source of law, the origin of justice, the fountain of morality." Spencer, in his book, "The Family and Its Members," has said: "There seems to be no other inherited institution in which the spiritual essence of democracy can be so clearly and so well realized as it may be, and today most often is, in the private family."

The family is the institution around which all civilization has been established. It is the strongest influence in the education of children. "Founded on love, it offers a refuge in every distress and a help in every trouble to each of its members." Our nation cannot be stronger than the home life of those who make it up.

Suggested Topics.

The Need of Home Life.—"As a baby needs some one to whom its little life is important, so all of us need a small group in which our well-being and our happiness is of greater concern than those of any one person can be to all the world of persons." People out in school life and business life during the day need the comforts of a happy home. The home develops individual personality and makes one his best, if it is a real home, as no other place can.

Church and Home Life.—The Church cannot

Christian Orphanage

Dear Friends:

Our Easter offerings are beginning to come in, and we hope our Churches will all do their utmost to swell the offering till we reach our goal of $5,000.00 this time. It always fills us with joy to reach a goal set, and makes us blue to fail to reach one. Friends, the demands upon us have never been more appealing than now. Fifteen applications last week. Perhaps all of them worthy and ought to be helped. May our Church people realize their opportunity and do their full duty in this part of our Church program. The Master said: "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these, ye have done it unto me."

The following have been sent in since our last report: Woman's Missionary Society, Holland, Va., goods for dress, hat, slippers and socks for Irene Boone; Bethel Church, Central, Ill., Conference, Missionary Society,.16 dresses, 5 blouses, 2 pair rompers, 1 pair slippers; Junior Mission Band, Coshocton, Ohio, 12 dresses; Mrs. H. be criticized too severely when it fails to bring the desired results with children as long as the home is indifferent, and often critical of the Church. The home and Church should be one in spirit when it comes to the training of the child. The home can co-operate in the work of the Church by lending its wholehearted support and above all interest. How many parents are so interested in keeping their children in Sunday School that they send them each Sunday morning and remain at home themselves? Parents should know their children are getting in Sunday School; they should help the Sunday School teacher in meeting the needs of their children, and the teachers should in turn know the home life of the children.

The Christian Home.—The best example of this is the home into which Jesus came. Mary and Joseph were devout Christians and very much concerned about the early training of Jesus. He was given the name Jesus, which meant that He should save the people, and eight days after His birth He was taken to the temple for presentation to God, as was the custom. Jesus was taught the Scriptures, and at the age of six or seven went to the synagogue school. He learned habits of prayer and love for law from his parents.

A Christian home is a place of kindliness, unselfishness, patience, and love. Making a Christian home should be the job of every one. Every home should be bright and cheerful with a spirit of good will, sharing responsibility on the part of each member, and good, wholesome fun. Do we do little things which irritate other members of the family; speak unkindly, have little regard for the feelings of others, fail to take our responsibility of the home life, fail to appreciate the other members of the family sufficiently, fuss? Some one has said: "Home, where we grumble the most and are treated the best."

Have some one read Edgar A. Guest's poem called "Home."

A Comfortable Home.—Each home should be made as attractive as possible. A lot of time should be spent in planning to make it beautiful. There should be good pictures, books which are worth while, by all means the Church papers, other magazines, music, and many happy guests with laughter and cheerfulness.

FAMILY ALTAR

CONDUCTED BY REV. H. E. ROUNTREE,
Our Chaplain in the United States Navy.

MONDAY.

CEASELESS PRAYER.

"Pray without ceasing."—1 Thess. 5:17.

Prayer is defined as the means whereby the fellowship of the soul with God, the oneness of our life with the life of God, is realized, and the real act of prayer is not in words, but in the attitude of the man towards his God when he is using words. God does not hear words, but He is infinitely sensitive to our attitude. So thoughts are prayers, work is prayer, wrestling with a problem is prayer, fighting for a noble cause is prayer, doing the rounds of daily life is prayer, any act of our lives is prayer. Whatever we may do, if it is to cultivate a spiritual attitude, if it is to throb with sympathy, if it is to covet fellowship with Him, if it is to cultivate the best and most excellent gifts—it is prayer.

And when ye pray, say "Our Father, who art in heaven . . . Thy will be done. Teach us, Lord, that to do Thy will is the antedote to sin and the supreme act of life. Amen.

TUESDAY.

THE MUMMY IN EGYPT.

"And they embalmed Joseph, and he was put in a coffin in Egypt."—Gen. 50:24-26.

In these days when the whole world is more or less fascinated by the discovery of a royal sarcophagus in Egypt, we are apt to let it overshadow the mummy of Joseph. The body of Tut-ankh-Amen remained in Egypt for over 3,000 years, but the body of Joseph did not remain in Egypt 300 years. It is a romance of faith, the faith of a man who desired no ornament in death, but whose highest wish was to strengthen the faith of posterity in the true God.

Following the great Hebrew premier's solemn instructions that he should be finally interred in the land of promise, the children of Israel carried the mummy for nearly forty years through the wilderness, and at last buried it at Sheehem. How the silent form in temporary interment must have seemed to speak to them while they were suffering in Egypt, and all through the weary pilgrimage of a great hope and a better country!

It was the first glimmer of a glorious triumph of One who conquered the tomb in the land to which this mummy was carried. Not Luxor, but Shechem; not the valley of the kings, but the garden tomb of another Joseph, reveals the hope of a sorrowing world.—Rev. A. E. Gregory.

Prayer.—Father, look upon Thy children today with mercy. We beseech Thee swiftly remove our transgressions and renew our heart's faith. We are Thy children, passing through this vale of preparation. When morning breaks over its shadows, let us behold Thee unafraid. Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

JESUS, THE WORLD'S MAGNET.

"Great multitudes followed Him, and He healed them all."—Matt. 12:14-15.

In the four gospels, that statement is recorded at least thirty times. That is the best proof we can have that the people loved Jesus! Many and many a time with tear-filled eyes He looked upon that crowd of men and women and children, that multitude of oppressed, sorrowing, sick, suffering humanity, and His heart went out to them in all the fullness of His great pity, compassion and tender love! "He healed them all!" we are told. Not one who came in humble faith went away disappointed.

What a wonderful power the Master must have had, never to disappoint a human soul! No wonder they loved Him and followed Him! His goodness was obvious; His teaching was wise and with authority; His personality was impressive and incredibly gracious! His words were like healing salve.

So even in our day, the Pharisees still take council against Him, how they may destroy Him, and the hypocrites hate the gentle Saviour. But the common people love Him still. They follow Him in multitudes. Humbly they come to Him and He heals them. He knows every art which will assuage sorrow, comfort grief, purge sin, and redeem humanity. Still the angel of Hope calls to the world's weary multitudes:

Earth has no sorrow that He cannot heal."

THURSDAY.

INFLUENCE OF A GODLY LIFE.

I am told of a family—husband, wife and three children—who live on a barge, it being the man's employment to watch over three similar barges. This family, amid surroundings that were deadly to godly aspirations, maintained a high religious life on their floating home. Sometimes they are tied up at Norfolk, maybe up a branch of the Elizabeth River, the next night at sea, next in New York—yet, wherever they are, they hold family worship. If possible, on Sunday morning they go to the nearest Church. They always give to the Church calls. Their quarters on the barge are immaculate. Their lives bright and happy. How marked a contrast between this family and many barge folks! Surely this little family must gladden the heart of the Father. Their every-day life was a memorial unto God.

Prayer.—Our Father, before we enter upon our day's work, grant unto us Thy wisdom and thy direction. May we honor Thee in all our doings. In His name, we ask it. Amen.

FRIDAY.

WORKING WITH GOD.

"Certainly I will be with thee."—Ex. 3:10-14.

Of what avail is it for a man to try to do something in which God is not a working partner? It is said that in the darkest days of the Civil War, some one remarked to Lincoln that God "is on our side." And the great leader said, "No, the comfort is that we are on God's side."

Yet, while we are absolutely dependent on God, He is all the time relying on us. When God wants an invalid cheered, a people set free, a world evangelized, He "comes down" and sends men and women, boys and girls to be His agents. So, then, we are "fellow-workers with God." What a mighty preparation for leadership is this consciousness!

Human leadership, acting under the leadership of God, must always achieve wonderful results. God seemed to need a Moses and God gives Moses moral credit as His human colleague; and men honor Moses for his faithful part in a great work of deliverance. Moses asked no reward. The question of personal gain does not seem to have occurred to him at all. All he is promised is that the great work is to be entrusted to him, and "certainly I will be with thee."

Nobody is fit for leadership who thinks of personal gain. Moses thought only of his people and their need. He was prepared for leadership by constant, though humble, work. We unfit ourselves for any great work or responsibility by chafing against the humbleness of our present task. Moses led his flock on the hills of Midian, as a preparation for leading the people of the Lord.—Rev. W. S. Stranahan.

Prayer.—Lord's Prayer, all the circle joining.

SATURDAY.

FORGETTING GOD.

"But in the time of their trouble."—Jeremiah 2:27-30.

On a bright summer day, a boy on the bank of the lower Delaware watched a stately yacht cut her way through the placid waters of the bay. The boy's dream was that some day he might be rich and go about the world in a majestic private yacht.

Some years later, when the boy was grown, it fell to his lot to interview the owner of just such a fine craft. The man was a foreigner, making a summer cruise in American waters. Later, when the wind turned chill, he would go south to Cuban waters or cross to the Mediterranean. The heart thrilled at the sight of the polished decks and spars and glittering brass. During the interview, however, the yachtsman punctured the boy's dream bubble. Said he:

"My wealth was inherited. I have more than I can spend. Why work for more? So I have no business to occupy my mind. Moreover, I have no family. There is no one for me to worry about; nothing to make me sorrowful. Only one thing I dread—that is death! I believe in God; that is, I believe there is a Supreme Being. But I have no strong religious desires. I wish I had. Sometimes I feel that I am the man that God forgot."

We do not believe that God ever neglects any man; but it is a basic truth of life that trouble stirs the indolent heart and drives a man to his knees. Many of us might never have learned to pray if there had been no lowering clouds. Adversity leads to prayer, and prayer brings deliverance and a knowledge of God.—Rev. John Harrison Allen.

Prayer.—"Our Father, we come with contrition for sins committed through forgetfulness and careless habits. We ask Thee to pardon the sins of indifference to law, of neglect of times for secret prayer, of pride over worldly success. Forgive our transgressions, for Jesus' sake. Amen." —Sheldon.

SUNDAY.

THE POWER OF A LIE.

"A false witness shall not be unpunished, and he that speaketh lies shall perish."—Prov. 19:8-11.

No place in our lives is the insidious operation of evil more clearly seen than in the results which follow the telling of lies. It is sometimes difficult to trace the results of wrongdoing. They become hidden under the passing days. Not so with lies. Almost always, we can trace the devastation and sorrow caused by falsehood.

Falsehood is a heinous sin which, if all facts were known, has caused about as much sorrow in the world as any other one thing. A school boy told the truth when he said, in answer to his teacher's question whether he would tell a lie for a thousand dollars: "No! The thousand dollars and the things it would buy would soon be gone, but the lie sticks all the same." Exactly so! A lie leaves a dark spot on the texture of the soul, and the stain of it and the sorrow of it stick.

When John Ruskin, in his "Seven Lamps of Architecture," says that there is no sin more flatly opposite to the nature of the Almighty than lying, he is certainly right. Truth is sacred. The world and human society are deeply dependent upon integrity. The man who violates truth disobeys God's specific laws and breaks down the supports upon which rest humanity's institutions. No sin curses human life so cruelly as the sin of falsehood and dishonesty. Therefore, the Bible says that the way of the liar shall be hard.

Prayer.—Lord's Prayer, all the circle joining.

Kiddies' Korner

MADGE FLEMING MOFFITT, Editor.

Kiddies:

What do you s'pose? A dear lady gave us a beautiful Collie doggie. Oh, he was so pretty! And all at once—change! A big ol' gun hurt the puppy in his little side, and he died. And some of us cried a little, too. Yes, big folks can cry; but really it's better if smiles come instead of big ol' salty tears. But if your doggie died, wouldn't you cry, dears?

But Rusty and Dynamite are still alive, and Poujalo Dan is still a frisky little doggie. There are a lot of doggies we know, aren't there? No, indeed, they don't all belong to your editor. Why, gracious me! she couldn't buy a dog collar for all that many doggies! No, indeed, dears.

Oh, wait a minute! I saw a wee little girl getting ready to go on a picnic. Yes, I really did! Come, dears, let's go along, too; and, my! what fun we will have all together!

Love to all my Kiddies. Your editor,

MADGE F. MOFFITT.

THE HIPPOPOTAMUS.

By Clinton Scollard.

The hoppopotamus will stay
In mud and water all the day.
Perhaps at night he lifts his snout,
Looks at the stars and peers about.
I wonder if there's consolation
In this nocturnal observation?
I'm very sure I'd make a fuss were I a hippopotamus.

TIME'S MAGIC POWER.

Turn on the light in the nursery some night and look into the crib at the small body lying there so still—one chubby arm flung back; the other at her side covering the old worn doll, eyes closed, little nose tilted toward heaven, lips curved like an angel's and tiny chest gently rising and falling. Ah! time's magic power! Was it only a few brief hours ago that she rolled your new vase downstairs and tangled herself and the cat in your sewing basket?

ROSABELLE REED.

Did you ever hear about Rosabelle Reed?
She will hang over the garden bed,
But she never can get it into her head
That nobody cares for a weed.
She sits by her sister hour on hour
And keeps mistaking a weed for a flower,
Smiling the most enchanting smile
And chattering all the while.

Mary Anne's head is full of sense.
She digs and pokes; she is said to claim
Knowledge of botany quite immense,
Calling each flower by name;
But Rosabelle off and on all day
Will cuddle a sprig of nothing and say,
"When is its little bud going to grow?
It wants a little bud so!"

She loves all humble and homely things—
Pities the plight of the poky snail,
Grieves that a grub must wait for its wings
And a tadpole lose its tail.
Oh, I'm sure, if you knelt where the grass is curled
And asked the shaggiest, shabbiest weed
What is the sweetest thing in the world,
It would answer, "Rosabelle Reed!"

HENS DON'T LIKE HORNETS.

Hens eat bugs—they like em. But hens certainly don't like hornets. A hen of ours was peckin' 'round one day and a big hornet flew by and she nabbed him. She's old and most likely can't see very well. I guess she thought she swallered somethin' hot—the way she stretched her neck and squawked. I held her mouth open, and pa filled her up with meal mixed with horse liniment, and she's alive today.—Johnny's Diary.

DORIS MEETS A HAPPY LITTLE ARCHITECT.

By Blanche Silver.

Doris caught a flash of yellow as a bird with a bright bit of yarn in its bill flew from the ground to the elm tree beside the dusty road.

"Well, now, who in the world is that building in our elm tree, I'd like to know!" Doris mused as she stepped closer to the drooping elm. "He isn't singing at his work, but still he looks very happy. Oh, dear, I wish—"

"There you go, there you go!" chuckled a merry voice in the grasses at her feet. "I'm glad you made that wish just now, or I'm sure you would have stepped all over me," and Doris' wee elfin friend from toyland hopped up, his face all smiles.

"Oh, Squeedee!" and Doris grabbed the wee elfin and gave him a great big hug. "I hope I didn't step on you. I'm so glad you happened along. I—"

"Was just wondering who I am," chirped a happy little voice, and the very bird Doris had been watching hopped down beside Squeedee. "Come and introduce us, Squeedee; I'm going to be one of her tenants. I'm building in the elm tree."

"Of course. Mrs. Baltimore Oriole, this is Doris," laughed Squeedee. "I hope you two will be good friends."

"Indeed, Mrs. Baltimore Oriole, I'm delighted to know you," Doris said as she shook the wee bird's claw. "But I never saw an Oriole dressed like you before. And I took you for a male, because you were doing the building."

"Pshaw!" laughed Mrs. Oriole, good-naturedly; "if I waited for my mate, I'd never have a home. He does the singing, and I do the building. No. Daddy Baltimore Oriole dresses mostly in black. His head, throat and the upper part of his back is glossy black. So are his wings, with the exception of a few white spots and edgings. The rest of his suit is orange, shading into almost a flame color.

"No, he always comes North ahead of me, picks out the spot for the home, then I build it."

"I see you have used bits of mamma's yarn," Doris laughed, as she peeked in at the dear little swinging cradle hanging from the branches of the elm tree where Squeedee, with his magic, had whisked them. "I should think you'd be afraid of getting wet."

"What? In a rain-proof house? I should say not!" laughed Mrs. Oriole. "Nor can the heavy winds tear it from its place. You see, I tied it to the limb with horsehairs. It's mostly made from milkweed stalks and shreds of bark. We don't always build the same kind of nests. It depends on our location.

"But there are not many hawks around here, so my nest isn't quite as deep as some. Now, I'm all through except the top. I like to have the top closed so folks can't see me sitting.

"I won't get through if I don't hurry, so if you'll excuse me, I'll go on with my work." And Mrs. Baltimore Oriole flew through the air to hunt for more thread.

Doris and Squeedee watched her until Doris heard her mamma calling. Then, thanking Squeedee, she hurried back to the house. (Copyright, 1925, Newspaper Feature Service, Inc.)

HONOR THY MOTHER.

training is comparatively vain. And to her, also, it falls to train those who are to be mothers of the race when she is gone, and to do for their generation what she has done for hers.

Then, let us bestow the supremest honor on the world's greatest benefactors—mothers! Begin early to cultivate a habit of thoughtfulness and consideration for her whom you are commanded to honor. Can you begrudge a few extra steps for mother, who never stopped to number those you demanded during your helpless infancy? Have you the heart to slight her requests, or treat her remarks with indifference, when you cannot begin to measure the patient devotion with which she bore with your peculiarities? Anticipate her wants, invite her confidence, be prompt to offer assistance, express your affections as heartily as you did when a child, that the mother may never grieve in secret for the child she has lost.

There is a vision that never fades from the soul, and that is the vision of mother. No man in all his weary wanderings ever goes out beyond the overshadowing arch of the home. Let him stand on the surf-beaten coast of the Atlantic, or set him down amid the glaciers of the North—even there every dash of the wave and every murmur of the breeze will whisper, "home, sweet home." Often do we sigh in our struggles with the hard, uncaring world for the sweet, deep security we felt when, of an evening, nestling in her bosom, we listened to some quiet tale, suitable to our age, read in her tender and untiring voice. Never can we forget her sweet glances cast upon us when we appeared asleep; never her kiss of peace at night. Years have passed away since we laid her beside father in the old churchyard, yet still her voice whispers from the grave, and her eye watches over us as we visit spots long since hallowed to the memory of our mother.

THE VIGIL.

Dark shore, and desolate sky
Unquickened by a star;
Sad sea where wandering sails are lost
In night afar!

No human presence sweet,
Nor other sound beside,
Save that to silence near akin—
The ebbing tide.

Only a lonely wreck
High on the lonely beach,
Whose hopelessness defies at last
The breaker's reach.

O earth that keeps no watch,
O heaven that lights no star,
He is, who cares for every sail—
Each broken spar.

—Satie Vivienne Carden.

TALK WITH JESUS.

Make a confidant of Jesus. Let Him be your bosom friend. Tell Him all your secrets. Talk wit hHim about your troubles, and they will disappear; about your doubts, and they will vanish, about your cares, that will grow light; about your duties, and they will become plain; about your enemies, and your resentment will die; about your disappointments, and hope will bloom again; about your hopes, and they will grow brighter all the time. Let Jesus be not an abstraction, but a real person. Talk with Him just as you would talk with your wife or your most intimate friend in private. You may not see him in the viewless air around you, but he will be there to hear, and you will receive the token of his presence in the calm joy diffused throughout the soul.—Unknown.

Most headaches due to lack of internal cleanliness

WHEN you are constipated, poisons form in the accumulated food waste and are carried to all parts of the body. Headaches follow. Biliousness, insomnia, lack of energy, all result from constipation, which if unchecked will lead to serious results.

Avoid Laxatives—Say Doctors

A noted authority says that laxatives and cathartics do not overcome constipation, but by their continued use tend only to aggravate the condition.

Medical science has found in lubrication a means of overcoming constipation. The gentle lubricant, Nujol, penetrates and softens the hard food waste and thus hastens its passage through and out of the body. Thus, Nujol brings internal cleanliness.

Nujol is used in leading hospitals and is prescribed by physicians throughout the world. Nujol is not a medicine or laxative, and cannot gripe. Like pure water, it is harmless.

Take Nujol regularly and adopt this habit of internal cleanliness. For sale by all druggists.

THE SUN'S OBSERVATORY

By Rev. S. M. Lynam.

GOVERNMENT CENSUS.—

How much has the United States grown in population since the government census of 1920? The official figures for that year showed a total population of 105,710,620. An unofficial estimate places the present population at about 113,500,000. If the estimate is accurate, that is a gain of nearly eight million in five years.

HORSELESS CARRIAGE.—

Elwood Haynes, of Kokomo, Ind., inventor, designer and builder of the first vehicle ever driven by a gasoline engine, died April 13th, at the age of 67. Mr. Haynes took his first ride in his "horseless carriage" on July 4, 1894, at a speed of about seven miles an hour. Later, in Chicago, a policeman ordered him to "get that contraption off the streets." The "contraption" is now in the Smithsonian Institution at Washington, D. C. Mr. Haynes gave it to the government in 1910.

AN INVITATION WELL RECEIVED.—

The American University of Cairo recently invited four hundred and fifty seniors of El Azhar, the Mohammedan University, to see the film, "The Gift of Life," which deals with the question of sex. The shieks went away with many bows and expressions of gratitude and regretting that more of their number might not see the film. The religious and educational authorities in Egypt seem absolutely to ignore questions of sex, though the physical, mental and moral life of the country seem peculiarly interwover with such questions.

LAUNCH LARGEST AIRCRAFT CARRIER.—

The United States naval authorities have just launched the steamship "Saratoga," which is the largest airplane carrier in the navy. It has a landing-deck 888x105 feet, and has a capacity of thirty-two bombing and forty combat and observation planes. This is the first vessel of its kind, and is considered a unique type. The only similar vessel is a converted collier. The Saratoga will have a speed of from thirty to thirty-five knots an hour, and so will be able to outstrip the swiftest battleship. The Lexington, a sister ship, will be launched in the fall. These ships are meant to co-ordinate the air and naval forces of the government. These ships will make war a little easier for the world.

FREE SPEECH! NOT YET.—

Roger N. Baldwin, director of the Civil Liberties Union, has been sentenced to six months' imprisonment for heading an unlawful assembly under an obsolete law of New Jersey enacted in 1796. The trouble grew out of trouble during the silk workers' strike in Patterson, N. J., last October. The police refused to allow the silk workers to meet in their hall, whereupon the Civil Liberties Union undertook a meeting under the direction of Mr. Baldwin. Seven silk workers were also convicted and fined $50.00 each. Notice of appeal has been given in all the cases. The meeting was listening to the constitutional guarantee of free speech when the meeting was raided by the police. It seems that in Patterson, as well as elsewhere in the country, the constitutional guarantee amounts to nothing but words.

THREE RELIGIONS CELEBRATE.—

For many years the falling of Easter, the Jewish Passover, and the Mohammedan Ramadan has occasioned much antipathy in the lands where the three religions meet. There has also been trouble between the Roman Catholic and the Greek Orthodox Churches. The last celebration of the three faiths were especially marked by this hatred. The usual causes, and the presence of Earl Balfour at the opening of the Jewish University made matters particularly bad. Six thousand Mohammedans marched from their Ramadan prayers to the earl's hotel and stoned it as a token of their displeasure. They regard the earl as responsible for the British protectorate in Palestine. Mr. Balfour was later spirited away in an automobile and taken to Bierut, where he went on board a British man of war. Such demonstrations may possibly result seriously.

AN INTERESTING ANALYSIS.—

Secretary Diffendorfer, of the M. E. Board of Foreign Missions, has been making an interesting analysis of the average dollar, and it is an instructive statement that he gives out as to where our money goes. He says that out of the one hundred cents in the dollar, 24.5 go for food, clothing and rent—in other words, the necessities of life—22 furnish luxury for the average spender of the dollar; 14 of these precious pennies are wasted; 13.5 are spent miscellaneously; 11 cents are invested; 8.5 cents go for the perpetration of crime; the government gets 4.5 cents of the dollar; education, 1.5, and the Church .75 of a cent. Some of the figures are appalling. It is, however, just about what happens in the average Church—8.5 cents for actual crime against .75 of a cent for the Church. Crime can never be obliterated with such a proportion as that. It is noticeable, too, that crime gets more than the government by nearly double. The work of Secretary Diffendorfer is said to be based on government figures, and therefore is reliable enough for us to ponder over seriously.

HERRIOT MINISTRY FALLS.—

After ten months of existence, the Cabinet headed by Premier Herriot, France, handed its resignation to President Doumergue on April 10. The crash came as a result of his resumption of the secularist policy of his party, combined with financial difficulties. It was proposed to issue four billion francs in paper money was denounced as dangerous inflation. Former Presidents Poincaire and Millerand led the attack on the Premier. The disclosure of the fact that the paper money issue had already exceeded the amount allowed by law by two billion francs was the last straw on the camel's back, and the government collapsed. M. Herriot faced the financial crisis due to the acceptance of the Dawes report, which greatly lowered Germany's indemnity payments on the expectation of which payments the government had borrowed heavily. Herriot was in office supported by the Socialist and Radical blocs, known as the Left. He has co-operated excellently in the movement for international peace. He accepted the report of the Dawes commission, aided Ramsay MacDonald, of England's Labor government, in the peace protocol at Geneve, and lent a friendly ear to suggestions for guaranteeing peace to Central Europe which came from Berlin and London. His administration has been stormy sailing all the way, but he has accomplished much while in office.

LUKEMAN TO SUCCEED BORGLUM.—

The directors of the Stone Mountain Confederate Memorial have selected Augustus Lukeman as the new sculptor to succeed Gutzon Borglum, who was dismissed some time ago. There has been much discussion of the affair, and Mr. Lukeman undertakes the task in the face of tremendous difficulties. Mr. Borglum has established himself at Raleigh, N. C., and declares that the selection of his successor condemns the association's policy. Stone Mountain is just outside Atlanta, Ga., and the project undertaken there to build a monument to the Confederacy, made up of a great group of figures, is a gigantic one, and has been under way for some years. There remain but three more years of the contract time, and Mr. Venable, the donor of the mountain, who is opposed to the treatment accorded Mr. Borglum, has given notice that the letter of the deed must be followed. This deed prescribes that the monument must be built in accordance with the plans drawn by Gutzon Borglum; that only one thousand feet of the mountain was granted, and that the monument is to be finished in three years more. Judging from Mr. Lukeman's statements, there will be a change of plans, and the Memorial Association will be in for a warm time of it. This monument, meant to be the pride of the South and an honor to all Southerners, all but promises to become a shame to us all, and something which we may wish covered deep from human eyes.

NOTES-PERSONALS

Our people are offered a splendid corner and very prominent building lot in Atlanta, Ga., that would sell for $2,800, for the sum of $800.00, which would be required for expenses of curbing, sidewalks, etc.

The sermon on "Heavenly Recognition," by Rev. Mills B. Barrett, said to be the only written sermon he ever preached, is printed in pamphlet form of small size (16 pages). Single copy, 8 cents; two or more copies, 5 cents each. Send stamps.

The Sunday School and Christian Endeavor Convention of the Eastern Virginia Conference decided to meet this year with the Antioch Sunday School. Antioch Church is one of the oldest in the Conference, and the community is noted for its hospitality. Rev. J. H. Lightbourne, of Holland, Va., is executive secretary.

Rev. W. H. Brewer, writing under date of April 24th, gives this good news: "I am glad to say that our new work here in Atlanta is going well. I am conducting services here through this week for Bro. Hanson. Have had a great and good time with these people. Also have had the co-operation of the other Churches."

The sermon recently published in THE CHRISTIAN SUN on "Heavenly Recognition," by the late-lamented Rev. Mills B. Barrett, has been put in very attractive pamphlet form, with an introduction by Dr. W. W. Staley. This is said to be the only written sermon left by Bro. Barrett. It was read with deep interest by many SUN readers, who will rejoice to know that it is now in permanent form.

It was not the privilege of THE SUN's editor to be present, as he had desired and expected, at the dedication of the Christian Publishing House, which we Christians now own, at Dayton, Ohio. Writing of the day and the event, Judge Whitelock, president of the Christian Publishing Association, in a personal letter, says: "It was a great day, and a great effort. We have a splendid plant, worth a quarter of a million dollars. Twenty-five years ago we had almost nothing. We think the Lord has wonderfully blessed our efforts."

Rev. J. M. Roberts, the pastor, sends this glad note. THE SUN will be happy indeed to print the history and the cut, as Cypress Chapel is one of our oldest and most famous Churches. "I wish to advise that our work on the new Church at Cypress is moving on nicely. We are building a new Church, and when completed will be a very nice equipment. We hope to have it finished by the first of September. At an early date I hope to give you a history and cut of the Church for THE SUN. Cypress will again be placed on the map."

The Board of Religious Education of the Southern Christian Convention is composed of the following: Rev. W. T. Walters, D. D., chairman, Richmond, Va.; Rev. J. F. Morgan, Winchester, Va.; E. T. Holland, Holland, Va.; C. H. Stephenson, Raleigh, N. C.; Mrs. J. W. Patton, Elon College, N. C.; J. W. Payne, Wedowee, Ala.; W. M. Brown, Burlington, N. C. In a few months, the Sunday School Conventions will be meeting. It is an opportune time for this board to offer suggestions and take part in the reorganizations.

The Rev. John G. Truitt, pastor of the First Christian Church, Berkley, is assisting the pastor, Rev. V. T. Crawford, in a series of revival meetings at Elm Avenue Christian Church. This meeting began Easter Sunday, and will continue through next Sunday, April 26th. The attendance at the services has been splendid. The interest has been very good. There has been several conversions.

It is expected that the Church will be filled to its capacity at every service this week. Rev. Mr. Truitt will preach at 7:30 o'clock each night this week. Special musical features, including the Community Quartet, and several quartets, duets, etc., from other Churches, have helped to make the song service interesting and inspiring. A duet will be rendered tanight by members of the Elm Avenue Methodist Church choir.—Virginian-Pilot.

CHRISTIANIZING THE AUTO.

When the auto really gets enthused over religion, it is a powerful factor in a community. They have been known to get out of the garage when they found the door open on Sabbath morning and go running over the community looking up children for the Sabbath School, and men and women for the Bible classes. One was discovered in North Carolina, where they raise all sorts of things, that spent every Sabbath hunting up crippled folks and old folks to take to Church. It seemed to enjoy taking them to Church and waiting till the service ended to take them home.

The next drive must be to Christianize the auto. We must have a survey to determine how many are religious and how many are not. And as we send missionaries to the heathen lands to Christianize barbarians, we must send missionaries to the garages to convert automobiles. We must not let godless autos come into well-behaved families and turn them away from their Church. If any family has an unconverted auto and it refuses to be Christianized, sell it and walk. It is better to go through life on foot and go to Church every Sabbath than to have a super-six and spend Sabbath whizzing down the pike just to keep up with the Joneses. If you try to keep up with them, you will land in the ditch with them. What effect is your auto having on the religious life of your boys and girls? If it is a heathen auto, taking them at breakneck speed on a bad road, sell it and get a Christian auto that will take them on the Zion road.—Richmond Christian Advocate.

POUNDED.

At the close of our quarterly conference at Antioch, Saturday before the third Sunday in March, I noticed quite a number of people gathered near where my car was parked in the yard. Coming upon the scene, I beheld, to my delight, what SUN's readers occasionally hear about—an old-fashioned pounding, consisting of hams, eggs, flour, potatoes and many other good things to eat, stacked up on the running-board and around the car. Having tried to make a speech of appreciation, we proceeded to load the car, and had it well filled. We feel grateful.

WASHINGTON'S REGARD FOR MOTHER.

General George Washington, when quite young, was about to go to sea as a midshipman. Everything was arranged, the vessel lay opposite his father's house, the little boat had come on shore to take him off, and his whole heart was bent on going. After his trunk had been carried down to the boat, he went to bid his mother farewell, and saw the tears bursting from her eyes. However, he said nothing to her; but he saw that his mother would be distressed if he went, and perhaps never be happy again. He just turned round to the servant and said: "Go and tell them to fetch my trunk back. I will not go away to break my mother's heart." His mother was struck with his decision, and she said to him: "George, God has promised to bless the children that honor their parents, and I believe He will bless you."—Selected.

THE BIBLE IN THE HOME.

The test of the nations is their loyalty to God's word. The nations which have honored God's word, and which are honoring God's word, are the nations which have His blessing.

The State will never be guided into ways of constructive peace and permanent development through society's aim and desire to better mankind. Reform movements, no matter how strong and efficient they may be, can never reform the State or the nation until that reform begins at the fireside. There is no chance for men to do, in their interests and desires for others, what God has said the father and the mother, the husband and the wife, the brother and the sister, must do.

The Bible is the one great power which God has given to us, to instruct us how to build our homes aright.

It would be well if character and reputation were used distinctively. In truth, character is what a person is; reputation is what he is supposed to be. Character is in himself, reputation is in the minds of others. Character is injured by temptations and by wrongdoing; reputation, by slanders and libels. Character endures throughout defamation in every form, but perishes when there is a voluntary transgression; reputation may last through numerous transgressions, but be destroyed by a single, and even an unfounded, accusation or aspersion.—Abbott.

Brigadier-General H. M. Lord, director of the budget, now predicts that there will be a surplus of $100,000,000 in the Federal treasury at the end of the present fiscal year on June 30th, and estimates the surplus for the next fiscal year at $373,000,000.

A TROLLEY-CAR CONVERSATION.

"What has come between Mabel Gregg and Harry Overland? I thought they were so interested in each other, and now I never see them together. Have they quarreled?

The one questioned hesitated a moment, and then replied: "I do not know whether I ought to tell you, Grace, but as you are not given to gossiping, I will. Mabel really was very much interested in Harry, and I think he still is in her; but this is what Mabel told me when I asked her the same question you have asked me. She said that one day while she was waiting in a corner drug store for a purchase, she saw Harry about to board a car. There were several ladies also boarding it, one of them with her foot already on the step, when Harry brushed by them all, and pushed into the car, and she could see through the windows that he had taken the only seat left. It was a great surprise to her, for he had always seemed so gentlemanly and chivalrous when with her that she had believed him to be so with every one. She said that this exhibition of rude selfishness—boorishness—really quite cured her of all interest in him, for she feels sure that his real nature was revealed in that act, and that the side he had with her was merely a veneer, like that of a cheap piece of furniture that is rought and ill-finished in all parts that do not appear on the surface."

"Yes, and in the push and scramble to board a car, how often does some one, and generally a woman, too, shove in ahead of the line, and even rudely push another aside."

This bit of conversation is surely significant. Is it not better to stand clinging to a strap, lurching about with every sudden jerk of the trolley, than to exhibit selfishness by crowding in out of one's turn, or depriving some wearier one of the seat that is rightfully his or hers? Often these breaches of courtesy and justice are made through lack of thought or absent-mindedness, but they bear the marks of selfishness to all observers, and it behooves us to be careful.—Young People.

Having been requested to prepare the history of the North Carolina Christian Conference for the last 100 years for the next session, I very much need copies of the "Annuals" for the years 1865, 1866 and 1867 to aid me in this task. If you have a copy of either year and will loan it to me for a few days it will be returned in good order. It is hoped that some one has saved one for this time. Address— W. E. MACCLENNY,

PRINCIPLES OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

(1) The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.

(2) Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.

(3) The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.

(4) Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship, and of Church membership.

(5) The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by, all.

THE PURPOSE OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

The purpose of this Church is to cultivate a spirit of union among the followers of our Lord Jesus Christ of every persuasion, and to secure, if possible, the associate efforts of all true religious teachers in pointing the wicked to "the Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world."

The peculiar doctrines and tenets which have confused and distracted the Christian world are remanded to private judgment, and hence cease to be matters for debate, only in so far as may be necessary to prevent a sectarian influence from entering the Church.

This Church requires no compromise of faith on the part of any child of God in order to communion or fellowship; here denominational distinctions cease to exist, and Christian love binds the brotherhood together.

The purpose of this Church will be consummated in the conversion of the world and the union of all Christians.

PUBLISHING.

Opening the new and great Christian Publishing House, in Dayton, last week marks, or should mark, an epoch in our Church life and history. Among the other sins of omission we Christians are likely to have to answer for in the judgment is that of failing to publish to the world the oracles of God committed to our hands. After more than a century and a quarter of organic Church life, the world about us does not know what we teach, preach, practice, believe and advocate as a people. No richer legacy, no holier trust were ever committed to a people of God than that held —yes, "held" is the right word—by us Christians.

From the beginning till now, no book comparable to the Bible has ever been written. The heart of man in its hunger and thirst after righteousness will not let the Bible grow old. And the mind of man in its ceaseless, persistent, eternal quest for truth will not, cannot cast the Book aside.

The Christians are not hampered as the creedal communions are with explanations and man-made formulas about the Bible. We hold up this Book to all mankind as the Word of God, and say, "Let each and every one read and interpret for himself, and make this Book a daily rule of faith and practice."

Again, the world of reading and thinking men and women know full well that Jesus the Christ is the Founder, Builder and only Head of the Church. Again, we, as a people, are not hampered with divisive dogmas and declarations about Christ. Like Paul, we preach and teach and hold up to the world as its only hope and Redeemer, "Jesus Christ crucified, unto Jews a stumbling-block, and unto Gentiles foolishness; but unto them that are called, both Jews and Greeks, Christ the power of God and the wisdom of God." This Christ, the divine and immaculate Son of God, the one and all-sufficient Saviour of men, we ought to make known to the world not a divided Christ, not a dogmatic and cloistered Christ, but a living, active, real, present-day Christ, one who is in His world and living in the lives of men and women to help solve their problems, bear their burdens and heal their diseases. The Christians are not publishing the life of this Christ to the world as we should.

Moreover, that there is a Church that bears His name and His only, called for Him, to the exclusion of all party or sectarian names, is a vital fact of infinite concern about which the world should know. We as a people should publish to all the world that the name Christian is a sufficient name for the Church, and the one that all Churches must finally adopt before our Lord's prayer is answered, "that all may be one," and our Lord's desire for His people shall be fulfilled. All other names for the Church are divisive and emphasize differences. Christian only is cohesive and emphasizes oneness, unity, solidity.

That each one should and will have the right of private judgment in the interpretation of Scripture, and that Christian character is the only test of Christian fellowship are facts which are Christian put into practice, even though the creeds and dogmas of some communions would make believe otherwise. Only that Scripture is mine which my interpretation translates into my life, and only that man is my father in Christ whose Christian character is apparent to me.

If our new and ample publishing house will enable us as a people to publish to the world more fully and more frequently these salient truths, a new epoch has begun in our Church life.

PACIFIC GARDEN MISSION.

Rumors have been current to the effect that Pacific Garden Mission, Chicago, had been forced to close its doors because of lack of funds. This report was the occasion of deep sorrow on the part of a host who have, from all parts of the world, felt the warm, uplifting, spiritual exhilaration of this God-owned soul-saving center.

Harry Monroe was for a generation its human inspiration and life. It was under his vigorous witnessing for Christ that Billy Sunday was transformed from a ball player to the most successful evangelist of the Christian centuries.

The grand old life-saving station that has served God and blessed man since 1877 has moved to 650 South State Street, but it is still a great power for righteousness and salvation. For example, during the month of February, 2,309 people attended its services, an average of 83 each night. During this month, 80 men knelt for prayer and 2 women. The superintendent is Louis A. Crittenton, as fine a specimen of the God-surrendered life as walks the earth. The treasurer is George D. Webb, 650 South State Street, Chicago, Ill., to whom contributions may be sent. This mission does not solicit. It depends on God's spirit to influence generous hearts and devout to send in the necessary funds. Their dependence has been shown by the verdict of their success as well and worthily placed.

THE VALUE OF MEDITATION.

Every passing day of our lives has its duties. Ours is a busy world, and the days and years slip by with such astonishing rapidity. When we look back over them, we are apt to be pained by the recollection that we have devoted so few of the hours to the things of eternity. One hour a day for God is probably more than the average man devotes to that purpose; yet it is the highest and noblest of our lives. Dr. John R. Mott, one of the greatest laymen of our time, in a recent address at the Biblical Seminary in New York, discussed the need of the value of religious meditation. He said: "When it is suggested that men stop to think on the great problems of life in the light of the truth of God, one meets with the protest: 'What! There are Boston and New York and Philadelphia and Montreal and Toronto, with their awful need; there are our rural districts with their spiritual destitution, and away off there are the non-Christian nations with their deep darkness. You urge that we stop to meditate; ought we not rather gird ourselves and get to work?"

No time is lost, he told these doubters, that is spent for thorough-going thinking on the great spiritual facts and forces. Strain and hurry and pressure creep into even the devotional life of Christians. We find them regulating their spiritual exercises by the clock, the watch and the bell.

The absence of religious meditation, he holds, accounts for some things which ought to cause us real alarm. Too much professionalism among Christian workers; too much formalism among the rank and file of Christians; too much superficiality in the religious life of multitudes of Church members—these are the outcome of such a situation.

This explains why so many Christians are either at a standstill or going back spiritually. In an old Bible of Cromwell's, it was written: "He who stops becoming better, stops being good." Each of us should have a place for meditation and a regular time for it.—Christian Herald.

HE WANTED TO KNOW.

A Presbyterian minister was at one time pastor of a Church in a town where the richest and most prominent man never attended Church and openly opposed the minister. One day the minister, seeing this man in his carriage before a store, felt a desire to "go near and join" himself to his chariot and ask the liberty of speaking to him of the Saviour. Fearing a scene if he obeyed, he passed on. Six weeks later he met the man in his carriage again and felt the same desire to speak to him. He consulted one of the deacons of his Church, who advised him to keep away from the man, as he would surely be driven away and insulted. But the minister could not rest. He felt God was calling him to speak to that man. The next day he went to call, and with fear and trembling, approached the stately mansion. To his surprise, the man himself met him at the door. He expected an insult. Instead, two trembling hands were extended in welcome, and the man exclaimed, "I have been looking for a visit from you for six weeks. I want to know all you can tell me about the Lord Jesus Christ whom I have neglected so long." He called in his wife and daughter, and the three soon afterwards "believed" and the minister "went on his way rejoicing."—Selected.

THE EMBARRASSMENT OF SUCCESS.

The Board of Missions of the Methodist Church, South, in making appeals for funds to help relieve the embarrassment under which it now labors from an increasing deficit, declares that the embarrassment is not that of failure, but of success. Our own Mission Board can truthfully make the same declaration. We began expanding when funds on hand or in sight seemed to demand and justify growth, progress, opportunity. The board was called upon to give impetus to movements, Churches, enterprises that meant kingdom-growth, the salvation of souls, the preaching of the gospel to those who did not have it. Embarrassed? Unable now to meet demands? Yes, but it is the embarrassment of progress, of growth, of expansion, of success.

TIME EXTENSION.

The fact that the Convention, at its last session, voted to extend the time limit one year for closing up Men and Millions simply means that many required six years to pay pledges and meet obligations which they hoped and expected could be paid and met in five years. Many have been fortunate enough to pay their pledges promptly, and have finished their subscriptions. On the other hand, not a few have been less fortunate. They have been just as anxious, as honest, as faithful as the more fortunate. They have simply not been able to pay off their pledges in five years and wished an extension of time. The Convention voted this extension. Those of us who could not pay as our pledges came due have another year in which to meet these obligations. Many of us will be able to eliminate these obligations, God helping us, by April 30, 1926.

INCREASE IN JUVENILE CRIME.

New York City's police head finds that crimes of violence for the first three months of 1925 were 40 per cent of the record for the same months a decade ago. On the other hand, the figures for juvenile crime for the first quarter of 1925 show an increase of 60 per cent over those of the same period only one year ago. Why? Here is his answer:

"We are manufacturing the criminals of the future in our uncontrolled and morally and religiously bankrupt youthful 'gangs.'" And he adds: "The correction of this condition lies in the home, the school and the Church, and not with the police."

A very similar condition prevails in other sections of the country. A symposium to which chiefs of police and mayors of a large number of cities participated placed the responsibility just where it is placed by the head of the New York department—on the home, the Church and the school. And it is a responsibility that cannot be shirked.—Christian Herald.

THE BROTHERHOOD OF MAN.

In theory, the doctrine of the Fatherhood of God and the brotherhood of man" has existed in this world for 2,000 years, but its practical application has existed for comparatively a few years. The world is rapedly becoming one great neighborhood. Time and space are being eliminated. We are so interwoven that calamity and prosperity are quickly felt by all peoples. Such nation takes an interest in the well-being of each other nation, as all believe we are "our brother's keeper."

Reason and conscience are taking the place of brute force in settling the differences which arise among nations. Since John Jay was burned in effigy in 1794 for inserting an arbitration clause in a treaty, 250 international disputes have been settled by arbitration. There are at least 200 international organizations uniting commercial, educational, and race interests on a world-embracing foundation.

No longer can any man live for himself alone, nor can any nation. Crop failure in Australia is felt in Europe. A panic in London or New York creates financial depression throughout the world. Industrial difficulties in any one country have their influence in all countries. Just as the peace and prosperity of any nation depends upon the happiness and the welfare of all the people in that nation, so the peace and prosperity of the world are dependent upon the happiness and welfare of all the nations of the world. And no force is so powerful in conserving universal peace and good will as the spirit of brotherhood among men and nations.

As a result of the recent war, great questions have arisen in the internal life of most of the nations involved in it. Some one said that the war was only a curtain-raiser compared to the conflicts likely to follow during the reconstruction period.

The course of events in Russia should be a warning to all the world. The patriotism of all classes is certain to be severely tested in the near future. During these trying times in the various nations the one force to be looked to for the prevention of possible internal wars is the spirit of brotherhood.

It is not enough that we accept this principle intellectually, but that we concede it to be theoretically sound. Only as we live it, at home, in the office, in industrial contacts, in social and political life, in national and international relations, will it become a real, vital and transforming force in the world.

Modern thinkers rest all international law upon the moral law as its ultimate foundation and authority. International diplomacy is being recognized as a sphere of the highest honor and integrity. "Worldism" is a new word expressing the broader relation of mankind. National boundaries are not the limits of the moral law. We must extend our nationalism into internationalism and our patriotism into humanitarianism to meet the demands of the new conditions of an expanding morality. A new and appropriate name, "a citizen of the world," was given to Andrew Carnegie for his great work and gifts for the peace of mankind.

Upon this broad foundation should rest every organization from the nation down to the family. Burke once said: "The nation is a partnership, but a partnership not only between those who are living, but those who are dead and those who are to be born." Mr. Roosevelt said: "Neither can a nation which is an entity, and which does not die as individuals die, refrain from taking thought for the interest of the generations that are to come no less than for the interests of the generation of today." As in the nation, so in every other grouping of society. Whatever our temporary groupings, they should not be removed from a moral basis. There is no other natural or normal foundation upon which to build any social group, whether family, fraternal order, religious, commercial or racial. They do not exist by themselves, but have an account with the brotherhood of man.

Up to this time, America has led a life that, to a considerable extent, was separate and apart from the rest of the world. It has been our boast that we did not mingle in old-world affairs and would not engage in any of their wars. Had we cast our influence on the side of peace and right, it is likely there would never have been a World War. We kept out of it until the conflagration was raging to such an extent it cost us countless thousands of lives and billions of dollars to settle it.

Many of our narrow-minded politicians have learned nothing from that experience, and refuse to believe that "we are our brother's keeper." They want the world to go on in the future as it has in the past, with each nation trying to stand alone and no combination of nations to see that right rules the world. They believe that each nation should try alone to defend itself from attack from any other nation. If the weak are attacked by the strong, then they believe all the other nations should hold aloof and allow it to be crushed, providing their own personal interest was not affected.

There is a strong movement all over the world today to regard the people of all civilized nations as one, and that an injury or insult to one involves all the rest. They are determined that there shall be some kind of a concert among the nations whereby the horrors of the past can be lessened and a better day be brought into the world.

This is the greatest question confronting the nations today. Shall we continue the policy of the past and build up great military armaments with which to slaughter mankind, or shall we feel that there is a brotherhood among men that does not stop at national boundary lines. The warriors are gradually losing ground, and the powers of peace are coming to the front. The powers of darkness are well intrenched and will fight to the last trench, but the indications are that before this generation will have passed away, an arrangement will be made between the great nations of the earth whereby wars can be no more. Then armies and navies can be reduced to 10 per cent of their present strength and the spirit of good will and brotherhood will prevail all over the world.

"If I can help my fellow-man,
By thought of word or deed,
I'll feel my life has been well spent,
I'll worry not of creed.

"If I can bring a smile of joy
To eyes bedimmed with tears,
I'll worry not of sects or isms,
I'll free my thoughts from fears.

"If I can lend a helping hand
To one less strong than I,
Of heaven I'll reap here on this earth,
Not in some distant sky."

Wadley, Ala. S. L. BEOUGHER.

HE PAID AND IS HAPPY.

(A personal letter, published without permission.—Editor.)

Dear Dr. Atkinson:

I was unable to work when I was requested to subscribe to Men and Millions five years ago, and I subscribed with the definite understanding that I would pay my pledge if the Lord blessed me with sufficient health to work. This He did, and I paid my pledge in full the third year of the five-year period. In doing this, I felt that I was rendering unto God that which rightfully belonged to Him.

If we of the Christian Church could only get it fixed in our craniums that this money which we pledged to our Church for the advancement of God's kingdom in the world is not ours, but is intrusted to our hands by our God to be invested in such way as to give Him most glory, then I believe these pledges would be paid. Our ministers would not have to beg. Our missionaries could carry the gospel to those who have not heard of the Christ, and our orphan children would not knock in vain at the door of our Christian Orphanage.

Many of us would think it a very wicked deed if some culprit should rob us of the money we were saving up to buy an automobile, a dress or a suit; and indeed it would be, but I fear we do not think very seriously about spending the tenth of our income, which is the Lord's.

Some one has said that we are only blessed spiritually in giving our means for the advancement of Christ's kingdom, but this cannot be so. God is continually blessing me in material things as I try to serve Him from day to day.

Yours in Christ,

Star, N. C. W. H. FREEMAN.

SUFFOLK LETTER.

Education is training others know and do what the teacher knows and does. This is a large field for service for the teacher and of opportunity for learners. Jesus: Learn of me"; "Follow me." The whole matter is to think God's thoughts after Him, and to do His will. For, "if any man do His will, he shall know of the doctrine." This principle puts immeasurable responsibility upon teachers in all departments of human endeavor. Jesus was the great example as teacher. He knew all that was knowable, and was without sin. There was no fault in His life and no flaw in His teaching.

This standard is so high that few schools can attain unto it. Many teachers know enough to taech, but their example has little value for the young; others live exemplary lives, but their knowledge is too limited to discover and lead out the possibilities of students. It might be said, with some limitation, as it is said of poets, that teachers are born, not made. This may exaggerate the fact, but it is within the range of common truth. There are those who profess to teach agriculture, darying, economics, Christianity, whose knowledge is limited, whose experience is nil, and whose life in these fields is not worthy of mention. Agriculture cannot be learned in books alone; it must be learned in the field and books. The same is true of medicine, of the dairy, business, and Christian education, which can no more be learned in books alone than agriculture. Real Christian experience is essential in the person who teaches in the field of Christian education. Even the pulpit is maintained by sound doctrine and pure life. This principle is essential in the Sunday School and the day school. Public school teachers cannot fill the high mission while they dance, play cards, and neglect Church. The teaching profession is such that self-denial must be practiced for best results. Worldly conduct makes scholars offend in social life. Paul's principle applies here: "If meat makes my brother to offend, I will eat no more meat while the world stands." A teacher is not working for self, but for others. The teacher is helping to make citizens of a Christian nation, and that cannot be done without the example of Christian conduct in the daily life of the teacher. No one who is not a Christian is qualified to have part in the training of citizens for a Christian nation. Church and State are separate in form, but not in fact, for a Christian State cannot be built or survive on an un-Christian citizenship.

The public school system is a large factor in the future safety and growth of the nation. If the teachers are immature in knowledge and character, or if they are unfaithful in instruction or example, the republic is in danger. Responsibility is not taken as seriously by the people, school boards and teachers as the importance of the situation demands and as the results justify.

We live in an age of education. There are schools for every line of human activity, from the training of soldiers, nurses, farmers, electricians, doctors, preachers, and teachers; but we must remember that Greece, the greatest classic nation of all time, has dropped back to a third-rate nation, because the mind only was educated without true development of the heart. True education develops and trains the whole man for an

ELON LETTER.

There is no doubt that there is a growing conviction throughout the Church against professional evangelism. One of our greatest preachers so expressed himself to me only the other day. There is, however, a work of grace which seems to be more successfully achieved by the professional evangelist than by any other. God has various methods of reaching people, and what is best for one man is not so good for another, but there is room for all in a well-rounded program for the kingdom.

Right now, in Piedmont North Carolina, we have two great evangelistic campaigns on—that of the Ham-Ramsay party, in Burlington, and that of Billy Sunday, in Winston-Salem. Elon is co-operating in every way possible with the Ham-Ramsay campaign. Tuesday afternoon, the 21st, the evangelist came to the college auditorium and gave a brief, uplifting message. Wednesday night, the 22d, was Elon College night at the tabernacle. Burlington automobiles transported the students. Our Church prayer meetings are to be suspended in favor of attendance on the tabernacle services at Burlington during the continuance of the meetings, and all our people are urged to attend these meetings each day regularly. Dr. Alexander, our pastor, is in constant daily attendance, and other members of the faculty go when they can. We had just concluded a campaign here under Dr. Howsare, in which beyond seventy were added to the Church, but our thought is that we should co-operate with every good cause.

Brother Ham is of the best style of professional evangelist. He is himself a thoroughly consecrated Christian man, whose experience of God is not theoretical, but mystical in the fine and intimate sense of truly personal. His singer, Bro. Ramsay, is likewise a devout Christian, while especially talented in the direction of the musical features of the meetings. And Brother Rogers, the pianist, is also a deeply religious spirit and able to make his piano and voice tell vast deal of good in any community that heartily supports them.

One phrase from one of Bro. Ham's sermons abides with me and will abide. "We Christians are under the tyranny of the trivial," he said. Trivialities are such insignificant things, trivialities of conviction, of social custom, of personal habit, of industrial and professional cult. "Seek ye first the kingdom of God," said the Master, whom Brother Ham aspires to delineate and portray. When we do that, trivialities will cease to engross our major attention and first things will be first. The sure way to escape the tyranny of the trivial is to become absorbed in the great eternal verities of life and of God. The professional evangelist aims to do this not for a segment of the people, but for the whole community.

GREATER NEW YORK.

Jamaica Creek.

A new work has just been started at Jamaica Creek, in the Borough of Queens, not far from our Springfield Dock Church. Bro. Worner, the energetic pastor at Springfield Dock, has had under consideration for some months the opening of a work in this needy field. The community is considerably larger than Springfield Dock, and without religious opportunities of any kind so far as stated public services are concerned. A club house has been opened to our people for their use until more suitable quarters can be procured. Bro. Nolting was elected superintendent of the new Sunday School, and there were more than thirty in attendance at their initial session last Sunday. This makes four Sunday Schools for us now in Greater New York. Had we the men and the means, we could easily have twenty-four within six months without infringing on the rights of any other religious force. To be told that there are 1,588 Churches in this great metropolis suggests at first thought that the city may be over-Churched. But a little reflection will show that there are nearly four thousand people to each Church. Do you know of any town of four thousand people with only one Church? This also should be known, that there are sections where are to be found from twelve to fifteen thousand people without any religious organization whatsoever.

Springfield Dock.

This little Church has received more members, raised more money, and put on a more aggressive program in general in the past six or seven months than it has probably ever done before in two years. The outlook here seems most promising.

Vanderveer Park.

Our "Kingdom-Enlistment Week," from March 29th to April 5th, has proven the greatest inspiration to our little Church here which it has enjoyed during the present pastorate, and perhaps ever. About forty enlisted here, wheih we expect to result in at least forty accessions to our Church. Not all have been received as yet, owing to a great deal of sickness in the community. One of the very gratifying results of this splendid effort on the part of the teams which conducted the visitation was the discovery of much new material for building our Church in this section. Nearly all of those enlisted are heads of families of children attending our Sunday School. When many of these learned the principles on which our Church is founded, they immediately became interested in having the visitors make their neighbors acquainted with our position. This was easily done by the distribution of literature with which the visitors were supplied. Plans are now being studied for the erection of the first unit—a complete Sunday School and parish house plant—of our final equipment here for a larger and more comprehensive service. The Church voted definitely for a permanent building, feeling it to be wiser to thus conserve what effort is being made than to invest in a temporary structure such as has previously been considered.

Hyde Park.

While our building at Hyde Park is not yet complete in every detail, it is being used for our growing Sunday School, and for a place of worship. We held our opening exercises on March 8th, Rev. H. A. Barton delivering the principal address. Rev. James S. Williamson, a Congregational pastor, was present and spoke in behalf of the Brooklyn Federation of Churches, in the absence of Dr. Gordon, who, through a misunderstanding in dates, was unable to be present. Dr. Gordon is the executive secretary of the federation.

The Hyde Park Church is now organized under the name of the Hyde Park Christian Church of the Evangel. A comprehensive constitution has been adopted, a budget provided for, including benevolences, and a roster of thirty-four names with which to start our newest Christian Church in the greater city. The Sunday School is growing under the efficient leadership of George Dean, in whose home our school was organized and carried on for so long. J. R. Binckley, 1469 Schenectady Avenue, is our Church clerk. We are sending a list of twelve subscriptions to the Herald from our two Brooklyn Churches.

Brooklyn, N. Y. P. S. SAILER.

LIBERTY, VANCE.

The evangelistic meeting, conducted by Rev. H. C. Caviness, assisted by J. Charles Yelton, closed Sunday evening, April 19th. This campaign for Christ lasted four weeks, and we feel has been the greatest blessing that ever came to our community. Space forbids our giving an account in full, so we will endeavor to bring out a few outstanding things as we see them.

First, we desire to say a word in behalf of these men, in order that you may fully appreciate the thoughts as given you. Mr. Caviness, a noted lawyer by profession until a few years ago, is a thoroughly prepared speaker, and a man with the strongest faith we ever saw expressed by any one. Just walks closer with God than any one we ever had the pleasure of knowing. He is determined not to know anything among you save Jesus Christ and Him crucified. What he says or does is all for the glory of Jesus.

Mr. Yelton, a young man, thoroughly consecrated, is giving his best service through bringing the gospel in song. He is just wonderful! The evangelist's favorite text was taken from Gen. 3:9, "When art thou?" After using this five times, with great power, one was left before God with the question, "Where am I?" In these discourses were proven clearly that we could be hiding behind false hopes, such as reformation, morality, self-righteousness, change of heart, loyalty to the Church, and many other things. Yet all of these could not save you. Ye must be born again—baptized with the Holy Ghost. The messenger said that a true Christian would have no desire for worldly things. When Jesus comes in desire for worldly things. When Jesus comes in, all worldly things will go out. Where are thou? You know, and God knows. "Love as strong as death" was a great message. Here was Mary at the empty tomb, with a love as strong as death, yet she had that failure that fills the lives of so many today—unbelief. Mary did not believe that her Lord had risen, but thought His body had been taken. Jesus knew the heart of love, and as a reward sent her with the first glad message of a risen Lord. May it be forever stamped in our heart that love is the dynamic power that rules and reigns both in heaven and in earth.

If duty, necessity, sacrifice is the power that prompts us to work and give, then we have our reward from men. Though I give my all and my body to be burned and have not love, it profiteth me nothing, says Paul. We should have but one objective—a perfect love and crowning glory for Christ Jesus our Saviour; a message from a double text, "Thou art weighed in the balance and found wanting, and if any man defile the temple of God, him shall God destroy, for the temple of God is holy, which temple ye are."

Whiskey and tobacco were used as examples to prove how they defiled the body. This being a tobacco section, the message went to the heart of many. A few pledged to abstain from the use of it.

In closing, he requested that every one clean up, not only of tobacco, whiskey, but cards, movies, dance, fine clothes, gold, land or anything that keeps you from being filled with the Spirit. Another message, "The wages of sin is death," held the audience spellbound. The messenger proved from and by God's word that sin is sin, and that God knows no distinction. If you ever told a lie you stood condemned as same as a thief or murderer. Just as one leak would sink a ship, just so one sin would sink your soul.

S i n spells sin, but leave out the middle letter and you have no sin left. Ah, my friends! what is it to be left out? It is "i" (self), and put Jesus in. Crucify self and crown Jesus. Have you done that? The seven judgments was indeed very interesting. The second coming of our Lord was brought in a most beautiful manner.

Mr. Caviness was the most thorough man on examination we ever saw. He intended that one should be sure that they were born again, and was very careful to make invitation plain. He prayed for the purity of our Church, that it might reach the stage of the early Church—that a liar could not live in it—saying that the Church has lost her power because she has lost her purity.

In conclusion, I will say we are praising the Lord for sending these men this way, and we are so thankful for the great awakening and revival in our Church. May we urge each reader to avail yourself of every opportunity that may be presented you to attend a Caviness meeting. Mr. Caviness, through the word of God, will search your heart and cause you to be drawn closer to Jesus if you so desire to get on a higher standard of Christian living. He will lead you into a deeper spiritual life. Some one said, I wish I could show the love of Jesus as Mr. Yelton does. I would give the world if I could. Mr. Yelton says, "That is what it cost me to do it." Yes, we must give up the world if we please Jesus and to have power, to show His transforming power of love through us.

We are happy because we have been revived and see Jesus clearer than before. May God bless his work the world over, and may we be up and doing while it is day. The harvest is ready and the laborers few.

THE SELF-STARTER.

To a representative of the Manchester Guardian a prominent educationist recently stated that success in life comes not so much to the "clover devil" as to the man whose personality is co-ordinated and inspired by some steadying and dynamic principle. Or, to put it more simply—the man of character. "Bluntly put," says this educationist, "some men are like wheelbarrows—they only move when they are pushed from behind."

This is a very apt illustration, and one which could be enlarged upon. The man of character is a self-starter—he carries his own power.

The same authority contends that knowledge is not everything. Not to be underrated, of course, but to be subordinated to the development of the whole personality. Further, "It is really more important what a boy is than what he knows."

An intensive process of cramming with facts is not education, but the building up of character is.

MT. OLIVET CHURCH.

Mount Olivet Sunday School, Green County, Va., has recently sent in its annual report to the county secretary of the Interdenominational Sunday School Convention. According to the international standard, it stands 100 per cent, with additional work in Christian education, which is under the direction of our pastor, Prof. A. R. Flowers.

Our pastor reports that our new circular pews, chairs for Sunday School rooms and for choir will soon be placed in our Church, and we see no reason why we cannot hold our record. We have five different denominations represented in our Sunday School and Christian Endeavor, and they are among our most earnest and efficient workers, and we are just unselfish enough to let these good people know that we fully appreciate their hearty support. Our 1925 house-to-house canvass for new members begins May 1st.

By Warren H. Denison, D. D., Secretary.

The Annual Every-Member Canvass.

A large number of Churches in our brotherhood begin their Church year July 1st. They, therefore, plan to put on the every-member canvass about the third or fourth Sunday in June. That being the case, it is now high time that every preparation is under way. We cannot say it too strongly that the annual every-member canvass is the best method of financing the Church known to Christian workers and will fill every case, rural and city, large or small. It is the plan officially adopted and used by all the principle denominations. It was officially recommended by the General Convention of the Christian Church, reaffirmed and urged upon all our Churches by the General Board of the Christian Church. It is the only plan endorsed and recommended by this bureau. We hope that every Church among us will avail itself of its value this year. We would call upon all our pastors, Church officials, Conference workers to actively encourage it. It will be the salvation of many of our Churches. Your Conference and Convention stewardship secretaries will be glad to assist any way they can. This bureau will furnish instructions and guidance. Correspondence is solicited concerning it. It is a great spiritual force and financial agency. It is the Scriptural plan. It will bring blessing to Church and workers.

Stewardship Institutes.

April 17th was spent with the West Milton, Ohio, Church. An earnest group of workers and five pastors participated. The Conference stewardship secretary, Rev. W. H. Martin, assisted. Rev. C. B. Kershner is the pastor.

April 19th was spent with the Crown Point Church, Dayton, Ohio. It was very largely attended and a deep interest was manifested. Rev. Clark A. Denison is the pastor.

April 26th and 27th was spent with the Dover, Del., Church in a most successful institute, well attended and full of interest. Rev. R. C. Helfenstein, D. D., is pastor.

April 28th was spent at New York at the annual meeting of the United Stewardship Council. It was a most important meeting. Fuller report of plans will be noted later.

May 2d we left for Illinois, Iowa, Nebraska, Kansas and Missouri, to spend four weeks with the Churches of the Western Convention, Mr. C. E. Booz, stewardship secretary, and for the summer school at Palmer College.

What Educators Say About Tithing.

Prof. W. P. Lawrence is the head of the department of English in Elon College. He writes: "Some fifteen years ago pressure of calls from Church enterprises moved me to undertake tithing. Meager as was my income, reason said, 'You can't do it without running in debt.' Experience has proved reason to be wrong in the matter. My opinion now is that for the miserly, niggardly giver to become a tither, he has only to revise his standards of evaluation. Even if he seems too poverty-stricken to give anything, it is only a 10 per cent revision—a revision that results in an elevating sense and satisfaction of soul."

F. Leland McReynolds, like Prof. Lawrence, is a layman and instructor. He is a Defiance graduate and principal of the Township Consolidated School at Sharpsville, Ind. He says, "In accepting the trust of life's economic resources, we signify a willingness to abide by that most generous contract which our Heavenly Father offers all His lessees. Any thing short of a systematic method of paying a 10 per cent dividend on the income from these intrusted resources can hardly be fair play in this business of religious finance."

ONE-DAY SCHOOL OF MISSIONS.

The Vance-Warren district missionary rally was held Saturday, April 4, 1925, at Mt. Auburn Church. The meeting was opened by the district leader, Mrs. J. A. Kimball, followed by song, "Thy Kingdom Come." The morning devotional was conducted by Mr. L. L. Vaughn. of Raleigh. All united in singing "The Church's One Foundation," after which a season of prayer was engaged in. In the absence of the secretary, Mrs. A. H. Hook was asekd to act. Minutes of last meeting were read and approved.

In the enrollment of and reports from societies, four responded, as follows: Liberty Vance, 10; Fullers Chapel, 1; Henderson, 9; Mt. Auburn, 28. Reports from Liberty Vance were given by Miss Margaret Alsten, for the Woman's Society; Miss Lillian Johnson, for the Young People's Society; Mrs. J. D. Newman, for the Willing Workers. Mrs. S. F. Coghill reported for Fullers Chapel. Mrs. S. O. Spruill reported for Henderson. For Mt. Auburn, Mrs. Tucker reported for the Woman's Society; Miss Helen Kimball for the Willing Workers, and Mrs. W. J. Cole for the Cradle Roll.

Mrs. J. A. Kimball, superintendent, then extended a very cordial welcome to the visitors and gave a splendid and inspiring message. Miss Gertrude Browne, field secretary, brought messages from our missionaries, and gave a very interesting report from the mountain work, which she had recently visited. Mrs. F. M. Harward and Mrs. A. H. Hook followed these messages with some special music.

Three committees were then appointed, as follows: nominationg—Mrs. S. F. Coghill, Mrs. J. B. Ellington, Mrs. S. O. Spruill; resolutions—Mrs. A. H. Hook, Mrs. E. J. Hicks, Miss Margaret Alston; time and place—Mrs. John Wilson, Mrs. F. M. Harward, Mrs. J. D. Newman.

The address of the morning was given by Dr. J. O. Atkinson, who brought to us some very impressive thoughts from the Washington Conference and also from his treatment of Revelation 1.

A special offering was taken for the Rocky Ford work, at which time $25.24 was raised. Prayer was offered by Dr. J. O. Atkinson, after which the session adjourned for lunch.

The afternoon session was called to order by the superintendent. Mr. J. A. Kimball led the devotional service at this time. A period of open discussion was engaged in, the following leading: "Cradle Roll Work," Mrs. L. L. Vaughn, of Raleigh; "Willing Workers," Mrs. W. W. Kimball, of Mt. Auburn; "Young People," Miss Lizzie Belle Newman, of Henderson; "Woman's Societies," Mr. L. L. Vaughn.

The following committee reports were read and accepted. Committee on time and place of next meeting recommended Liberty Vance Church, the time to be left open until later. Committee on resolutions reported as follows: "We, your committee on resolutions, recommend the following: (1) That we, as a body, express our appreciation to the people of Mt. Auburn for their cordial welcome and entertainment. (2) That we thank the officers of the district for their services, especially the superintendent for her inspiring message. (3) That Dr. Atkinson be requested to print his omitted speech in The Christian Sun. (4) That each Church in this district strive, as a goal, to report a working Woman's Society, Young People's Society, Willing Workers and Cradle Roll at our next rally. (5) That a schedule be made and printed of the time each month that local societies meet, that one society may plan to visit other societies as often as possible. (6) That study closses be installed in as many societies as possible, and that literature furnished by the Mission Board be used in the monthly devotionals. (7) That as many members as possible visit the missionary work at our very door, namely: the mountain work."

The committee on nominations recommended the following names, who were unanimously elected: president, Miss Margaret Alsten, of Liberty Vance; vice-president, Mrs. W. W. Kimball, of Mt. Auburn; secretary, Miss Etta Fleming, of Mt. Auburn; treasurer, Miss Lizzie Belle Newman, of Henderson.

Mrs. F. M. Harward and Mrs. A. H. Hook gave another special number, after which Mrs. L. L. Vaughn talked on plans for the coming year. The members of the Henderson society then presented a short play, "The First Church Missionary Society."

After a few last words from Miss Gertrude Browne, Dr. Atkinson, and others, the meeting adjourned, with prayer by Dr. Atkinson.

ON THE WAY FROM CHURCH.

Just last Sunday two ladies—women voters—conversed about prohibition. Both are good Church members, but they talked. One said, "I do not believe in prohibition." The other did not disagree with her companion.

Since next Sunday's lesson is on "The Benefits of Total Abstinence," it seemed proper that a few facts already discovered might be given, that persons who discuss the subject might do so intelligently and have something to talk about. A few facts are embraced in the following:

Particular attention should be given to massing the facts indicated in the title of our lesson, "The Benefits of Total Abstinence." Daniel and his companions became living proof, which is repeated in the case of every one who refuses to drink alcoholic liquor. A fancy name does not change the nature of the deadly thing. The effects which the scientists learn by experimenting on mice and guinea pigs is the same that will result in any other kind of pigs. One glass of beer a day will diminish the efficiency of a workman by 7 per cent. Those who are even moderately alcoholized are far more susceptible to pneumonia than non-drinkers, and have a weaker reaction against that condition. About 90 per cent of those who do not obey the Volstead law are aliens, or the children of the unnaturalized, we are told by those who have studied prohibition enforcement conditions in the United States.

Thomas A. Edison said: "I believe in prohibition. Sober America in the future will be a most dangerous competitor in commerce with all nations. In the future, it is either sobriety or commercial decadence for other nations. The boys and girls of the next generation will not have any taste for the stuff."

Some of the many benefits from prohibition are stated by Wayne B. Wheeler, a statistical expert: "A million lives have been saved by the drop in the death rate since prohibition. We spend $74,000,000 less per year to relieve drink-made poverty. Over 500,000 fewer are drunk in our streets every year. Alcoholic insanity has dropped two-thirds."

RALEIGH CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

The present new First Christian Church was formally opened for service Sunday, November 23, 1924, with appropriate and fitting exercises. We believe this marked the beginning of a new era in the life of our denomination in this field. Already the membership has acquired valued additions, and now numbers 224. There are possibilities here, and, if made the most of, this Church should be the coming Church.

Those of the brotherhood who have visited us have seen that a really modern and first-class plant has been erected at this place and they have been very generous in their praise. This is appreciated. In our opinion, not a more handsome or better equipped Church can be found in the city or vicinity. Standing on one of the choicest building corners uptown, it presents a pleasing and imposing sight. G. Murray Nelson, as the architect, and James A. Davidson, as the builder, spared neither ability nor pains in making the edifice an architectual success.

The membership of the Church, never large, has had a struggle sufficient to test its faith. While still heavily in debt, and with things at times discouraging, nothing but a faith in and a vision of the future is held up. The evry capable leader, Dr. Parry, has always been optimistic and has encouraged accordingly. In addition, some of the brethren have given themselves unstintedly in this enterprise. In particular, Mr. L. L. Vaughn has heroically labored in season and out of season, bearing much of the brunt, as chairman of the building committee. He has, and rightly should have, the appreciation and love of this body of members. Without him, the story of our rebuilding might be different. Posterity shall thank him, too.

The last deacons' report stated that the Church was in a state of progress; that there existed a spirit of harmony and a disposition to work among our members for the spiritual welfare of the Church.

During the building of the new Church the Sunday School was indeed cramped for quarters. This had the natural effect upon the classes and attendance. The new building, with large, well-equipped rooms, is an attraction in itself for Sunday School classes. Recently Mr. C. H. Stephenson and family presented to the school a beautiful Henry F. Miller Baby Grand piano.

The Sunday School has had a pleasing growth and the keynote for each class is to further augment its roll. The senior school is under the supervision of Mr. R. F. Harward as superintendent, with Mr. L. L. Vaughan as assistant. They have a corps of teachers, composed of the following: Mrs. H. P. Brigman, Mrs. H. A. Carlton, Prof. W. A. Anderson, H. M Rhodes, Prof. L. E. Cook, Dr. W. D. Parry, Dr. W. G. Forster, Mr. C. E. Barrow, Dr. B. W. Wells, Prof. L. L. Vaughan, and Dr. Carl C. Taylor. The officers are W. L. Moore, secretary; R. C. Stephenson, treasurer; J. L. Price, music leader, and Miss Louise Brockwell, pianist.

In addition to the above, the junior school, including the cradle roll, beginners, primary and junior departments, under the superintendency of Mr. C. H. Stephenson, is a distinct unit of its own. This is held in the basement of the Church, which furnishes ample room for classes and is equipped with a piano, song books, chairs, tables, etc. Graded Lessons are used. The staff of this school is composed of the following: Mrs. L. L. Vaughan, assistant superintendent; L. C. Brinkley, secretary-treasurer; Miss Lena Barrow, music director, and Mrs. R. O. Caveness, pianist. The teachers are Miss Tessie Bagwell, Mrs. L. C. Brinkley, Mrs. R. F. Harward, Miss Laura Jones, W. S. Bridges, Miss Alice Jones, Mrs. R. O. Caveness, Miss Jennie Mae Summers and Miss Lena Barrow. There are about 75 pupils in the school.

About the first of November, 1924, Dr. Carl C. Taylor, dean of the graduate school of the N. C. State College, organized a men's Bible class with eight members who met at the parsonage. When the Church was completed, this class moved to the gallery and has since been known as Dr. Taylor's forum. This class has had the most phenomenal growth of any in the Sunday School, and now meets in the main Church auditorium. There are 75 on roll, and the attendance on some Sundays is around 100. A musical program of about twenty minutes is rendered at the beginning of each meeting by different local artists.

Dr. Taylor has stated that the chief object of the class or forum is "to understand life and the place of religion in it." At the outset it was emphasized that only members not affiliated with any other class in the Sunday School would be eligible to join. Recently the teacher has been making a comparative study of the various religions, discussing some of them on succeeding Sundays in the following order: Buddhism, Confuscianism, Mohammedism and Christianity. These discussions from the keen mind of Dr. Taylor have attracted widespread attention and have been given prominent and favorable notice in the secular press. Perhaps I shall report something further in a few issues hence relative to these lectures.

There are two Christian Endeavor Societies here—intermediate, with Dorothy Jones, president, and junior, with William Spikes, president. Regular prayer meetings are held with interest each Sunday evening. The midweek prayer meeting is held each Wednesday evening, which is the congregational one.

The official business board is composed of twenty men, captained by Mr. C. C. Gunn, a prominent merchant of this city. Meetings are held once each month.

It should properly be stated here that this Church has a functioning Woman's Missionary Society. Mrs. L. L. Vaughan is the president, and the membership numbers around forty or fifty. These ladies are workers who work. Their loyalty and devotion to the new building work has been remarkable. It may be truly said that they have rendered splendid service, both inspirational and financial. They have turned hundreds of dollars into the Church coffer.

The Church has decided to put on a week of special effort, looking toward the development of the membership. This will be known as "Kingdom-Enlistment Week" and will follow the outline of Dr. Howsare, who will be present to conduct the work. This will begin Sunday, April 26th.

This sketch of the Raleigh work may appear to some to be written in a rather self-congratulatory style, but it is not meant that way. Nothing of the sort is intended. We honestly believe in boosting—expect to always do that—and it is but human nature to put one's best front forward. Everything is not perfect here any more than it is perhaps in your own Church. But who wants to hear about that! If we are doing well or trying to, maybe you will feel like doing that or even better. We should write and boost and praise this work, not because it is our Church, but for the reason that it is the Church of God.

We feel justifiable pride in the building and equipment, to be sure, and solicit your interest and affection, but as only love and harmony and the attributes of such can make a home, so the membership of a Church, to make a true Church, must be "of one heart and soul."

H. M. Rhodes.

Mrs. Helen Plane, said to have been the originator of the idea for the Stone Mountain Confederate Memorial, died April 24th, in her eighty-second year, in a private sanitarium.

INTERNATIONAL UNIFORM SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON.

May 10, 1925.

Subject: "Philip and the Ethiopian Treasurer."
Golden Text: "The opening of Thy words giveth light."—Psa. 119:130.
Lesson: Acts 8:26-39.
Devotional Reading: Isa. 53:7-12.

Pentecost had started a fire in Jerusalem. It was beginning to burn brightly and warmly. Paul thought it was high time to put it out, and he rushed in, thinking to extinguish it. Figuratively speaking, he kicked the fire, thinking thereby to put it out. Instead, he scattered burning brands every where. And wherever these burning brands fell, they started another fire. For they that were scattered abroad, went every where preaching the word.

One of the burning brands was Philip, one of the original seven, who later became known as deacons. He was a man of honest report, full of wisdom and of the Holy Spirit, and he was on fire with a passion for the things of Christ. His devotion was genuine, for it carried him even to the hated Samaritans, and he preached Christ unto them. It is not too much to say that the Churches would take on new life if deacons would embody more of Philip's character and express more of his spirit of evangelism.

Philip was doing a great work in Samaria. He was having great practical results in his work. It seemed like the natural thing that he should continue where he was. But God moves in mysterious ways His wonders to perform. An angel—a messenger—of the Lord spake unto Philip, saying, "Arise and go toward the south unto the way that goeth down from Jerusalem unto Gaza, which is desert." It was a strange and seemingly unwarranted command. Why leave a great work to go into a place that was a desert? Why make such a "wild-goose chase?"

But the good soldier of Jesus Christ does not reason why when he becomes convinced that the Lord has spoken. He obeys. And Philip arose and went. And behold, there in that out-of-the-way place he found a man. The plot begins to thicken. Perhaps it was not a wild-goose chase after all.

The man was an Ethiopian, a man of great authority, the treasurer of the Queen of the Ethiopians. He was evidently a devotee of the Jewish religion, for he had been up to Jerusalem to worship. And returning, he was sitting in his chariot, reading Esaias the prophet. His principle was sound. He was following up the hour of worship with meditation and further seeking after righteousness. His period of worship had inspired him to a deeper hunger and thirst after righteousness. It is not at all unlikely that if we spent more time after worship on Sunday to meditating on high themes, and less on pleasure-seeking and cheap literature, we would come more and more unto the stature of the fullness of Jesus Christ.

The Spirit which had bade Philip go had not deserted him. Those who undertake God's program may be assured of God's presence and power. The Spirit said unto Philip, 'Go near, and join thyself to His chariot." He who had told His disciples that they should take men alive had led this humble disciple into the high privilege of doing that very thing.

The events that followed are inspiring. Taking a man who was seeking the truth, but who was living only in the dim twilight of truth, Philip took him and led him out into the blaze of the Son of Righteousness. It is significant that Philip began right where he was and preached Christ unto him. The whole Bible centers in Christ. It looks forward to His coming, recounts His life and ministry and teachings, and describes His spirit at work and His final consummation of all things. Christ is above all, and in all and through all.

As Philip talks, there is born within the man to whom he is talking a great heart-hunger. He felt the power of the living Christ. And with a confession that includes all that is necessary to all orthodoxy, he bears witness to open discipleship to Christ. An informal baptism is an external symbol of newness of life in Christ Jesus within the man.

"And he went on his way rejoicing." The words refer to the Enuch. He had found Christ. Of course, he went on his way rejoicing. But they might just as well refer to Philip. For he who leads men to Christ finds almost as much joy as he who is led to Christ. And this joy the world cannot give.

Tradition has it that this Eunuch went back to his people and was the means of evangelizing them and establishing Churches in Africa. It is as it should be. He who does not feel the impulse to share the riches of grace in Christ Jesus with others, lacks that which is most vital in Christianity.

Teaching Truths.

1. He that willeth to do His will shall know His will.
2. Christian impulse bids us arise and go.
3. Even the most unlikely places offer opportunity for Christian service.
4. Obedience is the organ of spiritual knowledge.
5. The spirit of Christ overleaps racial boundaries.
6. Religion has an appeal for "men in authority."
7. Worship ought to be a preparation for service.
8. Open-minded Bible reading offers a wide road to Christ.
9. Jesus Christ fulfilled the law and the prophets.
10. He who does God's will, will have God's spirit.
11. Sound interpretation of God's word offers a fine field of service.
12. Preaching Jesus is the best gospel.
13. Baptism is an outer sign of an inner change.
14. Belief in Jesus Christ as the Son of God is a fair test of discipleship.
15. He who finds Christ might well go on his way rejoicing.
16. The reward of work well done is more work.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

May 10, 1925.

Subject: "Where and How Should We Spend Sunday?"
Scripture Lessons Ps. 122:1-9; Heb. 10:25.

Plans for the Meeting.

This meeting should be planned well ahead of time in order that an announcement may be made of how the Sunday on which this is the topic is to be spent by the Christian Endeavor members. It should be discussed and decided on the Sunday before the meeting. Since May 10th is Mothers' Day and the Christian Endeavor subject is "How to Spend the Sabbath," the Christian Endeavor members may plan to attend the Sunday morning service with their mothers or sit in a body. The members should each plan to spend Sunday afternoon at home with their mothers. All mothers of the Church may be invited to attend the Christian Endeavor meeting Sunday night.

Suggestions for Leader's Talk.

The leader may suggest that since the society has kept this Sabbath Day so well, that they try to keep it just as well for a month. It may then be decided how it shall be done. The society may attend the Sunday morning service and sit together for the entire month. They may plan to hold a C. E. meeting in the county home, or some other place where it would be appreciated and would be helpful, on one Sunday afternoon; another Sunday afternoon each member might visit some sick person. Each member should try to bring another to the C. E. meeting each Sunday night for the month.

Sunday should be a day of rest, worship, praise of God, service, meditation, thought, a day of thanksgiving for the blessings of the past week, and of hope and preparation for the work of the week to come. Sir Matthew Hale, an English judge, wrote a long time ago: "A Sabbath well spent brings a week of content and a thought for the joys of tomorrow; but a Sabbath profaned, what ever be gained, is a sure forerunner of sorrow."

Just before President Harding died, when he was in Alaska, he visited the Sheldon Jackson School in Sitka, one Sunday. A baseball game had been planned for the amusement of the party, but President Harding refused to go, and the ball game was called off.

Have some one read, or repeat, the law of the Sabbath. Ex. 20:8-11.

The Sabbath Day and Health.

Michel Chevalier said: "Let us observe Sunday in the name of hygiene, if not in the name of religion." He realized that if people were not even Christians, they needed one day of rest of the seven in each week. It is one of the natural laws of life. Sunday should be spent in quietness, because the week is spent in a constant running from one thing to another and always in a rush. "Sunday amusements do not uplift and enlarge our visions. They foster selfishness, the very thing Sunday should eradicate. Saturday night has been called the porch of the Sabbath. It is doubtful if we can have worthwhile Sundays if we spend godless, self-indulgent Sundays."

The Sabbath and Worship.

"I was glad when they said unto me, Let us go into the house of the Lord." This should be the spirit of worship on Sunday. It is the promise of joy and praise and gladness, the renewing of the spirit, a communion with God. David Baines Griffiths said: "Humanity worships Sunday morning. When we, in the name of relaxation, arrange our Sunday so that public worship has no place in it, we set ourselves up against the best in humanity, and hinder progress rather than preserve it." At the present time, Sunday is the only day for real religious education that most children have, and it should be used for this purpose. It is just as important, and more so, that children have spiritual and moral training as intellectual.

Heb. 10:19-25 shows us some things of the

Christian Orphanage

Dear Friends:

The weather has been fine this spring and our spring planting has gone forward in a nice way. Our corn crop for the crib has all been planted and is coming up. Our land for the corn crop for the silo is ready to plant, and we hope to get our crop of beans sowed in the next few days. Our garden is looking fine. Cabbage growing rapidly and peas in bloom. It now looks like we will have garden vegetables in the near future. It always makes us happy when we can raise plenty of vegetables for our tables.

Our poultry yard has done right well for the last month or six weeks. My little poultry man (Wilson Collier) has taken a great deal of pride in the chickens, and has been bringing in from sixty to sixty-five dozen eggs each week. He has one hundred and thirty chicks which he hopes to get large enough to eat by commencement. He also has about one hundred and ninety-six little chicks about one week old.

Joe Jones (our little dairy boy) is doing nicely with his dairy cows. He is now getting about thirty-five gallons of milk each day. Has one cow giving seven gallons. Joe is very proud of his Holstein, and gives them good attention, and they respond with nice milk and yellow butter.

Little brother (Clarence Fields) and Delmire Siler have a nice bunch of hogs to kill this fall. They are counting on five thousand pounds of meat, and if they have no bad luck they will get it. Our little boys are fine little fellows and enjoy their work.

regularity which we are to use in Church-going and in worship. What people do we find who are happier than an earnest Sunday School teacher or leader of young people, who spends a great deal of time to accomplish the purposes and goals which they set for themselves?

Jesus and the Sabbath Day.

Tell of the healing of the man on the Sabbath Day and the reproach which Jesus had from the Jews, found in John 5:1-18. Comment on Mark 2:23-28. Read Matt. 12:1-8. Jesus taught that the religious rules and laws were made for the wellbeing of man; that the Sabbath Day was made for rest; that it was made for fellowship and worship; that it is to be a help and not a burden to people; that it is a day in which the good work of God does not stop.

Questions.

1. What demands should the Church make on us for Sunday?
2. What did Jesus mean when He said, "The Sabbath was made for man, and not man for the Sabbath?"
3. What are some of the things which you think wrong to do on Sunday?
4. How do you think Jesus would spend Sunday if He were among men today?
5. How do you think the Sabbath Day should be observed in our homes?

FAMILY ALTAR

CONDUCTED BY REV. H. E. ROUNTREE,
Our Chaplain in the United States Navy.

MONDAY.

CONSCIENTIOUSNESS.

Conscientiousness has, in many, outgrown that stage in which the sense of compelling power is joined with rectitude of action. The truly honest man here and there to be found is not only without thought of legal, religious, or social compulsion when he discharges an equitable claim on him, but he is without thought of compulsion. He does the right thing with a simple feeling of satisfaction in doing it, and is indeed impatient if anything prevents him from having the satisfaction of doing it.—Herbert Spencer.

Let me tell you a story. We are told that Abraham Lincoln was once a postmaster. His office did so little business it was closed, and there was owing the postal authorities seventeen dollars and some cents, which they forgot to claim. Three years passed. Lincoln had a hard time. He had no money. The omission of this money was discovered, and officers came and demanded the money. A friend was in the room, and knowing Lincoln's straits, called him aside and offered to lend it to him, but he only smiled and said, "No, thank you." He went to his room and produced the seventeen dollars in the same change of pennies and dimes in which it had been collected at the post-office, all wrapped up in a small package. This honesty was the root of his noble life and the source of his greatness today. In no other way can any one build a building that will stand.

TUESDAY.

IMITATORS OF GOD.

"Be ye imitators of God, as dear children."—Eph. 5:1.

We are all copyists. Children copy their parents. Parents copy other parents. Business men copy business men, etc. When we shall be copied, what will the result be?

The downfall of numberless ones lies in doing wrong things because others did them. The Scripture today says copy God. Even monkeys, I am told, copy superiors and never the lower. We are to find out God and copy Him. Like Mary, sit at the feet of Jesus and then do like Him, which means that it is not enough to admire God, or to adore Him, but copy Him.

And our imitation is to be like a little child's imitations. Our children at their play imitate us. In this their mind is lowly, humble, trustful, sincere, loving, and theirs is our example. David said, "I have set the Lord always before me," and also, "The law of God is in his heart, none of his steps shall slide."

Whatever there may be of our God we may not be able to copy, we can imitate Him in faith, in justice, in efforts of holiness and purity, in truth, in tender-heartedness, kindness, forgiveness and love.

Prayer.—Our Father, as children of Thy great family, help us to set before us daily and at all times Jesus our Saviour and follow Him. In His name we ask it. Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

SEEKING NEWNESS OF HEART.

"Today if ye will hear His voice, harden not your hearts."—Heb. 3:12-16.

There are many kinds of hearts, but the worst of all is the hard heart. It is easy to grow hard-hearted. As years pass, we find ourselves moving in a little circle. We get into narrow ruts. We lose the child-heart, the sense of the wonder and beauty and goodness of life. Great things become commonplace to us. Our hearts accumulate grime—a crust—and such hearts are always slow to believe. Such hearts grow blind and forgetful. We lose our capacity for trust. There is only one hope for the hard heart, and that is that it may be broken and made over. The psalmist's prayer, "Create within me a clean heart," points the way—the only way—to acquire a tender heart. It is a new creation. "If any man be in Christ, he is a new creation."

The "new heart" which is the object of all true religious aspiration is a heart fashioned after the heart of Jesus. Who was ever pitiful and compassionate. Familiarity with difficult conditions never hardened His heart. "His heart, of all His being, was the chiefest part." A modern poet speaks of God as the "Heart of Love enfolding all." In power, we may never be like God, but in tenderness of heart we may approach Him by the Spirit's help. Just to listen to His voice—"to hearken unto His word"—is the surest way to be saved from hardness of heart.—Rev. C. C. Albertson.

Prayer.—Our Father, while we try daily to imitate Thee through Jesus Christ our Lord, give us hearts open and responsive to divine teaching, that our children, when copying us, may copy Thee too. In His name we ask it. Amen.

THURSDAY.

SEEKING GOD'S FACE.

"Seek, ye, my face . . .Thy face, Lord, will I seek."—Psa. 27:8.

What does this mean to us? The face carries so much of what the soul is made of. Anger darkens it like a storm. Love illuminates it like the sum bursting over a landscape. Not only our moods, but permanent character is there. God's face is all that is kind, compassionate, love, highest ideals of goodness, all that is noble and true, all that is divine and glorious, all that is righteous and beautiful.

Spiritual life is one of a growing knowledge, growing goodness, growing faith, growing hope, growing prayer and growing struggles for achievement. It denotes a search for the character of God and a life of earnest seeking after God's face is illimitable in its discovery of Him. It is not enough to contemplate the beauty of a thing, but we want to feel that beauty passing into our own souls and becoming an abiding quality in us.

Prayer.—Our Father, Thou who givest power to the faint and increaseth strength to them that have no might, beautify our souls with Thy salvation. We pray for the beauty of our God to be upon us. In His name we ask it. Amen.

FRIDAY.

GOD'S KINGDOM WITHIN OUR REACH.

"Thy Kingdom come."—Matt. 6:10.

To the Jews, it seemed that their happiness and prosperity depended upon a political change—the coming of a Davidie king who would deliver them from their enemies, and set up a free and prosperous Jewish state. To Jesus, however, everything depended upon a great spiritual change, a complete turning away from materialism and pride, from hypocrisy and hate, from lust and selfishness to God, the great loving Father, who would abundantly care for His children if they would truly trust Him.

Why not try this great spiritual way to life and peace? The world has tried trusting in money, in politics, in culture and science. It has even trusted in war to bring in the new day. What is needed, however, is that we should trust in our infinitely wise and loving Father and let Him help us solve our problems. To do this is to realize what Jesus meant by the kingdom of God.

Prayer.—Dear Lord, grant that Thy word may reach the hearts of the multitudes in every land, and all may desire the coming of the kingdom. May they realize that God blesses all that show a desire for Him, the world's only hope. Amen.

SATURDAY.

THE FINGER OF GOD.

"One jot or one tittle shall in no wise pass from the law till all be fulfilled."—Matt. 5:17-19.

God wrote, according to the sacred record, in all on three different occasions. He wrote the tables of the law on stone with His finger; He wrote with the finger of a hand upon the wall, the denunciation of judgment against Belshazzar and his court when they broke this law; and He wrote with his finger in the dust of the temple floor when His law was broken again; but this time He wrote in mercy—to deliver from the death penalty of the law. By the silence of Jesus, the accusers of the woman were convicted, and the consciences of all made them ignominiously retreat.

God wrote on stone the law, not one jot or tittle of which shall ever fail, although the tables of the law were lost, with their sacred container, the ark. He wrote on the plaster of the wall, and that heathen hall, where the revelers drank from the golden cups of His sanctuary, was demolished, to be buried in the dust until the present day, when it has been resurrected by the archeologist Koldeway. He wrote on the dust of the temple floor, and not one stone of that temple was left upon another when the gentiles burned Jerusalem. But, though the heavens fall and the earth pass away, not one word that He ever spoke or wrote shall fail of fulfillment.—Wm. M. Langdon.

Prayer.—Dear Father, may all of us, young and old, learn to obey and trust Thee implicitly, and say, "Thy will be done in us as it is in heaven." Amen.

SUNDAY.

KEEPING THE TEMPLE CLEAN.

"My house shall be called a house of prayer for all nations."—Mark 11:15-18.

The temple in the time of Jesus was overrun with business. More than that, the spirit of the world was there. The authority and the love of God were forgotten. The passions of men found full and loud expression. The things of God were contemptuously subordinated to the convenience and the clamor of men.

We are in the same danger today, only the form which the evil takes is different. Business frequently tries to tell religion what it shall say and do. It regards itself as a sort of overlord. If it says "go," its imperative is final. If there are not enough days in the week, business says, "Take the Lord's day. I want it. Six days are not enough. I want the other one." If men were as loyal to the imperatives of the Lord as they are to the demands of business, the kingdom would speed on more surely.

There comes a time when the Lord of the temple will drive business out. Business has a place and a noble one, but not in the temple of God. In no sense can it be a substitute for the temple. At no time can it be master of the temple. Pleasure makes one sort of bid for a man's time and energy. It is sometimes camouflaged as recreation for health. Business makes a more subtle appeal—the appeal of necessity, of duty, of self-interest. Nevertheless, it needs to be faced fairly and frankly interrogated. It is not master over the things of God.—Ernest Bourner Allen.

MADGE FLEMING MOFFITT, Editor.

DEARS:

I saw a lot of my Kiddies at a party today. Oh! quite a lot, indeed! And we played and played. After a while in came a great, huge tray of lemon-ice. Oh! and then we stopped playing. Guess what we did! But I know you can, though.

Will Jack Frost never find out it is spring? He has stayed all winter, and now he seems to be going to spend the summer too. Jacky Frost, run along now, please sir; all my Kiddies want to go bare-foot. Run and find a violet, dears; can you? Your editor,

M. F. M.

BEDTIME PRAYER.

We thank Thee for the happy day,
For our pleasant work and play.
Now as we lie down to sleep,
We ask that Thou wilt safely keep
All children round the world so wide.
Ev'ryone is near Thy side;
Thou dost see us, each and all,
And Thou wilt hear us when we call.

Amen.

THE EASTER RABBIT.

A long time ago, in a far-off country, there was a famine. Listen, and I will tell you how it happened.

In the early spring, when the first grass peeped out, the sun shone so hot that it all dried up. Rains did not fall for many months. The seed and grain that were planted could not grow. The plants, trees and everything turned from a fresh green to a dull gray brown. When fall came, there was nothing to gather in the storeaway for the long, cold winter. The people had to be very saving and careful of the things they had saved the year before.

When Christmas came, there were not many presents, but the children did not miss them as we would, because in that land they did not give many presents at Christmas. Easter Sunday was their holiday. On this day they had celebrations and presents and other nice things for the little folks.

When this Easter Sunday came around, the fathers and mothers were too poor to get these presents and goodies for the children, and knew not what to do. They thought of all sorts of things, but none suited them, till one mother thought of coloring a great many eggs and hiding them in the grass of the Church-yard and letting the children find them.

The other mothers of the village thought this was a fine idea. The whole week before Easter all of these kind mothers were very busy coloring pure white eggs bright pinks, blue and yellows. This was kept secret from the children.

When Easter Sunday came, all the fathers and mothers and children dressed in their best clothes went to Church. When Church was over, instead of going home, the older people told the children to come with them for a walk in the Churchyard and perhaps they would find some flowers.

Suddenly a shout went up. The children had found these beautiful eggs hidden in among the grasses. They were happy at finding them and wondered where they could have come from. Just then, from near a large nest full of eggs, jumped a large white rabbit. One little girl said, "It must have been the rabbit who laid the pretty eggs."

"I am sure it was the rabbit," said her brother.

"Hurrah, for the rabbit! hurrah, for the Easter rabbit!" the children shouted and cheered. The fathers and mothers smiled and were glad, too. Ever since, in that far-away land, and in many other countries, the Easter rabbit brings us our beautifully colored eggs.

WHEN I AM AFRAID.

Father, Thou art near
Make me brave.
If any danger comes
Thou canst save.
Thou dost hear me now,
I will not fear.
Help me to believe.
Thou art here.

Amen.

THE STORY OF JACK RABBIT.

A long, long time ago, Jack Rabbit did not look anything like the rabbits we see these days. Instead of long ears and the stump tail, he had very small ears, no longer than those of a cat, and a long, bushy tail.

The fox, who was a neighbor of the Jack Rabbit, was quite jealous of him, for although the fox's tail is fine and bushy, Jack Rabbit's was much longer and handsomer. Jack knew this, and so, just to plague the fox, when he saw him coming he would swing his tail from right to left and up and down, and feel biggety big.

One morning the fox came along with a fine string of fish. Jack Rabbit liked fish better than anything else. He would have done most anything to have had some.

When the fox came up to where he was standing, he said, "Good morning, Brother Fox, where did you get those nice fish?"

"I caught them down at the mill pond," said the fox.

"How did you catch them, Brother Fox?" asked the rabbit.

"It is easy enough to do, Brother Rabbit. You do not even need a hook or line," said the fox.

The rabbit jumped all about, swinging his long, bushy tail up and down very fast. He said: "Tell me quick all about it, Brother Fox, for I am most starving for fish."

"Well, this is all you'll have to do: go sit on the log that lies across the creek, and let your tail hang into the water from two hours after sundown till daybreak, and at the end of that time you will have more fish than you can eat in a week."

That very night the rabbit wrapped a warm blanket around his shoulders, because it was a very cold winter night, and went down to the creek to fish. He sat upon the log and let his tail hang down into the water.

It grew colder and colder, still the rabbit would not leave, thinking of the fine mess of fish he would have in the morning.

When morning came, the rabbit began to pull. He pulled and pulled, but his tail was frozen fast in the creek. He thought it was the weight of the fish he had caught that held his tail.

He pulled again and again, and harder each time. When he found that his tail would not come out of the water he became frightened and squealed, shouted and whistled as loud as he could for help.

A big owl that lived in a hollow tree heard him. The owl knew from the rabbit's cries that he was in trouble, so he thought he would go and get him and eat him for supper.

He flew away to the creek.

When the rabbit saw him he called out, "Mr. Owl, won't you please help me pull out the fish I have caught on my tail?"

"With pleasure," said the owl. He flew down and caught hold of the rabbit's left ear and pulled it so hard that it grew longer and longer, but still the rabbit's tail stuck fast in the ice.

"Why don't you pull at my tail, Mr. Owl? You have pulled my ears to such a length that my best friends won't know me," said the rabbit.

The owl thought of a better plan. He put his hooked bill around the part of the tail that was outside of the ice, and—clip!—off it snapped.

And that is how the rabbits came to have such long ears and bobtails.

FATHER AND MOTHER AWAY.

Keep them safe and bring them home;
Make me good while they are gone,
So I may meet them when they come
With a shining face.

Amen.

HE COULDN'T GET THE GATE OPEN.

More than sixty years ago, a boy ten or twelve years old started one morning to go to school. He didn't like his teacher and did not like to go to school. He wanted to stay at home, but he knew he could not do that, because he was not sick, and had no excuse. But he thought he could invent one that would answer. His mother started him off with his dinner-pail in his hand, and thought, of course, her little boy would go straight to school, as he often had done before. But after he had been gone fifteen or twenty minutes the little fellow came back.

Was he sick? No. Had he been hurt? No. Did anybody or anything frighten him? No. What, then?

Well, he told his mother "he couldn't get the gate open." His mother knew this was a poor excuse. She knew he could very easily climb over the gate if it was fast, and that her little boy was only shamming.

What do you think she did? Let him stay at home? Go and open the gate for him? No. She just went towards the wood pile, and picked up a little switch, and then, turning to the boy, said: "Come on, I will help you get the gate open."

He soon took the hint, and was off as nimble as a cat, not caring for gates or fences either.

This boy lived to be nearly eighty years of age. He died on the day before Christmas.

During his long life he found many gates to be opened—as we all do—and that a lively step and a lively switch will help, not only over gates, but over wide ditches, steep hills, and high mountains.

After many years, the gray-haired man came to the last gate. It opened of itself, and led into the graveyard, where he now sleeps.

The last gate is just before us all. It may be just a little way off, or it may be a long journey. No matter, it is surely ahead somewhere, and we will come to it sooner or later. When we reach it, may it not only lead into the graveyard, but beyond it into the brighter world, where gray hairs and trembling limbs are never seen.—Selected.

God's kingdom is within reach of us all. It has been brought blessedly near to us by His own Son. Right where we are at this very moment, in the silence of our own souls, we may erect a spiritual throne, and upon that throne we may place the only One who can ever fully save and satisfy mankind, either individually or socially. And we will not stop there. We will go on to win others and still others to love and trust and obey Him, not only by our words, but even more by prayer and holy, Christ-like living, until the whole world is aflame with the love and glory of God, and His kingdom has fully come.—Rev. George W. Barton.

Most headaches due to lack of internal cleanliness

WHEN you are constipated, poisons form in the accumulated food waste and are carried to all parts of the body. Headaches follow. Biliousness, insomnia, lack of energy, all result from constipation, which if unchecked will lead to serious results.

Avoid Laxatives—Say Doctors

A noted authority says that laxatives and cathartics do not overcome constipation, but by their continued use tend only to aggravate the condition.

Medical science has found in lubrication a means of overcoming constipation. The gentle lubricant, Nujol, penetrates and softens the hard food waste and thus hastens its passage through and out of the body. Thus, Nujol brings internal cleanliness.

Nujol is used in leading hospitals and is prescribed by physicians throughout the world. Nujol is not a medicine or laxative, and cannot gripe. Like pure water, it is harmless.

Take Nujol regularly and adopt this habit of internal cleanliness. For sale by all druggists.

YOUNG PEOPLE'S TOPIC—MAY 10.

"Where and How Should We Spend Sunday?" There is no other answer to this question save that which is dictated by the Christian standard of thought and action. Where to Spend Sunday? In Church, of course. To neglect the means of grace means the lowering of the ideal. The fellowship of worship spells spiritual strength. The atmosphere of the sanctuary is different from all other atmospheres. There the thought and speech are in harmony with the high claims of the soul. There is a reflex action that buoys the spirit and gives impetus to the finer impulses. To sing the songs of the faith, to talk to God, to listen to an exposition of His word, to catch a glimpse of the character of Jesus Christ, to be surrounded by those whose thoughts are of ministry and service, and whose theme is that of righteousness and peace—these are values we cannot afford to avoid.

And out in the crowded ways of life, among those who are needy—the sick, bereaved, discouraged. Sunday can be made a holy day indeed when the hours are spent in radiating cheer and hope and help. Jesus recognized the needs of His fellow-men and the day was dedicated to that purpose. He plucked an ear of corn with which to meet hunger. To meet hunger, on the Sabbath Day and every day—that is Christianity. Hunger for the bread that feeds the body and hunger for the bread that satisfies the soul—that is what we mean.

Sunday may be spent in ways helpful to self and others. Write letters to friends far away and who are lonely. Telephone those who can be reached in that way. Visit the sick and the shut-ins. Walk through the fields and, seeing nature in grandeur, think God's thoughts after Him.—Rev. Richard Braunstein.

TO MEET ANY EVENT.—

It is said that Italy is taking steps to be prepared for any emergency which may arise in Germany or Bulgaria. This is the way diplomats interpreted a recent dispatch from Rome which said that the Italian Cabinet had restored the army general staff.

ENGLAND BACK TO GOLD STANDARD.—

One of the most interesting facts to the financial world was the return of England to the gold standard on April 28th. Chancellor Winston Churchill in his budget recommended the resumption of the shipment of bullion, and Parliament accepted the budget as outlined by the Chancellor of the Exchequer. Upon the news of England's resumption of the gold standard, the pound sterling went to $4.83, the highest point it has reached in ten years. This is only 4 cents below parity, $4.865. This resumption marks another long step forward in the financial rehabilitation of Europe. The pound sterling effects the money market all over the world. Two New York banking concerns are arranging credits of three hundred million dollars in gold for great Britain. Chancellor Churchill stated that this reserve would be used only when and if needed, and he said that he did not think it would be needed. This resumption would be the whole imperial policy.

CABINET MEMBERS ARE RELIGIOUS.—

The Methodist Board of Temperance is responsible for the statement that all the members of President Coolidge's Cabinet are members of Churches. The Church affiliations are given as follows: Frank B. Kellogg, Secretary of State; Episcopalian; Andrew W. Mellon, Secretary of the Treasury, Presbyterian; John W. Weebs, Secretary of War, Unitarian; John G. Sargent, Attorney-General, Universalist; Harry New, Postmaster-General, Disciple; Curtis D. Wilburg, Secretary of Navy, Congregationalist; Hubert Work, Secretary of Interior, Presbyterian; William M. Jardine, Secretary of Agriculture, Congregationalist; Herbert Hoover, Secretary of Commerce, Quaker; James Davis, Secretary of Labor, Baptist. The Christian Century points out that it is not definite whether all these men are actually members of the Church or whether they are merely adherents. During the late campaign it was stated that Mr. Coolidge and Mr. Dawes were the only Church members of the six on the major tickets, and how it has developed that Mr. Dawes is not a member, but only an adherent, of the Congregational Church.

UNITARIANS HONOR FAMOUS MEMBERS.—

As a part of their centenary celebration, the Unitarians of New York set aside Sunday, April 19th, for the purpose of honoring the twenty-two Unitarians in the National Hall of Fame, which is situated on the campus of New York University. Addresses were delivered by Chancellor Elmer Ellsworth Brown, of the university; Dr. Robert Underwood Johnson, director of the Hall of Fame, and Dr. Arthur E. Morgan, president of Antioch College, Yellow Springs, Ohio. The twenty-two Unitarians occupying positions in the Hall of Fame are: John Adams, John Quincy Adams, Lewis Agassiz, George Bancroft, William Cullen Bryant, William Ellery Channing, Peter Cooper, Charlotte Saunders Cushman, Ralph Waldo Emerson, Benjamin Franklin, Nathaniel Hawthorne, Oliver Wendell Holmes, Thomas Jefferson, Henry Wadsworth Longfellow, James Russell Lowell, Horace Mann, John Marshall, Marie Mitchell, John Lathrop Motley, Francis Parkman, Joseph Story, and Daniel Webster. This is a formidable array of names, but one is inclined to think that the Unitarians are making broad claims when they have taken in Jefferson and Horace Mann. They may have been adherents, but we doubt the membership of those and others of this list in the Unitarian Church.

WALL STREET INVESTS IN BOY.—

April 28th was Wall Street's day in "Boys' Week" program. John Stevenson, sixteen, was the boy president of the Stock Exchange of the city, and William Francis Igoe, eighteen, the day's chairman; sounding the gong which set the nation's business in motion. Young Stevenson made a speech in which he gave "American Boy, Unlimited," a tremendous boost. He urged his adult hearers—stock brokers, bankers, and security handlers, familiar with million-dollar figures—to remove from all the boys the handicap of the street-corner gang, and from the boys of a minority class the handicap of having too much money to spend. E. H. H. Simmons, president of the exchange, presented the boy president with a gold medal. No medal has been more richly deserved. He sounded a message to all of us. We all need to invest in "American Boy, Unlimited," and to invest heavily. The handicap of the street-corner gang is a menace which should be removed. Not only to the stock exchange men, but to every father of a boy in the broad land, and to all men interested in the life of boys and the hope of the world tomorrow, this message of young Mr. Stevenson should go, and should prompt to a helpful investment in "American Boy, Unlimited," both in money and in other things far more precious than money to boy-life.

HINDENBURG CHOSEN PRESIDENT.—

In the elections of April 26th, the German people chose Field Marshal von Hindenburg as President of Germany. The elections were marked by some violence, in spite of careful police control. Von Hindenburg is the first President to be chosen by the German people. The late Freidreich Ebert was appointed to the post by the national assembly, following the revolution. The fact that Von Hindenburg was the leading general on the German side during the war causes many to doubt the good faith of the Germans to make good under the Dawes reparations plan which they have accepted. The general is now seventy-seven years old, and his campaign was a "front porch" campaign, while his opponent, Dr. Wilhelm Marx, conducted a whirlwind campaign on the American plan, delivering many speeches each day from the rear platform of his train.

Washington regards the election without alarm, feeling that it probably means a reintegrating of Germany, and, therefore, an enlarged ability to pay reparations in which the United States is more deeply interested than in whether Germany is democratic or monarchistic. Paris, however, is experiencing many misgivings. They feel in France that Hindenburg's election by the German people is a flat defiance of the world. The French declare that the election of the field marshal is indicative that the world has been mistaken in regarding Germany as a convert to pacifism. Former English Premier Lloyd George feels confident that Hindenburg will do nothing rash.

The inauguration of Von Hindenburg will probably occur about the middle of May. Chancellor Luther does not feel that the election will necessitate the resignation of the Cabinet. Many think, however, that Foreign Secretary Stresemann will be compelled to resign. He opposed the nomination of Von Hindenburg on the ground of the foreign complications which he believed would arise from it. The Communists have issued an ultimatum to Von Hindenburg embodying almost impossible demands. Just what this declaration of the Communists will result in is uncertain. So long as Germany keeps faith in the pledges she has made, most Americans seem to feel that the people have a right to choose anybody they please as President. It may be the safest place to put the general, after all, since the President of Germany has far fewer powers than the Presidents of the United States or France. It is the German Chancellor who actually exercises the power of government. The German choice seems to be an echo of the conservative element now manifest all over Europe and in America since 1920.

NOTES-PERSONALS

Mothers' Day should be a "Go-to-Church" Sunday. Every one should attend a service in memory of Mother.

The Christian Temple, Norfolk, Dr. L. E. Smith, pastor, has received 179 members since October 1st—an increase of over 17 per cent in membership.

Bethlehem College Catalogue is now on the press and will soon be ready for distribution. Write the president, Wadley, Ala.

Dr. Archibald Alexander declined the proffered presidency of a Western university and will remain at the University of North Carolina.

Some of the busiest preachers to be found are in the Christian Church. Some are so busy that they have not written a line about their Churches for years. Use some ink in your Church's behalf.

Rome has just been celebrating her 2,678th birthday, figuring from the time when tradition has it that Romulus founded the city, and the occasion has been made notable by the presentation to the municipality of several plots of ground which are to be transformed into permanent public gardens.

The Churches should seek out those who want their Church paper, and this can be done through the pastor better than any other. There are persons who are sick or unable to work that have given their support to the Church, but have reached the point in life that Church should give help to them. Superannuates are not confined to the ministry alone.

Had The Christian Sun not been suspended during the years of 1861-1865, owing to the War Between the States, it would now be in its eighty-first volume. It has been published and is now in its seventy-seventh volume. A brother, who has read the paper five-sevenths of the time, says, "You will find enclosed $2.00 as a renewal for The Christian Sun. I have been reading the paper about 56 years. I think it is a good paper, and I expect to take it and read it as long as I live."—J. L. Elder.

G. P. Putnam's Sons, New York, have recently published an interesting and practical volume entitled "Who's Who in the Bible," by Rev. Fletcher Allen, M. A., an English clergyman. The facts are simple and authentic and the book is admirably arranged to form a ready reference work. In it are briefly outlined the lives of all the important characters of both Old and New Testament, arranged alphabetically, with reference to the original biblical source of information.

Twenty-seven conferences of the Methodist Episcopal Church have voted, 2,420 to 241, in favor of unification with the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, according to a tabulation by Dr. R. J. Wade. Five spring conferences and seventy-eight fall conferences of the Northern Church have yet to take action. In the Southern Church, only two conferences have acted, one voting for and one against unification, and thirty-seven conferences have yet to record their decisions.

"Spiritual passion is the cure for heresy," Rev. William C. Poole, of London, president of the World's Sunday School Association, told the members of the executive committee at its New York meeting, "for it is the belief that what Christ revealed will cause the dove of peace to build its nest in European cannon-mouths." The next annual meeting of the executive committee will be held in Birmingham, Ala., on April 13, 1926.

Whether Von Hindenburg has the physical and mental strength to assume an active role in the presidency is a question, for he is seventy-seven years old. Clemenceau, however, was no youngster when he became war-time Premier of France, and the President-elect of Germany may surprise those who consider him too old. His first active army service was in the war against Austria in 1866, and he went through the Franco-Prussian War. In 1907 he was placed on the retired list with the rank of general, but early in the World War he was recalled to service, smashed the Russian armies on the Masurian Lakes front, and rose to be the German commander-in-chief. Many have argued that Von Ludendorff was the real genius who made Hindenburg's achievements possible, but since the war Hindenburg has had the good sense to lead a retired life, aloof from politics, while Ludendorff's political failures have made him ridiculous.

Several months ago the Sunday School at Pope's Chapel voted to give one offering a month to missions and one offering a month to the Orphanage. The secretary, writing under date of April 23d, says, "Though we voted to give the Orphanage our second Sunday offering, and to missions our fourth Sunday offering, we have not yet had to ask you or Bro. Johnston, of the Orphanage, to pay for our literature. Our Sunday School is better organized this year than heretofore, and we now seven classes instead of four, with competent teachers for each. While our enrollment is 42, our average attendance the past year has been 90 per cent. The average attendance of officers and teachers was 97 per cent for the first quarter of the present year, and we are hoping for a better report for the second quarter." We have yet to find a Sunday School adopting this plan of giving that has been hurt in any way; but in almost every instance, as in the case of Pope's Chapel, there has been great impetus given to the work because of the plan. When a Sunday School undertakes to do something for others, it has something to build on and something to build. A purposeless Sunday School is like a ship without a rudder. If our schools would undertake larger and very definite tasks, much more would be accomplished by them.

LET'S BE DIFFERENT!

Let's be different! Pick out the good points in the Church and talk about them whenever you get a chance; and, like Napoleon, if you do not see an opportunity, make one. The best advertising for a firm in business is the talk of its satisfied customers. Talk your Church up! When you are inclined to find fault, just be different. Change your tactics, face about. It is perfectly all right to point out errors, to offer suggestions, to make corrections, to criticize constructively, but all of this is very different from fault-finding. Criticize to help, not to hinder!

REVIVAL AT ANTIOCH.

We held our last evangelistic meeting of the present Conference year with Antioch Church April 12th to 23d. In this meeting, we were ably assisted by Rev. J. F. Morgan, of Winchester, Va., who did the preaching and conducted the singing; and by teams of the Cadle's Crusaders from Harrisonburg. Bro. Morgan preached the genuine gospel of a crucified and risen Saviour in his usual able and attractive manner. He never sang better in his life than he did this time. The Lord used the sermons and the singing of Bro. Morgan and the work of the crusaders as means of great blessings to Antioch Church and other people of the community. There were eight conversions, and ten accessions to the Church, two—Rev. A. W. Andes' two oldest boys—having been converted during the Bulgin meeting in Harrisonburg last spring.

Linville, Va. R. P. Crumpler.

THE MOTHER.

She never touched with skillful brush the canvas
And left a painting that the world might praise,
Or with the inspired finger on the keyboard
Sent down an echo through the length of days;
But once with eyes tear-dimmed, yet looking upward,
With smiling face she passed beneath the rod
Descending almost to the vale of shadows
To bring a little new-born babe from God.

She never sung a song of joy or gladness
In clear, sweet tones to make us smile or weep;
Her voice, too weak to win the world's approval,
Was only good to hush a babe to sleep.
She never penned a book whose glowing pages
Might lift us up and help us in the fight;
But day by day she sought through loving patience
To guide two little stumbling feet aright.

And yet, methinks, when at the gate of heaven
She paused—God looked up at her and smiled;
With hands outstretched, His kind voice spoke a welcome
To her—the mother of a little child.

SUNDAY ON THE CRUSADE.

The "Christian Conscience Crusade" is a tremendous idea, and is sure to bear fruit. The Lord bless you in it. Obedience to law is the greatest liberty. The beginning of anarchy is in the planning of laws in which we do not believe. There is nothing the matter with this old world—except some of the people in it. America is being challenged. Will we fight the infamous gang that defies law, and settle the matter, as our forefathers did, or shall we bend the knee and bow the neck? This is not a country for a dissenter to live in. It is going to be run on the basis of government under the Constitution, with due respect for law and order, supremacy of the law, with property rights, individual rights, no class legislation, no autocracy of capital, no autocracy of labor.

Bring the people back to God and back to the Bible! America needs a spiritual and moral regeneration. There can be no safety for business, no peace, no world harmony, except it be founded on the religion of Jesus Christ. The nations cannot liquidate their debts until they liquidate their hates. Only the price is needed to rush Europe into another war—she's "broke" today! There is no safer, saner method by which to settle world problems and those at home than by the Ten Commandments and the "Sermon on the Mount."

Call America to her knees, back to the old-fashioned gospel of Jesus Christ, and she will, by the grace of God, rise triumphant over the ashes of these hysterical, neurotic, unbalanced, un-American and un-Christian days.—W. A. Sunday.

The man who labors to please God is sure to be happy in this life and in the life to come.

GLENN, GA.

I have been very busy since we moved to the country. It requires almost half of my time going to and from my Churches, and the other half getting ready to go. I am giving my entire time to my Church work. I am seventy miles or more from North Highland, Columbus, Ga., and twenty-three miles from East LaGrange. I go to North Highland three Sundays and to East LaGrange one Sunday per month. But I have good roads. So, good roads plus a Ford gets me there on time. I really enjoy the quietness of country life. We can go into the pastures of green and by the waters so still for communion and meditation. When we behold nature in its beauty it brings us closer to Him, who said, "I am the light of the world."

When disappointments come, we can behold the green forest and get the sweet odor of the flowers and hear the songs of the birds. Then we forget the burdens and disappointments of life and somehow we are filled with enthusiasm.

Our revival began at North Highland the first Sunday in April. We had cottage prayer meetings a week prior to the beginning of the meeting. Rev. H. M. Gray came Tuesday and conducted the services until Saturday. Having made no arrangements for his services at Lanett, he went to his appointment and came back Monday. Rev. P. L. Duke conducted the services for us until Monday.

Bro. Gray did splendid preaching. Every one who heard him enjoyed his gospel messages. We had the co-operation of the Methodist and Baptist brethren, which we appreciated so much. Bro. Duke's prayers and presence added much to the meeting.

The Church was greatly revived and there were twelve members added to our Church roll, five by letter and seven for baptism. This series of meetings came to a close Sunday night, April 19th, but the revival in the hearts of our Father's children will last through all eternity.

London, with a slightly larger population, but approximately the same area as New York, has nearly twice the number of police. London has 21,019, while New York has 12,917.

There are 25,000 miles of concrete road in the United States. California has 3,288 miles, the largest mileage of any State in the Union.

CLERGYMEN CONTINUE MEETINGS.

The evangelistic services which began last Sunday in the Jackson Memorial Baptist Church and which are conducted by Rev. J. T. Riddick, of Norfolk, and Chaplain Rountree have increased in attendance and interest each evening. The sermons delivered by Dr. Riddick have been appropriate, forceful, and convincing; and have deeply impressed those who have heard them.

Chaplain Rountree is proving himself to be a splendid soloist and a superb leader of a chorus choir. The music is a feature of the services.

These special services will continue throughout the next week, with the personal workers' band meeting each evening at 7:30 o'clock and the service beginning at 8 o'clock.—Virginian-Pilot.

PRINCIPLES OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

(1) The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.

(2) Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.

(3) The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.

(4) Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship, and of Church membership.

(5) The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by, all.

THE PURPOSE OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

The purpose of this Church is to cultivate a spirit of union among the followers of our Lord Jesus Christ of every persuasion, and to secure, if possible, the associate efforts of all true religious teachers in pointing the wicked to "the Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world."

The peculiar doctrines and tenets which have confused and distracted the Christian world are remanded to private judgment, and hence cease to be matters for debate, only in so far as may be necessary to prevent a sectarian influence from entering the Church.

This Church requires no compromise of faith on the part of any child of God in order to communion or fellowship; here denominational distinctions cease to exist, and Christian love binds the brotherhood together.

The purpose of this Church will be consummated in the conversion of the world and the union of all Christians.

CHRIST AND THE TITHE.

It is frequently argued by those who are not in sympathy with tithing that it is taught only in the Old Testament; and that it has no place in New Testament doctrine. Many do not hesitate to say that it is a part of the old legalistic covenant, and that it is not binding on Christians. We have even heard preachers make the statement that the New Testament does not teach tithing; but that it teaches instead the larger doctrine of stewardship. Now, it is our contention that tithing is the basis of the Christian doctrine of stewardship. And that tithing is taught not only by the New Testament, but by Jesus Himself.

There came to Jesus one day certain of the Pharisees, who planned by a clever question to involve Jesus in an argument in which He must either incur the displeasure of the Jews or lay Himself liable to the power of the Roman government. Their question was, "Is it lawful to give tribute unto Caesar or not?" We are familiar with the dilemma that was forced upon Him. The Jews hated Rome and everything Roman. They were cut to the quick at being forced to pay tribute to the power that held them in subjection. If Jesus took His stand on the side of Rome and Roman tribute, many of the Jews would no longer heed His message. If, on the other hand, He should say that the Jews should not pay tribute to Rome, He was liable to the charge of stirring up sedition—an offense that Rome always punished with a heavy hand. We also are familiar with the clever way in which Jesus answered the question. He first forced them to acknowledge that the tribute coin bore the image and superscription of Caesar. He then made the classic reply, "Render unto Caesar the things that are Caesar's, and unto God the things that are God's."

We have been in no doubt as to what He meant by the things that are Caesar's. The decree of the imperial government had fixed that which they should render unto Caesar. But what did Jesus mean when He said, "And render unto God the things that are God's?" We are not familiar with what the commentators have had to say as to Jesus' meaning; but we have heard many preachers use this text, and always they have maintained that in the second part of the statement Jesus was talking of spiritual things. They have paraphrased it to the effect: Meet your material obligations to your civil government, and meet your spiritual obligations to your God. But was that what Jesus meant? If so, then by every law of language, He should have used "but" instead of "and." For certainly so marked a transition of thought should have been indicated by a conjunction that indicates contrast. As a matter of fact, is there any transition of thought, or change of subject in the statement?

There is a very striking similarity between this question and the answer Jesus gave to another question and the answer that Jesus gave to that. The other question was, "Which is the great commandment in the law?" Jesus replied, "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy mind. This is the first and great commandment. And the second is like unto it. Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself." But here was an opportunity for argument, and immediately the lawyer raised the question, "And who is my neighbor?"

Now, if the Pharisees had understood Jesus to be talking about spiritual things when He said, "And render unto God the things that are God's," there would have been an opportunity for further questioning and argument. Immediately they could have raised the question, What are the things (spiritual) that are God's. For that was the subject of endless discussions among the Jews. But if Jesus were talking about the same subject concerning which the discussion was started, the question of money, then there was no occasion for further questioning. If they had raised the question, What are the things that are God's, then Jesus could have said, Do you not know the law, that a tenth of all thy substance belongs to God? It is very clear that the Pharisees understood Jesus to be talking of material things when He said, "Render unto God the things that are God's." No other meaning would have silenced them so effectually. Jesus was not accustomed to give answers that were difficult to understand. He did not in this case. His reply was to this effect: Caesar has, by imperial decree, fixed what you owe to him. The coin that you hold in your hand which bears his image and superscription, Caesar has said belongs to him. God, by divine decree, has said that of the wealth you derive from this material world, which bears His image and superscription, one-tenth belongs to Him. Now pay to each—to Caesar and to God—that which they demand of you.

Could any language be more explicit than what Jesus said? Would any other meaning than the one herein stated have silenced the querulous Pharisees? Jesus said I came not to destroy, but to fulfill the law. Could He have been consistent and have done otherwise than to make the law of the tithe the basis of his doctrine of stewardship? Can we be consistent Christians and not render unto God the things which He has so expressly decreed are His?

TWENTY THOUSAND DOLLARS FOR MISSIONS.

The missionary activity and growth of the Christian Church have been marked and marvelous the past seven years. We Christians, during that time, have dared both to hope and to do. We first had the faith to believe we could. We then had the courage to do. Our program was for $125,000 for missions within five years—$25,000 a year for a period of five years. We did this. It gave impetus to the work of our Church in all directions. Pastors began to think in terms of larger and more adequate Church buildings and equipment. Mission points began to think of permanent progress, development. Missionaries began to see enlarged opportunities for increased service and soul-saving at home and abroad. Our colleges, our Orphanage, our publications began to feel the pangs and pains of growth, enlargement, expansion. Our Forward Movement, our Men and Millions' Movement, sprang into being and the whole Church was quickened to newness of life and activity. Where we had been spending hundreds for kingdom growth and expansion, we began to spend thousands, and where the Church enlisted scores for Christ, it began to enlist hundreds.

The history of the Christians for the past seven years spells one word—progress. Now the period and income from our special mission fund are of the past. The five-year period of our Men and Millions' Movement ended April 30th, and though many will yet finish, during the coming year, their pledges to Men and Millions, the income from this source will be limited.

The Mission Board now finds itself encumbered with obligations, and greatly handicapped from lack of resources. And yet we must not, we cannot, stop. We must go forward. We cannot stop building programs already begun. We cannot say to men and women on the mission field at home and abroad, "You must quit, there are no funds."

Our present indebtedness, our embarrassment, are not symbols of weakness or of failure; they are the emblems, signs, tokens of progress and achievement. If we had not started, there would be no need of calling a halt. Having begun, we must continue.

No one in the Christian Church is poorer for what has been given to or done for missions in the past seven years. We are all happier, better, richer in heart, soul, spirit and purse. God helps those who strive to help others.

And now, the board realizes that in order to meet the obligations already entered into, it must have $20,000 for missions this year. This would not be an average of a dollar each for our membership here in the Southern Convention. With $20,000 special offering to missions this year, our board can go on with the program of progress in kingdom enlargement at home and abroad. With less than this, our missionary work, our progress, growth, development in kingdom service and enlargement must be greatly impeded. This is not a large task, but one that will continue a work so worthy, so deserving, and so meaningful to all our interests as a Church.

Shall we not together contribute freely and gladly this $20,000 for missions by December 31st and again see a new impetus given to all our Christian activities and enterprises? God help us to this good end!

OUR NEW PUBLISHING HOUSE DEDICATED.

It was a great day for the Christian Church when, on April 22d, our new publishing house was dedicated in Dayton, Ohio. This is the third house which we have erected and dedicated at our general headquarters, each of the other two having been outgrown, and yet there be pesi simists who insist that we are making no progress.

The new plant is a five-story, modern, fireproof structure, with basement, and is valued at slightly more than $200,000.00. The machinery and stock carried on hand brings the total up to beyond $250,000.00, which does not include the departmental furnishings. These belong to the various boards whose offices are in the building, and represent an investment of several thousand dollars.

Judge O. W. Whitelock presided over the exercises which filled the day and evening. He also made an address. Dr. W. W. Staley, Dr. Alva M. Kerr, Dr. F. G. Coffin, Dr. W. A. Harper, Mr. H. E. Sims, Dr. E. A. Watkins, and Mrs. W. H. Denison each gave addresses. The dedicatory service had been written by Dr. J. F. Burnett and was read by him, the 300 persons present taking part with him in the responses. Dr. W. D. Samuel offered the dedicatory prayer.

The opening devotional services of the three sessions were conducted by Dr. J. N. Dales, Dr. S. Q. Helfenstein, and Rev. John S. Halfacre, respectively. Mrs. M. T. Morrill led the closing devotional period, which made a deep and lasting impression. Rev. E. D. Gilbert led the closing prayer, which concluded a great, good, inspiring day.

Judge Whitelock and Manager John H. Stewart had carried the heavy weight of the building program. To show their associates' appreciation of their services, a basket of beautiful roses was presented to each of them. Rev. C. E. Huff presented the one to Judge Whitelock, and Mr. Hermon Eldredge that to Mr. Stewart. The flowers will perish, but the building they have erected to serve our Church and the kingdom will abide, as will also the fine spirit of appreciation for faithful service faithfully rendered that prompted their friends to remember them with those wreaths of loveliness and fragrance.

The Christian Publishing Association goes forward, whereat we are glad and take courage and indulge a winsome hope for the kingdom's progress.

THE BATTLE OF THE BOOKS.

The movement against the theory of evolution has finally come to a culmination in the State Legislature of Tennessee passing a bill against it being taught in the public schools. It seems that the opposition has been worked toward a position where it could make a demonstration that would attract the attention of the entire world.

Now the fact is registered that evolution is heretical. Perhaps it is "the last of the heritics." The effort has been made to make it appear as the great club of Hercules in the hand of infidelity in a final onslaught upon Christian belief and the integrity of the Holy Scroptures. There are a great many good people who accept this position. They believe that evolution is at variance with the teaching of man's creation, as related in the Bible. They believe, to use the scintillating Damascus blade of Christian eloquence against this enemy is verily doing the will of God. It was a very spectacular moment when the Governor of that eminent State expressed himself in favor of the bill excluding the teaching of evolution in all tax-supported institutions of the State.

He expressed himself in no uncertain terms and commended the legislative body for taking a courageous position. "Nobody will deny," he declared, "that the Bible teaches that man was created by God in His image. This bill is founded in the idea and on the belief that the very integrity of the Bible in its statement of man's divine creation is denied by any theory that man descended or has ascended from any lower order of animals. That such a theory is at variance with the Bible story of man's creation is incapable of successful contradiction."

That is a positive dogmatic statement which will, as far as the Governor and his followers are concerned, sweep the deck and settle the matter forever. However, without taking the role of a prophet, it is our conviction that such action opens a field into endless trouble. How will the authorities be able to enforce that law? Think of carrying it into all the colleges and universities! Think of spotting all the books that contain the theory. Who would take pleasure in watching the steps of the censor as he goes from laboratory to laboratory, class-room to class-room, department to department, and library to library, seeking out every scientific volume, every form of history, every book of poetry, and collecting them to be disposed of by some means in order that the Bible might be preserved?

We do not know how incongruous such a drama, if it could be visualized, would appear, but it seems that some one is unduly exercised by fear lest the Holy Scriptures shall suffer at the hands of other volumes.

Again we witness the battle of books. It is so serious that men must fly into action to protect the Bible? Has it not power to stand alone and to survive in the midst of rising tides of worldly or scientific thought and theory? Let those who have disturbing trepidation remember that God's Word doth not pass away; man's theories appear and disappear; many's speculations appear in the night of his doubt and pass away like the dews on the grass in the morning—but God's Word stands firm. There are none who can pull it down; there are none who can close its lids; there are none who can snuff out its light. The only way it can be discredited is by those who believe in it to succumb to fear of its ultimate survival.

Men are prone to take the theory of evolution too seriously. It is not a bugaboo; it is not a Goliath stalking the fields against Israel; it is not a Hercules with power to subdue a city and to destroy the forces of the armies of an alien. Evolution is but a theory.

Now, a theory is something strange and wonderful. It remains such until facts are gathered from every source to prove it beyond doubt or question. The leading scientists today declare that it has not been proven, that it is nothing more than a key which they have been trying to insert in the lock of the mystery of the origin of the universe. They think that it is the best explanation of all things that are, but they have no proof.

Moreover, a theory can be used by faith as well as doubt. If in the course of our intellectual travels, doubt and faith, going in the same direction, find the same theory, why not both of them try it upon the great complex of the universe? Can faith handle the theory of evolution? Can the believer stand and look at the universe of God and all creation through the eyes of evolution, and discover how God created all that is? Evolution, as we understand it, is the theory of how things came into being, how they were made. In the hands of the believer at once this theory does not become a boomerang, but a great spear of truth that may be wielded upon the head of doubt and even not broken when tested over the hard brow of agnosticism.

Furthermore, the basic implication of the theory of evolution is that if an intelligent being is able to trace the unfolding or the evolvement of system, of form from stage to stage, that it must have been some original intelligence which incorporated its thought in some form through which and out of which it was to be evolved.

Therefore, if the believer accepts the theory of evolution and desires to use it in understanding God's creation, he does not begin with a material thought or seek to trace all that is back to nothing, or to an original material beginning. It is easy for him to identify that which started a universe and a creation that is intelligible to an intelligent being from the hands of an intelligent Source which we call God. Materialistic evolution does not and never will explain creation.

Our advice is not to take the theory of evolution too seriously, for in the end we may find ourselves fighting a straw man. If we get a proper understanding of the theory we shall save ourselves from much disturbing concern. In the hands of a believer we shall suffer nothing from it. It will give us large opportunity to understand God's creation.

However, it should be stated that those who pass a law prohibiting its teaching in the public schools or elsewhere are approaching the problem from the wrong point of view. They are first creating for themselves an endless task and incomparable trouble. They are doing violence to the spirit of democratic education. One of two things will happen to the law passed in Tennessee. It will remain inoperative or it will be annulled. It is one of those laws that cannot be enforced without doing extensive harm. If placed in operation, it would disconnect the State from the educational system of the nation and work the alienation and the discrediting of all who receive scientific training at the hands of the educational institutions of that Commonwealth.—Western Christian Advocate.

The Church paper is for the Church—is the Church for the Church paper?

To say that Christianity is not a belief, but a life, is to go back to Roman Catholic doctrine before the Protestant Reformation. It is to assert that men are justified by their good works, by the deeds of the law. It was over this very question that the Church became divided into Protestant and Catholic. Luther, Zwingli and Calvin all emphasized justification by faith and salvation by grace as the cardinal and regulative principles in the Christian religion. Thus the modernists, in belittling belief or faith, and putting life or works in the primary place as the ground of justification, are harking back to Roman Catholicism before the Reformation, and are de-Protestantizing themselves. The true Reformation doctrine is that faith in Christ comes first, and is the primary essential of salvation, while a good Christian life is the result of justifying faith.

Sometimes a big word must be used, because it is an expressive word, and is needed to set forth a big thought. The Christian religion is architectonic. That means that that is of large architectural dimensions, and has been well planned, having had from eternity all the specifications, finite and infinite. There is nothing small and narrow about the Christian system. It "is profitable unto all things, having promise of the life that now is, and of that which is to come." This description implies dimensions of vast extent—as long, deep and high as infinity. It also connotes perdurance that will last throughout eternity. Compare the bigness of the Christian system with that of materialism, which says that death ends all—that the finis of every human life is only a winding-sheet and a grave. Which system will you choose?

The saying, rather popular in some liberal circles, that "it makes no difference what you believe, just so you live right," seems to be characterized by an element of equivocation. It does not seem to be quite "on the square." We will explain. If a man has a belief, but does not live in accord with it, does that seem to be quite honest? Just think it over and think it through. Ought not one's inner convictions and one's outer life to agree?

SUFFOLK LETTER.

Love is the greatest power in the world. "Love is of God." "Love is strong as death." "Many waters cannot quench love." "Love worketh no ill to his neighbor." "Love is the fulfilling of the law." "There is no fear in love." What the human race needs is love.

There can be no war when love reigns. Love is not a passing emotion; it is a divine passion, for "God is love." No sacrifice is too great for love. No service is too great for love. The heart is not only the power in the body, forcing energy through the whole being in streams of blood; but it is the dynamo of all spiritual forces that surge through the soul. It is more than life. Jesus gave His life because He loved sinners. "Love covereth all sins." It digs a grave, buries all evils, and covers the grave with flowers that never fade. Even love of country makes the patriot die willingly on the field of battle.

Love makes home and keeps alive the fire on the altar of family life. Here is the secret of mother's sacrifice for her child. Even the simplest mother in the simplest home has all the inherent characteristics of genuine love. Sleepless nights, daily toil, constant anxiety, secret prayer, tell the story of the heart, and indicate the care and hope for the child. The child's waywardness in after years cannot destroy maternal love. The father does not have the same opportunity to express his love, but it joins mother's heart in all the trials, in all the anxieties, in all the prayers that rise to the throne of the God of love; for where love reigns, all that can be done is done for those beloved. Self-denial is characteristic of love.

This principle of love has wide range in human affairs. If members of the Church really love God and His cause, they will give willingly, gladly, and liberally. Real Christian love would solve all the financial problems of the Church. It would care for local expenses, local improvements, colleges, orphanages, papers and missions. Even if a young man loves a young woman, she does not have to ask him for flowers, an outing, or anything that love suggests. It would embarrass her to ask for such things. The greatest embarrassment to the Church of Jesus Christ is that it is under the necessity of asking members for money to carry on its work. It is a sad commentary on the spiritual life of the Church. What the Church needs today is not a campaign or drive for money, but a revival of love in the members of the Church. Family life that is constantly making up, taking new starts, can never be the family life that makes a real home. Pardons and agreements can never substitute for love. Jesus laid down His life for sinners, and if He had not, He would have failed, and sinners would have been lost. His cause will go the same way as we consecrate all to Him or neglect to do what love requires. "The silver is mine, the gold is mine, and the cattle upon a thousand hills." "The earth is the Lord's and the fullness thereof, the world and they that dwell therein"; and God and His Church are entitled to our support of His Church as well as of our love.

ELON LETTER.

Everybody is commenting on our campus these days. A beautiful wall surrounds it. There are three entrances for vehicles and seven for pedestrians, all with artistic iron gates. Concrete walks connect all the buildings and extend to all the entrances. The driveways have concrete curb and gutter, and are covered with crushed granite. About thirty-five hundred dollars in shrubs and flowering plants have been landscaped over the campus, while the campus itself has been graded, prepared for grass seed, and seeded complete with more than a ton of grass seed. The campus squirrels have peanuts to eat. Two New Hampshire maples have been planted to commemorate Elon boys who fell in the World War.

How has all this been done?

The iron gates and entrances have been donated by the general contractor, Bro. J. W. Stout. The crushed granite for the driveways—eleven carloads of it—was donated by the Raleigh Granite Company, Raleigh, N. C., though we never spent a penny with them for anything. The same is true with reference to the J. Van Lindley Company, of Greensboro, who not only donated the shrubbery, but had their landscape gardner furnish the planting plans and their experts to do the planting, all without cost to us. Bros. A. T. Holland and John King sent peanuts for the campus squirrels. They would have been forced to leave otherwise, since all their food was plowed into the grounds. Chaplain B. F. Black gave the New Hampshire maples in loving memory of our Elon martyrs. He later expects to place a bronze tablet also in their memory.

But I must give special praise to Bro. Chas. D. Johnston, one of the busiest men in our brotherhood, but whose devotion to the college is unstinted. He has graded, prepared, and seeded the campus and has done it with his characteristic thoroughness and efficiency. He has done a piece of work that will mean here, in a few years, one of the beauty spots of the South. Not only did he give his time, but he labored himself constantly. At chapel on Good Friday the students expressed their gratitude to him. He replied to their ovation by saying he was glad to have helped make their home beautiful for them, and that the only compensation he desired was that they should keep it that way. There was every evidence in the spontaneousness of their response to indicate that they mean to pay him well in the coin of preservation which he suggested. The college is under lasting obligation to this great orphanage superintendent and Christian brother.

Elon hopes, with good seasons, to have herself robed in green and trimmed in the colors of the rainbow when the friends, patrons, alumni, and trustees foregather here for the approaching commencement may 23-26. W. A. Harper.

WALKING WITH JESUS.

What a wonderful lesson has been given us in that walk and talk of the two disciples on their way to Emmaus, that same day that our crucified Lord arose from the dead! The Word tells us that as they walked and talked about the things which had happened, Jesus Himself drew near and went with them. How like Him to draw near to those who are burdened in body or mind! And how like His disciples even to this day to have their minds so taken up with other things that they do not realize His presence!

Our Lord will always draw near—oh! so very, very near—as we journey through life if we let Him. He will go with us all the way, making the way smoother and the burden lighter, if we will let Him do so. He will abide with us if we will but invite Him in as did those two disciples. But we must abide in Him and His words abide in us if we hope to have His abiding presence. Always remember, "abide means moving in to stay." It is not coming and going, first here then there, but staying on and on.

So you see, if we want Jesus to go with us on the way, if we want Him to abide with us, it may be necessary to make some changes in our lives. The business man or woman may have to change their weights and measures, and they may also have to place a better quality of goods upon their shelves. The home-maker may have to put some things out of the home that are in there now. The worldly amusements must go if we have Jesus with us. You ask why? Because the laid-down rule in God's sacred Word is "everything by prayer," and prayer, communion with God in the name of Jesus Christ our Lord, will not mix with bridge parties and dances. Those who open their doors to such things, shut Jesus out. We are in the world, but His followers are not of the world. They sit together in heavenly places, and their conversation is in heaven. Can the world give anything so good, so enjoyable as that?

Jesus talked with those disciples as He walked with them, and there was just one word of rebuke for them in His talk. That was for ignorance of the Scriptures, and for failing to believe all the Scriptures. I wonder if some of us would not receive the same rebuke from Him today! Failing to search the Scriptures, that we may know how to rightly divide the word of truth, believing what we like, rejecting what we do not want. He is the same yesterday, today and forever. What He rebuked then He would condemn now. What He approved then He would approve now. And we are told to study to show ourselves approved.

Those disciples said, "Did not our heart burn within us while He talked with us by the way, and while He opened to us the Scriptures!" If we will but let the Holy Spirit, whom He sent to be our guide, our comforter and our teacher, open up the Scriptures to us, so that He may talk with us through them as He walks with us, we too will know what it is to have our hearts burn within us. Those who study and believe are transformed so they love the things once hated, and hate the things they once loved. Oh, that all might give Him first place in their lives, and let our risen Lord walk with them, and talk with them, and abide with them until they go to be with Him forevermore. Minnie Lohr.

A GREAT REVIVAL.

A series of revival services began at Elm Avenue Christian Church Easter Sunday, April 12th, and came to a close Sunday, April 26th, at the evening hour. The pastor, Rev. V. T. Crawford, was ably assisted by Rev. John G. Truitt, pastor of the First Christian Church, Berkley, who did the preaching. Bro. Truitt brought strong messages to the people at Elm Avenue, which were not only directed to the needs of the unsaved, but also to the Church members. Bro. Truitt was unable to spend all of his time during the series of meetings with the people of Elm Avenue on account of the demands made upon his time by his own pastoral work, but found it necessary to stay at his own home in Berkley and come over for the services in the evenings. This demanded some sacrifice on his part, but he was always on hand, ready for the beginning of the services, and to give of his best to the work which he was doing.

Our brethren of the Methodist and Baptist Churches of the community manifested a splendid spirit of Christian co-operation and fellowship, and favored us not only with their presence, but gave us the benefit of their best musical talent in the service of song. Our people are very proud of this splendid spirit of fellowship on the part of the other Churches, many of whose members seemed to get just as much benefit from the services as did the people of our own Church. There was an excellent attendance at these services by the people of the community in general.

During the series of meetings, six new members were received, and quite a large number of people promised to do more definite and effective Christian work. The persons who were received during this meeting bring the total number of new members received this year up to almost sixty. We trust that the influence of the meeting will go with the people who attended it and will not only enrich their own spiritual lives, but will enable them to be of active service to the many who need the contact of people who are alive for Christ, for the harvest indeed is plenteous but the laborers are few.

Through this medium we wish to again thank Bro. Truitt for his assistance during these services. CORRESPONDENT.

TWELVE INTERNATIONAL MOVEMENTS.

By Rev. R. F. Brown, M. A.

VIII. WEEK-DAY RELIGIOUS EDUCATION—WHAT AND WHY?

Aside from evangelization, religious education is the greatest movement to which the Church can subscribe. It is as glorious as it is great.

Week-day religious education is a new gesture in education. While the movement is new, there is no dearth of ideas and theories concerning it. But it is evident that in spite of all the new ideas, theories and advances, we have not arrived at a point where we can truthfully say we have reached a settled science religious education. One has only to review recent history to learn that ideas, theories, and practices have been accepted and followed for a while, only to be rejected and cast aside for other new and seemingly more promising prospects. Transition and change have been the order of religious education from its very beginning, and even today we are far from any fixed conclusions in this important field.

Old things have passed away, and the new day in which we live makes it imperative that we approached this problem from a new angle. So far from effective have been the efforts of the Sunday School and Church in religious education that we feel that a new step must be taken. This new step we are pleased to call week-day religious education. The purpose of this new movement is to give religious instruction during the week. There is no intention of supplanting the Church and Sunday School, but there is a deep-seated desire to augment these agencies in this important work. In fact, this work is sponsored by the Church—not the school board, or some outside agency. It is the Church at work during the week. We have new thoughts, new gestures, new efforts in our governmental, social, commercial, and political life; then why not add and subtract, discard and experiment some in religious education? The Church deserves great credit for the important work it has done in religious education. It has always delivered its message and blazed the way for civilization. The Church alone must have credit for the religious education the people of the world have received. The world knows this. On the other hand, the world knows, and the Church knows, that only by new ideals, new thoughts, and new methods of approach, can the Church continue to blaze the way for civilization and the more hopeful things of the future. Only by forgetting its creedal tests, casting aside its painful definitions, and uniting its forces can the Church complete the superstructure of religious education which it has so gloriously begun. Only the rising temple of religious education will be able in this psychological age to strike a balance between the mind and the soul.

All along, religious education has been thought of as the superb effort of the Church and the adult members of society to shape and fashion the ideals and lives of the younger generation in keeping with the standards of thought and ideals fixed by Christ. But the changing interpretations of these ideals by the Church have necessitated many changes in method and standard. The Church has seen the handwriting on the wall, and it knows that it must change its system in order to adapt itself to the new criterions. Hence, the present-day movement of week-day religious education.

Now, in this effort, as in the former efforts of the Church, there is the desire to bring out of the life the very best which God has put into human life. We do this with all material matter. We do this with vegetables and animals. Why not do it with our boys and girls?

We must confess with shame that some of our boys and girls are little more than animals because the best that God put into them is still there, and it is undiscovered by them and undeveloped by the Church. The greatest crime charged to the modern Church and this materialistic age is the spiritual neglect of childhood and youth. Too often the emphasis has been placed on the mental processes to the neglect of the spiritual nature of the child. Fundamentally, the child is just as spiritually awake as he is mentally alert. The two Chicago youths might have been ministers instead of murderers. The force that makes the difference was the type of education. Education without Christ always ends in chaos. Education without Christianity is closely related to paganism. Such an education is successful in producing a fine crop of consumers, commercial parisites, and murderers. It has filled our jails and penitentiaries with the lowest type of criminals. Judge Lindsey said recently that he did not remember having a boy before him charged with crime who had attended Sunday School until he was fourteen years old. This is a timely tribute to the work of the Church. What would be the results if the Church could go into the week-day schools and develop the spiritual life of the child while the State is developing the mental life? A New York judge said recently that 85 per cent of the crimes committed today are committed by boys under 21 years of age and girls under 18.

But what is our hope? What may we expect when we give so little attention to the religious education of our boys and girls? Are we not suffering the consequences of our own neglect? The Protestant system of religious education has been wrong, or rather inadequate. Our system of religious education does not compare with the Catholics or the Jews. The Catholic child receives 200 hours of religious instruction each year. The Jewish child receives 335 hours of religious instruction each year. The Protestant child receives about 12 hours of poorly supervised and inadequately presented religious instruction each year. From the lives of our children we will reap just as we sow—no more, no less.

Religious education enables the child to see things just as Christ saw them. In their religious education they are brought to a high elevation where they can have a finer, a more sensible view of life and the world. Only Christian education can accomplish the miracle of an international thought-life. Breadth of thought can hardly be reckoned as a distinguishing trait among men and nations. So long as this condition obtains, we may expect suspicion among men and nations. International thought sounds the death knell for international disputes. We have no feeling of common brotherhood because we have not taught it in schools and colleges. This is left for the Church. Has the Church been faithful to its trust? Conditions make necessary a negative answer. What has the Church done to adequately direct the thought-life of the child? The Churches of this nation spend twice as much for janitors as they spend for the religious education of the children. Even the smallest luxury claims far more of the money of the Church people than does the cause of religious education.

But we can see the dawning of a new day for religious education. The Church has discovered its failure in the religious education of its youths, and it has set about the task with new zeal. There are many communities now where the Church is open seven days in the week. A capable person is employed by the Church to give instruction to the children of the Church and community. The bill is paid by the Church. And that is just as it should be. There are still other communities that employ a full-time Bible teacher and by permission of the local school board place this Bible teacher in the public school-room and she gives the school children religious instruction. In this case, the bill is paid by the Church or Churches. According to the testimony of experienced teachers, this method is the more satisfactory for several reasons. But the fact that the instruction is given in the public school-room does not indicate that the religious training of the children is turned over to the school superintendent or teachers in the school. They have absolutely nothing to do with it. The Church people secure permission from the school board to give this Bible instruction in the school, the superintendent arranges the schedule in co-operation with the Bible teacher, and the Bible teacher gives the lessons independent of either the superintendent or the teachers. And this effort is not lacking in splendid results. The Church feels that it is headed the right way. In this way, the Church reaches many pupils who have never received religious instruction before.

The world has suffered, and is suffering, from lack of this type of education. The type of education that is given in the majority of the schools of today is clothed in a robe of misconception, and the world has boiled and stewed in the juice emanating therefrom. The progress of civilization has been set back many decades because the education given our youth is or has been stripped of all spiritual aspects. Over and over again has the Church stood by and witnessed the world's convulsions as a result of the overdose of mental training to the exclusion of soul-culture. Spiritual values are the only permanent values. Only spiritual values can spare future generations the tragic failures which have marked the history of the human race. Harry Emerson Fosdick said recently, "Unless we give attention to the supremacy of spiritual forces, the pallbearers that have carried out other dead civilizations wait at our door." More and more the Church is recognizing this fact, and more and more is the Church meeting the challenge of our times. And in this movement, as in all other worthy movements, the Church will not stop until it claims for Christ the victory and wins for Him the crown.

WEEK-DAY SCHOOL.

The first commencement of the week-day religious school, conducted in the Mooney Christian Education Building, Elon College, as the laboratory work for the Department of Christian Education, was held in the Whitley Auditorium on Wednesday evening, April 29th, with Prof. S. A. Bennett, director, in charge of the program. Each of the five departments of the closely graded school gave its appropriate part of the program. The beginners, or kindergarten, came first, with Mrs. S. A. Bennett as superintendent. They were followed by the primary department, with Mrs. W. A. Harper as superintendent. Then came the junior department, with Miss Ethel M. Hill as superintendent. The intermediate department for the twelve, thirteen and fourteen-year-old pupils then gave its numbers, with Miss Freda E. Summers as superintendent, and the program was concluded by the part rendered by the senior department, Mr. F. D. Ballard, superintendent.

Prof. Bennett stated in his introductory remarks that this was the first commencement of its kind, so far as he could ascertain, ever held on a college campus, and he also expressed the conviction that the denominational college whose chief reason for being is to furnish definite Christian training for laymen and ministers alike would, in the next generation, feel itself untrue to its great obligation unless it should maintain, in connection with its department of Christian education, such a laboratory as the Elon week-day religious school has come to be. This laboratory stration school in religious work in which the children of the village are taught religion under supervision by college students of the department of Christian education. The building, Prof. Bennett explained, is the gift of Mr. and Mrs. M. Orban, Jr., of Whittier, Calif., in memory of Rev. Isaac Mooney, the father of Mrs. Orban, and a great pioneer leader in the work of Christian education in the Christian Church, and Prof. Bennett gave also interesting statistics in regard to the week-day religious school. It had enrolled by departments as follows: beginners, or kindergarten, 36; primary, 94; junior, 88; intermediate, 34, and senior, 38—a total of 290. He also stated that there were, in addition to the five superintendents and the director, fifty on the teaching and administrative staff of the week-day school, and, what was more surprising than any other statement he made, he assured the great audience that greeted his first commencement that the average attendance throughout the year had been slightly more than 95 per cent, which he argued proved that when religious subjects are properly taught, the attendance will take care of itself.

The Mooney Christian Education Building will be used during the summer term of the school of Christian methods maintained by the Christian Church for the daily vacation Bible school. It is also used on Sunday by the community as its graded Sunday School building, while during the college term during the week, the week-day school of religion, of which Prof. Bennett is director, meets there.

The people of the community have been most heartily pleased with the results of Prof. Bennett's work, and the college students are equally appreciative of the opportunity they have in this great Christian education plant to learn in a practical way the best and most approved methods of religious teaching, administration, and practice.

HAPPY MISSIONARY WORKERS.

(Address delivered by Mrs. J. E. Cartwright at the Norfolk District Rally, September 3, 1924, and published by request.)

You will all agree that you will find no happier body of women than we who are interested in mission work. Our spring rallies have become a real educational factor in the year's work.

Some one has said, it isn't the water that has gone over the dam which will help you now; it's the water behind the dam. So I shall not dwell on what we have accomplished in the past, but rather glimpse at our future possibilities as we meet conditions. If we should judge our work along the lines of new organizations, we would be considered a failure. Our first meeting was held at Rosemont Church five years ago, and it was there Miss Midyet felt the call to our mountain work, and where, later, she rendered such splendid service. Elm Avenue wanted us next, and before we went there a woman's society was organized. The speakers who have been coming to us have had messages which were inspiring and educational and a challenge to those of us who heard them. These rallies have done much in creating leaders. That is a good work in itself. You might testify as to what these meetings have meant in your society, your Church and your home. (Let me offer this suggestion as to leaders. Your society may be small, but if you will divide it into two or more groups, and have a leader for each group, you will get more of your women in active service.) I feel that I may speak for the societies which have stood by. We are more efficient in our work; would that we were more loyal! We better understand the meaning of God's "Go, ye, into all the world," and are willing to give ourselves in His service. We know the missionary challenge is greater now than ever, and any Church failing to line up and co-operate in our plans for kingdom work is missing its greatest opportunity. A man was asked for a slogan for our work. This is the up-to-date one given: "For your work the coming pear, plan and pray, and persevere; do not let the moments pass."

"Fill the tank with high-test gas and step on it." Now, you officers and leaders have planned your societies' work and are hoping for a successful year. Then you mean to work your plans out in prayer, send them out winged with prayer, and as you carry them out the same way you will realize you have had divine help, and victory will be yours. Every step in the progress of missions is traceable to prayer, and yet in many of our societies it is our weakest spot. Our missionaries tell us they know and feel when we are praying for them. "According to your faith be it unto you" is the measure of opportunity in intercession. If we prayed in faith believing, what measure of advance would it mean in our missionary work? We would not ask for volunteers to go or money to send them. What our work needs today is not more novel methods to attract, but more men and women whom God can use. Our women's board has worked out a standard of excellence, a goal to reach; it should not be hard for any society to make the required points, and if you try and fail you would have gained more than you lose. Our financial goal is a bit larger than last year—you would not have it otherwise. We have an advance program; we are in the fight. We must prove ourselves good soldiers, not slackers. Our board faces retrenchment in the work, unless we give just more than we can spare. It must be self-denial for Christ's sake. We are all stewards of His, and tithing is the foundation of good stewardship. If we would tithe our time and substance, our missionary board will be relieved of financial embarrassment. Unless we do all we can, it will not be a question of what will become of the heathen, but what will become of us. God says, "Go, ye," and then the promise, "Lo, I am with you always." Can't we make God more real in our lives? Can't we take Him at His word? With territories given over to us as a denomination for which we are responsible, lives to fill or they perish, dare we take a backward step, in the face of such possibilities? Ten Churches in this district, with four—Old Zion, Ocean View, South Norfolk and Berea, Norfolk—not organized. They may contribute to missions, but they are not co-operating. "In union there is strength." You can readily see what we are losing, what these good people are missing, and the cause suffers. Here is the place for a substantial increase. Some of these Churches want to organize, but have no leader. Brother Pastor, you may be a busy man, but this is a job for you. Be their leader until you can find one. The young people want definite missionary work. Just to organize them and let them know their dues are 10 cents per month and they are responsible for a home and foreign special is not enough to hold or interest them. We must create an interest by giving them information, getting them to take a part. Make your programs attractive, every part well prepared. If you had a part on your club's program, you would give your best. Would you do less for a missionary program? Women and young folks are willing to do whatever their pastor expects of them. A Church without a missionary organization will sooner or later face a period in its history when it will not be missionary. You may open your Sunday School with a fifteen-minute missionary program once each month—that's fine. You may have a Church school of missions—that's fine. You may take a missionary collection at stated times, but these do not make your Church dependable when it comes to the board's plans and program. We must build for the future. Missions is at the core of our religion. It is no by-product. What we Church members need is more love in the heart, more of Christ. "Study to show thyself approved." It is the lack of knowledge that is one great cause for our lack of interest. We are afraid to become informed, afraid we will have to give up something. The girls and women of India and Japan almost put us to shame. They have so little religious literature and are just begging for more; and we, in this land of opportunity, overflowing with such a wonderful lot of clean, wholesome matter—leaflets carrying wonderful messages, our Christian Missionary with the best, up-to-date information of our own work. The children's magazine, Everyland, which no home should be without; then THE CHRISTIAN SUN, and the Herald of Gospel Liberty, and the Missionary Review of the World, Church papers. Then our study books have been selected with the greatest amount of care and forethought. "Of One Blood," "Ming Quong," are the finest for the casual reader or student we have ever had. If you missed hearing the "Home Book" taught at the Berkley Church by Mr. Truitt and Mr. Hardcastle, you missed the finest opportunity of understanding our race problems. These men are teachers. Many of us will never feel the same towards the negro race. Knowledge is the key to interest. The Lord said, "Lift up your eyes and look on the fields." We cannot see the needs of the world if we do not know them.

Are we, as Churches, doing anything in a special way to create leaders? Our young people are demanding the best; we must have trained leaders, or we fail them. We have our summer schools. Our own Elon is inexpensive and near-by. Every Church in the Conference should see to it that our boys and girls have the opportunity to attend some school of missions. It will change their viewpoint and bring back to our Churches and organizations new ideas, new methods. They will surely give out more than it cost; 500 for Elon this summer, if we do our part. Let your societies make much of special days—Easter, Thanksgiving, Christmas; have an officers' day, and let the officers arrange the program or a reunion tea. We all love to talk over the tea cups. Let us work out what God has worked in us. Let us face about, join the construction gang, in the character building of our boys and girls. It is the religious duty (I like that word "duty") of every pastor, superintendent and leader to make the whole Church missionary. Let us go a bit further—what are we parents doing in the home? We are willing to make any sacrifice for our children's physical and mental training, but their spiritual training is scarcely considered. We are not giving them a square deal when we send them out half-trained. Let us give that stimulus to noble thinking and courageous living which is justly due them. If we want our boys and girls to have the missionary vision, if we want them less selfish, the home is the best training school—we have the chance to make them what we want them to be. I beg that you give them good, clean religious literature. They will read something, and you know the old saying, "Tell me what a boy reads and I will tell you what kind of a boy he is." Our boys and girls are reading us. How important that we live the Christ way. Talk missions in the home as you talk about what is on the front page of the daily paper. Let us learn to talk naturally about things of the kingdom. Before closing my talk, I must present the Christian Missionary. I am sure it is but fair to tell you we want this magazine in every home represented in your societies. If you enjoy it, if it has been a means of help to you, you want others to enjoy it. The small sum of 50 cents pays for the twelve visits it will make to your home during the year, and then, too, what a fine lot of Christian men and women you may add to your list of acquaintances.

Are you trying to help save the Church, or do you expect the Church to save you? Did God give Adam anything to do?

BEREA CHURCH.

Whereas, the Prichett family, members of Berea Christian Church, have been loyal and faithful to the Church in the past and generous in their support and liberal in their contributions, untiring in their efforts to promote the interest of the Church; and whereas, these friends have recently purchased and donated a strip of land in front of the Church connecting the Church property with the public highway, thereby contributing to the convenience and service of the congregation—be it resolved:

First, That we express our sincere thanks and appreciation to the family for this generous token of their interest in and love for the work as well as for their many services and kindness in the past.

Second, That a copy of this letter be mailed to each member of the family.

Third, That it be entered upon the minutes of the Church, and that a copy be mailed THE CHRISTIAN SUN for publication.

L. D. KERNODLE,
B. M. BENNETT,
J. V. SIMPSON,
Committee.

In behalf of Berea Christian Church, we wish to thank Bro. John Tobias Kernodle for his love to the Church, which has been manifested in giving the Church a lot adjoining the cemetery, thereby connecting the Church property to the public highway. Previous to this generous gift, he gave the building sight for the Church; also a lot for the cemetery.

It is our wish that a letter of thanks be mailed to Bro. Kernodle, it be entered upon the minutes of the Church record, and a copy be mailed to THE CHRISTIAN SUN for publication.

An Irish barrister spoke on behalf of his client, whose cow had been killed by a train. "If the train had been run as it should have been ran, or if the bell had been rung as it should have been rang, or if the whistle had been blown as it should have been blew, both of which they did neither, the cow would not have been injured when she was killed."

RELIGIOUS EDUCATION

MISS PATTIE COGHILL, Field Secretary, 11 East Newton St., Boston, Mass.

INTERNATIONAL UNIFORM SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON.

May 17, 1925.

Subject: "Saul Becomes a Christian."

Golden Text: "If any man is in Christ Jesus, he is a new creature."—2 Cor. 5:17.

Lesson: Acts 9:1-19.

Devotional Reading: Psa. 32:1-7.

Reference Material: Acts 22:1-21, 26:1-32.

Paul believed the gospel of Christ was power. In fact, writing to Rome, the embodiment of power, Paul said that he was not ashamed of the gospel of Christ, for it was the power of God unto salvation—a power that actually transformed; that made a man a new creature.

It seems to me that this faith of Paul in the gospel was not so much a matter of a carefully thought-out process of theological ideas, as it was a conviction born of experience. It is true, of course, that Paul had a reason for the faith that was in him and few men have surpassed him in constructing a system of theology. But if we follow Paul closely we will find that everything he said and did was rooted in a unique and convincing experience of a personal contact with Jesus Christ. Paul believed that Christ could make all things new because Christ had made him new. That meeting on the road to Damascus had begun a process that worked such a far-reaching change in Paul's life that he could account for it in no other way than to say that he was a new man.

Paul was exceedingly mad against those of the "way," as the Christians were called. (It might be remarked in passing that there was something so striking about the daily walk of these early followers of Christ that they were called of the "way." By their fruits ye shall know them. The reality of our Christian experience is reflected in our way of life.) He was so mad that when he had done his worst in Jerusalem he looked for other fields of conquest. As Henry Drummond said, he would go into all the world and "suppress the gospel in every creature." And, armed with letters from the high priest at Jerusalem, he was on his way to Damascus to get both men and women to bring them back to Jerusalem, as he himself says, "to be punished."

"As he journeyed," he met Christ. There are a few minor differences in the three accounts given of Paul's conversion, but they all agree in the great central fact—Paul met the living and glorified Christ in a personal way. On that highway, at noonday, Paul had an experience that started him on a career in Christian service that has had no parallel in the history of the Christian Church. "What wilt Thou have me do?" It was more than a qquestion; it was a state of mind. And the spirit of obedience to know the will of God sent Paul trudging over desert sands, sent him climbing mountains, sailing the seas, always with a burning heart and a mastering passion for men. Paul learned very soon what he had to do to be saved. He immediately tried to learn what he had been saved to do.

The human factor entered in. God's Spirit alone can convert men. But men can help in the process. And an humble man, Ananias by name, led Paul into the larger light of Christian experience. The Church so often fails here. Emphasis is placed on bringing men to Christ, and it cannot be overemphasized. But men must be built up in Christ, and evangelistic work that does not result in constructive training in Church membership and Church service often leaves men in a worse state than at the first.

"Scales, as it were, fell from his eyes." The natural man receiveth not the things of the spirit of God; nor indeed can he. But He who touched the eyes of the blind and gave them sight can open our eyes to spiritual truth. And it was because Paul had not been disobedient to the heavenly vision that he rendered such outstanding and abiding service and that he was signally honored of God. Here was a man who did the will of God. And because he did it, he abideth forever.

Teaching Points.

1. Those who start out on high-handed careers are often humbled by a gracious God.
2. Christians are to be tested in the final analysis by their way of life rather than by their theological beliefs.
3. Jesus Christ identifies Himself with His people. In persecuting Christians, Paul was persecuting Christ.
4. Conversion is vital, but it is but the beginning.
5. He that doeth truth cometh to the light.
6. God deals with men in a personal way.
7. Salvation involves divine and human elements.
8. Prayer is important always, but especially at the beginning of the Christian life.
9. Christ transforms men.

Have you added members to help you carry burdens, or are they so much extra dead weight to the Church?

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

May 17, 1925.

Topic: "How to Make the Most of Summer."

Scripture References: Mark 6:31-32; Rom. 13:11-14.

Worship Service: "Day is Dying in the West."

Song: "This is My Father's World."

Repeat in unison Psalm 100.

Prayer: Dear Father, Maker of the heaven and earth, we joyfully praise Thee and give thanks to Thee for Thy goodness and mercy. We thank Thee for spring with all its beauties of land and sea and help us to use it to Thy glory. As everything in nature around us takes on new life and renewed strength, help us to reconsecrate our lives to Thee and renew our faith. Fill us with a greater desire to serve Thee. May we bring joy and happiness to those around us and help us to live such lives that others may see our good works and be led to a closer fellowship with Thee. In the name of our Saviour who gave His life for us, we ask these blessings. Amen. (Follow with sentence prayers.)

Song: "America," or "America, the Beautiful."

Some one read—

"The summer days are come again,
The birds are on the wing;
God's praises, in their loving strains,
Unconsciously they sing,
We know who giveth all the good
That doth our cup o'er brim,
And every cloud his blessings break
In sunshine or in shower."

—Newman.

Song: "The King of Love My Shepherd Is," or "There's a Wideness in God's Mercy."

Plans for the Meeting.

Announce the meeting by a poster with some pictures for summer. (The pictures may be summer scenes cut from a magazine or snap-shots of some members of your Church taken on a picnic.) At the top of the poster write: "Summer is coming; what can it mean to us?" Under the pictures write this poem by Henry Van Dyke:

"Thou who hast made thy dwelling fair
With flowers beneath, above the starry lights,
And set Thine altars every where—
To Thee I turn, to Thee I make my prayer,
God of the open air."

At the bottom, write the time of the meeting and the leader. If warm enough, the meeting could well be held outdoors.

Suggestions for the Leader's Talk.

The leader may well leave the general discussion of the topic to the members and make her own talk one about the Chautauqua and Summer School of Methods at Elon or Bethlehem (the nearest one to you). The Elon dates this summer are July 27th to August 5th. The time was extended to ten days because one week seemed too short to get in all the work, and so many people asked that it be extended this year. The Bethlehem dates are August 10th to 17th. Mr. Hermon Eldredge will teach the course called "The Pupil" at both places. It is one of the most interesting of the international credit courses, and with Mr. Eldredge as teacher will be a wonderful opportunity for our young people. Mr. Eldredge and Dr. Dennison will also hold personal conferences in the afternoons for those who want to talk with them about their own work or about their lives. The young people will conduct their own worship services each morning, part of the time on the campus and part of the time in the buildings. There will also be courses in Christian Endeavor at both places, and Bible, missionary and other work, and the afternoons will be given over to recreation. The young people will have their own organization, with officers to promote the young people's work throughout the Conferences in the future.

Each Christian Endeavor should have at least one representative and as many more as possible. Now is the time to begin saving money toward sending a representative.

The S. S. and C. E. Conventions.

Do we realize that about as much time is spent on young people's work in the Sunday School and Christian Endeavor Conventions which are held each summer as any other part of the program. If so much time is spent in preparing an interesting program for our young people, they should take advantage of the opportunity. The program gives time to the discussion of Christian Endeavor work and young people's work in the Sunday School.

Summer for Rest.

We need to take at least a part of the summer for rest, not only because we need it physically, but because our minds need a rest. If we don't take some time to rest up and begin again, we are apt to become stale in our thinking. If possible, our rest should be a complete change from the things we have been doing. So many people have a false idea of a vacation as they think it must be spent in sitting up late, eating irregularly, and in other forms of dissipation. It might be well for people who live in the country to take a trip to the city for a vacation, and for city

Christian Orphanage

ORPHANAGE— ....

Dear Friends:

At the time of the writing of this letter, our special Easter offering has reached the sum of $1,411.99. The offerings are just beginning to come in, and we are hoping and praying that all our Churches will make this special Easter offering this year. With one hundred and twelve children to feed, clothe and care for, it is wonderfully encouraging to us to have the loyal support of each and every Church. The children in the Christian Orphanage should not be, and are not, a burden on our Church. It should be a joy to our people to give in the Master's name to help support them. They are an asset to our Church now, and will be a greater asset as the years go by when they go out one by one to be a blessing to the community in which they reside. Some of these days when you are sick and one of our girls who has completed her course as a trained nurse comes to your bedside to tenderly and lovingly nurse you back to health, you will then be glad you did have the opportunity to have a part in helping her when she needed a friend.

This item was overlooked in making our last report of things sent in. Mrs. J. H. Massey, West Durham, N. C., 1 boy's suit, 2 dresses, 6 handkerchiefs. CHAS. D. JOHNSTON, Superintendent.

MOTHERS' DAY PRAYER.

The following Mothers' Day prayer was delivered in the United States Senate:

"Almighty God, we honor Thee by setting apart a day to hallow our mother's name. Thou hast held in Thy keeping one universal heart and close to it in safety and peace Thou hast put the babes to whom Thou hast given life in this world. We cannot lose our whole life while we feel the touch of her hand. The symbol of her power today is the white carnation, more beautiful than our words, more fragrant than our praises, more pure than our thoughts.

"Amid the rush of life, may we this day go back in holy memory to this pure fountain of life, and may we come forth in the innocency and peace in which she gave us to our life's task. Enthroned once more in every place of power the scepter of mother love. Amen."—Rev. F. J. Prettyman, D. D., Chaplain.

Said the psalmist: "I believed; therefore have I spoken." That is the right order, both ethically and logically. First, you must have the real inner conviction; then speak it out bravely and frankly. No camouflage, no equivocation! Paul taught the same doctrine as did the psalmist: "For with the heart, man believeth unto righteousness, and with the mouth confession is made unto salvation" (Rom. 10:10). There! that principle makes the perfectly pellucid Christian life.

Mr. Preacher, do you visit your members and leave spiritual uplift with them? Do you suggest The Sun as your assistant?

people to spend their vacations in the country. At any rate, the end of a vacation should find us physically, mentally and spiritually more fit for the work the rest of the year.

Summer and Church Work.

Very few people are away from their Churches all summer long, and should work harder than ever when they are there because it seems harder to keep a live Christian Endeavor Society during the summer than any other part of the year. There are so many other attractions, but many most interesting meetings could be planned for the summer months. Time could well be spent in reading good books which would help one to understand the work better. If each member would buy one good book on young people's work, a circulating library might be started and each person would have the chance to read a large number of books.

Things which may be done in the summer by Endeavorers: Open-air meetings, picnics, visits to other societies, organizing new societies, nature study, teach in daily vacation Bible schools.

FAMILY ALTAR

CONDUCTED BY REV. H. E. ROUNTREE,
Our Chaplain in the United States Navy.

MONDAY.

As far back as we know anything about civilization, the cultivation of the soil has been the first most important industry in any thriving State. It will always be. Herodotus, the father of history, tells the story of the human race in the Valley of the Euphrates.

He says that with poor cultivation those who tilled the soil there got a yield of fiftyfold, with fair cultivation one hundredfold, and with good cultivation two hundredfold. That was the garden of the world in its day. Its great cities, Babylon and Nineveh, where are they? Piles of desert sand mark where they stood. In place of the millions that overran the world, there are a few wandering Arabs feeding half-starved sheep and goats. The Promised Land—the Land of Canaan itself—to which the children of Israel were brought up from Egypt, what is it now?

A land overflowing with milk and honey? Today it has neither milk nor honey. It is barren waste of desert, peopled by scattered robber bands. A provision of providence fertilized the soil of the valley of the Nile by overflowing it every year. From the earliest records that history gives, Egypt has been a land of remarkable crops; and today the land thus fertilized by overflowing is yielding more abundantly than ever.

It is made clear by every process of logic and by the proof of historic fact that the wealth of the nation, the character of its people, the quality and permanence of its institutions are all dependent upon sound and sufficient agricultural foundation.

Not armies or navies or commerce or diversity of manufacture or anything other than the farm is the anchor which will hold through the storms of time that sweep all else away.—James J. Hill, Pres. Great Northern R. R.

TUESDAY.

THE PRAYER OF THE OPTIMIST.

"Oh! unseen power that rules and controls the destinies of the children of earth, teach me the symphony of life, so that my nature may be in tune with Thine. Reveal to me the joy of being loving, self-sacrificing and charitable. Teach me to know and play life's game with courage, fortitude and confidence. Endow me with wisdom to guard my tongue and temper, and learn with patience the art of ruling my own life for its highest good, with due regard for the privacy, rights and limitations of other lives. Help me to strive for the highest legitimate reward of merit, ambition, and opportunity in my activities, ever ready to extend a kindly helping hand to those who need encouragement and succor in the struggle. Enable me to give a smile instead of a frown, a cheerful, kindly word instead of harshness and bitterness. Make me sympathetic in sorrow, realizing that there are hidden woes in every life no matter how exalted or lowly.

"If in life's battle I am wounded or tottering, pour into my wounds the balm of hope, and imbue me with courage undaunted to arise and continue the strife. Keep me humble in every relation of life, not unduly egotistical, nor liable to serious sin of self-depreciation.

"In success, keep me meek. In sorrow, may my soul be uplifted by the thought that if there were no shadow, there would be no sunshine, and that everything in life must have its antithesis. Grant that I may be a true, loyal friend, a genial companion with the broad honest charity born of an intimate knowledge of my own shortcomings. "If I win, crown me with the laurels fitting to be worn by a victor, and if I fall may it be with my face to the foe, fighting manfully, and falling, fling to the host behind—play up, play up, and play the game."—Wm. J. Robinson.

WEDNESDAY.

BROTHERHOOD.

"The crest and crowning of all good,
Life's final star, is Brotherhood;
For it will bring again to earth
Her long-lost Poesy and Mirth;
Will send new light on every face,
A kingly power upon the race,
And till it comes, we men are slaves,
And travel downward to the dust of graves.

"Come, clear the way, then, clear the way:
Blind creeds and kings have had their day.
Break the dead branches from the path;
Our hope is in the aftermath—
Our hope is in heroic men,
Star-led to build the world again.
To this event the ages ran;
Make way for Brotherhood—make way for man!"
—Edwin Markham.

Prayer.—Our Father, reveal to us the brotherhood of man as it is in Jesus. Help us to do our part in being a brother to all. In his name we ask it. Amen.

The Christian Sun will thank you to say a word in its behalf; it speaks for you!

THURSDAY.

SATAN'S TACTICS.

"My prayer is made perfect in weakness."—2 Cor. 12:8-10.

A Russian legend says, "Once upon a time Satan and his chief lieutenant had an interview. Satan delegated his side to afflict a good and righteous man. The officer reported that he had afflicted this man in every way possible to cause him to turn from his godly way, but he would not swerve.

Satan said, "This reminds me of Job. Nothing that I could do made him forget God. Let's change our tactics. Afflict him no more. Anticipate his wishes and grant his every desire. Give him health and prosperity, wealth and popularity. Let the wicked love him. Be kind to him. I have learned this, my boy," said Satan. "After centuries of testing men's souls, truly strong men are strengthened by adversity."

A Christian is helped by reverses. In them we find God. Cheer up. Don't lose faith. Trouble can make you happier in the Lord.

Prayer.—Our Father, may we learn the great truth that Thou dost uphold those who are true to Thee. Come, Thou, to our aid in every crisis. Amen.

FRIDAY.

OUR SYMPATHETIC MEDIATOR.

"For we have not a high priest which cannot be touched with the feeling of our infirmities."—Heb. 4:15-16.

Paul's main point here is sympathy. The phrase "touched with a feeling" is expressed by one word in the original Greek, from which comes our English word "sympathy."

The sympathy of Jesus becomes unspeakably precious to us. Not merely did it bring Him down from heaven, but He continues this blessed mediatorial work on high. The reason for this the apostle gives as not simply His divine love, but His experience of humanity. "But was in all points tempted (proved, tried) as we are."

And herein lies the value of the fact of His genuine resurrection, that He did not in death shed His humanity, but took it with Him into eternity.

"Let us, therefore," concludes the apostle, "come boldly to the throne of grace, that we may obtain mercy, and find grace to help in time of need."

Christians face untold difficulties in the campaign to win a world careless of religion, but they have this unfailing and sufficient solace—that they have at the right hand of God one who by His human experience is "touched with the feeling of their infirmities."—Rev. Junius B. Remensnyder.

Prayer.—We call upon Thee, O Lord, to give to our timid faith the words we need and to assure us of welcome when our feet touch that other shore. Take from us all fear of death and put in its place the firm faith in Thy blessed assurance of the life hereafter. Amen.

SATURDAY.

THE JOY OF THE REDEEMED.

"Let the redeemed of the Lord say so."—Psa. 107:1-9.

This is one of the most frequently quoted sayings of the psalmist. If we inquire, "What shall the redeemed say?" the obvious answer is, "Let him say that he is redeemed." Such a thought was not in the psalmist's mind. The verse must be interpreted by what immediately precedes it. The psalm opens, "O give thanks unto the Lord, for He is good; for His mercy endureth forever." Now follows the exhortation, "Let the redeemed of the Lord say so."

It is evident that what the redeemed of the Lord are to say is that God is good and that His mercy endureth forever. Life is full of boundless opportunities for such testimony. In the face of the tragedies of life, many of which seem so unbearable, we should believe in God and should believe in His goodness. We are to give our testimony in such a way as to enable those who are bearing heavy burdens to cling to their faith in God's eternal goodness.

Prayer.—O Thou Divine Redeemer, help us never to lower the dignity of Thy wondrous redemption, by measuring it with human strength. Thou art the only one who can save. We acclaim Thee Lord of lords. Amen."

SUNDAY.

THE "REVELATION" OF GOD.

"For it pleased the Father that in Him should all fullness dwell."—Col. 1:15-19.

The great apostle gives here three arguments for the deity of Christ. What calls forth his treatment of this cardinal doctrine is the subject immediately preceding—the forgiveness of sins. The first argument is our Lord's relation to the Father—"who is the image (or revelation) of the invisible God." The Greek word translated "image," means to bring out from the unseen into the seen. His relation is that of "revealing" the Father. The second is our Lord's relation to creation—"by Him were all things made."

The third is His relation to the Church, which is that of the head to the body. The head is the seat of life. Sever the head and you have a lifeless body. It is the seat of intelligence and of volition. May the Church make Christ its Head indeed, that the true Israel of God may be filled with life, joy, peace and power, that the intelligence of Him, which we have in the revealed Word, may be the only rule of faith and practice, and that the whole will of the Lord of glory may be the program of His people.—Rev. Chas. Curtis McIntire.

Prayer.—We turn to Thee again, O Lord, for the blessing we need, because we cannot find it in our friends, our reading, our amusements, our study, or our business. If we may have the strength that Thou hast to bestow, we can live with joy and hope. Amen.

WHAT IS HOME WITHOUT A BIBLE?

By Charles D. Meigs.

What is Home without a Bible?
'Tis a place where day is night,
Starless night,
For o'er life's pathway,
Heaven can shed no kindly light.

What is Home without a Bible?
'Tis a place where daily bread,
For the body is provided,
But the soul is never fed.

What is Home without a Bible?
'Tis a vessel on the sea,
Compass lost and rudder broken,
Drifting, drifting aimlessly.

What is Home without a Bible?
Listen! Ponder while I speak:
'Tis a Home with Bibles in it
But not opened once a week!

Monday comes and goes, and Tuesday,
Wednesday, Thursday, Friday, too,
Saturday, and even Sunday!
Book untouched the whole week through!
Lost! The Bible,
Lost! Its teachings,
Lost! Its help each day in seven.
Lost—to live by,
Lost—to die by,
"Lost! What's lost?"
The way to heaven!
But neither are lost, thank God!
To faithful members of our Home Department.

THE KING'S KITCHEN.

By Mildred Houghton Comfort.

Don and Clon were to have charge of the King's kitchen, while the King went on a long journey. Although they were very small, the wise ruler thought that they should learn how to run things. Their work was to give food from the kitchen to all the hungry people who passed through the happy land.

"Always give!" said the King, as he departed. "Do not be afraid to give."

Early the next morning a ragged beggar stopped outside the iron gates and shook them rudely.

"Hurry!" he yelled, "for my stomach is empty."

Clon opened the gate while Don brought meat, bread and fruit for the beggar. They served it on the wooden table in the courtyard. Although the beggar ate until the little boys feared he would burst, never a word of thanks did he say.

A gardner on his way from town with an empty wagon stopped and asked for lunch. He had had nothing to eat since he had gathered his vegetables and taken them to town to sell; so he was very hungry and ate almost as much meat as the beggar had eaten.

A hunter passed that way and said the outdoor life always made him as hungry as a bear. Don and Clon both carried food to him. The King's cooks were busy every minute.

So it went all day long. There were farmers and merchants, laborers and idlers—all sorts of people. Every one ate all he wanted and departed without a word of thanks.

When evening came, Clon ran down to the gate to let in the beggar of the morning. Don hurried out of the kitchen.

"Are you hungry again?" he asked.

The beggar's big mouth opened in a wide grin. "Oh, no!" he said; "I'm filled up for the day. I just stepped in to leave these."

Then he dumped a great sackful of fresh mushrooms on the clean, stone courtyard. Clon ran for pans in which to put them while Don picked up the stray ones that had rolled away.

After the boys had carried the delicious gift of food to the kitchen, they went back to thank the beggar. But he had gone.

About noon the next day the gardener appeared with a load of fresh vegetables and fruits. He said he had sold all that the town people wanted, and these were for the King's kitchen. When the boys tried to thank him, he said it wasn't necessary, although he was glad that they were pleased.

The next day the hunter appeared with a great wild bear that would supply the table with meat for many days to come.

So it went all day long. Every one who came, it seemed, left some present or other. It was their way of saying, "Thank you."

"The kitchen just about runs itself," laughed Don.

"Yes," agreed Clon; "but think how much we should save for the King if we charged something for the meals."

"That's true," Don admitted; "but the King told us to give."

"The King expects us to do what we think best," insisted Clon. "We could try my idea any way, couldn't we?"

"Yes, we could try," Don said.

When the beggar came again, Clon told him he would have to pay for the food he ate. The beggar was surly and said he would eat somewhere else.

The gardner was more pleasant. He paid for his dinner, but he did not seem to enjoy it.

The hunter scowled when he laid his coins on the big wooden table and went slowly on his way. Clon noticed that he had left the greater part of his food on his plate.

When the evening came, Clon ran down to the gate to see the beggar pass by. In one hand the beggar carried a bulging sack, and in the other herbs that the royal cooks liked to use in soups.

"Good evening," cried Clon pleasantly, but the beggar merely grunted and went on.

The following morning the gardener's wagon was heaped high with radishes, onions, turnips, potatoes and peas. On the seat beside him were little baskets full of berries.

"He'll have ever so much left over," cried Don, "even after he has sold all that the townspeople want."

But the gardener must have taken another road home. The boys did not see him again all day.

They did see the hunter. Slung over his back were several pheasants. Now Don and Clon liked pheasants better than anything else, and they told the hunter so. But he paid no attention. He laid the pheasants down for a minute on the clean stone courtyard and Don thought he was going to leave them. But he was just resting. He picked them up again and went along.

So it went day in and day out. The kind people who had brought presents to the King's kitchen did not come any more.

"What shall we do?" cried the cooks sadly. "This is the first time such a thing has ever happened. Our larders are empty."

"It's my fault," wept Clon.

"Mine, too," cried Don.

"We must go back and do as we did at first—feed all that come free," Don decided.

"I shall start out and tell them," offered Clon.

As soon as the people heard that the King's kitchen was to be managed as the King had always managed it, they went back there to eat, and they brought presents, just as they had always brought them. And when the King returned, the larders were full enough to satisfy even him.—Youth's Companion.

You and I want a stable religion; else we cannot live a stabilized life. We will be like "a wave of the sea, driven by the wind, and tossed." In his prophetic dying utterances, Jacob said of the tribe of Reuben, "Unstable as water, thou shalt not excel." So it ever is with the unsettled life. Here is a saying from Holy Writ that will give us a solid foundation upon which to build the structure of our lives (Psa. 111:7-8): "The works of His hands are verity and judgment; all His commandments are sure. They stand fast forever and ever, and are done in truth and uprightness."

WHAT IS EDUCATION?

It is difficult to find a definition of education that is wholy satisfactory. The best of them seem to leave something out. I would like to recommend the defining of education as a profitable exercise for private meditation, says Dr. John Herman Randall. Let each one ask himself what he means by "education"; and if he ponders the question deeply he will discover that in order to answer it he will have to probe down to the innermost meaning of life itself. Thinking earnestly about the meaning of education compels us to face the big fundamental questions of life as we never have before. Such thinking, for example, reveals the fact that religion and education are not two separate things, but one thing; two only on the surface, but one in the ultimate foundations and the final aim. They are not two things that can say to one another: "You go your way and I will go mine," as they are inclined to say today; but things that must move together, and move in the same direction, if each is to attain its highest ends.—Educational News.

OKLAHOMA PASSES EDUCATIONAL BILLS.

The Oklahoma Legislature, recently adjourned, passed three bills that seem of especial interest, and are attracting favorable comment from the press of this and other States. They are as follows:

A bill providing for the reading of the Bible in public schools.

A bill making the study of the Constitution of the United States a part of the curriculum.

A bill appropriating $650,000 to aid rural schools in districts that are weak financially.

Newcastle, England, was the birthplace of the first railroad. It was here that George Stephenson was born and conceived the idea of a locomotive to take the place of animals. It was also in the region of this town that coal was first mined.

If the present standard of living continues, the maximum number of inhabitants the earth can support will be reached in 300 years. America's limit is about 600,000,000 people.

In a three-cent cake of yeast, it has been estimated that there are twenty-two times as many yeast cells as there are people in the entire world.

Most headaches due to lack of internal cleanliness

WHEN you are constipated, poisons form in the accumulated food waste and are carried to all parts of the body. Headaches follow. Biliousness, insomnia, lack of energy, all result from constipation, which if unchecked will lead to serious results.

Avoid Laxatives—Say Doctors

A noted authority says that laxatives and cathartics do not overcome constipation, but by their continued use tend only to aggravate the condition.

Medical science has found in lubrication a means of overcoming constipation. The gentle lubricant, Nujol, penetrates and softens the hard food waste and thus hastens its passage through and out of the body. Thus, Nujol brings internal cleanliness.

Nujol is used in leading hospitals and is prescribed by physicians throughout the world. Nujol is not a medicine or laxative, and cannot gripe. Like pure water, it is harmless.

Take Nujol regularly and adopt this habit of internal cleanliness. For sale by all druggists.

A. To worship God alone.

Q. 78. Which is the second commandment?

A. Thou shalt not make unto thee any graven image, or any likeness of anything that is in heaven above, or that is in the earth beneath, or that is in the water under the earth. Thou shalt not bow down thyself to them, nor serve them; for I, the Lord thy God, am a jealous God, visiting the iniquity of the fathers upon the children unto the third and fourth generation of them that hate me; and showing mercy unto thousands of them that love me and keep my commandments.

Q. 79. What does the second commandment teach us?

A. To worship God in a proper manner, and to avoid idolatry.

WYATT.

Died at his home, in the Long's Chapel Church neighborhood, Mr. J. M. E. Wyatt, April 25th, in his seventy-first year. Bro. Wyatt was twice married. His first wife was Miss Martha Patton, who died April, 1890. His last wife, who was Miss Sallie Johnson, survives him. He leaves eight living children.

In early life, Bro. Wyatt united with Union Christian Church. He was a very quiet, unassuming man, and, as I knew him, faithful in the discharge of his duties. He will be missed in the home, the Church, and the community.

The funeral services were conducted from Long's Chapel Christian Church by the writer, assisted by Dr. G. O. Lankford and Rev. Mr. Robertson. The interment was in the Church cemetery.

The God of consolation be with and bless the bereaved ones.

P. H. FLEMING.

It is a good thing to have an anchor to the soul. It is so much better than simply drifting about. The inspired writer exhorts us to "lay hold upon the hope set before us, which hope we have as an anchor of the soul, both sure and steadfast, and which entereth into that within the veil, whither the forerunner is for us entered, even Jesus, made a High Priest forever after the order of Melchesedec" (Heb. 6:18-20). Yes, it is salutary for us to have such a sure hope. We live better lives because we know that we are immortal. If death ended all, we would be tempted to say with the cynical worldling, "Let us eat, drink and be merry, for tomorrow we die." But with the assurance of a blessed future life, we say rather with the holy apostle, "He that hath this hope in him purifieth himself even as He (Christ) is pure."

BIBLE READING FOR OHIO SCHOOLS.—

Just before adjournment, the Legislature of Ohio passed the Buchanan bill, providing that ten verses of the Bible shall be read in the opening exercises in every class-room, and that the Ten Commandments shall be learned by every school child. The bill will now have to be signed by the Governor, and if he vetoes it it will be dead until 1926.

PROHIBITION ENFORCED.—

Not since the prohibition laws became effective has there been such a sustained effort at enforcement as is now in progress. How long the present concentrated offensive will last, officials declined to say, but they hope to make such a dent in the industry that it will be possible before long to reduce the operating force. The present concentration is expensive to maintain.

DR. ERDMAN HONORED.—

In the case of Dr. Charles R. Erdman, professor of practical theology at Princeton University, Presbyterian, honor and dishonor seem to follow each other in rapid succession. Just recently Dr. Erdman was excluded from the position of student adviser in his university, and now his own presbytery has, in a single day, elected him moderator, chosen him to head its ministerial delegation to the general assembly, and indorsed him for the moderatorship of that body. Dr. Erdman is a member of the New Brunswick Presbytery. Dr. Erdman was defeated for the moderatorship of the general assembly by Dr. Clarence E. Macartney by the narrow margin of eighteen votes a year ago.

CONFLICTING MEMORIALS—

The Presbytery of Chester, Pa., has given recognition to the most ardent fundamentalists by memoralizing the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church to exscind the New York Presbytery from the general assembly. While this attack on it is being made, the New York Presbytery has drafted a memorial to the general assembly, requesting it to rule on the constitutional right of a presbytery to determine whether or not a presbytery has the right to determine the qualifications of a candidate for ordination. A long list of precedents is cited to prove that the presbytery possesses such a right. Either memorial is calculated to give the general assembly stormy sailing at its coming session.

A DELUGE OF LAWS.—

"During the past five-year period there were passed over 62,000 laws, State and Federal, to interpret which required 65,000 decisions of courts of last resort, filling 630 volumes; and our legislative harvest is upward of 15,000 statutes per annum. Today the greatest obstacle to legal reform is the obsession of the American people for making laws, which in the 132 years that have elapsed since the adoption of the Federal Constitution have exceeded in number and bulk the total of all laws enacted for the government of mankind since the time of Adam to the inauguration of Washington." These are the statements of Mr. Arthur Train, noted writer on legal matters. The American people seem to have the idea that society can be reformed from the outside in, but Christians believe, the Church must teach, and all of us should realize that society is to be made from the inside out. We cannot make men good by law; we must make them rise above the law.

THE HARDEST YEAR OF MARRIAGE.—

The government has answered in a statistical way the age-old question of what is the hardest year of marriage. The divorce records show that more divorces are granted in the fourth year of marriage than in any other, with the third year running a close second. More than 40 per cent of the divorces are granted during the first five years of marriage. It appears from the report that marital temper is growing shorter, for statistics show that from twenty to sixty years ago the largest number of divorces were granted during the fifty year. A goodly number of divorces are granted in the twentieth year of marriage, which year accounts for one-tenth of all the divorces. It seems from the report that if the husband is going to beat his wife he will do it in the first three years or not at all. It appears further that if the wife is going to run off with somebody she likes better, it will probably occur in less than five years, while the husband is domesticated until after the fifth year. If marriage is to drive either of the parties to drink, it seems to require ten years to bring on desperation. These are most interesting facts, since they answer a much-discussed question.

INSISTS ON PEACE.—

Following his trip to America and conferences with the President, Alanson B. Houghton, in his maiden speech as ambassador to the Court of St. James, insisted on the fact that peace must speedily be re-established in Europe, or American aid, both morally and financially would be withdrawn. The fact that the ambassador has been so lately in Germany and had interviewed President Coolidge so recently, lent added importance to his friendly but firm declaration. Many of the most prominent men of England and a number of the foreign ambassadors were present to welcome Mr. Houghton, including the Premier, Stanley Baldwin. The American ambassador made no particular reference to any foreign situation, but made it clear that American assistance in the reconstruction of Europe was contingent upon the re-establishment of peace. The American people must have assurance that policies of destruction are passed if they are to invest in reconstruction, the ambassador made it clear. Mr. Houghton has voiced what should be the sentiment of the American people. We can afford to spend money on the reconstruction of Europe if Europe wants to be reconstructed; but if not, wealthy though the United States may be, we have nothing which we care deliberately to waste.

ROOSEVELT MEDALS AWARDED.—

The third award of the Roosevelt medals was made recently by the Roosevelt Memorial Association. The medals are awarded each year to those men and women who are working for and have worked for the things which Theodore Roosevelt loved and in which he was interested. Previous to the awards this year, there were six recipients of these medals. The three added this year are worthy to be associated with the first holders, who include Miss Louise Lee Schuyler, whose work for women and children make her an example of humanity according to Roosevelt's own heart; Elihu Root, in the field of constructive statesmanship; Charles W. Eliot, scholar and educator; Henry Fairfield Osborn, scientist and authority on race distribution; Leonard Wood, who stood beside Roosevelt in urging preparedness against German militarism; Oliver Wendell Holmes, jurist and upholder of law and human justice. Now, to these are added Gifford Pinchot, Governor of Pennsylvania, who worked with Roosevelt and James R. Garfield, now president of the association, for the preservation of national resources at a time when the legislators seemed to feel that the only thing to do with our heritage was to give it away to exploiters; George Bird Grinnell, who is to the National Park much what Pinchot is to forestry. He is a naturalist of high repute, a big game hunter, and authority on Indian life, and an exponent of outdoor life; and Miss Martha Berry, whose school just out from Rome, Ga., has grown from a little log school-house with five mountain children to several hundred pupils with a splendid plant. Her work for women and children received Roosevelt's attention. It is said that he kept a room full of statesmen waiting while he talked to Miss Berry of her work, and of its vital relation to democracy. Miss Berry has been officially recognized by the Legislature of Georgia as a "distinguished citizen." Her school recently closed its twenty-fourth session, and more than ninety diplomas and certificates were awarded. She will go to Washington on May 15th to receive the Roosevelt medal from the hand of President Coolidge, who will make the awards.

NOTES-PERSONALS

The Elon College Chautauqua will be held July 27th to August 7th instead of ending August 5th, as published in last week's SUN.

Dr. C. H. Rowland, Greensboro, has been assisting the pastor, Rev. R. A. Whitten, in a series of meetings at Reidsville the past week.

The second Sunday of June is set for "Home-Coming Day" at Randleman Christian Church. Dinner will be served on the grounds. We extend an invitation to all who wish to join us on that day, making it a grand and glorious day.

"The earth shall be full of the knowledge of the Lord, as the waters cover the sea." So sang the psalmist. But my ability to sing that psalm with him is measured by my willingness to do my part in helping fill the earth with the knowledge of God. God was able to convert China.

President W. A. Harper, of Elon College, delivered the commencement address at Appalachian Trainig School, Boone, N. C., May 8th. Dr. Harper is a busy man in "breaking up" schools and colleges these days, being much in demand as a commencement orator, thinker and educator.

THE SUN'S editor was with Dr. P. H. Fleming in an all-day service at Long's Chapel, Alamance, Sunday, May 3d. Large audiences, good attention, delightful fellowship made the day a happy and most helpful one. Long's Chapel has a beautiful house of worship, and the improved highway right by the Church makes it accessible to great numbers of happy worshipers.

Rev. Jesse H. Dollar, who graduates at the approaching commencement from Elon College, and who has had much experience in conducting evangelistic singing, will be available to help in meetings this summer. Pastors will do well to write Bro. Dollar at once, since his experience as preacher and song leader makes him a very valuable man in evangelistic work.

One of the chief joys of the Christian is that of sharing his joys with others. We often wonder why many Christians do not apply this principle to their Church paper. Often, when one reads the good things in the Church paper one says "My Church paper is a joy." Under such an impulse, why not share that joy with others by getting some one else to subscribe?

Our Newport News congregation of loyals, devoted, tried and true, are planning to build a larger and better house of worship. They need it; they deserve it; they will get it. Under the faithful pastoral labors of Rev. B. J. Earp, the membership is growing, and now if they may have a commodious and ample house of worship, great things will come to pass among the Christians of Newport News.

THE SUN'S editor wonders if all SUN readers read each week our "Family Altar" Page, conducted by Chaplain H. E. Rountree? If one misses this page, one fails to get the real devotional spirit which THE SUN desires most of all to help implant and cultivate in the lives of its readers. Chaplain Rountree certainly gives us a key for our devotional locker every day in the week, and graciously invites us to unlock the door and helpfully spend a while within in the presence of our Lord.

If all those loving and liberal friends who gave our mission work such a boost by their five years' pledges in 1917 and 1918 would give one-fifth this year what they did during those five years, or would just renew their pledges for one year more, our mission work would not suffer, and every enterprise of the Church would feel the quickening power of this generosity. The Lord blessed many in making a thousand-dollar pledge and in paying it two hundred dollars a year. Many were blessed in making a hundred-dollar pledge and in paying twenty dollars a year. Many others paid $5 a year till $25.00 was paid. If these liberal and loyal souls will do in 1926 what they did in any one year from 1918 to 1923, what a benefit and a blessing they will be to their Church!

In the Official Bulletin of the National Federation of Music Clubs, a monthly magazine of nation-wide circulation and the official organ of the National Federation of Music Clubs, carries in its April issue a cut showing the large delegation which attended the recent State Federation of Music Clubs, which met at Statesville, N. C. The inset displayed in the cut is that of Mrs. W. A. Harper, with the following comment: "The incoming president, Mrs. W. A. Harper, of Elon College, who has served as first vice-president, chairman of 'National Music Week,' and of special membership, brings to the task a wide vision and thorough musicianship which will carry on the work admirably." This is a distinct honor worthily bestowed, and one which will be carried with becoming grace and dignity by the talented wife of the president of Elon College.

"The Christian Sun" is an advocate of the enterprises of the Christian Church. Results attained show the effectiveness of its propaganda.

PLAYING AT RELIGION.

The religious world is taking the eternal issues entirely too easy. The average Christian has not the spirit of supreme sacrifice. The burden of agony for lost souls is exceedingly rare. So few are willing to pay the price of a recurrence of Pentecost.

What is the matter? Is not our Christ being wounded in the house of His friends by a paralyzing indifference to the millions for whom He died? How few really agonize in supplication for the heathen world? And how few more are wrestling, Jacob-like, for the lost at home?

Does our advancing civilization tend to neutralize the forces of the Spirit? Does prosperity, luxury, and ease make men less keen for the supreme value. As the sensibilities of the soul dulled by a too-close contact with the world and its many allurements? Is it not so sadly true?

Let us get out of this fatal route of unconcern. Let us seek a baptism of zeal for immortal souls. Let us hunger and thirst for the realization of the higher ideals of our holy religion. Let the spirit of prayer dominate our waking moments. Let the Holy Spirit have His way in an entirely abandoned sense. Let Christ be enthroned in our lives as never before.—The World of Life.

"The devotion to Jesus Christ that sends men and women to the ends of the earth and keeps them there, is the only sufficient motive to inspire the Church to send them and support them there, and it is that burning and shining light held aloft in the pulpit that lights the path to triumph; and when that light burns true, missionary education, missionary recruiting, missionary budgets will all be adequate for the business of the kingdom."

PARKS CROSS ROADS.

Sunday, May 17th, will bring a great occasion to our Church. It is the day of our annual memorial services, and it is expected to be a day of home-coming for many people. The program follows:

Morning.

10:00 Sunday School.
11:00 Memorial Address by Rev. S. A. Bennett, head of the Department of Religious Education of Elon College.
12:00 Services at the Cemetery.
12:30 Adjournment for Dinner.

Afternoon.

2:00 Address by Layman Joe W. Stout, "Memorials."
2:30 Address by Miss Gertrude Browne, "The Joy and the Burden of the Missionary Task."

Music will be furnished throughout the day by the choir and congregation.

W. M. DORSETT,
W. R. RIGHTSELL,
R. D. CRAVEN,
Program Committee.

THE MOST FAMOUS TOWN.

The most famous town in all the world today is not a turret-crowned metropolis whose canyoned aisles of commerce are thronged with harried multitudes. The most famous town in all the world today is not numbered among the great ports of entry whither the ships of a hundred flags gather from off the seven seas laden with precious cargoes and peopled with men of every tongue and walk of life. The most famous town in all the world today has no chamber of commerce worth mentioning, no hotel noted for its cuisine or accommodations, no mart designed to draw its trade from the far corners of the earth. And yet, four miles from a railroad and forty from the sea, without appeal to seekers after health or wealth or honor, it stands today closest to the heart of the world of all the towns that are.

The most famous town in all the world today is what it is because two peasant Jews were born there. One of these was a shepherd lad when the call of life's business came to him. With a harp of gold and a heart that knew no fear, he stepped out to be a king among his fellows. And he was king. The boldness of his deeds and the splendid loveliness of his spirit come down to us in stately words from ancient days. With the passing of the years, the sweet singer of Israel passed also, and was gathered to his fathers, leaving to his people a heritage of high hope which has cheered through all time all races of men.

In the fullness of the centuries, another Jewish lad first saw the light of earthly day at the natal city of the shepherd boy who became a king. Grown to manhood's estate as a carpenter, traveling from place to place without home, without office or place, followed of the lowly and pursued by the mighty, besieged by the curious and spurned by the critical, hailed by the ignorant and ridiculed by the wise of his day, done to death at last on a felon's cross, this commoner of compassion so revealed the soul of God to the soul of man that the aspirations of human kind are twined about the things that He did and the words that He spoke in those three short years of His recorded ministry. Small wonder, then, that the stable manger that He was born in is the symbol of the blessedness of childhood, and that the cross of shame whereon He died is now the badge of honor for which brave men have gladly paid all, or that the little city of David and of the carpenter Prince of Peace is the most famous town in all the world today.

PACKAGE CAR TO HAVANA.

Manufacturers and other shippers of Virginia and North Carolina now have the advantage of direct all-rail freight service to Cuba for less-than-carload shipments, a package-car line from Spencer transfer to Havana having been established by the Southern Railway in connection with the Florida East Coast Railway and the Key West car ferry.

Under this arrangement, cars loaded at Spencer are moved by the Southern to Jacksonville, Fla., thence by the Florida East Coast to Key West, where they are loaded on the car ferry and transported to Havana, where they are shunted to the freight terminal in that city.

This means that shipments from any point from which cars are loaded to Spencer transfer can be sent through to Havana with only one transfer en route. In addition, there are many other advantages, since the requirements for packing and shipping by this route are no different from those for domestic freight.

Cars are received at Spencer transfer from a larger number of points in the territory north of the Potomac River, and shipments for Cuba coming to Spencer in them will be consolidated with those originating in Virginia and Carolina territory.

Similar service is maintained by the Southern from Cincinnati and from Inman transfer, Georgia, and has proved of great convenience to shippers interested in the rapidly growing Cuban trade.

THE THINGS I LOVE.

These are the things that I love best;
These are the dreams I'll hold
Against my faintly thrilling heart
When I am old:
The color of the sky at night,
When it still throbs with sunset light;
The dawn's first gold;
The shading of the trees that turn
So scarlet, and the fires that burn
On my hearthstone—
These are the things that I love best,
That I will hold against my breast
When youth has left me, and I face
The end, alone.

The purple pansies that I plant
When early summer wakes,
The green of leafy, dew-kissed woods
When morn first breaks;
The iridescence of the sea
That creeps so far away from me;
The blue of lakes;
The wonder of a baby's eyes,
That seems to speak of paradise
And love's first kiss—
These are the things that I love best,
That I will hold against my breast
The while I whisper, "Life itself
Was less than this!"

The automobile may be a great contributing factor to healthful recreation plans. There are places within driving distance where a good vacation may be had without great cost. Spending extravagantly on a vacation is as foolish as wasting money for anything else.

They had no house detectives in the old hotels or taverns of Pompeii. Instead, on the wall was inscribed the following: "Otiosis locus hic non est, discede morator," which, translated, means "Lingerer, depart; this is no place for idlers."

It is said that gardeners sometimes, when they would bring a rose to richer flowering, deprive it for a season of light and moisture. Silent and dark it stands, dropping one fading leaf after another, and seeming to go down patiently to death. But when every leaf is dropped and the plant stands stripped to the uttermost, a new life is even then working in the buds from which shall spring a tender foliage and a brighter wealth of flowers. So, often in celestial gardening, every leaf of earthly happiness must drop before a new and divine bloom visits the soul.—H. W. Beecher.

PRINCIPLES OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

(1) The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.

(2) Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.

(3) The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.

(4) Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship, and of Church membership.

(5) The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by, all.

THE PURPOSE OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

The purpose of this Church is to cultivate a spirit of union among the followers of our Lord Jesus Christ of every persuasion, and to secure, if possible, the associate efforts of all true religious teachers in pointing the wicked to "the Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world."

The peculiar doctrines and tenets which have confused and distracted the Christian world are remanded to private judgment, and hence cease to be matters for debate, only in so far as may be necessary to prevent a sectarian influence from entering the Church.

This Church requires no compromise of faith on the part of any child of God in order to communion or fellowship; here denominational distinctions cease to exist, and Christian love binds the brotherhood together.

The purpose of this Church will be consummated in the conversion of the world and the union of all Christians.

THE RESPONSIBILITY OF THE CHRISTIAN DENOMINATION IN EVANGELISM.

That the Christian denomination has a definite responsibility in evangelism, every thoughtful pastor and every thoughtful layman clearly recognizes. Moreover, we realize that the responsibility of our denomination in evangelism is a definite issue. It is more than for us as a denomination to hope that our Churches may recruit their membership from time to time during the year. It is even more than for us to expect that they shall. The responsibility is that they must, in order to prove their right of existence and to insure the perpetuity of the local Church and of the denomination.

The basic law of normal life is the capacity of reproduction. Without that law, all life would speedily become extinct. This law, found in the physical world, is also operative in the institutional realm. As each type is depended upon to reproduce its kind, so each institution is depended upon to reproduce itself. Institutions that fail to reproduce themselves must inevitably pass out of existence just as a species in the animal kingdom that loses the capacity of reproduction becomes extinct.

Institutions that are satisfied merely to hold their own, soon do not even have their own to hold. Like the burning candle in the draught, they soon go out. Great business enterprises have as their objective the doubling of their resources every ten years.

It is not strange that business concerns with such an objective make progress. That was the late Mr. John Wanamaker's objective when he first started business in Philadelphia, namely: to double the volume of business and his resources every ten years. And every decade he more than realized his objective. When he came to the place where his business could not continue to expand in Philadelphia at that rate, he reached out and established a store in New York, in Paris, in London, and in other European cities. All great business institutions have a similar objective—doubling their resources and their volume of business in a certain period of years.

It is no flash of fancy to contend that a Church or a denomination should have the same objective —that it should seek to double its resources every ten years, and double its volume of business, namely: its service to the kingdom of God on earth.

Our denomination should be willing to assume that responsibility. To this end, every local Church should reproduce itself every ten years. A Church with an active membership of 200 ought to assume the responsibility of increasing its membership to 400 within ten years' time. This capacity to reproduce is the evidence of normality. It is not beyond the range of the possible for any Church to reproduce itself every ten years. When a Church increases its membership so large that it is unwieldly, it can continue to reproduce itself by organizing mission Churches at home as branches of the mother Church, or by supporting mission stations on the foreign field.

If a Church thinks that it has thoroughly combed its community so that there is no longer an opportunity to secure new enlistments in kingdom service, it should simply enlarge its field of operation. It can easily extend the imaginary boundary of its territory for which it is responsible.

For a Church to reproduce itself in ten years involves a challenging problem, to be sure, but the Church that changes the problem into a program can and will realize the ideal. The pastor who believes that the challenge is only a fanciful utopia and that it cannot be done, naturally will not try. But the pastor who has a vision, and is willing to prove in his own ministry the work of an evangelist, as every minister is expected of God to do, will not be satisfied until he puts forth every effort within his power to have his Church realize that objective.

When Richard Cobden was opposed in his efforts to promote the cause of the greatly needed reform in England relative to the corn laws, he was met on every hand with the objection, "It can't be done; it's impossible." To which he replied, "If that is the only objection, the sooner we accomplish it the better."

No member of the Christian Church could fail to recognize the desirability of our denomination reproducing itself, doubling its membership and its service every ten years. No devoted pastor could fail to hope that such might be realized. But no doubt there are many who will say, "It is impossible; it can't be done." And in the words of Cobden, the Department of Evangelism of the Christian Church replies, "If that is the only objection, the sooner we get at the job to prove that it can be done, the better." And in the words of Augustine, quoted by Savanarola when he swept the great city of Florence with the passion of his enthusiasm for God and righteousness, "We must attempt great things for God if we expect to receive great things from God."

An American lad of nineteen summers was wounded at Chateau-Thierry, and when he was placed in an unconscious condition in the ambulance to be taken to the relief hospital, the Red Cross worker sat by him on the long ride over the rough and shell-torn road to the hospital. After they had jolted over the road for a quarter of an hour, the wounded soldier began to regain consciousness, and opening his eyes, smiling, he whispered, as if talking to himself, "They said out there that it could not be done, but we did it; we did it." And he closed his eyes in that peaceful sleep from which he was never to be awakened. But the joy of the realization that "they did it—that they did the impossible," was reward enough to him for his supreme sacrifice.

Shame upon us Christians for halting in any forward march of the kingdom because we are met with the objection "that it can't be done!" We must be willing to tackle the "things that cannot be done," for Christ is our Leader, and under His supreme leadership anything that ought to be done can be done. Nor will true men and women of God be satisfied until they do it. Every Church ought to double its membership every ten years. (Continued Next Week.)

MAKING THE CHURCH MISSIONARY.

One of the finest ways in the world to cultivate the missionary spirit is to cultivate the habit of giving to missions. "For where your treasure is, there will your heart be also" (Mat. 6:21). Our treasure is that which has cost us something. We are quite willing to put into a cause or an enterprise that which has cost us little or nothing. When we put that in which really costs us something, then the heart goes along with it. Jesus commended that poor widow because she cast into the Lord's treasury all her living—all she had. Her heart, her life, the spirit of real sacrifice went to the Lord's cause because she cast all she had into the Lord's treasury.

Again, some say they do not believe in missions, when what they mean to say, or should say is, they do not believe in their giving to missions. They are unwilling to obey their Lord's command, "Go, ye," and try to justify their unwillingness by declaring their unbelief. It is not a case of unbelief with them; it is a case of unwillingness to part with their cash—that which has really cost them something.

This Christian Church of ours, as represented in the Southern Convention, will not be the poorer but the richer, not love their Lord less but more, not be less interested in missions but more interested, by giving twenty thousand dollars to missions this year as a special offering to relieve our embarrassment and keep the work going. And such an offering will prepare the way for more liberal support of other enterprises of the Church. Colleges, orphanages, religious journals, Christian education grew up out of and thrive in missionary surroundings, in a missionary atmosphere. When we give to missions, we are cultivating a spirit of helpfulness to all other interests of God's kingdom.

The Mission Board needs $20,000 as a special mission offering this year. Getting this and investing it to build Churches and help support missionaries will help wonderfully in making our Church missionary.

THE NEXT REVIVAL.

Roger Babson, the noted statistician and Christian statesman, says: "Statistics suggest that the next revival of religion will be an economic revival, whereby the people of today will give their property as our forefathers gave their lives. Labor needs to wake up, and the rich need to give up." With Christians spending more money on any and every trifle, fad, luxury than they spent on giving the gospel to the world, it is high time we were cultivating the spirit of an economic revival.

The great and world-wide known Horace Bushnell had a view similar to Babson's when he declared "One more revival; only one more is needed—the revival of Christian stewardship; the consecration of the money power to God. When that revival comes, the kingdom of God will come in a day."

Where is the heart of America today? Where she spends her money; for where your treasure is, there will your heart be also.

WATCH!

In Mark 13:37 we are told to do a certain thing, which is "watch." But how am I to watch and what must I watch? Let's take the first letter, which is "w" and which stands for words. We should be careful to watch our words. The Bible says, "Out of the abundance of the heart, the mouth speaketh." So if our hearts are pure and holy before God, our words should be the same. But if our hearts are full of sin, our words will have a bitter sting. Just think of sowing unkind words in the hearts of people! Do yon want to reap a harvest of unkind words? Then do not sow them; for one-fourth of what we sow will bring forth fruit. And some day we will grow weary of reaping unkind words. But watch that you sow good seed of love and kindness, and then you may gather the rich harvest of God's love.

We should remember that "every idle word that men shall speak, they shall give account thereof in the day of judgment. For by thy words thou shalt be justified, and by thy words thou shalt be condemned" (Matt. 12:36-37). If we are to be justified or condemned by our words, it certainly does seem that we should be careful as to what kind of words we speak.

"A" is the next letter in "watch." Now, let us watch our acts. We are told we will have to give an account of everything we do in the body. We do not have to speak every time to make ourselves known. Just put yourself in action and people will read your life and form opinions of you. We act out what we really are. We sin in action as well as words.

The next letter of "watch" is "t," which represents the tongue. This may be the hardest watch and the most difficult to manage. But if our tongues have been tamed by the Lord, I see no reason for its being unruly. In James 3:8 we read, "But the tongue can no man tame; it is an unruly evil full of deadly poison." But Jesns says, "All power is given unto me in heaven and on earth." So Jesus can and will tame the tongue if we give our heart to Him. He will wash, cleanse and fill it with holy power, and then we can speak with new tongues, as the spirit gives utterance. And His praise will continually be in our mouth.

The next letter of "watch" is "c," which stands for character. Now, if we have a pure heart and watch all our words, acts, and guard our tongues, it will surely produce a good character. For, after all, character is what we really are. We have the privilege of either making our character good or bad by the way we decide and choose. If we go the broad road, taking up every evil of the day and following every evil spirit, then our character will be defiled. But if we are led by the Spirit of God we have a life not to be ashamed of, and we will be as a signboard on the highway, pointing people in the direction that leads to life and home above.

Our last "watch" is "h," which means habit. Everybody naturally forms some habits. And it begins very early in life. If people would get in the habit of living and working for Jesus and give more of their time for Him; if people would get in the habit of spending as much time on their knees talking to God about their souls and the souls of others who are going astray as they do in talking and criticising those who are trying to walk the narrow way, there would be a great change in the spiritual condition of the world in a very little while. If people would get in the habit of talking more religious talk and not so much idle gossip, there would be more good accomplished in the precious time Jesus has given us to improve. "And what I say unto you, I say unto all—watch."

The Lord Christ wanted a tongue one day
To speak a message of cheer
To a heart that was weary, worn and sad,
And weighed with doubt and fear.
He asked me for mine, but 'twas busy quite
With my own affairs from morn till night.

The Lord Christ wanted a hand one day
To do a loving deed;
He wanted two feet, on an errand for Him,
To run with gladsome speed.
But I had need of my own that day—
To His gentle beseeching I answered, "Nay!"

And the dear Lord Christ—
Was His work undone
For the lack of a willing heart?
It is through men that He speaks to men—
His men must do their part.
He may have used another that day,
But I wish I had let Him have His way.

SAFE INVESTMENTS.

By Roger W. Babson,

Economist and Statistician.

Many who do not get along well materially, owe their misfortune to lack of these religious qualities—faith, industry, courage, imagination and thrift. When all people are endued with the spirit of service, both poverty and wealth will merge into one happy group.

The greatest undeveloped resource is faith; the greatest unused power is prayer. The business men of the nation are waiting for the Church to open to them these resources. Those who visualize the latent spiritual forces of the community will perform a greater service than those who develop the material forces, however great their value may be.

Statistics suggest that the next revival of religion will be an economic revival, whereby the people of today will give their property, as our forefathers gave their lives. Labor needs to wake up, and the rich need to give up.

It no longer may be necessary to go to the stake or even to prison for Jesus' sake, but the time is fast approaching when it will be necessary for us to give up a great deal more than we now do in order to show our real interest in religion and its work.

All of us could easily give 10 per cent of our incomes; many could give 50 per cent, and some of us 90 per cent, and still have left more than the average person.

Every successful business man knows that his success is very largely due to the fact that he was obliged to struggle in his early days. This struggle is what developed him and made him the power he now is. Yet many of these men are doing all they can to make it unnecessary for their children to struggle. Furthermore, they are surrounding them with temptations which may be their downfall. Many of us, if we had at heart only the welfare of our children, would not necessarily retire from business and stop making money, but we certainly would stop accumulating more money for our families. From now on, our profits would go to benevolence work for the uplift of mankind. In so doing, we not only would be making enduring investments, but would be removing from our children something which surely will be a source of great temptation and which possibly might lead to their downfall.

The men or women who already have all the money they need are not the only ones who should give. Few, indeed, are too poor to give something to what they believe is God's work. I have known a great many "tithers," but I have yet to find one who felt he had lost anything by dedicating a definite part of his income to God. To every one, rich and poor, the statement of the wise man regarding "bread on the water" has a very real application in this matter.

Let us think for a moment what would happen if every Church member in the United States should actually do as the Bible suggests, and set aside one-tenth of his income for God. There are about forty million members in our Christian Churches, with about forty billion dollars' total income. Calculate the tremendous power summed up in one-tenth of that amount—four billion dollars! Spent wisely and honestly, such a sum would establish all the additional schools necessary to fit our young men and women for a religious life. It would operate all the hospitals and training schools needed to treat all those who must go through life with physical handicaps. It would furnish sufficient money in a few years' time to teach every living soul the principles of righteousness.

SUSANNA'S WAY.

Our modern mothers would certainly not restrain their children, nor train them, as did Susanna Wesley. In John Wesley's diary (John was one of the ten children who came to maturity, and with the other nine came also to honor and renown) are found some of the rules which Susanna employed in her family. Here is one:

"The children were always put into a regular method of living in such things as they were capable of from their birth, as in dressing and undressing, changing their linen, etc. When turned a year old (and some before) they were taught to fear the rod and to cry softly, by which means they escaped abundance of correction which they might otherwise have had, and that most adious noise of the crying of children was rarely heard in the house; but the family usually lived in as much quietness as if there had not been a child among them.

"They were never suffered to choose their meat, but always made to eat such things as were provided for the family.

"They were quickly made to understand they might have nothing they cried for. They were not suffered to ask even the lowest servant for aught without saying, 'Pray, give me such a thing,' and the servant was chid if she ever let them omit that word."

But was there ever a mother, other than the mother of our Lord Christ, who has had more weight, worth and influence in the world, through the children she reared, all of whom came to eminence, renown, and great usefulness in their day and in the generations since?

The United States and Canada have reached a final agreement as to the proposed joint action looking toward the improvement of the St. Lawrence River between Montreal and Lake Ontario, in order to provide access to the Great Lakes for maritime commerce and to develop water power in both countries. The estimated expenditure would be $300,000,000, and the outcome depends largely upon the report of the joint board of engineers, which is to be submitted by April 30, 1926.

SUFFOLK LETTER.

The question is often asked, "Is the world growing better or worse?" A safe answer would be that it is doing both—the good is growing better and the bad is growing worse. They grow along side by side, and will until the good wins the victory. Satan does his worst when God does His best. It was so in the beginning. When God had made woman, Satan succeeded in tempting Eve. Satan does not trouble the individual who is careless in his religious life; but as soon as he makes a great effort to improve his life, Satan begins to discourage and prevent his spiritual growth. The good reveals the bad. Education reveals ignorance, prosperity reveals poverty, good roads reveal bad roads, health units reveal disease, and Jesus Christ reveals sin.

Material improvement without moral improvement endangers human safety and makes the world seem worse. The improvement in automobiles and roads without a corresponding improvement in the morals of men endangers human life. The results of intoxication are improved highways, and improved vehicles presents intemperance in a new light that appears much worse than an old-time sober man meeting a drunken man on the public road. A man drunk now is no worse than a man drunk fifty years ago; but the result is worse. Sin is sin in any age; but sin grows in its evil results, and hence seems worse as human progress is made.

On the other hand, the practical application of Christianity in education, hospitals, sanitariums, asylums, homes for the aged, orphanages for children—all show marked improvement over the old-time shouting and doing nothing more. The Church was never as good as it is today. Temperance was never so firmly rooted in society as it is today. Honesty has made great progress in modern times. Benevolence was never so active as at the present time. Peace was never so much in the thought and prayer of the world as it is today. The very atmosphere is surcharged with good will. While the old-fashioned home may not function as it once did, the provision and care of children in day school and Sunday School shows great progress in the interest and provision for the young. There has been, of course, a loss and a gain in human progress, as there always is in business. Perhaps there is no business so successful as not to run a loss-and-gain account. Apart from the facts that indicate that good is outgrowing bad, reason would say that if Christianity has not made the world better, then Christ is a failure. The Church must not lose faith in Christ that the "Kingdoms of this world are to become the kingdoms of our Lord, and of His Christ; and He shall reign forever and ever." Make the test in yourself. Are you growing better or worse? If you are growing better, be thankful; if you are not, it is time for you to begin. Your concern is first with yourself.

ELON LETTER.

We hear frequent references to the power of public opinion, but what about public thought? As Josh Billings is reputed to have said, "There ain't no such animal."

It is sad, but true, that men and women in the mass are swayed not by their reason, but by sentiment, and too often by sentiment raised to fever-heat, by passion. Mobs commit crimes, which the individuals composing them would shudder even to think about.

The public as such is at all times subject to mob psychology. Public opinion is not a deliberate judgment arrived at by considering the various elements that should enter into a well-thought-out decision with reference to an issue, but a mass-sentiment determined by emotional appeals through slogans, prejudices, and suggestive propaganda. Fear, hate, race and party prejudice, designing suggestion, self-interest—these are the motives out of which spring very largely that elusive thing we call public opinion.

Advertising aims to create public opinion. Advertising that pays does not aim to cause men to think, but to feel dissatisfied without the thing in question. The finest talent in slogan-making, in printing, in painting and decorating, is employed by business houses that succeed with their advertising programs. A business thus creates public opinion favorable to itself in the form of good will, which is worth far more oftentimes than the physical assets of the concern. Public opinion is the only asset a mail-order business needs, and all that most of them possess.

Education and religion have a wonderful opportunity to influence public opinion. Education in particular is weak in propaganda, since it addresses itself for the most part to the reasoning faculties of the mind. Religion is a good psychologist in its revivalistic efforts. A business man recently said the Churches and their colleges have the finest products in the world to sell, but they fail to get orders, since they do not understand how to create a public opinion for their wares. And then, he significantly added, "they must appeal to sentiment, and not to thought."

Only about 5 per cent of a normal congregation ever do any thinking on religious themes, and it is only the rare college graduate who becomes a scholar and thinker. We may lament it as much as we will, but the stubborn fact remains that men are controlled by public opinion, and that education and religion are both weak, relatively speaking, in creating it. There is need for a radical change in method if civilization is to be saved.

BETHLEHEM LETTER.

On April 21, 1925, the ground was staked off for the new administration building for Bethlehem College, which will be 125x50 feet, and a three-story brick building, modeled after the new administration building at Elon College.

A formal service for the beginning of the building was held April 27th, and very appropriate addresses were made by Rev. G. D. Hunt, Dr. Murphiee, and Dr. A. J. Clardy. Mr. Clyde Hodge, the young man who first suggested that Wadley ask for the college to be located here, lifted out the first shovel full of dirt. At this writing, we have almost all the excavating done for the building and will soon be putting in the forms for the foundation. We are still soliciting funds for our building program and will push the work just as fast as we can get the means to do so. We will need the room bad for the next school term, so we will do our best to have at least some of it ready by September 1, 1925; but it is the height of our ambition to have it completed by that time.

Commencement exercises for Bethlehem College and Academy will be held at the public school auditorium May 17th to 19th. Baccalaureate sermon, May 17th, at 8 P. M., by Rev. H. W. Elder; class day and graduating exercises at the academy, May 18th, at 8 P. M.; class day exercises of the college, May 19th, 11 A. M., and graduating exercises and literary address by Dr. W. A. Harper, of Elon College, N. C. All are cordially invited to attend.

Summer school will open May 25th, providing sufficient numbers desire to take the following work: preparation for State examination for first, second, and third-grade certificates; those desiring college credit, and those wishing to take academic work.

NEWPORT NEWS, VA.

It has been my intention for a long time to write a short letter about our field here. Rev. W. A. Sunday, D. D., was here March 1st to April 12th, and did good gospel preaching. There were 3,968 "trail-hitters" who signed the card either for reconsecration or conversion. As Mr. Sunday makes no distinction between the reconsecration and conversion, and as many in signing the card failed to check as to whether or not they were Church members, it is difficult to state just how many conversions there were. The membership of all the Churches has been increased.

Sun readers are particularly interested in the Christian Church, and during Mr. Sunday's stay and since we have received forty-six into fellowship. Rev. O. D. Poythress, of South Norfolk, was with us four nights in a week's follow-up meeting after the union revival. Bro. Poythress, as usual, did some good preaching and hard work.

Our work has been suffering for two years for lack of an adequate Church plant, and now, with this increase in numbers, we must soon launch a building program, or this mission point will suffer immensely. If the loyal members of our denomination at large will help us through our building program with an adequate Church plant, we can begin to help the Mission Board instead of drawing from it.

The time has come; the hour has struck—something must be done for Newport News. There can be no such thing as a stand-still in the life of an individual or Church. We must move forward or backward. I believe our people want to move forward, and by God's grace we will.

B. J. Earp, Pastor.

DOVER, DEL.

Easter was one of the greatest days in the history of People's Christian Church in point of attendance and spiritual fellowship. At the morning service, the large audience required every seat in the auditorium and several extra chairs had to be brought in. The chimes music and the special numbers on the organ by Mrs. J. Henry Hazel created a splendid atmosphere for worship. The decorations of numerous Easter lilies and cut flowers arranged by the chairman of the decoration committee, Mrs. J. Dawson Satterfield, were unusually attractive. The choir sang a special Easter anthem preceding the Easter message by the pastor, who spoke on the subject, "The Triumph of the Son of God."

Twenty-nine new members were received into the Church fellowship at the Easter services, four by letter of transfer and twenty-five on confession of faith. Announcement was made that, as the result of the Kingdom Enlistment Week campaign, conducted by the pastor and his father, assisted by the personal workers, that forty-five decisions for Christ and the Christian life had been made, forty-two of the number to unite with People's Church and three to unite with one of the other Churches of Dover. Twenty-nine united with People's Church Easter, and those who could not be present Sunday will be received into membership next Sunday.

The Easter pageant given in the Community

Hall Sunday night had the largest attendance, many declared, of any event the Church has ever held. Several hundred people were turned away, as every seat and the available standing-room in the large Community Hall and gallery were all taken. The presentation of the pageant under the able direction of Miss Martha L. Denison, director of religious education for People's Church, was a remarkable success.

On account of the house being filled at such an early hour, and so many people being unable to hear the program, the pageant will be given again next Sunday night at 7:30. Doors will be opened at 6:30 for those who, disappointed Sunday night, wish to make sure of having a seat.

The last of the series of the Church-night suppers for the winter was held Wednesday night, Miss Ella Downes, chairman of the circle, having charge of the menu, and Mrs. Walter Morris, assistant chairman, having charge of the dining-room, decorations, etc. An elaborate turkey banquet was served by the Circle of Service to the credit of those in charge and to the delight of all who attended. The dining-room was most tastefully decorated with Easter flowers and favors.

The Church-night program for the three winter months is known as the "Three F" program—food, faith and fun. Ten Circles of Service, with fourteen women on each circle, have served a supper each Wednesday night at cost; the supper being followed by the usual mid-week devotional service, which was followed by a teacher-training class, and a class in Christian stewardship; also choir rehearsals and committee meetings. The last part of the evening was given over to recreational activities. The idea of the Church-night program has proved increasingly popular. The series will likely be a twenty weeks' program next year, beginning earlier in the fall, as many of the women in charge of the suppers have expressed a desire to the effect in the interest of a larger service to the Church.

Next Sunday morning, the pastor will speak on the subject, "The Unfaithful Christian." The Easter pageant, "The Dawning," will be given at the regular hour of the evening service.

KEEPING AT ONE'S BEST.

Professor Gairdner used to say, "One never knows what work God may ask one to do at any moment, and one should always be at one's best." And surely that is only a paraphrase of the Master's counsel: "Have your loins girt, and your lamps trimmed, and be ye ready." And if this spiritual readiness is to be ours it will demand a spiritual habit and not merely an occasional act. For it implies a way of living. It means that the soul keeps itself reverently posed toward the eternal with an alert readiness to know and to do the will of the Lord.

That is one of the shining distinctions of the angels of God: "They do His commandments, hearkening unto the voice of His word." Their spirit is ever ready, they are alert and vigilant. They are receptive and appreciative, and their mood is constant. They serve Him day and night in His temple, and it is a service in which they never tire, and never grow old.

Yes, we should always be at our best, and the secret of being at one's best is found in waiting on God "all the day." We must seek continuity of communion. We need a divine fellowship which remains unbroken in seasons of merriment and in the hours when we earn our daily bread. Our God is a companion for the whole journey. He will accompany us all the day and all the way.—J. H. Jowett.

TEACHING MORALS IN THE SCHOOLS.

There seems to be a general sentiment all over the country in favor of some sort of definite moral teaching in the public schools and State universities. The court records of several States reveal an astonishing and, to use the words of more than one judge, an "appalling" amount of youthful depravity, leading to banditry, bank robberies and hold-ups in excess of any such crimes ever before known in police and court records. Remedies for this serious condition are named, but the one that seems to be acknowledged as necessary in the educational system is real moral instruction for the boys and girls.

The appeal to common sense that is stressed in politics at the present time may well be extended to our educational processes. Why should our children be compelled to take school courses in hygiene and tooth-brushing and avoid courses in behaviour and conduct? We wonder if any of the educational conferences that are held every year in this country emphasize the teaching of truth and honesty and purity as much as their round-tables discuss science, and new wireless devices, and chemical agriculture. A convention of hair-curlers in New York spent five days discussing the various ways of cutting hair and bobbing the locks of our girls, but it is a long time since any conference of teachers met for a whole day to discuss seriously the teaching in the classroom of morals to the girls after they have come out of the barber shop, where the outsides of their heads have been given expert professional attention.—Christian Herald.

Little has been said about publicity as exhibited by the religious press, but the Church that curtails the number of its periodicals in the same ratio contracts its usefulness.

LONG-SUFFERING.

Fred had become a Christian, and with several other juniors he had been baptized and united with the Church. Some of his chums, knowing about Fred's quick temper, said among themselves, "Let's get Fred mad and then tell him his Christianity is no good." And so they tried. They hid his book when he wanted to read; they threw mud on the walk that he had just swept; they called him names as he went down the street. But Fred showed no signs of anger, and when those very boys were out on a raft which began to sing, it was Fred who sprang into the boat and rescued every one.

As he brought them back to shore, the boys said, "Say, Fred, you're all right. We believe you now, that you're really a Christian, and we want to be like you."—Selected.

No man can be happy who does not do his duty. The duties of both sinner and saint are so plainly and clearly presented in God's word that any responsible person may easily comprehend them. No man who loves righteousness and desires to do right can rest at ease while ignoring and disregarding his duty. Those who love the Lord will gladly and happily obey His commandments.

The very soul of true religion is embraced in this principle. In 1 Cor. 13, Paul assures us that the greatest of all is love. When the Saviour was asked, "What commandment is the first of all?" He responded: "The first is, Hear, O Israel, the Lord our God, the Lord is one: and thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy mind, and with all thy strength. The second is this, Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself. There is none other commandment greater than these." Love to God can find its expression only in obedience to God. "If ye love me," said Jesus, "ye will keep my commandments." The Lord adds: "He that hath my commandments, and keepeth them, he it is that loveth me: and he that loveth me shall be loved of my Father, and I will love him, and will manifest myself unto him."

The cardinal principle, then, of true religion consists of that love to God that obeys God. Without this, all else is vain. No amount of zeal and activity, no matter if a man can preach "with the tongues of men and of angels," or if he bestows all his goods to feed the poor or gives his body to be burned, unless he has that love of God in his heart that prompts him to do the things that God commands, he is become simply "sounding brass, or a clanging cymbal," and he is "nothing."—Exchange.

AGRICULTURAL NOTES.

Farm work is very much farther advanced this year than last in Virginia. Plowing is practically finished, and preparation of land for planting has made excellent progress. Increased acreage of most crops is expected in comparison with 1924, especially in acreage planted in feed crops. Wheat is in fair condition in Virginia, and early-sown fields promise good yields, although cool weather retarded development during the first half of April. Corn has not yet been planted on many farms, but if the weather continues favorable a considerable increase in acreage will be made. Pastures have not made much progress during the past two weeks, and many farmers have been forced by feed shortage to turn cattle on the grass too early. Hay prospects appear good, and a large acreage of spring oats has been sown. Fruit prospects are still somewhat problematical. Peaches, plums and cherries have been injured in all parts of the State, and prospects are for lower yields than last year, but apple prospects appear excellent. Trees were in full bloom east of the mountains by April 15th, but in the Shenandoah Valley and the northern counties the majority of the trees will not be in bloom until between the 20th and 25th. The 1924 apple crop of Virginia was the largest on record, 12,717 cars having been shipped prior to April 15, 1925, in comparison with 9,827 cars the largest shipment of any previous season. There was an excellent strawberry bloom in the commercial sections, and prospects for this crop are very encouraging.

North Carolina has experienced few seasons with such favorable weather as has prevailed this spring, and farm work is consequently much farther advanced than usual. Wheat is in good shape, especially this spring, and farm work is consequently much farther advanced than usual. Wheat is in good shape, especially in the Piedmont counties, where most of the crop is grown. There have been no reports of any serious damage. Oats, which wintered very badly last year, are reported in fine shape this year, although there was some frost damage in the Piedmont section. Rye acreage was substantially increased this year, and the grain is ranging from fair to good. Prospects for early hay appear good, although the acreage is small. Pastures are doing well, especially in the northern Piedmont and costal counties.

Small grain crops are in good condition and very promising in South Carolina, and the outlook for fruit is generally satisfactory, although some damage was done to peaches early in April. Rains in January and mild, dry weather during February and March was favorable for growth of wheat, oats, rye, pastures and home gardens, and the condition of these crops average considerably better than on the same date last year. Commercial Irish potato acreage is much smaller this year than in 1924.

MISSIONS

REV. J. O. ATKINSON, D. D., Field Secretary.

STEWARDSHIP AND MISSIONS.

If there is one predominant and outstanding idea in the Bible, it certainly must be that of stewardship. And what one means, in this connection, in using the word stewardship, is that God is Creator and sole Owner of all, and that man, made in the image of God, has the responsible privilege of using, but not of abusing, what God has made and still owns. God the Owner; man the responsible agent or trustee in charge for a season. And to God man must answer finally and fully the way and manner in which he has managed or mismanaged, the affairs of God entrusted to him for a time.

We have the meaning and the measure of stewardship brought home very sensibly in the story of the Garden of Eden. "And the Lord God took the man, and put him into the Garden of Eden to dress it and to keep it." The whole measure and meaning of stewardship are contained in those initial words of man's task—duty and privileges in the world. Dress and keep this garden of earth, of God's fond creation and care, and man has been on God's soil ever since with the ancient commission, dress and keep, or till the soil, "for in the sweat of thy face shalt thou eat bread."

Man dependent on God because God is the Owner; God dependent on man because He wants what He owns well kept, beautified, adorned. This sense of mutual dependence between God and man runs through all Scripture. We are dependent on God, for the garden is His. He is dependent on us for keeping; it belongs to us.

Sin has torn the earth, sin has destroyed the beauty, the fragrance and the order of God's garden. And not till sin is taken from the lives of men will the garden of God be what He made it originally and yet intends it shall be. And only one force and factor in this world can take sin out of the hearts of men, and that factor is Jesus the Christ. We help to adorn the garden of God, to beautify and to keep it, when we carry Christ into the lives and hearts of men. Here, then, are we confronted with the one outstanding fact that God's world is an unfinished world, and you and I, His children, have been commissioned to finish the task He left unfinished and assigned to us. God evidently did this for at least three unmistakable reasons:

1. He wanted us to be coworkers with Him. The Father worketh hitherto, and I work, said Lord Christ. It was no more difficult for God to have created the world complete than for Him to have left its adornment and beautifying in the hands of man. In missionary endeavor, seeking to make Christ known to the world we are working with God to complete the unfinished task He left for us. Who made the roses? was asked of the gardener. He gathered a wild rose and said, "God made that." He plucked an American Beauty and said, "God and man working together made that." Who made the house in which you live? was asked the architect. He pointed to the forest and said, "God made the trees." He pointed to the palace and said, "God and man working together made that." Who built that bank and those offices yonder? was asked the contractor. He pointed to the rock quarry and said, "God made that." He pointed to the skyscraper, with its steam heat, electric fans and elevators, and said, "God and man working together made that."

God hesitated when He had completed infinite possibilities, and on the threshold of the unfinished task invited man to assist, work with Him in making infinite realities. God made the iron ore and then invited man to be co-partner with Him in making steel, and from steel the locomotive engine, the keen blade, the great girders that bridge chasms, the knives with which we cut food and the pointed needles with which we make garments. And so of the infinite resources of this earth. God made the coal and put it deep in the bosom of the earth, but He invited man to help Him lift it up and stoke our grates and furnaces and factories with it. God made our silver and our gold and stored it in the secret and hidden places. He invited man to find it and help Him refine and polish and mint it for the use and glory of man and God.

And so God made all the men and women and human beings of this earth. Many of them have been in the hidden places, the remote places, the deep places of doubt and darkness and death. God made them just as He made the wild flower. He has invited us to take His Son, His only begotten Son, to them that they may be refined, adorned, redeemed. Dress this world-wide garden of God and keep it. God made the world of men. He bids us help Him in the task of saving these men from sin.

2. He wanted us to be conscious of Him, and feel our dependence upon Him, in our financial attitudes. So far as the nature and limitations of God were concerned, He never needed our contributions to finance His kingdom. However, He made Himself and His kingdom dependent upon man not because of His need, but because of man's nature, inclination and disposition. There is something in the getting of gain and acquiring wealth which seems to estrange man from God. It is easier for a camel to go through the eye of a needle than for a rich man to enter into the kingdom of God. Many men enter the kingdom of God and get rich; but when have you known a rich man to accept Jesus Christ as his personal Saviour and Redeemer—I mean after he is rich? God wants us to get money and, in instances, get rich, but He wants us to realize with all our gettings that He is Creator and Giver. This men often forget.

So, to this end, for our good, our enrichment, our development, God created with men the law of the tithe. He wanted men, through getting earthly gain, to be brought closer to Him, not driven farther from Him.

Roger Babson, the noted statistician, says that Christians of America are only giving to God's work about 1 per cent of their income. If they were to give 10 per cent, as taught in God's Word, the Lord's treasury would annually receive about $4,000,000,000. No wonder the kingdom of God is pauperized and the Church has to beg. Christians are only giving one-tenth of what they are taught of God that they should give.

And no wonder crime is on the increase, divorces multiply, sin is exalted and the Church is humiliated! God wants to bring us closer to Him through our getting, but we are estranged from Him by our spending. We spend for any luxury or trifle more than we invest in the kingdom of God; and we rob God of that which is His by creation and ownership, and then expect our benefits and blessings to continue. As we get riches, God wants us to get rich in glorious and happy experiences, in good and noble traits and character, and in high and holy attitudes and experiences.

3. God wants us to be conscious of our kinship to our fellow-man and to Him.

There is nothing that carries as much reward as the consciousness of sacrifice and of service. God wanted man to have a part in his own brother-man's salvation and redemption. That is why Jesus said, "Go, ye," and did not commit to the angels the work of winning the world to Christ.

If God is our common Father, then all men are our brother. He has made of one blood all the nations of the earth, all the peoples of the earth. We are not willing to acknowledge that all men are our brothers. Here, then, is our mission task; here is our sense of stewardship brought home to us. Am I my brother's keeper? is still asked by indifferent, irresponsible, murderous men. But God-loving men and women everywhere are saying "I am my brother's keeper." And if one member of the family suffer, all the members suffer with it. We are a part of the human family. God seeks to make us aware of our larger relationship. And we crowd God out of our lives, put His Son in a corner, when we see the millions who suffer without Him and we do nothing to give Him to them.

Here is the test question for every Christian: What am I doing, what am I giving, what am I sacrificing to make my Saviour and Redeemer known to those who have never known Him as their Saviour and Redeemer? J. O. A.

Some of the greatest and most liberal members that ever belonged to any denomination belong to the Christian Church. Their faith is evidenced by their daily acts and deeds. Are you one of them?

ONE-DAY SCHOOL OF MISSIONS.

The first one-day school of missions in Virginia Valley Central Conference met at 10 o'clock, with Rev. J. F. Morgan, of Winchester, Mission Secretary of Virginia Valley Central Conference, presiding. Rev. R. P. Crumpler, of Linville, led the devotional service. Dr. W. P. Minton, of Dayton, Ohio, Foreign Mission Secretary, gave a helpful address on "Our Whole Mission Cause." The two branches—home and foreign missions—were discussed.

Miss Virdie Showalter, president of Woman's Mission Board of this Conference, spoke on the "Value of Missions in the Church."

Rev. J. F. Morgan gave an address, "The Relation of the Local Church to Our Denominational Enterprises." This address showed that success depends on the local Church.

"Comprehensive Mission Program" was the subject of an address by Dr. Minton, showing how the whole Church can be linked up in missions. An offering was taken for the General Mission Board, amounting to $16.50, this going to help defray Dr. Minton's expenses.

The good people of Mayland and near-by Churches served dinner in a bountiful style. After the noon hour, Mrs. R. A. Larrick, of Winchester, treasurer of the Woman's Mission Board, led the devotional service, followed by a round-table, "The Christian Church and Missions," led by Dr. Minton.

Rev. A. W. Andes, of Harrisonburg, gave an address on the "Relation of Prayer and Missions."

Dr. Minton gave an address on the "Best Methods of Missionary Finance." The following resolutions were offered by Mr. Crumpler and adopted:

1. Resolved, That we, by a rising vote, express our hearty appreciation and thanks to the good people of Mayland Church and community for the splendid way in which they have entertained this body.

2. We also wish to express in the same manner our sincere thanks to Dr. W. P. Minton for the great message he has brought us and the help he has given us during this school of missions.

3. That we have another one-day school of missions in the near future.

A record was made of the Woman's and Young People's Societies represented at this gathering, as follows:

Woman's Societies—Linville, on roll 35, present 10; Leaksville, on roll 45, present 3; New Hope, one roll 32, present 8; Winchester, on roll 20, present 9, others present 5.

Young People's Societies—Antioch, on roll 37, present 22, others present 11; Bethlehem, on roll 25, present 11; Concord, present 11; Timber Ridge, others present 2; Winchester, on roll 30, present 6.

Antioch having the banner attendance, Rev. J. F. Morgan gave that society a year's subscription to the Christian Missionary.

The program was interspersed with song service, led by Mr. Morgan, while Miss Anna Amelia Seabright, of Winchester, presided at the organ. Dr. Minton led in the closing prayer.

MRS. B. F. FRANK,
Secretary.

After Paul's conversion on the way to Damascus, it is said he spent three years in preparation for his special call. He was brought up at the feet of Gamaliel. Some of our preachers must be in retirement. Paul was heard from!

GET READY—GO!

This year is centennial year with a number of our Conferences. The first, so far noticed, to begin is in Canada. Under the above heading, Rev. Calvin J. Felton, in the Christian Vanguard, says:

"The time for the centennial session of the Ontario Christian Conference is drawing near. It is time for the Churches and individual members to begin getting ready to make it the greatest session in our history. Let us remember that we can't do this by kicking and knocking. If you have any criticism of the way Conference business has been conducted and Conference work has been done in the past, forget it and turn your face toward the future. It might be well to note the mistakes of the past century, if you do so in the right spirit. But the right spirit is one of constructiveness in which we note them only to prevent their recurrence. Let us, like Paul, forget the things that are behind and reach forward to the things that are before. I used to try to plow with a kicking mule, and I remember very vividly that I couldn't get a foot of plowing done while that mule was kicking. Let us all come up to Conference with our heels on the ground, set, ready to pull our part of the load.

"Don't forget to mark the date on your calendar—June 17th to 21st. Plan to be there and to take part in everything that will help us to move forward. The responsibility is yours as well as the other fellow's."

The simple directness and clearness with which God's word presents man's duty is one of the marvelous wonders of the Bible. A Book that the most learned sages of earth cannot exhaust or fathom, it is yet the only Book extant from which the illiterate and unlearned, "the wayfaring men, yea fools," can gather intelligible conceptions of their origin and destiny, and can intellectually grasp, with precision and clearness, a satisfactory account of their obligations, responsibilities, and duties.

Having tried, in their most mature development, all that the world can offer, and having tested, by personal experience, all the rewards and penalties of wisdom, wealth, power, and pleasure, under one of which four heads may be classified every desire and craving that ambition may incite, Solomon, having found them all to be "vanity and a striving after wind," declares "the end of the matter" to be simply that, for a man to be successful and happy, he must "fear God, and keep His commandments; for this is the whole duty of man."—Ex.

RELIGIOUS EDUCATION

By H. S. Hardcastle.

MISS PATTIE COGHILL, Field Secretary, 11 East Newton St., Boston, Mass.

INTERNATIONAL UNIFORM SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON.

May 24, 1925.

Subject: "Saul Begins His Great Career."

Golden Text: "I determined not to know anything among you, save Jesus Christ, and Him crucified."—1 Cor. 2:2.

Lesson: Acts 9:20-31.

Devotional Reading: Joshua 1:1-9.

Paul never did things by halves. He had been aggressive in persecuting Christianity; now he was equally as aggressive in propagating it. There was no dimunition of his native energy and enthusiasm; there was simply a redirection of it. And with the same zeal with which he had persecuted Jesus, he now set out to proclaim Him. "Straightway in the synagogues he proclaimed Jesus, that He is the Son of God," says Luke.

But Paul—his change of character is reflected in his change of name—in his letter to the Galatians, tells us that he did not take up his active work immediately after his conversion. He withdrew into Arabia first. It is quite probable that he sought out some quiet spot where he could think over and through the amazing event and experience through which he had passed. He had had an experience of Christ and he wanted to be able to give an answer to every man that asked him for a reason of the hope that he had. Paul's principle is sound—first the experience, then the interpretation. Men cannot get far in vital religion without an experience of Christ. Theology has its place, but it must come after the experience. Religion is not so much to be explained as it is to be experienced.

"And straightway in the synagogues he proclaimed Jesus, that He is the Son of God." Having found Christ, he wanted to tell others. And he told others in no uncertain terms. Paul knew whom he had believed and was persuaded that he was able to keep that which he had committed unto Him against that day. Perhaps one reason why Christ was so constant and vital in Paul's life was because Paul so constantly sought to make Him known to others. Christ has become a vague, unreal ideal to many because of failure here.

"But Saul increased the more in strength." Spiritual stature develops by exercise. Many are weak and sickly because they are not taking spiritual exercise.

A good man who sets out to follow the truth will sooner or later stir up opposition. It was inevitable, therefore, that a man of Paul's type should arouse opposition, especially under the circumstances. The Jews, therefore, took counsel to kill him. It may be that one reason why so many of us live such easy lives is because we are not active soldiers in the warfare against evil.

Paul escaped from Damascus in a basket let down over the wall and made his way to Jerusalem. "And when he was come to Jerusalem he assayed to join himself to the disciples; and they were all afraid of him, not believing that he was a disciple." It is hard for a man to live down his past. God forgives and forgets, but man often does neither. Many a man, who has made an honest attempt to redeem his past life, has often found his greatest obstacles in the suspicion and even opposition from those from whom he has a right to expect better. In too many cases the world is from Missouri—it has to be shown!

"But Barnabas took him." This may have been the turning point in Paul's life. One hardly dares to speculate what might have become of the world's greatest apostle and missionary if he had not found a friend in a man about whom but little is known. "A friend in need is a friend indeed," and any one who takes a young convert or a new convert and by the simple but efficacious rule of friendship makes it possible for him to go forward in his new life, is a friend of the highest type. Barnabas seems to have made a specialty of this kind of service, for later, when Paul separated from John Mark, it was Barnabas who took him up and thus saved the man who gave us the first gospel account. If we had more men like Barnabas we would not have such a high rate of mortality among Church members.

Wherever Paul went, he had a revival or a riot. And he was not long at Jerusalem before he had aroused the ire and opposition of the Jews. So determined were they in their opposition, and so bitter was their spirit that the disciples decided to send Paul to Tarsus, his home city. That was a great test—to go back to preach in his home city. But Paul was a man of heroic courage, and for the space of ten years he labored in an obscure way. He who seeks big things for himself will do well to think of this outstanding figure in Christian history spending ten years in unheralded service.

Teaching Points.

1. The time to begin service for Christ is the moment one accepts Christ.
2. Honest thinking is no enemy of real religion.
3. Conversion turns men's energies and efforts into new channels.
4. The law of use and disuse applies to spiritual life, as elsewhere.
5. Jesus Christ as the Son of God is at the heart of the gospel.
6. He who does right will meet opposition.
7. It is hard to live down one's past.
8. A much-needed art is the art of helping those in trouble.
9. A man who cannot be used in one field of service often finds a larger field of service elsewhere.
10. He who would do an abiding work should be willing to pay the price of preparation.

The Christian Church is moving forward at a wonderful pace. Will you join the procession? Better fall in and catch step.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

May 24, 1925.

Topic: "Christian Traits Worth Striving For."

Scripture Reference: Phil. 4:4-8; Matt. 18:166.

Suggested hymns for use in the meeting: "Rejoice, Ye Pure in Heart," "This is My Father's World," "Stand Up, Stand Up for Jesus," "True-Hearted, Whole-Hearted, Faithful and Loyal," "I Would Be True," "Dare to Be Brave, Dare to Be True."

Plans for the Meeting.

Announce the meeting with a poster made by pasting pictures of some happy people—men, women and children—on a large cardboard and writing underneath, "Are you a happy Christian in May, when all around you is happy? Are you a happy Christian all the year around?" Time and leader of the meeting.

Assign a number of the Christian traits to different people before the meeting, in order to make the meeting more interesting and to be more sure of covering the subject.

Suggestions for the Leader.

This meeting will do us little good unless we check up on our own Christian traits as we discuss them. Let us think of those which we do not possess at all but would like to, and those which perhaps selfishness have kept us from cultivating. Let us be honest with ourselves (a worthy Christian trait) and go out from the meeting feeling that we have gained something which will make our lives richer.

We are not selfish in enriching our own lives as long as we don't try to improve ourselves to the exclusion of other people. But is such a thing possible? We should constantly go to the source of all good—God—and through communion with Him, bring our lives into fuller harmony with the world around us and with other people. Our lives are so interwoven with other people that we cannot live apart from them. "No man liveth to himself alone." We are one big family; we are each one thoughts of God, and as such are connected with each other. But each of us is a separate individual capable of living a well-rounded life, thinking things out for ourselves and with perfect freedom as to how we shall live our own lives. God has given us freedom, and in giving us this freedom has not limited His own power, but rather strengthened His power. We are then responsible for our own lives and for our own development and for the lives of others as much as we come in contact with them. Jesus said, "Love thy neighbor as thyself," and we have had no better rule of life than this. It shows us how completely we are a part of other people and they are a part of us, using our love for ourselves as an example of our relationship to others.

Christians that Work Together.

Are we Christians unless we can work together? Some very petty things have been done by people who claim to be Christians, in doing Church work. There is no room for politics and favoritism in Christianity, but there is room for tact in Christian grace in dealing with others. There should always be a splendid spirit of co-operation between Christians because there is strength in unity, and we need this strength in doing the Master's work. The relation of one Christian to another is always noted by people outside of the Church.

Optimistic Christians.

Christianity itself is the very spirit of optimism because it is based on hope. Christians should feel that everything is a part of God's great plan of life, and there is a place for every thing. But sometimes our spirit of optimism can be carried too far, when we carelessly say, "Every thing is all right, why worry?" and carelessly drift along doing no harm to ourselves, perhaps, but certainly doing no good to others. Ours is a religion of hope, but it is also a religion with work for all who enjoy this hope. We should be sunny, cheerful, smiling Christians, radiating happiness because we live in close communion with God, and underlying all this a great purpose of life.

Blessed are the Pure in Heart.

"Blessed are the pure in heart, for they shall see God" (Matt. 5:8). Happy is the Christian who thinks clean thoughts and trys to think the thoughts of God in his daily life. "Bad thoughts poison our minds," and it is then we begin to gossip about others. How often do we stop and

Christian Orphanage

Dear Friends:

I sometimes think farmers have as many problems to meet as any other class of folks. He can take much care and spend much time preparing his land and buy the best of seed Irish potatoes and get an excellent stand and the views look promising, and he will imagine in his mind that he will make many bushels, but when he visits his promising potato patch some days after and finds, to his surprise, potato bugs by the thousands, and then it is a battle with sprinklers and Pyrox solution till all the bugs disappear.

We often have the same trouble with other plants. Then, too, we have the cold rain with cold days following, when frost comes so near that it almost bites the tomato tops. We have the elements, the bugs, and the birds, to entertain us as we try to get our crop under way. But we are now battling with one pest this spring that we have never had to contend with before. We planted about twenty acres of soy beans ten days ago, and they are coming up, and in spite of all we can do it looks as though the doves will eat them faster than they can come up—swarms of them, hundreds of them, and then more! The peculiar thing about it is they are not easily scared. We shoot to scare them, but they won't scare; they will fly a short distance and then light again and go to digging after another bean. Strange to say, for eight years we have seen only a few doves on our farm, and why we have such a swarm of them this year is a mystery we are not able to solve. When we think of the price we had to pay for seed-beans and see the doves going after each one as it comes up, makes us kinder lose our tender love we have always had for the peaceful, gentle bird.

Joe H. Jones, our dairy boy, asked me to tell the readers of the Orphanage letter that he is now getting forty gallons of milk from his dairy cows each day. Joe is a real boy.

think what Jesus would think and do in similar situations? It would be good for us to say to ourselves daily: "My strength is the strength of ten, because my heart is pure."

Self-Control.

Picture Christ as He stood before Pilate on trial. (Look at Maukacsy's picture of "Christ Before Pilate.") We see Christ serene, calm, with dignity and patience, strength, and we can imagine the self-control which He is exercising in facing the cruel accusers and his enemies. No doubt He is physically tired after having gone through the stress and strain of being arrested, and seemingly neglected by His friends. There are many occasions in which we must exercise self-control, and when we do this we show patience, dignity and strength.

Suggested Christian traits for short talks: (1) Honesty; (2) love; (3) kindness; (4) gentleness; (5) humility; (6) open-mindedness; (7) faith; (8) patience; (9) reverence; (10) truth; (11) loyalty to causes which we believe are right; (12) unselfishness.

Questions to Be Asked in the Meeting.

1. Did Christ possess all the Christian graces and traits of character which we have suggested?
2. Does faith give us a brighter hope of life and make us happier Christian, or does it tend to make us trudge along blindly? Why?
3. How can prayer help us to develop these Christian traits?
4. Does being a Christian make us happier?
5. How can I help others to develop Christian traits?

"No matter how disturbed the ocean may be on the surface, under neath there is peace. The Christian is at peace in a world of unrest, for he knows that God rules, and he trusts God."—Robert P. Anderson.

What do you think would be Christ's attitude toward peace for all the nations if He were living on earth today? Is His spirit of peace with us? Why should Christians work for peace?

FAMILY ALTAR

CONDUCTED BY REV. H. E. ROUNTREE,
Our Chaplain in the United States Navy.

MONDAY.

"Be still and know that I am God."—Ps. 46:50.

It is idle to think that, by means of words, any real communication can ever pass from one man to another. The moment that we have something to say to each other, we are compelled to hold our peace; and if at such times we do not listen to the urgent commands of silence, invisible though they be, we shall have suffered an eternal loss that all the treasures of human wisdom cannot make good; for we shall have let slip the opportunity of listening to another soul, and of giving existence, be it only for an instant, to our own.

And again, I doubt whether anything in the world can beautify a soul more spontaneously, more naturally, than the knowledge that somewhere in its neighborhood exists a pure and noble being whom it can unreservedly love.

When the soul has veritably drawn near to such a being, beauty is no longer a lovely, lifeless thing that one exhibits to the stranger, for it suddenly takes unto itself an imperious existence, and its activity becomes so natural as to be henceforth irresistible.—Maeterlinck.

Prayer.—Dear Father, in the quietness of the morning enable us to be still and know Thee. Speak to us by Thy spirit and by Thy word and cause us to obey today. In His name we ask it. Amen.

TUESDAY.

"What God hath cleansed, that call not thou common."—Acts 10:15.

"It is the prime secret of the open road that you are to pass nothing, reject nothing, despise nothing upon this earth. As you travel, many things both great and small will come to your attention; you are to regard all with open eyes and a heart of simplicity. Believe that everything has its fitting and luminous place within this mosaic of human life. The road is not open to those who withdraw the skirts of intolerance or lift the chain of pride. Rejecting the least of those who are called common or unclean, it is (curiously) you yourself that you reject.

"If you despise that which is ugly, you do not know that which is beautiful."—David Grayson.

Prayer.—Our Father, Thou art our God. Cover our heads in times of temptation. Keep the door of our lips. Show us the beauty of all life and the glory of all that Thou hast made. In His name. Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

GOD'S GARDEN AND GARDNERS.

"The love of dirt is among the earliest of passions, as it is the latest. Mud-pies gratify one of our first and best instincts. So long as we are dirty we are pure. Fondness for the ground comes back to a man after he has run the round of pleasure and business, eaten dirt, and sown wild oats, drifted about the world and taken the wind of all its moods. The love digging in the ground (or looking on while he pays another to dig) is as sure to come back to him as he is sure, at last, to go under the ground and stay there. To own a bit of ground, to scratch it with a hoe, to plant seeds, and watch their renewal of life—this is the commonest delight of the race, the most satisfactory thing a man can do. When Cicero writes of the pleasures of old age, that of agriculture is the chief among them.

"To dig in the mellow—to dig moderately, for all pleasure should be taken sparingly—is a great thing. One gets strength out of the ground as often as one touches it with a hoe. Antaeus was, no doubt, an agriculturist; and such a prize fighter as Hercules couldn't do anything with him till he got him to lay down his spade and quit the soil. It is not simply potatoes and beets and cucumbers that one raises in his well-hoed garden; it is the average of human life. There is life in the ground; it goes into the seeds; and it also, when it is stirred up, goes into the man who stirs it. The hot sun on his back as he bends to his shovel and hoe or contemplatively rakes the warm and fragrant loam, is better than much medicine. The buds are coming out on the bushes round about; the blossoms of the fruit trees begin to show; the blood is running up the grape vines in streams; you can smell the wild flowers on the near bank; and the birds are flying and glancing and singing every where. To the open kitchen door comes the busy housewife to shake a white something, and stands a moment to look, quite transfixed by the delightful sights and sounds. Hoeing in the garden on a bright, soft May day, when you are not obliged to, is nearly equal to the delight of going trouting.

"Blest be agriculture!—if one does not have too much of it. All literature is fragrant with it, in a gentlemanly way. At the foot of the charming, olive-covered hills of Tivoli, Horace had a sunny farm; it was in the sight of Hadrians villa, who did landscape gardening on an extensive scale, and probably did not get half as much comfort from it as Horace did from his more simply tilled acres. We trust that Horace did a little Hoeing and farming himself, and that his verse is not all fraudulent sentiment. In order to enjoy agriculture, you do not want too much of it, and you want to be poor enough to have a little inducement to work moderately yourself. Hoe while it is spring, and enjoy the best anticipations. It is not much matter if things do not turn out well."—Charles Dudley Warner.

THURSDAY.

"The night has a thousand eyes,
And the day but one;
Yet the light of the bright world dies
With the dying of the sun.

"The mind has a thousand eyes,
And the heart but one;
Yet the light of a whole life dies
When its love is done."

—Francis W. Bourdillon.

FRIDAY.

"As ye would that men should do to you, do ye also to them likewise."—Luke 6:31.

"We have committed the Golden Rule to memory; let us now commit it to life.

"We have preached the brotherhood for centuries; we now need to find a material basis for brotherhood. Government must be made the organ for fraternity—a work-form for comrade-love. Think of this—work for this."—Edwin Markham.

SATURDAY.

THE KINGDOM OF GOD IS RIGHTEOUSNESS.

"The Kingdom of God is—righteousness and peace, and joy in the Holy Ghost."—Rom. 14:17.

The kingdom of God is not something impossible or a state of unnatural living, but it is something in us to be lived by us every day. Among the first utterances of our Lord was "it becomes us to fulfill all righteousness." His first declaration was "Blessed is he who hungers and thirsts to do righteously." And the apostles declared that "he that worketh righteousness is accepted by Him."

A Christianity has its basis in the belief that all wrong can be righted, all injustice removed, all crooked ways can be straightened; and all that we need to do this ourselves is a conviction and a faith that demands assent of our minds to it, desiring it, the kingdom may be said to come, not in a moment or a day; but in the effort, sin and Satan will break down, prejudices fly away, springs will be set to our powers, and we will rise to His altitude of glory.

Prayer.—Our Father, Thou art our high tower and deliverer, stretch forth Thy hand and save us from sin, and plant us upon the rock of salvation and the hills of Thy glory. Amen.

SUNDAY.

THE MEASURE OF A MAN.

"As he (man) thinketh in his heart, so is he."

"Man" means "to think." This is his great distinction. In short, the mind is the measure of man. That is: what goes on in the mind, whether good or bad, will be the determining factor of the life for weal or woe.

It has been said that the mind can make heaven a hell, or hell a heaven, so greatly able is it to retain the past, create the present and contemplate the future. It is in this that unkind thoughts result in uncharitable speech and unlovely deeds; impure thoughts result in corrupt living, and dishonesty means duplicity. If you would know yourself, see what you think; if you would know others, know what they think. Life is lost or won in the battlefield of the mind. Therefore, bring every thought into the captivity to the mind of Jesus.

Prayer.—Dear Lord, turn our thoughts toward Thee and against evil. In the beauty of holiness, fashion our thought after the pictures of loveliness, goodness, purity and a helpful life. In His name. Amen.

The first apostolic Church had things in common. Distribution was made from the common treasury as each had need. Superannuates are not confined to one class or calling; nor are the needs restricted to food and shelter.

Dears:

I have heard that every one is at work house-cleaning. Even to Granny Bear, and Mother Bear; and it's lots o' fun for Baby Bear, too, for he gets to climb up on all the parlor furniture, and unhook all the screen doors, which Mother Bear never allows on every-day occasions. And then when the little neighbor children come to play, Bobby Bear (yes, that's his name, I believe) shows them all the new baby chicks out in the woodshed where the incubator is. An incubator is made just for baby chicks that do not have any mother hen to look after them. Bobby Bear's mother explained it all to him the other day, and how if you turned the lamp down, or put it clean out, all the chicks would never get to "Peep, peep" out of their little shells. And Bobby Bear is very careful now, 'cause Father Bear put Bobby to bed without any dinner one day—an' right in the middle of the hungriest part of the day, too, and the sun was shining, too; and Bobby had to take off all his clothes and stay in bed till supper time. And every time Mother Bear talked over the telephone or walked past his room door, Bobby would try, and try, but he couldn't make her hear him—and he cried loud, too. Wasn't he a naughty Bear?

But, my! Bobby is just as good as can be most of the time, and his mamma loves him, and his papa loves him, and I know he is glad he has a nice warm beddy to sleep in every night on cold nights. But it's May-time, and soon, very soon, Summer will be here. Won't you and Bobby Bear and Peter Rabbit be so glad?

Bobby and Peter send you their love today. So does your editor. M. F. M.

"I want to stop and sniff each pretty blossom on the trees,
And feel the grass and growing weeds against my knees.
The Robins don't feel lazy; how they fuss and fly around,
So busy building nests and yanking worms out of the ground.
Why din't I like to work or go to school, or anything—
Oh! oh! Kiddies, can't you see it's only signs of Spring!"

WHAT HAPPENED TO LAZY ANT AT A FLOWER CAFE?

By Blanche Silver.

Lazy Ant, so all her neighbors called her, because she'd take all day to do what any other ant could do in a few hours.

The meadow-folks said that Lazy Ant, rather than go out and hunt food for herself, would call on her neighbors just about meal-time, and in that way she wouldn't have to work for her food.

This soon became a nuisance, and finally some of her neighbors told her she must get out and get her own food.

"I'd just like to know where Mr. Bee gets that lovely honey," Lazy Ant thought, so the next time she saw Mr. Bee fly by she followed him and hid behind a bush while he sipped from the white clusters of blossoms.

When Mr. Bee had filled all his tiny pockets with pollen and honey and sailed away, Lazy Ant crawled up the stem road that led to the white blossoms.

"I can't see why some of us have to work for what we get and others don't," she grumbled to herself. "And I'll just bet I'll not be silly and load my pockets down with pollen bundles, either. It's getting to be a bore. Every cafe-keeper that gives you a bit of honey seems to think you've got to carry her old pollen bundles to pay for the sip.

"Goodness, how careless of me! I must have stepped in something sticky," and Lazy Ant lifted her little legs one at a time and ran them through her mouth to clean them off. But the more she would clean, the stickier they became. First she'd lick one leg, then the other, and by the time she got the first three legs clean, the other three were sticky. And the first thing she knew, she was so sticky from the tip of her silly little head to the soles of her lazy little feet that she couldn't move, and she began to cry as hard as she could.

Mr. Bee saw her plight, and stopped to help her, but he found his own feet growing sticky and had to give it up.

"You see, Mrs. Starry Campion, the keeper of this blossom cafe, doesn't cater to crawling insects, so that's why her stem roads are so sticky," he buzzed. "We bees don't have to touch that road. We just light right down in the blossom cafe. I guess Mrs. Starry Campion heard you say you didn't care to help distribute her pollen bundles, so she didn't warn you. I'm sorry; I wish I could help."

Just then something bumped into the plant. Mr. Bee lost his balance, but caught himself and sailed away as quick as he could. Lazy Ant closed her eyes, for she thought the keeper of the plant cafe was after her. But when she landed on the ground she opened her eyes, and there sat a big yellow cat eyeing a fluttering butterfly.

Lazy Ant crawled through the grass as fast as she could, and when she reached her home she jumped into a tub of water and had to soak a long time to get the horrid, sticky stuff from her head and feet. But you can believe it or not—Lazy Ant is lazy no more. She set to work the very next day and has the loveliest ant hill in the whole meadows and is raising a great big family.

"It takes work to keep one out of mischief," she always says when any one reminds her of the days when she was called Lazy Ant.

FROM BILLY BARTON, IN CHINA.

Say, you Everylanders, I've got the strangest story to tell you about a funeral I went to here near Chaoyang the other day. 'Tisn't a melancholy tale, either. I happened to be visiting at Uncle Groesbeck's when a wealthy old Chinese merchant died. The only Christian in the family was one son. He wanted to have a Christian funeral for his father. All the rest of the family wanted a heathen funeral, but finally the son persuaded them to have it his way. I begged uncle to let me go with him, and I soon found out that even a Christian funeral in China is very different from what it is at home.

The first thing they did was to engage the boys' band from the mission school here in Chaoyang. Thirty trumpets, drums and cymbals! They looked fine all in a white uniform, but they could make the big noise all right!

We had to start at 7 o'clock in the morning and go on board a steamer launch that took us several miles up the river. We got off at a place where Uncle Groesbeck has a mission school. The name of the place is Chick-bue-ki, and if you cannot pronounce it you can all go to the foot of the class in a bunch.

Well, I guess the whole school and all the rest of the village turned out to meet us at the riverside. Some came just to see, and some to invite us in, and some to act as a guard of honor—to the band! That Chaoyang boys' band has got a symphony orchestra fame all through that region. We visited the school, and then the drill-master gave the word to the band to tune up, and we marched a mile or more to the place where the funeral was to be. As we drew near, the people came out by hundreds to greet the boys' band. Some were on roofs and the tops of walls. We were led to the reception room, where each one present was served with a bowl of noodles. Good, too!

The funeral was held at the home, but only a few of the hundreds present could get near enough to join in the procession. Besides the Chaoyang band, several other boys' schools were there in uniform. The schools sang a hymn, and there were prayers, addresses and orations, one especially to show why a Christian funeral was better than a heathen one.

Then, at a signal from somebody, the men took up the bier, and the procession started—and so did the noise. Cannon were fired. Millions of firecrackers were touched off, but don't you think for a moment that they made any impression on the music of our prize band! So we started on our way to the place of burial. Notice I didn't say "cemetery." Such a thing is not yet known here. People bury their dead in their private grounds or in the mountains. That was the reason for the furious opposition to railroads in China. They couldn't build one without running through burial places, which are very sacred to the Chinese.

When the procession started, it was about a mile long. In front of the casket, four men bore a sort of glass cage, in which was a great crayon enlargement of a photograph of the man who had died. There were forty-five great silk banners in the procession, sent by friends of the family. Twelve more didn't get there till the next day. The coffin was covered with a beautiful embroidered silk cloth.

The trumpets, drums, cymbals and gongs never ceased their pounding, the gorgeous banners waved, and the hundreds of boys in white uniforms attracted thousands of spectators all along the route to the burial place.

After it was all over, the boys' band went back to Chaoyang, but Uncle Groesbeck stayed over to preach that night in the village you couldn't pronounce. And where do you suppose he preached? In the Chinese ancestral temple! Yes, sir, jam-packed full, and uncle preaching to them in a steady stream of Chinese, and telling them the advantages of the religion of Jesus. And the next day the son of the man who had died sent for uncle and subscribed $200 for a new chapel.

BILLY BARTON.

How shall we make the most of summer? By a fresh and full surrender of the teachings of the Word of God, by a renewed faith in the gospel as the power of God to save every one that believeth, by aggressive soul-winning work wherever we are. In city or camp, by mountain, plain or sea, let us say with Paul, "I am debtor to the unsaved. I am ready to pay the debt. I am not ashamed of the gospel."

Preparation for a vacation adds much to its pleasure. If you are going to take a trip, study the place to which you are going, read up on its history, and find out all you can about the country through which you will travel. KING—GREGORY.

A very beautiful marriage took place Saturday, May 2d, at 3 o'clock P. M., at the home of Deacon W. D. Gregory, Virgilina, Va., when his daughter, Lucy Rebecca, became the bride of Mr. Marcellus E. King, of South Boston, Va. Mr. Owen King, brother of the groom, was best man, and Mrs. Julian Gregory was dame of honor. Mr. King is a tobacconist, with headquarters in South Boston. The bride was educated at Elon, was a teacher in Halifax County, and one of our leading Church workers here.

Immediately after the marriage, Mr. and Mrs. King went on a motor trip through the Valley of Virginia.

SIMPLE GOSPEL NEEDED.

The world needs the simple gospel, the simple story of Jesus. All else is vain, unsatisfying, and shadowy. No amount of eloquence, no degree of pulpit entertainment or fascination, can serve as a substitute for just a plain narration of the simple gospel. When a preacher begins to desire to show and preach himself; when he craves popularity and wishes to deliver sermons that will make him famous; when his thought is more to please the people than it is to please God, then his preaching is robbed of the power to bring sinners to the cross, to cause the Churches of Christ to flee from the inventions of men and to boldly and candidly strive to come up to the New Testament in doctrine and practice.—Ex.

No man can attain success and happiness in life unless his whole endeavor is to please God. No amount of worldly success, in any line of human endeavor, apart from the service of God, can constitute a successful life.

POOL.

Mrs. May Gregory Pool, daughter of Brother and Sister W. D. Gregory, of Virgilina, Va., died at her home in Stovall, N. C., Thursday morning at 1:30 o'clock, April 14, 1925, age 41 years, 11 months and 16 days. Early in life she united with Union Christian Church. After attending the neighborhood schools, she went to Elon College, and then taught for a few years.

On December 26, 1908, I officiated at her marriage to Bro. Charlie Pool, of Granville County, N. C. Their home was blessed with five children—Gregory, Charles, Doris, Nell and Thomas. All are living. Her life exemplified all of those noble traits characteristic of a sincere Christian, faithful wife and devoted mother.

The funeral was conducted by the writer, assisted by Rev. E. R. Harris, from the Gregory home here in Virgilina, and interment made in the town cemetery. The host of friends, the quantity of flowers and expressions of sympathy gave evidence of the recognition and love for one who had greatness of soul.

My sympathy and prayers, together with those of the entire community, are with the family. To them is the promise of being united beyond.

Most headaches due to lack of internal cleanliness

WHEN you are constipated, poisons form in the accumulated food waste and are carried to all parts of the body. Headaches follow. Biliousness, insomnia, lack of energy, all result from constipation, which if unchecked will lead to serious results.

Avoid Laxatives—Say Doctors

A noted authority says that laxatives and cathartics do not overcome constipation, but by their continued use tend only to aggravate the condition.

Medical science has found in lubrication a means of overcoming constipation. The gentle lubricant, Nujol, penetrates and softens the hard food waste and thus hastens its passage through and out of the body. Thus, Nujol brings internal cleanliness.

Nujol is used in leading hospitals and is prescribed by physicians throughout the world. Nujol is not a medicine or laxative, and cannot gripe. Like pure water, it is harmless.

Take Nujol regularly and adopt this habit of internal cleanliness. For sale by all druggists.

THE SUN'S OBSERVATORY

By Rev. S. M. Lynam.

A COSTLY CAPTURE.—

The newspapers report the capture of the English schooner Madeline Adams, with her cargo of thirty-seven hundred cases of liquor with a bootleg value of a quarter of a million dollars. The vessel was captured after a long chase and twenty-one miles off shore. This capture was a costly one for the English distillers.

WHAT WAS FOUND.—

Several small coins, dated in the fifties, and the remains of an old flintlock musket were all that remained with the bones of a pioneer found in a hollow tree on the Missouri Valley River bottom near Hamburg, Iowa. It is believed he hid in the crevice to escape Indians and was unable to climb up to the entrance hole from the inside of the tree.

ANOTHER RADIO TRIUMPH.—

Chester W. Rice and Edward W. Kellogg demonstrated a new radio loud-speaker before the American Institute of Electrical Engineers recently which increases the ordinary reproduction of a crystal set to the loudness equal to that at the sending point. The new loud-speaker has no horn, and the diaphragm ordinarily used is replaced by a paper cone flexibly mounted. This new invention is credited to the General Electric Company, of whose force the inventors are.

HEARD HALF 'ROUND THE WORLD.—

The silver cup was recently awarded to station WAHG, Richmond Hill, N. Y., for the most perfect transmission. A bell on a Long Island railway locomotive was transmitted clearly from Richmond Hill to Melbourne, Australia, a distance of 12,175 miles. The bell was rung every fifteen minutes to identify the station in a test to determine the effect of the equinox on radio waves passing across the equator. The cup was awarded by Mr. George Barlow, president of the Broadcasting League of Australia.

WHERE TAXES GO.—

Five ocean liners, which cost the government thirty million dollars, have been ordered sold by the members of the United States Shipping Board for $5,625,000. The Dollar Steamship Line is the buyer. The Shipping Board was divided three to four on the sale. Those who opposed the sale did so for two reasons; first, they felt that this was not the time to sell the ships, and, second, that if they were sold, a higher bid, which was made by the Pacific Mail Steamship Company, of $6,750,000, should have been accepted. The ships had been leased to this company and had been used on the Pacific Ocean. Every once in a while we read such news items, and then we know where taxes go. The citizens of this country are paying thirty million dollars for those ships now, and they are sold for less than a fifth of their cost, and yet we wonder where taxes go, and Calvin Coolidge talks thrift to the people while the government which he heads engages in such acts of prodigality. It is nothing else!

A STEP TOWARD HUMAN RELIEF.—

Three of the greatest modern marvels co-operated recently in a great experiment to relieve human suffering. An X-ray picture of a human hand was taken in New York, and transmitted by telegraph to Chicago, and the resulting print hurried back to New York by aeroplane all in twelve hours. The success of this great experiment proves the possibility of having an X-ray diagnosis of an injury or an ailment by a specialist long distances from the patient. It is regarded as a long step forward in the treatment of disease.

ENGLAND FEEDS THE POOR.—

It is reported that England now has 1,259,000 unemployed, to whom she is giving monthly doles. Many feel, and have felt that England did an unwise thing when she undertook the system of feeding her unemployed. This system has a tendency to foster indolence. No charity is good when it increases the pauperism of the country. The greatest charity which any of us can extend is that of helping one to help himself. It is, too, a much-needed charity. Most of us aid the poor, but when the poor rise to a living level we seek to suppress them.

FRENCHMEN GETTING SOBER.—

Figures from France show that Frenchmen are getting soberer every year. The figures from every department in the country show that the French people are drinking less than 50 per cent of the liquor consumed by them previous to the war. This decrease in drink is attributed to two causes —first, increased taxation, and second, to the eight-hour day. Another interesting fact is that wine, among the working classes particularly, is supplanting stronger drink. These things would seem to indicate that the war helped Europe in spite of the suffering it entailed. While we in America are attributing all our ills to the effects of the war, France seems to be on the mend, morally at least. "It is an ill wind that blows nobody good."

AN INDUSTRIAL WONDER.—

According to figures recently released, the Ford Motor Company made an average profit of $47 on every Ford truck and tractor sold. Two million one hundred thousand of these were sold, and the profit was consequently around one hundred million dollars. This vast company is owned entirely by only two men—Henry Ford and his son, Edsel. The total assets of the company exceed six hundred and forty-four million dollars. It has on hand three hundred million in cash, and a surplus of $532,000,000, one hundred million dollars more than in 1923. The Ford Company has been one of the most phenomenally developed industries in all history, and it is well styled an industrial wonder. To have so much money imposes a great responsibility, and we are prone to wonder if the great financiers ever ponder that side of the question; but their responsibility is no greater than ours in proportion to their possessions. The landlord expected just as much of the man with one talent as of the man with five. Many people often criticize the men of great wealth, and fail to see that they are administering their own affairs miserably so far as God is concerned in his relation to their possessions.

FACTS TO BLUSH ABOUT.—

According to figures recently gathered by the census bureau and cited by sociologists, Pagan Japan is far ahead of Christian America in the preservation of the sanctity of the marriage relation. The figures show that the grist of the divorce mill in the United States is on the increase, while in Japan it is steadily declining. The rate of increase in this country bodes ill for the cradle and for the generation of tomorrow. During 1923 the courts of this country granted 165,000 divorces, or one for every seven and five-tenths marriages. In Switzerland, where it is just as easy to secure a divorce as in the United States, there is only one divorce for every sixteen marriages, and in other countries the divorce ratio is much lower still. In much-talked-about France, where so many rich Americans and filmland stars go for their divorces, there is but one divorce for every twenty-one marriages; in Denmark, one to twenty-two; in Germany, one to twenty-four; in New Zealand, one to twenty-four; in Norway, one to ninety-six; while our neighbor, Canada, has only one divorce to every 161 marriages. Japan presents a lower rate than the U. S., with only one divorce to every eight marriages. These figures are facts which should cause Americans to blush with shame, but facts which should determine us on some course that would lead ultimately to the minimizing of this evil. If the present divorce rate continues, and increases in the future as in the past, the future of the country is seriously jeopardized. Some one remarked recently that being a baby in this country was one of the most dangerous occupations, and the present prevalence of the divorce evil is not the least of the things which menaces him. In the face of the facts, what may we expect from the next generation? We find that they are now criminally inclined, but in the face of these figures, how could it be otherwise?

NOTES-PERSONALS

The Florida Legislature has passed a law making compulsory the reading of the Bible, without comment, daily in the public schools of the State.

The Christian Temple, Norfolk, Dr. L. E. Smith, pastor, has received 179 members since October 1st—an increase of over 17 per cent in membership.

The Board of Religious Education, Miss Pattie Coghill, secretary, 11 Newton Street, Boston, Mass., has "Children's Day" programs for free distribution. See notice in this issue of THE SUN.

From "The Bulletin," First Christian Church, Richmond: "Rev. W. S. Wells, who has been attending the Union Theological Seminary, in Richmond, has been forced to give up his work on account of his health."

Elon commencement, always an event in our Church life, begins Sunday, May 24th, and closes Tuesday P. M., May 26th. A large attendance is expected, and for the first time our beautiful campus and splendid new buildings will please the eye and gladden the hearts of all who attend.

Our work at Richmond steadily grows. Thirty-two members have been received since October 1st. There were 108 in the Sunday School Sunday, April 26th, and a new primary class was formed, with Mrs. Rountree as teacher. Dr. Walters and his people evidently believe in building from the ground up—the only secure way to build a congregation as well as a house, both of which require time, persistence, patience, and sacrificial service.

Our Reidsville Church, Rev. R. A. Whitten, pastor, has just experienced a most gracious revival, Rev. C. H. Rowland, D. D., Greensboro, being the preacher and evangelist for the meetings. Within a week from the time the meetings began, 85 members had been received into our Church, four into other Churches, and twenty-one names sent in of those who wished to join at an early date. There were considerably over 100 conversions reported, and the Church was wonderfully revived and quickened to newness of life.

The remarkable story of the Truitts, appearing elsewhere in THE SUN, was furnished THE SUN by that "Cheerful Cripple" Upton G. Wilson, Madison, N. C., who, while himself unable to walk a step in thirteen years, manages to find out what is going on in the world and tell it to others in an appreciative manner. The Greensboro Daily News, in its Sunday edition, May 3d, carried the Wilson's story to thousands, and Wilson wanted the Christian family, to whom the Truitts belong, to have the story also; hence his copy sent to THE SUN.

What a wonderful meeting, indeed, our Reidsville Church has just experienced! It seems to have broken all records for a meeting of ten days in receiving members. A Church of 151 members almost doubling its membership within less than two weeks! Evidently the hustling and consecrated pastor, Rev. R. A. Whitten, has been wide awake and doing great things for the Lord since he became pastor of this Church a few brief months ago. Bro. Whitten is one of our most energetic, faithful and devoted pastors; and, as his letter elsewhere states, the Church was fortunate in securing, as preacher for the meetings, that prince of pastors and evangelist, Dr. C. H. Rowland.

Mothers' Day was fittingly observed at Union, Alamance County, N. C., Sunday, May 10th. A great congregation, much larger than could be accommodated in the house, was present, and the pastor, Dr. P. H. Fleming, preached a timely and appropriate sermon at the morning hour, followed by the communion in which many worshipers took part. All were delighted to see Rev. A. F. Isely present and able to have part in the service. Bro. Isely has been quite feeble for some months, but seems stronger now. THE SUN's editor preached in the afternoon. Union Ridge Church and community have a wide and deserving reputation for intelligence, hospitality, fellowship and faithful service. It is a joy to worship with such a Church and people.

Reidsville correspondent to Greensboro Daily News, May 13th: "Records were smashed and somewhat of a feat was accomplished at the revival which closed Sunday at the Montgomery Street Christian Church. Although the meeting lasted but one week, 137 applicants were received into membership in this and the other Churches of the city, and besides many professed Christians went forward from time to time during the meeting and rededicated their lives in the service of the Master. Sunday was the red-letter day in the history of the Church, at which time eighty-eight persons were received into the Church. Dr. C. H. Rowland, D. D., of Greensboro, did the preaching during the meeting, and great crowds filled the Church at all services." Many others have joined since Sunday, carrying the total to over 100 who have joined the Church as a result of the meeting. We rejoice with the faithful and wide-awake pastor, Rev. R. A. Whitten, and with Dr. Rowland, who rendered such fruit-bearing service.

Many CHRISTIAN SUN readers will recall a timely article appearing in our columns some months ago from the pen of Mrs. Thomas J. Arnold, Elkins, W. Va., entitled "The Benefits and Blessings of the Tithe," the same being a testimony of joy from an experience of over fifty years. A personal letter, May 6th, from this humble and willing servant of God says, "I was much gratified to learn through your letter that my little article on the tithe was having a more extended service through the Stewardship Department of the General Christian Convention. My little and weak effort to serve our Master was written and launched in prayer, and when finished I told Him I gave it to Him to so dispose the hearts of men to use it and circulate it as He saw fit for His glory." No wonder the little article has met with such favor and has been read by thousands. It was conceived in consecration, born and sent forth in prayer. We have some copies yet in pamphlet form for free distribution. Address request to Editor CHRISTIAN SUN, Elon College, N. C.

CHILDREN'S DAY PROGRAMS.

A "Children's Day" program has been prepared by Miss Pattie Coghill, field secretary of the Board of Religious Education, and are for free distribution to the Sunday Schools.

The second Sunday in June has been designated as "Children's Day" by the Southern Christian Convention, with the request that the offering be sent to the Board of Religious Education. Write to Miss Pattie Coghill, 11 Newton Street, Boston, Mass., for your programs.

TESTED BECAUSE TRUSTED.

A father who was an officer during the war, with his son under him, wrote out an order, called his son, and said, "Deliver this to the general down on the firing line." The young man placed the message under his belt, mounted his horse and rode away. The enemy's bullets flew thick and fast while he made the dangerous ride. The father stood and watched, and waited, and wondered, while that strange conflict raged in his soul that must take place where the father and the officer are one person, and the son and subaltern the other, and that son exposed to danger by the father's command. At last, the son rode back into his father's presence with his foam-covered horse and dismounted. The father threw his arms about his boy's neck and said: "My son, I did not want you killed, but I had to send a man that I could trust." God's bravest and best soldiers are in the hard places.—Ex.

HEAVENLY BREEZES.

A ship was lying becalmed while the sea around it was like glass and the air seemed motionless. Presently a pennant on top of the tall mast was fluttering gently. There was no hint of breeze on water or on the deck of the vessel, but the sailors spread the upper sails. Soon the ship was moving through the quiet waters, being driven by the currents of the upper air. This story is a parable of life. The atmosphere in which we move on the street, in the shop, in the office, as we transact business and social affairs, may seem dead, and we may feel that life is unprogressive and dead, but above all these there are currents of life like the breezes of the upper air, and, if only we will spread our sails and take advantage of them, the soul can cease standing still. We can catch the impetus of higher and better things. —Exchange.

A PRAYER.

The way is long, Father, and sometimes very weary. We crowd and bruise one another in passing and often we forget the goal in the heart and hurry of the pilgrimage. Start us forth, we pray, each day with fresh courage, and whisper in our hearts a little song to gladden our steps as we take up the burdens anew. Grant that the lightest of these may ever be our conscience, and may we never be too laden with personal trouble to carry the balm of sympathy for friend or foe. Above all, grant us the gift of clear vision, that we may pierce the doubt and fears of the passing moment and dwell with unfaltering confidence upon the ultimate fact of Thy love.—Alice Hegan Rice, in God's Minute.

REIDSVILLE.

The Lord hath done great things for us, whereof we are glad Our revival at the Reidsville Church began May 3d and continued until May 13th, the last service being a baptismal service, which was conducted on the evening of the 13th by the writer, at which time ninety-two were baptized. This was the largest number for baptism at one time I had ever witnessed. The Church, on this occasion, was packed to its capacity, and a large company of people remained on the outside.

As I try to tell of the meeting, I find that words are but feeble messengers to convey my feelings. There is a joy within my heart that is beyond the grasp of human language, and, as Paul said, "Not for me only, but for all those who have been blessed, and who took part in this great work." Not by might, nor by power, but by my spirit, saith the Lord.

We were fortunate in having Rev. C. H. Rowland, D. D., of Greensboro, with us to do the preaching, and at each service his message was clear and convincing, his sermons were practical and powerful, and he labored with unceasing energy. Dr. Rowland won a place in the hearts of our people here, and the seed he has sown will spring up and bring forth fruit for the kingdom. The result of his work, eternity alone can measure. God bless Dr. Rowland.

During our meeting, the children, with young and tender hearts, accepted Jesus as their personal Saviour, and promised to give their lives in service for Him. No doubt, many of them will go and carry the message to others. In fact, some of them did so in the meeting just closed. Young men came and confessed and accepted our Christ; young ladies, with tear-dimmed eyes, but bright faces, stepped out on the Lord's side; mothers came with penitent hearts, and even old men and women came and said, "I am no more worthy to be called Thy son, but seek a servant's place." Our hearts rejoiced as we saw fathers, husbands, sons, daughters, mothers, and friends unite with us in the service for our dear Lord, souls have been born into the kingdom, and the spirit of the meeting will live on and reach others.

First of all, in regard to the success of the meeting, I desire humbly to give praise to the Lord, who said, "If my people will return unto me, I will open the windows of heaven and pour you out a blessing that there shall not be room enough to contain it." He said also, "If ye ask anything in my name, I will do it." And so I feel that the revival was prayed down, and that it began in the hearts of our people many days before the series of meetings began. The personal work done by the faithful ones who put forth every effort to win souls for Christ was no less effective than the great preaching by Dr. Rowland. Apart from the personal effort of the many who did so much, together with their wrestling with God in prayer, I am sure that I would not have the joy of telling of the great work that has been done. I wish to say to those Churches who desire to see your Church revived, and expect the preacher that conducts the service to do the work, remember that Jesus said, "He that would be greatest, let him be servant of all," and if you would have real and lasting joy, try to win some one for Christ.

During the meeting one hundred and thirty-eight came for Church membership to our Church, and the other Churches of the city. On Mothers' Day, at the morning service, we received into the Church eighty-five members, the greatest service I ever conducted. At this service there were fifteen professions. This was the red-letter day in the history of our Church here, and the memory of that service will remain in the hearts and minds of all who witnessed it. At the evening service the same day, three were received into the Church, and before the close of the meeting we receivd into the Church 107. Of course, we still have some others to receive who could not be present at the time of receiving, and in addition to the 138 applicants for Church membership (some of this number were by letter), many Church members came and pledged themselves anew, renewing their vows to the Lord, among this number were representatives of other local Churches.

And now that God has so richly blessed us, and for which we most heartily thank Him, and desire to give Him all the praise, we are conscious that the great task is before us, in caring for these new-born souls. Brethren, pray for us in this great undertaking, that the mantle of love, the counsel of the wise, the prayers of the faithful may encircle, and prove a wall of strong defense about each of them, and may each of our Church members prove a big brother to them in every trial.

R. A. WHITTEN, Pastor.

GREAT OCCASION AT DOVER.

Wednesday was a big day for the St. Paul's Brotherhood of People's Christian Church and for Dover by reason of the presence of Hon. William Jennings Bryan in our midst. It was a day when all party lines were forgotten and the men and women of both parties who are admirers of Mr. Bryan because of his oratorical ability and because of his ideals as a citizen and as a man among men, welcomed him to Dover on what was likely his last lecture tour through this section of the country.

A committee from the St. Paul's Brotherhood, consisting of Col. J. Henry Hazel, president of the brotherhood; H. F. Lynch, secretary, and the pastor of the Church, Dr. R. C. Helfenstein, met Mr. Bryan at West Chester in the afternoon and brought him to Dover in Mr. Hazel's automobile.

At 6:15, the executive committee of the brotherhood and some of the members had a delightful dinner in the Church dining-room with Mr. Bryan as guest of honor. The ladies of Mrs. John B. Hutton's Bible Class served the dinner.

At the dinner the pastor of the Church extended a cordial welcome to Mr. Bryan in behalf of the Church and community, to which Mr. Bryan responded with a few words of greeting.

The large audience began early in the evening to gather in the auditorium of the Church where the lecture was given, people from a radius of fifty miles attending. Seated on the platform with Mr. Bryan were the president of the brotherhood, Col. J. Henry Hazel; the pastor of the Church, Dr. R. C. Helfenstein; the chairman of the Lyceum Course, H. Eldridge Lynch, and the vice-president of the brotherhood, Mr. John S. Collins.

Col. J. Henry Hazel, president of the brotherhood, was master of ceremonies, and after briefly presenting the ideals of the brotherhood, its program of service to the community and the great satisfaction and delight the brotherhood had in being able to arrange to have Mr. Bryan as the guest of the brotherhood to deliver the lecture of the evening, he introduced the pastor of the Church, Dr. R. C. Helfenstein, who, in a brief word of introduction, stated that it had been his privilege to hear Mr. Bryan on eleven former occasions, three times on the same subject as announced for his lecture here, and that he considered him as the leader among the nation's orators.

He said that his great contribution to the nation's ideals and progress will make the name of William Jennings Bryan immortal in the annals of American history; the names of William Jennings Bryan and Theodore Roosevelt in the past were usually thought of as political opponents, but that a study of the writings of these two men on the ideals of citizenship and of government reveals how much they had in common, and how far both were living in advance of the thoughts of their day.

The pastor said that he was proud of the St. Paul's Brotherhood in its general program of service and especially at this time because of their bringing the distinguished guest of the occasion to People's Church to deliver the celebrated lecture entitled "The Two Pictures."

When Mr. Bryan rose to speak, the prolonged applause from the large audience was a marked expression of the admiration those present had for the speaker. Those who have heard him on former occasions were delighted to see that in spite of the years of strenuous life, he still retains his old-time vigor and eloquence. The address was a masterpiece from beginning to end, and those who were fortunate enough to be present will long prize the privilege enjoyed.

PRINCIPLES OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

(1) The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.

(2) Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.

(3) The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.

(4) Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship, and of Church membership.

(5) The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by, all.

THE PURPOSE OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

The purpose of this Church is to cultivate a spirit of union among the followers of our Lord Jesus Christ of every persuasion, and to secure, if possible, the associate efforts of all true religious teachers in pointing the wicked to "the Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world."

The peculiar doctrines and tenets which have confused and distracted the Christian world are remanded to private judgment, and hence cease to be matters for debate, only in so far as may be necessary to prevent a sectarian influence from entering the Church.

This Church requires no compromise of faith on the part of any child of God in order to communion or fellowship; here denominational distinctions cease to exist, and Christian love binds the brotherhood together.

The purpose of this Church will be consummated in the conversion of the world and the union of all Christians.

PAYMENT OF SALARIES TO MINISTERS.

Salary is derived from a word which means salt, and it certainly is the salt to a minister's reputation. Nothing so mars the reputation of a minister as debt; and yet salaries often come in so slowly and so irregularly that there is no escape from debt for the actual necessities of life. There is no plea here for larger salaries, though conditions, no doubt, justify such a plea; but the plea here is for systematic payment of salaries. In many cases, there is no regularity in salary payments as to time or sums paid. A few dollars now and a few dollars then, and toward the end of the year a spasmodic effort to "pay up the salary by Conference." This custom is antiquated, unjust, and thoughtful consideration on the part of laymen would correct the custom and bring the matter up to a reasonable business standard.

Wages are usually paid by the week, and salaries by the month. That is the modern business method. It is reasonable and fair, and its application to ministers would correct much embarrassment and worry on the part of the minister. Nothing worries an honest man more than debt; and nothing worries a housewife more than not to have the real necessities of life. It must be kept in mind that the necessities in a minister's home are the same as in other homes, and these necessities must be purchased all through the month. There is nothing that the Church is more derelict in than in the payment of salaries. It is as much the duty of the congregation to pay the salary of their pastor monthly as it is his duty to preach every month. Imagine a minister preaching occasionally, and then get busy toward the end of the year and fill his appointments with great enthusiasm. Such a course would put him out of the pulpit, much less out of his pastorate.

The most reasonable and the most practicable way to make payments is by the month. If the Church has monthly appointments, the pastor should be paid at every appointment for that month. Where his whole time is given to one Church, the same plan of monthly payment should be used. Nothing short of such a system can be counted as good business, much less as good religion. Business is at its best when it it controlled by religion, and religion is at its best when conducted as a business; and both are at their best when they work together.

The fact is that monthly payments is the easiest method of paying the preacher, and it certainly is for the pastor and his family. What is true of the salary is true also of all Church obligations. Conference money should be paid by the month, and not by the year, as so many Churches have heretofore done. Two reasons justify this appeal. It is easier to pay in parts by the month than by the year as a whole. The repetition of a habit makes it easier than trying to do all at once. Good habits are just as hard to break as bad habits, and all habits give pleasure. Let the Church "arise and shine, her light having come and the glory of the Lord having arisen upon her" in this matter of paying pastors by the month, as well as in worship.

WILL THE DENOMINATION MEASURE UP?

A very, very small fraction of the members, even of the Christian denomination, know what they have now in buildings and equipment at Elon College. One can devoutly hope that no other people or denomination depreciate their own as do we Christians. There seems to be a habit amongst us of thinking or feeling that we can't quite have Church enterprises and institutions equal to those of other denominations. Well, we shall now have to get out of this habit, so far as a Church college is concerned. If any one doubts—and certainly many do doubt, and will doubt—all we have to say is what Philip said to Nathaniel (when that guileless one doubted and hesitated about the personality of Jesus), "Come and see."

If there is a Christian, from Main to Florida, or from Canada to Mexico, who doubts now that we Christians have a college plant and equipment equal in symmetry, efficiency, beauty and adequacy to that of any other denomination, all we have to say is "Come and see." Our fine administrative and professional buildings are costly, commodious, convenient, fire-proof, artistic, modern to the last detail; adequate for every teaching and professional service, the last work in equipment for science, physics, chemistry, mathematics, literature, drawing, designing, business, Christian education, and the rest. THE SUN is not boasting. It is not even telling half that is to be told. "Come and see." If the Christian denomination can't and won't take now a pardonable and praiseworthy pride in the buildings and equipment of Elon College as it is, then the case is hopeless, and it will not take pardonable pride in anything. "Come and see."

Here is hoping, and advising, that if a CHRISTIAN SUN reader ever again hears any one say, "Oh! Elon College is cheap, small, not to be compared in buildings and equipment with other colleges"—just say to such an one "You are an ignoramus, and don't know what you are talking about. Come and see."

But this now is what THE SUN is most deeply concerned about: Will the Christian denomination measure up? Are we going to measure up in patronage and in support, in loyalty and allegiance, in duty and in devotion to the demands and privileges of the new and greater Elon? That is the question.

There seems now to be no good reason why every family in the Church, with sons and daughters to educate, should not patronize Elon College Her buildings, as already stated, certainly meet the demands and the tastes of the most exacting for all purposes of a liberal education; her faculty, numbering twenty-six bona fide teachers (without counting helpers and assistants in administrative work), are on a par in scholarship, ability and reputation with the best in the State; and the morale, the spirit and the Christian influence of the institution are unsurpassed in any college of higher learning any where; and the charges for all these advantages are equal to, if they do not surpass, the most reasonable and conservative to be found in any college of similar grade and equipment.

Will we now measure up? For these years, many of our pastors and large-visioned laymen have dreamed and desired to see the day when our own college would be equal to, or surpass, the best to be had for higher learning, Christian culture and scholarship. Well, our dreams and our desires in this instance have come true. And now, will we measure up? New privileges and new opportunities create new duties, new demands. for our enlarged, adequate and superb Elon College are now upon us.

Brethren and beloved, fellow-workers in Christ Jesus, wearing together His glorious name and seeking to build up His imperishable kingdom on the earth—will we measure up?

II. RESPONSIBILITY OF THE CHRISTIAN DENOMINATION IN EVANGELISM.

At the Burlington Convention, our beloved denomination, in keeping with the progressive measures being adopted by other denominations, elected a Board of Evangelism, the duty of which board is to study our problem of evangelism as a whole, and to stimulate and systematize the great work of evangelism throughout the denomination. The said Convention, moreover, unanimously adopted the recommendation calling for a program of evangelism to increase our membership 25,000 during the coming quadrennium. To realize this objective set by our denomination at the Burlington Convention, we will have to receive into our Churches, at a conservative estimate, 35,000 members during the four years' time in order to allow for losses by death—both physical and spiritual. The goal set is to increase our membership 25,000, not merely to receive 25,000 members into our fellowship, but to receive sufficient members into our Churches during the four years to provide that at the time of the next General Convention in the fall of 1926, the Christian denomination will have 125,000 members on its various Church rolls instead of 100,000 members, which it has approximately at the present time.

This means that the local Churches should increase their net membership at least 7 per cent each year. In order to realize this objective, it will be necessary for each Church to seek to have a 10 per cent net increase in membership each year in order to offset the failure of the Churches which, by not attempting to attain the proposed goal, will be preparing for their funerals instead. And it is needless to say, by way of parenthesis, that the Churches that do not respond to this evangelistic objective of the denomination might just as well begin preparing for their funerals, for a Church that ceases to be evangelistic in spirit, in purpose, and in program cannot long survive. There is no reason for such Churches longer to encumber the earth. The Master of the vineyard has some very definite pronouncements against the Church that no longer bears fruit in the winning of souls. The time has come when it is not enough for any Church merely to be known as evangelical—it must be evangelistic.

Our objective as a denomination is that each Church shall put on a definite year-round program of evangelism in the interest of experiencing a 10 per cent net increase of membership each year, and thereby to increase the membership of the denomination to 125,000 members by 1926. There is certainly not a well-wisher of the Christian Church that does not realize the imperative need of such an objective. No one could fail to hope that the objective will be realized. It is not a question of whether we are going merely to hold our own, which is all we have been doing for the past twenty-five years, or whether we are going to increase or decrease. It is a question of whether we are going to increase or cease to be.

Our goal is not only desirable, but it is also possible. If our present membership of approximately 100,000 people should all become evangelistic, and every Christian would seek to "win one" person to Christ and the Church each year, our goal would be realized. If every ten members would combine their prayers and their efforts in the winning of but one person each year to Christ and the Church during the next four years, we would reach our goal. If our religion does not mean enough to us, if it does not thrill us and inspire us so that any ten members cannot "win one" person to believe what we claim to believe, then it is a reflection upon us and upon the religion we profess. But even the ten do not have to depend upon their own strength alone, for the very God of heaven will work with them and through them in the task of winning the one.

And if a person believes in the gospel of Jesus Christ as being God's only power to save, if one really believes it, his heart will be aflame with the passion of Christ, and the master-passion of his life will be to win another to his Christ and to his Church, and such a person will not expect the assistance of nine other Christians to help him win one. He will win the one, and more, by himself. If all of our members had that passion, the passion which every Christian ought to have, and must have, if he is true to his Christ, we could double the membership of our denomination every five years.

One of the first tasks is to make Christians out of some of our members; Christians who will be known not only by what they do not do that is wrong, but who will be pre-eminently known by what they do that is useful and helpful to humanity. Too many people in the Church are spiritual dispeptics. They have been fed on the word of God from infancy and have failed to practice it in the different relationships of life.

It is not strange that four people out of every five in the average community are indifferent to the Church, when the one out of the five who is in the Church is indifferent to the salvation of the four who are outside.

If each of our 500 pastors would win only fifteen persons to Christ each year for the next twelve years—fifteen a year—we could double our numerical strength in that time. Fifteen each year—22 days for each prospect—think of it! Is there a single pastor in the entire denomination, no matter how small his Church or how limited his territory, who cannot win at least one person to Christ every twenty-two days? An automobile salesman who cannot find a customer in every twenty-two days would soon go out of business. A life-insurance agent who cannot write a new policy every twenty-two days would soon have to take down his sign. A minister who is not ambitious and energetic enough, and who does not have enthusiasm enough for God and for his fellow-men to fire him with the determination to win at least one person for Christ on the average of every twenty-two days ought to be ashamed to look at himself in the looking-glass. What if the early disciples had been as ambitionless as some pastors in the work of evangelism? If they had, history would tell us a different story, and the probability is that the organized Church would have failed in its infancy. It was not the organized Church that Jesus said was to be invincible against the powers of hell. If they had, history would tell us a different story, and the probability is that the organized Church would have failed in its infancy. It was not the organized Church that Jesus said was to be invincible against the powers of hell. It was the fellowship of human hearts that beat in union with His—that was the Church of which He spoke.

And unless the Church of today bestir itself with a keener sense of its evangelistic obligations, its future cannot be long. Pastors and laymen must recognize that God is holding each Church responsible for its own perpetuity and growth. Each Church must reproduce itself. The idea of importing an itinerant evangelist every year or two to increase the membership does not relieve the pastor and the Church of their obligation. And the pastor who cannot prove the work of an evangelist in winning the nonbelievers of his community to Christ and the Church has missed his calling. (To be Continued.)

MAKING DEMOCRACY SAFE.

Intelligence and character are foundation-stones on which democracy's superstructure must rest. Freedom must inevitably degenerate into anarchy, as in Russia, where either of these necessary bulwarks is lacking. Intelligence without character but augments the evil a man may perpetrate upon his fellows. Character without intelligence, when it has not contented itself with pietistic nothingness, has often been innocently duped into sordid and hurtful conduct. Intelligence and character are both absolutely essential if democracy is to be a safe method of political organization and of social enterprise.

President Coolidge addressed the National Education Association on July 4, 1924, and spoke brave words and true when he said: "A trained intelligence can do much, but there is no substitute for morality, character, and religious convictions. Unless these abide, American citizenship will be found unequal to its task." Long ago George Washington had declared that national morality cannot prevail without religion. Roosevelt, always positive in his convictions and fearless in their proclamation, said, with all the vigor of which his energetic soul was capable, that persons educated in intellect and not educated in morals and religion, will become a menace to the nation.

Happily we can provide for intelligence and character at the same time. The two are not antagonistic to each other. They together constitute a beautiful unity, and neither is complete without the other.

In our local communities, the public schools are giving themselves to the challenging task of making intelligence a universal asset in American life. At the same time, the home and the Church are functioning as never before in their commendable zeal to equip the youth of the day with high ideals of conduct. The prevalence of juvanile delinquency these twin agencies of religious education and Christian nurture will ultimately eradicate from the local community's educational system.

But what about that increasing army of our brightest boys and girls who betake themselves to our colleges for a larger and ampler preparation for their life-work, far removed from the sheltering environs of home? These are to be our leaders for the most part. Our leadership is our fate. What of them?

The Church must minister to them. The Church is ministering to them through its Christian colleges, where the atmosphere of home and of religion is provided as the inspiration of all study and all life. The Church will never forsake these seminaries of her leadership, and parents with a true sense of character values will patronize them more and more as their happy fruitage in Christian character continues perennially to grace home and Church and community life.

Christian education makes democracy safe. It combines intelligence and character in all its effort and product. It is the hope of the home, of the Church, of the nation.

Speak with your neighbor about your Church and Church paper. Win him to one or both. It is your privilege and duty.

WHAT SALVATION INCLUDES.

In speaking of a pastor of one of our Churches recently, a man who makes some pretensions to grace and piety was recently heard to remark: "He is a real good man, but he is carried away by the old-fashioned and out-of-date notions regarding holiness."

We are not at all troubled about what this brother thinks about his pastor, but we are troubled about where this brother is going to spend eternity if he rejects the precious light of the Word of God and walks in the light of human reason and misinterpretation of the Word of God, which plainly declares: "And the blood of Jesus Christ, His Son, cleanseth (present tense) us from all sin."

According to the plain teaching of the Word of God, salvation includes: (1) The pardon of sin; (2) washing away of iniquity (Psa. 51:2); (3) blotting out of transgressions (Psa. 51:1); (4) peace with God (Rom. 5:1); (5) purity of heart (Matt. 5:8, Acts 15:9); (6) sanctification (1 Thess. 4:3; (7) the baptism with the Holy Ghost as a personal experience (Matt. 3:11).

Let us not try to explain away the plain teaching of God's Word regarding sin and salvation, but let us meet the conditions and experience the grace of Christ, who is "able to save to the uttermost all who come unto God by Him."

Most readers cannot visualize the meaning of the figures 400,000,000 people as representing the population of China. China's Millions suggests a new basis of computation, as follows: "If you were asked whether there were more people in China than individual alphabet letters in the Bible, how would you reply? Some would probably say, 'Oh! there must be more letters in the Bible.' On the contrary, there are eighty times as many heathen in China as there are individual letters in our English Bible. Do you realize it? Eighty souls for whom Christ died going out into eternal night in china for every single letter in the Book which has brought life and light to us. Think of this as you read your daily portion."—Missionary Review of the World.

SUFFOLK LETTER.

The Travelers' Protective Association of Virginia held its annual meeting in Staunton, Va., on May 8-9th, with 216 delegates present. It was my privilege to attend as chaplain of Post P, of Suffolk. A. D. Brinkley, E. C. Luke, Col. J. B. Pinner, and I, went in A. D. Brinkley's car, leaving Suffolk at 7:45 A. M., May 7th, and reaching home at 6:20 P. M., May 10th, after a delightful trip in fine weather of 630 miles.

The T. P. A. is a national organization, made up of business and traveling men, with State organizations. There are over 117,000 members in the United States, and nearly 5,000 members in Virginia. Its primary object is the cultivation of social and business relations, the development of business along ethical and moral lines, and to develop a co-operative spirit in the business world.

It has raised the standard of business and traveling men, acquainted men of different sections and different business with one another, improved methods of doing business, the character of men themselves, and by resolutions and suggestions improved roads, hotel and railroad accommodations, and thus served the public in many useful ways. Staunton is a city of 12,500, has two State institutions, a military school of 600, a female college, good hotels, and surrounded by a great agricultural area, with mountains and climate that invite tourists from far and near.

The local post gave the visitors a trip to the Grottoes, formerly known as Weyers Cave, some twenty miles down the pike. The wonders of the underground caverns of Virginia are wonders indeed! The new Stonewall Jackson Hotel was headquarters for delegates and visitors. The meetings were held in the Beverly Theater, and the character of the meeting may be judged by great addresses by such men as Homer Ferguson, president of the great Newport News Shipyard, Newport News, Va.

About 2. P. M. on Saturday, May 9th, our party left Staunton, drove down the Valley Pike ninety-seven miles to Winchester, in sight of mountains, wheatfields, orchards, splendid homes, towns and villages, an enchanting panorama all the way. Passing through Winchester without stop, we reached little Washington by way of Front Royal, and spent the night in that county seat of Rappahannock, older than Washington, D. C. Leaving early on Sunday, we had breakfast at Culpeper, dinner at Richmond, and back to Suffolk by way of Petersburg and Smithfield, and on good roads all the way going and returning. Human contact does two important things. It discovers more good in men than bad. It unifies men in thought and action, and adds progress to society in business, morals, intelligence, and success. All we know we learn from others, and we learn that best when we touch their lives.

ELON LETTER.

Elon's thirty-fifth commencement begins with the concert on Saturday evening, May 23d, and closes with the graduation exercises on Tuesday, May 26th. This is the first commencement in the completed plant of the greater Elon rebuilding program. The exterior of the College has been transformed since January 18, 1923, but Alumni and friends who return for the approaching closing services will find the same fine, warm Elon Spirit permeating the institution, the Elon Spirit which every Elon student cherishes as one of the most wholesome character building influences ever brought to bear upon his or her developing life.

A splendid array of talent will give dignity and worthwhileness to the exercises that will make up the 1925 commencement. The baccalaureate sermon is to be preached by that stalwart educational leader of our Church, President Albert G. Caris, of Defiance College. President Caris always brings a real message. He knows young life, knows its pulsing aspiration, its noble idealism, and sympathizes with its highest hopes.

Mrs. L. E. Smith, '07, is to give the Alumni Address. She will speak on the new challenges to womanhood. She has nobly helpmeeted her distinguished husband in his great work. Her address will be looked forward to as interpreting to our day the inner impulses of true womanliness.

Dr. Robert L. Kelly, of New York City, will give the literary address in connection with the graduation exercises. He is the renowned executive secretary of the Association of American Colleges and of the Council of Church Boards of Education. Dr. Kelly is a leading figure in all the educational gatherings of the country. His researches have made him an authority and his catholicity of spirit is rarely paralleled. He will speak on the significant tendencies of Christian Education. No man in the world is more competent to speak on this them than Dr. Kelly.

A splendid commencement is anticipated. We trust our friends will make our anticipations real and to themselves happy and memorable experiences.

WHAT TUBERCULOSIS IS.

Tuberculosis is a disease caused by the growth in the lungs of a germ called the tubercle bacillus. One person out of every ten who dies is the victim of these germs. It is estimated that 22,905 people are infected with the tubercle bacillus in North Carolina, and 2,545 people in the State died of this disease in 1924. The death rate has been cut in half during the last decade.

Infection from the tubercle bacillus usually occurs by the germ entering the body in early childhood. At the time, sickness rarely results. For years, the disease may lie inactive. Fortunately for us, the germ of tuberculosis does not grow easily in the human body. All civilized peoples have a certain amount of resistance. Anything that causes the weakening of the system helps to lower the natural resistance of the body. After repeated exposures to the germ, overwork and wrong living, some time between twenty and forty, when the strain is hardest and bodily resistance is lowered, active disease often results from the childhood infection.

When the disease becomes active, it causes a softening and breaking down of the lung tissue. If a person suffering from active disease is put under favorable conditions, which means at first complete rest in bed, right feeding, fresh air and wise living, gradually a scar tissue will form where the healthy lung tissue has broken down. If you or any of your friends have tuberculosis, you can get well. The proper care and treatment when the disease is active, and constant right living after this, will give the "T. B." the same lease on life that his unaffected brother has.

By Upton G. Wilson.

Did you ever hear of Mr. and Mrs. Lee Truitt? Quite likely you haven't, for Mr. and Mrs. Truitt have never done any of the things that currently obtain publicity. They have neither stolen nor murdered and are still on good terms with each other.

Therefore, they are comparatively unknown. So far as I know, the name of neither has appeared in a news item of any sort. They live ten miles or more from the nearest town, and the happenings of their community are rarely chronicled on the printed page.

Perhaps it is because of this very isolation that Mr. and Mrs. Truitt are now to be introduced to the public. Had they lived in town, probably no reason would exist for such an introduction. Who knows? God, of course, can make a man or a woman wherever He chooses, but He seems to have better success in making them in the country than in town. At least, the country is where many great men and women have been made.

But I am not saying that Mr. and Mrs. Lee Truitt are great. Indeed, no! Why, Mr. Truitt himself told me that he can barely write his name, while Mrs. Truitt makes no pretensions to higher learning.

I do say, though, that God can make a great man or a great woman on a farm if He chooses to do so. And what I mean to tell you here is what Mr. and Mrs. Lee Truitt, working together and with the help of God, have done, leaving the reader to judge for himself as to their greatness.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Truitt were born and reared in Rockingham County. Before marriage, Mrs. Truitt was Miss Elizabeth Simpson. Her first husband was Spencer Truitt, a relative of her present husband. Spencer Truitt saw service as a soldier in the Confederate Army, and underwent such hardships during this service that he never afterwards was strong.

He died of lung trouble a few years after marrying Miss Simpson, leaving her with three small children. His estate was not large, consisting of a small farm and a mule. The Civil War had wrecked the Truitt and Simpson fortunes. It was to this little farm that Lee Truitt came later on, and it is on this farm he and Mrs. Truitt now live.

Their first problems were primal ones—to provide food and clothing for themselves and children. This, I am informed, was not always easy. Times were hard and prices of farm products low. But somehow they managed to get along.

Lee Truitt, as has already been said, has no education. He didn't have the opportunity of getting one. There had been Simpsons and Truitts, however, who were educated, and Mr. and Mrs. Truitt determined that there should be a rebirth of learning in their family. This determination, though, was slow in being put into effect.

For there were now six children to feed and clothe. Consequently, James, the oldest Truitt boy, was fourteen years old before he completed the second reader. At eighteen he was teaching a country school. He was slow to get going, but a remarkably fast worker when once started.

Today, James Truitt is the principal of Sanford schools. He is an educated and cultured man, an honor graduate of Elon College, and has done graduate work at the University of North Carolina. He won a $50 award at Elon in his senior year for high scholarship. But it was a rocky road James Truitt traveled to an education, and he got there by hard work.

In September, 1901, with $8 in his pocket and a borrowed suitcase in his hand, he entered Whitsett Institute. He milked cows and served as valet to the horses in a livery stable to pay his board and tuition. It was the Truitt determination that put him through.

There were five other Truitt youngsters, moreover, with the same determination, and they all made use of it. At one time or another they have all graduated from Elon College and have done special work elsewhere. And wherever they have gone they have distinguished themselves by the excellence of their class-work.

The Truitts set up a record at Elon that never has been equaled. No other family, I am told, has had five sons and one daughter to graduate from that institution. It is a record to be proud of.

Howard Early Truitt graduated with honor from Elon in 1911, receiving the Ph. B. degree. Two years later, he received the M. A. degree from the same college. A year ago he received from McCormack Theological Seminary, Chicago, the B. D. degree. He is now pastor of the Christian Church at Waverly, Va.

Reuben Ayers Truitt graduated with honor from Elon in 1919, receiving the A. B. degree. Since then he has completed a prescribed course in theology at Trinity College, now Duke University, and is now an honored Methodist pastor.

John Gallaway Truitt received both the A. B. and M. A. degrees at Elon in 1917. He won the gold medal as champion orator at Elon in 1912, and represented Elon in the peace oratorical contest at Raleigh the same year. He was three times a winner in the annual college debates at Elon and spoke in one of these debates as an opponent of his younger brother, Bryan.

In 1923, John G. Truitt completed, with honor, a course in theology at Princeton University, and received the Th. B. degree. He is now pastor of the First Christian Church of Norfolk, Va.

William Jennings Bryan Truitt graduated with honor from Elon in 1917, receiving the A. B. degree. Since then, he has for three summers done post-graduate work at the University of Virginia and post-graduate work for one summer at the University of Chicago, from which place he is in line for a degree in education.

Bryan Truitt won the State prize of $75 in gold in the State peace oratorical contest in 1914, while in his freshman year at Elon. He spoke against seniors from nearly every college in North Carolina. Bryan Truitt is now principal of three of the city schools of Norfolk, Va.

Essie Mae Truitt, youngest of the Truitt sextet, received B. Mus. degree from Elon in 1920. She has since done post-graduate work in music at North Carolina College, Greensboro. She is at present teaching at Whiteville.

Thus, three of the Truitt boys are preachers and two boys and a girl are teachers. Each of the six holds one or more college degrees and each is doing well in his or her chosen profession. They have justified the sacrifices their mother and father made to keep them in school and college.

And you may be sure that Mr. and Mrs. Truitt did make sacrifices. But they do not regret them. They put all they could make into their children and they feel that their money was wisely invested. They are proud, and justly so, of the records their five sons and daughter have made.

But with their father and mother helping them all they could, it was necessary for the Truitt boys to work their way through college. The little Truitt farm just couldn't grow enough stuff to pay their way, and at the same time feed and clothe these at home. So the boys worked. They did anything and everything to earn an honest penny.

Essie Mae was more fortunate. The farm paid her way. Tobacco was high along about the time she was going to school, and money consequently more plentiful. But—and the attention of other farm girls is respectfully called to what follows—Essie Mae Truitt grew the tobacco which provided the money to pay her way through college. All the Truitts are workers. It was their willingness to work that placed them where they are.

Mother and Father Truitt worked and taught their children to work, to do anything that needed doing on the farm or about the home. The older Truitt boys learned to cook, wash dishes, milk and churn. All of them followed a mule up and down corn and tobacco rows.

Mr. and Mrs. Truitt have always helped each other. Mr. Truitt is a good cook. He can get a meal, put out a washing of clothes, or do any of the other chores around the house with the same facility he hitches up a mule. On the other hand, Mrs. Truitt can do any work about the farm with the exception of plowing. She never has attempted that.

A few weeks ago, Mr. Truitt cooked dinner for his pastor. And from all accounts, the dinner was a good one, too. Gracing the middle of the table was a baked hen with dressing and gravy, and flanking this were other dishes equally tempting, including five nicely browned custards, all prepared and cooked by Mr. Truitt. Mrs. Truitt was too ill to be up that day. The brother of the cloth did the meal ample justice, paying Mr. Truitt's culinary skill a sincere tribute.

Lee Truitt is also a splendid farmer. He raises plenty of things to eat and some to sell. He and Mrs. Truitt sold $56 worth of butter and eggs during last January and February. They had cabbage, turnips and collards from their garden all last winter.

Their thrift has made them prosperous. They have a comfortable home and money laid by for a rainy day. And with their life's ambition realized in the education of their children, they are taking things easier. Still, they haven't quit work entirely, for they wouldn't be happy with nothing to do.

The Truitt home is much more commodious now than when the children were growing up. Then it contained but three good rooms. But since four of the Truitt boys are married and have children of their own, which they like to bring to the old home during the summer, the house has been extensively added to, being one of the most pretentious in the community.

But good farmers and good citizens though they are, Mr. and Mrs. Truitt's greatest accomplishment, of course, has been the rearing of their six splendid children. And while the five Truitt boys rightly may be termed self-made, it didn't just happen that they all went through high school and college and are now making their mark in the world.

There had to be a foundation for them to build on, and Lee Truitt and his wife furnished it.

The Truitt children were taught to go through with whatever they started, no matter how rough the going. Their parents kept their promises to them and demanded that they reciprocate in full. Lee Truitt and his wife carried their children to Sunday School and Church and saw to it that they associated with good companions or with none at all. In a word, they encouraged their children to make something of themselves, and the children did.

And the same training Mr. and Mrs. Lee Truitt gave their own children, they gave their niece, Onie Lee Truitt, whom they raised. This young woman completed high school and then went to business college. She now holds an important clerical position in Winston-Salem.

In guiding the feet of their own children and those of their niece, moreover, Mr. and Mrs. Truitt often consulted a book wherein it is written: "Train up a child in the way he should go, and when he is old, he will not depart from it."

And it would seem that the wise old Hebrew who wrote these words so many centuries ago knew what he was talking about.

THE "Y" IN THE HIGH SCHOOL.

"Real religion begins when it begins to serve. The H. Y. really began when it hitched the horses to the Lord's buggy and started out to make the world better," says Armstrong Perry in an article, "Kansas Started Something," in the June issue of Association Men.

"H. Y.," which is another name for the High School Young Men's Christian Association, started in Kansas thirty-six years ago. Today there are 2,000 H. Y.'s in the United States, with more than 58,000 members, 37,000 of them in Bible-study groups. The Lord's Buggy—no mere figure of speech—came into being soon after Daddy Shirk, then president of the Y. M. C. A., at Abilene, Kans., was invited to organize the boys of the Dickinson County High School.

"He started with Sunday meetings and a Bible class. The boys took their religion seriously. Their leader found that they were rising early, holding prayer meetings at 6 o'clock in the morning, and looking for opportunities to be of service.

"It was decided that one of the most obvious needs was for religious worship in rural homes. An old carryall was obtained. They christened it The Lord's Buggy. In it they went out to hold evening meetings wherever invited. Invitations were never wanting, nor were results. As usual, the blessings, however rich they may have been for those ministered unto, were doubled and trebled to the workers."

The history of the H. Y. is interwoven with "the personal histories of boys whose torches of inspiration were lighted from those held by other boys who started earlier." Among the first members were C. Clifford Cress, for years a missionary in South Africa, and now serving the Baptist Church in Montana; J. Marion Dunlevy, who risked his life for many years fighting Kansas bootleggers; Charles Fenstermacher; George H. Hoyes, one-time Y. M. C. A. secretary at Topeka; W. I. Early, now an officer of the Federal Reserve Bank in Kansas City.

In 1909, the first State high school secretary in the world was appointed in Kansas. Soon afterward, A. A. Hyde, of Wichita, Kan., volunteered to pay the salary of a man who would give all his time to H. Y. clubs. Mr. Hyde, who "tithed backwards, keeping one-tenth for himself and his family and giving nine-tenths to the Lord's work, was cleaned out in a financial panic of thirty years ago. He started making a medicinal compound in a kettle in a room back of a store. Y. M. C. A. boys helped by distributing samples. Today his preparation has an international sale, and Y. M. C. A. boys can get anything they ought to have that Mr. Hyde can give."

Even with the spreading of the H. Y. movement all over the country, there is still an untouched field of 10,000,000 boys.

"Some of these boys are probably passing your window now," writes Mr. Perry. "They may be on the way to a pool room run by a bootlegger, smoking cigarettes as they go and with a flask of moonshine at the exact spot where some one should apply a fatherly hand, or foot, according to the age and stubbornness of the subject. Like all boys, they go to the place where they are most welcome and where folks take the most pains to make them feel their importance. If the bootlegger gets them, it is because he is on the job and the men who could lead them to higher things are asleep at the switch."

MISSIONS

REV. J. O. ATKINSON, D. D., Field Secretary.

STEWARDSHIP AND PROMOTION.

WARREN H. DENISON, Secretary.

A Good Sample.

Herewith is a copy of a letter sent by Rev. Wm. H. Martin, Stewardship Secretary of the Miami, Ohio, Conference to the pastors and Churches of that Conference concerning the putting on of the annual every-member canvass in the Churches of that Conference simultaneously. It is a good letter. It was sent at the proper time. It tells you where you can get any stewardship books published and where to get other suggestions and helps. It impresses the importance of stewardship. Will you tell us, please, what you are doing as Conference stewardship secretary to help carry out this plan of the denomination in the Churches of your Conference? Read the letter for yourself. It stresses thorough preparation.

Every-Member Canvass Day,

"June 14, 1925.

"Dayton, Ohio, April 21, 1925.

"Dear Fellow-Pastor:

"Does your Church have any problems? If so, and you have tried and tried in vain for a solution, then try stewardship. No matter what be the nature of your trouble, you will find a cure in stewardship, for it is God's way, and therefore the only true way. When we work God's program, and do it in his way we are assured of His favor, and consequently of success.

"Of course, you are planning, in accordance with our Conference program, to unite with us in putting on your every-member canvass on June 14th. It is hoped that every Church will fall in line and put on their canvass simultaneously on that day. Your harvest of pledges on the day of your canvass will be in proportion to the thoroughness of your preparation. The best possible preparation is a program of stewardship to be put on by your Church for a period of several weeks preceding the canvass. It will pay you big. One Church of our Conference, which had been a struggling Church with a deficit at the end of each year and things generally at a low ebb, increased its benevolences over $500.00, raised a greatly increased Church budget, came to the end of the year with a surplus in the treasury, enrolled more than a score of tithers, and incidently voted a substantial increase to the pastor's salary. Best of all, the general work of the Church took on a new life, which was manifest in every department. Stewardship solved its problems. God's way can never fail.

"If you have not done so, will you not start now and teach stewardship to your people? Books and literature on the subject may be had of Dr. Denison and from our publishing house in abundance. We urge you to make use of it, for our Church leaders all agree that stewardship is the one outstanding subject that will be stressed by the Church in the present day and in the days just ahead of us. The pastor who wishes to retain his leadership cannot ignore stewardship in these days.

"Now, you will fall in line for the simultaneous every-member canvass on June 14th, won't you? Don't fail to do so. And also if your Church is not paid up on its obligations to the Conference you will see to that at once, won't you? Thanks! and may the Lord bless you and your program of stewardship teaching.

"Faithfully yours,

(Signed) "W. H. MARTIN,

"Conference Secy. of Stewardship and Finance."

Rev. A. W. Hirby, pastor Walnut Hills Church, Dayton, Ohio, says that his Church has thirty-eight bona-fide tithers. How does that compare with your Church?

Tithing Testimonials.

(By some of our Church officials.)

Dayton, Ohio.

I began tithing when working in a store for $5.00 a week, and was paying $3.50 for my board and washing. Fifty cents a week was a lot to give, but then I had a dollar margin. The practice has been a great blessing.

HERMON ELDREDGE.

Field Secretary, Administrative Division; Managing Editor, Sunday School Literature; Leadership Training.

Everett, Pa.

Tithing is the most spiritual, scriptural, inspirational, practical and helpful method of giving known. For almost eight years I have found great joy and blessing in tithing.

A. W. SPARKS.

Stewardship Secretary Metropolitan Convention; Field Secretary Rays Hill and Southern Pennsylvania Conference.

Urbana, Ill.

Giving becomes a joy when one gives according to the plan God gives to us. I have been tithing for a number of years and would not think of going back to the old method of giving.

MRS. C. W. JOHNSON.

Superintendent of Thankoffering Department of the Woman's Mission Board.

Dayton, Ohio.

The principle of tithing became my rule when a struggling student for the ministry, and it has never ceased to be a blessing. It gives me the consciousness that I am square with God and that my stewardship is being accounted for in a systematic, constructive, and spiritual manner.

W. P. MINTON.

Foreign Mission Secretary; Editor Christian Missionary.

McPherson, Kansas.

I have been a tither for five years. I really believe that I accomplish more on the nine-tenths by laying aside one-tenth for God than I can by using all God has given me for my own desires. If Christians would try this one year they would never go back to the old, haphazard way of giving.

C. E. BOOZ.

Business Man, Stewardship Secretary Western Convention; Conference Secretary.

Burlington, N. C.

Tithing means the spiritual enrichment and enlargement of the tither. It means the consecration of both self and substance to kingdom service. It puts system into Christian activity, provides for the needs of the Church and sends the gospel to those who know not our Christ.

G. O. LANKFORD.

Acting Pastor; President Home Mission Board.

N. Springfield, Pa.

Before I became a tither, giving was something of a burden. Now, after paying the tithe, there is a joy in giving and both the joy and the giving grow from year to year.

CARRIE ROBISON.

Teacher; Superintendent of Junior Work of the Woman's Mission Board.

I "supposed," "thought," "estimated" for years that I was a tither. However, I finally decided that my financial attitude to the Church and the kingdom deserved the same consideration and exactness in accounting and bookkeeping that any other financial dealings or investments should have. Then, I began to keep accounts and render strictly to the Lord His tenth as it came to my mind. Since then, tithing has had a new meaning. (1) By having something to give and knowing what I could give to every Church and benevolent appeal. (2) By being enabled to give cheerfully and systematically because the Lord's treasury in my accounting always had something. (3) Whatever beyond the tenth I have been permitted to give has been a source of real joy and sacrificial delight.

J. O. ATKINSON.

Mission and Stewardship Secretary of the Southern Christian Convention.

DECLARATION OF CONVICTIONS AND POLICY OF MEN'S CHURCH LEAGUE.

The following is the general declaration of convictions and policy adopted by the first convention of the Men's Church League, held at Columbus, Ohio, May 8th to 10th, 1925:

1. Face to face with the vast, unmet moral and spiritual needs in our nation and in the world, we are absolutely sure that the only way these needs can ever be met is by bringing boys and girls and men and women into personal, vital fellowship with Jesus Christ, the one only and all-sufficient Saviour of individuals and of society. This work of personal evangelism and Christian service is both the responsibility of laymen, and also their primary privilege. It should command the best efforts of which they are capable. All other things whatsoever ought to be secondary in the life of men who profess loyalty to Jesus Christ as Lord. Until men seek the kingdom of Christ as the first object of life, that kingdom will be delayed.

2. Believing, as we do, that any failure of the Church in its effort to save the world has been due to the inconsistency and inactivity of professing Christians, we here declare our firm conviction that Christ is able to save completely all those who fully yield to His will. Disobedience to Christ is the reason for moral failure. Christ will prove His abundant power to save, if life is definitely and fully committed to Him.

3. Confronted by the dishonest and unfair practices that prevail in large areas of the business and professional world, we here declare our belief that Christ's principles are thoroughly practical and necessary in business. We call upon all Christian men to make their business a definite means of revealing Christ and extending His influence over all human hearts.

4. In view of the fact that seven out of ten of the children and young people of America are not receiving systematic religious education, we need not be surprised at the rapid increase of crime. Nothing can be more important than that we should make plans in every community looking toward reaching all boys and girls with basic moral training, with the Bible as the textbook. We urge all college students to avail themselves of every opportunity to become expert Bible teachers and promoters of religious education. We call upon all colleges, universities and theological seminaries to do their full part in training students for this supremely important work.

5. In view of the nation-wide and world-wide need and opportunity for presenting Christ to all people, we ask the men of all Churches to make a serious study of how most promptly and effectively to carry out Christ's commission to "Make disciples of all nations." Here is the supreme task yet to be accomplished in this world. The thought and activity of laymen during the past twenty years have borne abundant fruit in greatly increased interest and contributions. It is now time for laymen generally to take the world seriously into their hearts, their prayers and their activities. Where financial conditions make this possible, we believe that many laymen should plan to devote either a large proportion or all of their time to definite religious work.

6. The world yet waits for an adequate consecration of possessions to Christ for spiritual ends. There is something seriously the matter with our Christian life, when such lavish personal expenditures can be made by great numbers of Church members, and in many cases such large fortunes accumulated, in spite of great unmet calls for all sorts of Christian enterprises. Where is the spirit of personal sacrifice for Him who gave His life for us and for the world? How can we best work together to get the Christian resources of the nation really dedicated to God for His uses? When Christians become sufficiently obedient to God to let Him use them and their money for His work—in a big and adequate way—the kingdom of Christ will come in a power never yet experienced.

7. Such a world-embracing program, including all of life's real interests and occupations, demands the most competent human leadership for the work of the Church. And it also demands the most superb training of these most competent leaders. Here is a great field for laymen to exert a positive and far-reaching influence. It can only be done adequately when the kingdom of Christ appears to us and appeals to us to be—as it really is—the one central and controlling interest and objective of life.

8. With such issues involved, the men of all evangelical Churches simply must find a way to get together, to keep together, to work together, and to share each other's best experiences. The Men's Church League seems to be a most suitable name to describe such an effort. Having adopted this league as a clearing-house between all groups of active Christian men, we urge every man to identify himself with it as an active member and worker. Let this league stand as an expression of our spiritual unity in Christ, and our purpose to share our best experiences in promoting His world-wide kingdom. We appeal to Christian men everywhere; not only in the United States and Canada, but throughout the world—to test out fully the advantages of real, working fellowship in study, conference, prayer, and effort to extend the reign of Christ over all hearts and all human affairs. Thus may prayer be answered: "Thy will be done on earth."

Report of the Commission on Organization.

The Laymen's Church League was meant from the beginning to be merely a general clearing-house for all organizations of active laymen who are members of the evangelical Churches, and who desire to pray and work together for the greater spiritual efficiency of the Church of Christ.

Without interfering in any way with existing organizations, it is believed that all of them would have a fuller, richer spiritual life if they had some simple method of getting together to consider their common spiritual problems, and to give testimony concerning their spiritual efforts and experiences.

Great differences exist in the forms of names of organizations now found among men. But whether called brotherhoods, clubs, leagues, associations, Bible classes, or designated by any other names, they all need some simple method by which they can be related helpfully to each other. As the successful methods and results of any one group are made known, other alert groups will quickly profit by this added knowledge.

Our experience at this first general conference, called in the name of the Laymen's Church League, has clearly revealed and demonstrated the great value of hearing accounts of personal and group experience in trying to carry out the will of Christ.

In view of these facts and considerations, be it resolved:

1. That we continue the work begun in the name of the Laymen's Church League under the name of the Men's Church League; and

2. That the members of the executive and provisional committees of the Layman's Church League be hereby constituted the general committee of the Men's Church League, and that there be added to this committee—

(a) The head executive secretary of each national denominational men's organization, under whatever name it may operate; also two laymen to be selected by each such organization.

(b) The chairman, or head executive secretary, of each national interdenominational men's organization in the United States and Canada; also two laymen to be selected by each such organization.

(c) The following persons (see list).

3. That this committee be an entirely voluntary organization, without any employed secretaries for the present; but that each member of the general committee be expected to promote personally the objects of the league. The general committee and its executive committee to have power to add to their number.

4. That we urge the head executive officers of all local men's Christian organizations in each community to band themselves together under the name of the local committee of the Men's Church League to arrange for occasional meetings of the active men of all these organizations, the one great object of all these meetings to be one expression of our common love and loyalty to Jesus Christ as our Lord and Saviour and our common purpose to extend His kingdom throughout the world. We urge every man to use his influence to bring about such meetings in his own city or community.

5. That we commend to the special consideration of Christian men everywhere the banding of themselves together for prayer and active personal witnessing, including an effort to get the New Testament into the possession of every person willing to read it. Hundreds of such groups are already organized and are being wonderfully used in leading others to vital faith in Christ. All of this splendid work has our unqualified endorsement and recommendation. We hope to see similar groups formed in every community and in every individual Church, unless there is at present some group that will meet this need for personal fellowship and co-operation in extending the kingdom of Christ.

6. That the reports of the commissions presented and adopted at this conference be printed for general use in extending the purposes of this league

Note.—Approved by the Interdenominational Conference of the Men's Church League, Columbus, Ohio, May 9, 1925. Delegates from twenty-five States and the Province of Ontario, Canada, representing twenty-three denominations, were in attendance on the conference.

THE BOY AT HIS WORK.

By Rev. Herman C. Taylor.

(Delivered at community "Father and Son" banquet, sponsored by the Rotary Club, Dover, Del., April 28, 1925.)

We are all familiar, no doubt, with the words of Holy Writ, which read: "And the city shall be full of boys and girls playing in the streets thereof," and also the more familiar expression, "All work and no play makes Jack a dull boy."

From these two expressions may we not reasonably conclude "there is a time to work and there is a time to play?" The working-time in a boy's life, while not fixed at any particular stage, necessarily comes with the advance of the youth as to his physical development and his disposition or inclination along that line.

Observation has shown that the boy—as the man—will prove what he is when he is at work. The abnormal, undernourished or idle boy, most generally, will work in jerks, will watch the clock, fearing that he might work overtime. Not so with the boy who is alert, that is just and upright in life. He will so appreciate the body, mind and spirit with which God has endowed him; that he will not only play well, but will work well, will study well, and will be honest in all he undertakes.

He will not be ashamed of his work, but will be ready to fit into the plan of life according to the talent or talents he has.

Robert J. Burdette once said to his son, "Remember, my son, you have to work; whether you handle a pick or a pen, push a wheelbarrow or study your books, whether you dig a ditch or edit a paper, whether you ring an auction bell or write funny stories—in all of these, you must work."

The boy who goes cheerfully at his work with the idea of not only developing his physical condition, but his mental condition as well, is the boy who will succeed and will be the successful man of tomorrow, no matter what vocation he may choose.

As Burdette further said to his son, "Don't be afraid of killing yourself with work; work gives an appetite for your meals, it lends solidity to your slumbers, and gives you a perfect and gratifying appreciation of a holiday."

There are young men who do not work, but the world is not proud of them. They may come from the most prominent families and high stations in life, but they are forgotten or not remembered, because they have not shown themselves worthy of consideration.

The busier the boy is, the less harm he will be apt to get into, the sweeter will be the sleep, the brighter and happier the holidays and the better satisfied will the world be with him. Let the youth of Dover today set before themselves high ideals of honor, integrity, of true manhood, and then patiently set to work, confident of their ability to face every issue, and to extract success even from apparent failure. Self-reliance is the fundamental element of all true greatness. We, as fathers and counselors of this community, should encourage the sons while at work, that their burdens might become lighter and their work a joy, rather than distasteful.

May we not give this injunction to the boys of Dover and elsewhere, "Find out what you want to do or be, and take off your coat and do it."

LYNCHBURG, VA.

I believe that the United Christian Church, of Lynchburg, Va , is the infant Church of the Conference, but it is growing and is in a healthful condition. Fifty-seven members are now enrolled in the Church, and 121 in Sunday School.

The pastor recently purchased a home near the Church, and the congregation gave him and his family a "house-warming" and "pounding." Many useful articles were given. The most popular article, however, was sugar. About fifty pounds were among the donations—and now the pastor is wondering if he has been too "sour."

May God bless each one of the donors. I know they have given because they love the cause I represent. Blessed is that pastor who has such a congregation. M. F. Allen, Pastor.

Subject: "Peter at Lydda and Joppa."

Golden Text: "And they went forth, and preached everywhere, the Lord working with them, and confirming the word by the signs that followed."—Mark 16:20.

Lesson: Acts 9:32-43.

Devotional Reading: Isa. 55:1-7.

They had been commanded to go, and preach and teach and heal. And they went and preached and taught and healed. It was inevitable, therefore, that the Lord was "working with them." God always puts His resources at the command of those who obey His commandments. Those who will do His will shall not only know the will; they shall have the power to do His will. And as in the case of the disciples, God will confirm the word by the signs that follow.

Peter, like Philip and Paul, had a passion for service. He wanted to keep busy for God, and as a practical form of service he took it upon himself to visit all the points where Christianity had gone, either by voluntary missionary work or by persecution. He went "throughout all the parts," and wherever he went he exercised a healing and helpful ministry. We have two instances of the blessings which followed him at Lydda and at Joppa. In the former city, he restored a man, Aeneas by name, who had been sick with the palsy for eight years, to health and strength. There is an interesting statement in connection with the miracle. Peter said, "Aeneas, Jesus Christ healeth thee; arise and make thy bed." The words "make thy bed" really mean "spread for thyself." Heretofore, Aeneas had been dependent upon others. Now, he was able to do for himself. It seems to me that there is a parable here. Christianity, through the power of Jesus Christ, the Son of God, has a mission larger than merely helping men; it really fulfills its mission only as it helps them to help themselves. There is a great deal of so-called charity in the world which is nothing more than pauperizing. And certainly one of the supreme facts about Jesus Christ is that He helps men to do the things which hitherto they have not been able to do. Thanks be unto God who giveth us the victory through our Lord Jesus Christ.

There was at Joppa, a near-by city, a certain woman, named Tabitha, or Dorcas, who was known by the good works which she did, and the alms which she gave. Unlike so many of us who think about the good works that we are going to do, but do not do, she did them. "If ye know these things, happy are ye if ye do them," said Jesus. The road to happiness is not through mere knowing, but through doing. We show our faith by our works.

Dorcas had died, and knowing that Peter was at Lydda, the disciples sent for him. Folks have an instinctive way of turning to men of God in the hour of need and trouble. One of the joys of the minister's life is the way in which people turn to Him in the hour of need, people it may be who would have nothing of Him in the hour when all was well. It might be well, in passing, to ask ourselves if we are the kind of people to whom others will turn when in need. There are some folks to whom we would not go. Are we the kind of folks to whom others would not come? Happy is the man whose godly life and helpful spirit make him one to whom others turn in the hour of need. And thrice happy is the man who can help others in the hour of need.

The story of the raising of Dorcas reads very much like some of the stories of the Master's ministry. Peter evidently followed the Master's example very closely. And why not? He who would do work for the Master should do it in the Master's name and spirit.

It is not given for us to raise people from the dead. But greater works than these shall we do, for we can keep them from dying. Modern surgery and medical skill under the blessing of the Great Physician are but the expression of the Master's spirit in action. Nor can we always cure those who are sick of the palsy, but we can be gracious and kind and loving to them, and insofar as it is possible, we can help them to help themselves. After all, is it not true that one of the most essential facts in Christian living is the spirit of service? By their fruits ye shall know them. How many good works follow our lives?

Just one thing more. "And it came to pass that he abode many days in Joppa with one Simon, a tanner." That is one of the most significant verses in the Bible. Tanners handle dead bodies, and any one who touched a dead body was unclean, from the standpoint of the Jews. As a matter of fact, tanners could not live in the main residential section of the city, but were required to live apart from others on the edge of a town. And yet Peter "abode many days" with Simon, a tanner. This was perhaps the beginning of that broadening vision which eventually opened the door of the gospel to the Gentiles, and made Christianity a universal religion. But it was a long, long road to travel, and even yet there are many professing Christians who have not come to see the implications of a common brotherhood of man in the acknowledged fact of a common Father of men.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

May 31, 1925.

Topic: "The World's Need—the Unfinished Task."

Scripture: Matt. 28:16-20.

Suggestions for Leader's Talk.

Rabbi Levi, of Boston, one of the leading Jews in America, recently said the only way to break down prejudices is to learn more about people. This holds true in any kind of prejudice, and especially in international, national and religious prejudices—perhaps the three which separate people more than any others.

So much time is spent in relating the evil intents of nations—their faults—and very little is said about their admirable qualities. Too long the differences between peoples have been emphasized rather than the similarities. People all over the world laugh and cry in the same way—their joy and sorrow is expressed in the same way every where. In the essentials of life, all people are primarily alike, and this should be the basis of all mission work. Too often we have called people heatherns and forgotten that their hearts are warm, their likes and dislikes are strong, their actions are often as noble as they know how to make them.

Pity of other people, and a feeling of superiority on the part of those administering help, is not the basis for missions. Only love for others and a recognition of their merit can make missionary effort worth while. If each nation would learn more about every other nation—their manners and customs—and would look for the good traits rather than the bad, we would have at least a good starting point for world peace and happiness.

National Peace.

How many people have thought they would like to go to Africa—the place of such great need—and be a missionary, and at the same time treated the African at his back door as if he had no soul, perhaps? We need to love those around us; those with whom we live from day to day when our religion is truly tested. There are in America today people from every continent of the earth. Some of them find America a happy place in which to live; others find it a miserable place, because of the attitude of the American people.

If our C. E. members could visit with Miss Marguerite Youmons some of her foreign homes and see their great family devotion and aspirations, they would realize how intensely human each foreign person is.

Religious Prejudices.

Why do we think the Catholics and the Jews so different and, perhaps, so un-Christian? The Rabbi was right when he said it is because we don't know them. Seldom does a knowledge of other religions make us dislike them more. It often causes a respect for the other person's beliefs. It may, and should, cause a deeper respect for one's own faith. No one can help but admire the devotion of the Catholics, the tenacity of the Jew, the mystical faith of those who worship Buddha. There are truly good traits in all religions, and it is not our part to belittle these.

The Unfinished Task.

The fact that there has been and is a need for world missions means that the task is unfinished. If it is worth while and has been worth what it has cost in lives and money, it is worth carrying to the finish. It is an unfinished task because the Church has not nearly done its best. The home Church must strengthen its forces for work at home, it must be united in spirit, it must enter the work in dead earnest. It is an unfinished task as long as people are suffering and unhappy.

Forces which are uniting people.—Education, a common exchange of manners and customs, a more broad-minded people, a peace-seeking youth, travel, radios, and commerce.

CLEAN HANDS.

A jewelry salesman, noticing his hands to be somewhat soiled, said: "This is very trying to me. Of all persons, I should have soft and clean hands. It is awful to offer a diamond or pearls of any sort to a possible customer when my hands are not perfectly white and tidy. It makes a repulsive background for the piece of jewelry."

The Christian should have clean hands and a clean life. Whoever he may be, minister or not, he recommends Jesus Christ and his salvation to the world. His life should not be a sorry and repelling background.

They who bear the vessels of the Lord should have pure hands. The salesman was very sensitive, and rightly so. He had cultivated taste. Each professing Christian should be scrupulously careful to maintain a consistent life.—Selected.

The work of righteousness shall be peace; and the effect of righteousness, quietness and assurance for ever. And my people shall dwell in a peaceable habitation, and in sure dwellings, and in quiet resting places.—Isa. 32:17-18.

Christian Orphanage

Dear Friends:

Beautiful, refreshing rains have come our way, and our garden vegetables are looking fine and we are now supplying our tables with garden peas and mustard. Our cabbage will soon be headed. Our little chickens are growing, and we hope to soon have fried chicken for our little folks. We have lots of things to make us happy and to inspire us to do a greater work. Last week we received a letter from one of the Orphanage's best friends—Mrs. L. E. Carlton, of Richmond, Va. —in which she sent us subscriptions on our new building fund of $8,350, same being given by the Carlton family and Miss Sara E. Boyd. Our hearts beat with joy to know the Orphanage had such noble friends who are willing to invest their money to help the helpless. We cannot find words to express our appreciation, but can only pray God's richest blessings upon the givers, that they may live long to be a blessing to those who need help.

The total subscriptions to date on the new building fund amounts to more than eleven thousand dollars.

This is an opportunity offered to each Church and each individual in the Christian denomination to do something worth while for the fatherless and widows. I would not be willing for a new building to go up at the Christian Orphanage to give a home to the homeless and not have a part in it. If you cannot invest a large amount, invest a small amount—but do take a part.

FAMILY ALTAR

CONDUCTED BY REV. H. E. ROUNTREE,
Our Chaplain in the United States Navy.

MONDAY.

REDEEMING THE TIME.

"Look, therefore, carefully how ye walk . . . redeeming the time, because the days are evil." —Eph. 5:15-16; Cal. 4:2-6.

Much of profit, and sometimes the whole of success in business life, depends upon how waste is taken care of and converted into "by-products." All kinds of big business has its "by-products," a utilization of waste. Pig-tails are fixed up and sold as delicacies, and hair is made into ropes. It would make a big difference to Mr. Armour if he did not take care of these things.

We are all dealers in time, and our success depends upon the use of it and letting none of it go to waste. We do not have to bother about our routine work. That takes care of itself; but how about the odd moments? Abraham Lincoln studied mathematics while he rode a sulky on his trips to the courthouse.

Letting "well enough" alone is foolish, because nothing is "well enough." We can always do more, and do some better. The Bible teaches us to work while it is day. Utilize odd moments.

Prayer.—Our Father, make us conscious of the tragedy of lost time, and help us to concentrate on what will better us. Forbid that we shall kill time, but redeem it by doing something worth while. Amen.

TUESDAY.

FOLLOWING THE PATTERN.

"Be ye imitators of God as dear children."—Eph. 5:1.

What is the good of a copy if the artist does not follow it? What is the good of a pattern if the dressmaker does not follow its design? What is the good of a plan if the builder does not follow it in constructing? What is the good of surveying for a good road if we will still follow the old paths?

David said, "I have set the Lord always before me." Paul said, "Looking to Jesus" and also "imitate God." This is the only way to develop Christian character.

Prayer.—Our Father, in Thee we live and move and have our being. May we know that Thou art our life, and Jesus our example, and follow Him all the way. In His name. Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

TRAINING A CHILD.

"Train a child in the way he should go, and even when he is old he will not depart from it." —Psa. 22:6.

I believe emphatically in religion. God made it just like he made the country and life. It is a part of us. I have contempt for all that is destructive of this. I have contempt even for religious teachings that mislead and take my thought from God, the foundation of all things.

Let all, who are responsible for the bringing up or the instruction of children, not feed them on sentimentalism and dogmatics which mean nothing to them, but let their souls drink in all that is pure and sweet. If possible, rear them in pleasant surroundings, give them nature in its holy relations. Inspire them to noble deeds. Let them see the light. Teach them the glory of hereafter that is the fruit of such a life. To terrify them with the fear of Hell is wrong. It is well enough to know the terrors that come by sinning, but no one is made better by such a fear.

Let God and nature and Christ teach them the lessons of good and proper living. Those children will grow to make the best men and women. They are made best by contact with the thought in the best. "They will absorb as a plant absorbs the sunshine and the dew."

Prayer.—Our Father, inspire and keep us to bring our children up right. Make us to be an example of all. In His name we ask it. Amen.

THURSDAY.

IN THE OTHER'S STEAD.

"As ye would that them should do to you, do ye also to them likewise."—Luke 6:31.

If I had only two minutes to live, what would I do? What message would I leave the world? What could I do that would mean most to the world? The biggest thing any one can do is to put oneself "in other's shoes." To be able to feel and suffer what others do is the greatest achievement. Then, and only then, is one moved by the desire to help, and when thus moved we are careful to see that help is administered intelligently. If we had a world made up of this kind of people, we would soon do away with sin, poverty and misery. Practically all the crime and vice and the most of the suffering in the world would vanish.

Prayer.—Held us, Father of all, to be more like Christ in our living toward others. This is our daily prayer. Amen.

FRIDAY.

AN EVENING PRAYER.

"We beseech Thee, Lord, to behold us with favor, folk of many families and nations, gathered together in the peace of this roof; weak men and women, subsisting under the covert of Thy patience. Be patient still; suffer us yet awhile longer, with our broken purposes of good, with our idle endeavors against evil; suffer us awhile longer to endure, and (if it may be) help us do better. Bless to us our extraordinary mercies; if the day come when these must be taken, have us play the man under affliction. Be with our friends; be with curselves. Go with each of us to rest; if any awake, temper to them the dark hours of watching; and when the day returns to us, our sun and comforter, call us up with morning races and with morning hearts, eager to labor, eager to be happy, if happiness shall be our portion—and if the day be marked for sorrow—strong to endure it." Amen.—Robert Louis Stevenson.

SATURDAY.

THE HIGHEST PARENTAL DUTY.

"When I call to remembrance the unfeigned faith that is in Thee, which dwelt first in Thy grandmother Lois, and Thy mother Eunice."—2 Tim. 1:5-7.

Thus Paul gave honor to whom honor is due. In this phrase he reminds Timothy that the fine faith which was his was a rich inheritance given by godly ancestors. It is the heritage passed on by the world's Loises and Eunices that makes possible the world's Timothies. Most godly men are sprung from godly parents.

My interest, as I am sure yours, is not in my ancestors, but in my descendants. They who are to come after me are the ones for whom I constantly pray. I give thanks constantly before the throne of grace for Christian parents. I ask no greater honor than that my children shall give thanks for their parents.

In the day when many are inclined to stress the value of nature as greater than that of nurture in its abiding value, when we are constantly being told that little of nurture can be passed on to succeeding generations, it is the more incumbent upon us that we make that nurture the very highest, the very finest, the most intelligent, the most Christian possible. We should redouble our efforts to bring up our children in the nurture and admonition of the Lord, remembering that if they are to be men and women with unfeigned faith, it will be not only because of the heritage we pass on to them at birth, but also because of the fine faith which dwells in us.—Rev. John A. McAfee.

Prayer.—That our children may early be taught the great truths of the Christian religion, and brought into the fold of Him who said to all parents, "Feed my lambs."

SUNDAY.

THE FATHER'S WILL.

"Thy will be done in earth, as it is in heaven." —Matt. 6:6-10.

What does the will of God mean to you? Does it mean denial and repression? Do you look upon it as a hardship or burden which we must patiently bear and to which we must be resigned? If so, you cannot pray this prayer in the same spirit Jesus did. To Him, the will of God meant fullness of life and joy.

"Thy will be done on earth as it is in heaven." Is there sickness in heaven? Is there sin in heaven? Is sorrow or ignorance or destitution there? Then, why do we ever clothe these ghastly evils in the garments of God and identify them with His will?

Let us tear away this false conception of the will of God. It has stood too long in the way of human joy and progress. Let us place the blame for the evils of the world where it rightfully belongs. Let us see God as Jesus saw Him, as the Infinite Father in whose watchful keeping the very hairs of our head are numbered; the loving Father, who, if His children ask for bread will not give them a stone, and whose will it is that not one of His little ones—not one of their really deep and needful desires—should perish, but should come to fulfillment and fruition in His love and care.—Rev. Geo. W. Barton.

Prayer.—"O Loving Father, we pray that we may have the mind that sees the beauty of the right. We long for the meekness that inherits the earth, for the mercy that is approved by the smile of Omnipotence, and for the peace that has a glory that strife never equals. In Jesus' name. Amen."

Mr. Preacher, why not agitate the putting of a copy of "The Sun" into every family of your charge? It is up to you, as pastor, to accomplish this in your field.

The president of the Western Union Telegraph Company staked his job and $4,000,000 of his company's money on the outcome of a new European cable. The cable could not be tested until laid and ready for operation, but so great was the executive's faith in the engineering theorem by which the cable was constructed that he went steadfastly ahead in the huge expenditures, knowing that if the experiment failed he would be ruined. When the rate of speed crept from 250 letters a minute, the ordinary cable rate, to 800, then to 1,500 and by a few adjustments to 1,700, the faith of the daring president was fully justified. Would that we as Christians might have a like faith in the Gospel of Jesus Christ! If we but believed in his tested power to transform lives and nations as Mr. Carlton believed in his cable, we would put all that we have and are into sending it to every man of every tongue in the world.—Home and Foreign Fields.

Man must be prepared for every event of life, for there is nothing that is durable.

"Up in the air above the steeple
The weather vane points his arrow gold,
And that is the way he tells the people
Just whether the wind blows hot or cold.

"When he points South we look for flowers,
And when he points North we look for snow,
And when he points East we look for showers;
But the weather'll be fine when West winds blow."

Hey-ho! Springtime fairies; where are you hiding? Are you under the violets in our front-yards? Are you 'fraid of the cold wind and rain that sprinkles down on the soft, green earth, or are you just lazy, and taking a long winter nap? Oh, oh! fairies, please hurry and bring us some Springtime weather—we are all so anxious to play out-doors.

Lots of love to you, fairies EDITOR.

MISTS.

"Hurry, Ellen; I want to show you San Benito Valley from the cliff this morning."

Ellen fastened the last buckle on her mountain boot and jumped up. "All ready, Milly," she said. "Where are Edith and Kathryn?"

"They aren't coming," said Molly flushing, and seeing Ellen's surprised look, she added shortly, "they acted perfectly horrid last night, and—well, we had a quarrel and I don't want them along now."

"I see," said Ellen thoughtfully, as they set off.

The four girls had come up the mountain the evening before to spend a few days at Liveoak Camp. It was Ellen's first trip, and the other girls had taken her at once to the edge of the cliff in order that she might see the lights of the valley and of their own little city spread out below. It was a beautiful sight, and she had been eager to see the valley in the morning sunshine. But as they walked along she was not thinking of the beautiful scene which would soon lie before her, not even of the grandeur of the rugged scenery about her.

"If I had gone to bed early, perhaps I might have prevented the quarrel," she was thinking, unhappily. "But I was so tired; I'm not much used to mountain-climbing yet. And they were tired, too, and probably quarreled over some little unimportant thing, and now it will spoil their good time."

Her thoughts were interrupted by an exclamation from Molly. "Oh, dear! there's a mist over the valley."

"So there is!" said Ellen. "How queer it seems to be up here in the sunshine and see the clouds piled up in drifts down there."

"A mist is a wretched thing, isn't it?" said Molly, dolefully. "I did so want you to see the valley. It's just lovely in the morning sunshine. And now this old mist had to spoil everything."

"Look, Molly!" cried Ellen suddenly. "It's beginning to break up. The sun seems determined to send it flying."

As the girls stood watching, the mist slowly dispersed, and presently the valley, with its green fields and orchards, its ranch houses and little towns and cities, lay spread out before them.

"Isn't it beautiful!" said Molly, looking at her companion. "Why, Ellen, what are you smiling at?"

"I was thinking," replied Ellen, "that if sunshine can do that to a mist, why can't the sunshine of friendliness and good humor break up a little misunderstanding between friends, which is nothing but a mist, after all.

Molly stood looking stubbornly before her for a moment, and then suddenly a smile broke through and she turned and ran off down the path.

A few moments later, Ellen heard gay voices and laughter, and soon Molly, Edith and Kathryn appeared around the bend in the path.

"The view is wonderful this morning," Molly was saying as she finished a smile at Ellen. "There was a mist, but the sunshine sent it flying."—Alta Halverson Seymour, in Girls' World.

"My label has just come to my notice—I was surprised. Depending upon bills, I wish I could have one from you also when due." Will another good reader be so thoughtful?

ROOTS THAT GROW IN THE DARK.

As the clergyman entered the room, Clara looked up with a wry smile. "You've caught me now. Dr. Smythe, I'm tied by the leg and can't run. I suppose you think it's a judgment because I've stayed away from Church so much lately."

Dr. Smythe laughed and sat down. "I've missed you. I miss you now. I hope that you are getting well fast."

"Slowly," she corrected him, "and I can't stand it. I'm terribly bored when I'm not doing things. There are hundreds of things that I want to do this very minute, and I'm here for six weeks. It's awful—just waste time."

"How beautiful your lilies are," Dr. Smythe remarked irrelevantly. "What a tall, straight stalk and wonderful white crown of bloom! It takes strong roots to bear a blossom like that." He laughed. "Some one brought me a jar like that with water and pebbles and bulbs putting out green shoots. I stood it in the sunshine and rejoiced in the quick growth until some one told me that unless I let it root in the dark it would never have strength enough to flower."

"Did you put it in the dark?" clara asked politely.

He nodded. "I kept it in the dark until the white roots clamped the pebbles in every direction. The shoots didn't grow in the dark, but when they came into the sunlight again they leaped into flower because they had strength behind them. But my blossoms were weak compared with yours. I had waited too long to strike roots, you see."

Clara glanced from the doctor's face to her bowl of lilies and back again to him. "Is that a parable?" she asked.

From his pocket he drew a worn Testament and opened it at Ephesians. "That ye, being rooted and grounded in love," he read, "might be filled with all the fullness of God and 'grow up into Him in all things, which is the head, even Christ.' Quite a long way for even the best of us to grow, isn't it? And, you see, we can't do it without roots."

"And roots have to grow in the dark?" inquired Clara.

"The sunshine often keeps us too busy to grow roots," he replied.

"It makes a pretty good parable," she conceded. "Rooted in love, and love means God, I suppose."

"St. John thought so."

"Rooted in God," she mused; "that means drawing all your strength from Him, doesn't it? I don't believe I know Him well enough."

"It is easy to know Him," he said and smiled. "There's the Bible, you know. I see one on your book-shelves; may I get it?"

"I've been too busy to read it lately," Clara admitted, "but if I'm put in the dark just to grow roots, I'd better begin, hadn't I?"

The clergyman nodded toward the lily. "With roots like that, think what flowers you will carry!" he said.—Youth's Companion.

Most headaches due to lack of internal cleanliness

WHEN you are constipated, poisons form in the accumulated food waste and are carried to all parts of the body. Headaches follow. Biliousness, insomnia, lack of energy, all result from constipation, which if unchecked will lead to serious results.

Avoid Laxatives—Say Doctors

A noted authority says that laxatives and cathartics do not overcome constipation, but by their continued use tend only to aggravate the condition.

Medical science has found in lubrication a means of overcoming constipation. The gentle lubricant, Nujol, penetrates and softens the hard food waste and thus hastens its passage through and out of the body. Thus, Nujol brings internal cleanliness.

Nujol is used in leading hospitals and is prescribed by physicians throughout the world. Nujol is not a medicine or laxative, and cannot gripe. Like pure water, it is harmless.

Take Nujol regularly and adopt this habit of internal cleanliness. For sale by all druggists.

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT.

Since our last meeting, March 16, 1925, Almighty God, in His all-wise dealings, saw fit to call from us our friend and brother, Rev. L. W. Fogleman.

Whereas, the members of Pleasant Hill Church and Sunday School will lose the continued blessing of his presence and good council; and whereas said Church and Sunday School desire to express in some way our appreciation of the life and labor of our brother and co-worker; therefore, be it resolved:

1. That we, the members of Pleasant Hill Church, record our sincere appreciation of his wise counsel, his unselfish work, and loveable, Christian character.

2. That Pleasant Hill Church bow in humble submission to the will of our Heavenly Father, who doeth all things well and maketh no mistakes.

3. That we cherish his beloved memory and seek to perpetuate and carry forth the work of Christ which was so dear to his heart.

4. That we express our regret and deep sympathy to the members of the bereaved family.

That a copy of these resolutions be entered upon the Church and Sunday School records, a copy sent the bereaved family, and a copy sent The Christian Sun for publication.

Done by order of Pleasant Hill Church this 16th day of May, 1925.

EUGENE H. THOMPSON,
Recorder.

HOLT.

On Wednesday morning, May 6th, Hazel Gladys, the charming daughter of Mrs. S. V. Holt, of Moncure, N. C., fell asleep. She was seventeen years and eighteen days old, and for several years had been a faithful and loyal member of the Methodist Church and Sunday School, of Moncure. During her several days' battle with pneumonia, against whose ravages she could not stand she expressed to her mother and friends her willingness to submit to the will of her Lord and her readiness to depart and be with Him. It must be a great consolation to her dear mother, sister and friends to know that she bravely approached the sunset of her life with but one regret, beautifully expressed by her in the following words: "Mother, I hate to leave you all because it will be so lonely when I am gone."

The funeral service was conducted from Moncure Methodist Church by the writer, assisted by Rev. B. J. Howard, of Chapel Hill, N. C., and her pastor, Rev. C. M. Lance, of Pittsboro, N. C.

She was laid to rest beneath a mound of beautiful flowers in the cemetery at New Elam Christian Church beside the grave of her father who went to be with his Lord some five years ago.

She leaves a mother, sister, and host of relatives and friends to mourn their loss. May God bless, comfort and console the bereaved ones, and may each of them be given through Jesus Christ our Lord a welcome into that home where separation is unknown.

COX.

Mrs. Lovella Cox was born May 11, 1877; departed this life May 11, 1925; age, 48 years. She was married to H. C. Cox December 24, 1896. To this union were born five children—three girls and two boys. They are all living. Also one sister, Mrs. H. P. Baldwin, Archdale, N. C.; and two grandchildren. She professed faith in Christ early in life and united with the Christian Church at Pleasant Ridge and remained till death. She was faithful to the end. She was patient in all her affliction. All was done by loving children, father and friends to give relief, but it all failed till about ten minutes before she died. Then an angel came and said, "Peace be still"; then suffering was done. She leaves several relatives and a host of friends to mourn their loss. She was laid to rest in the cemetery at Pleasant Ridge in the presence of a large congregation, to await the resurrection morn. Funeral by the writer.

JOHN M. ALLRED.

COTTEN.

On February 18th, God, in His great wisdom, called from the home of Mr. and Mrs. Exie Cotten, of Morrisville, N. C., their little son, Exie Odell. The little one was born on the 10th day of March, 1923, having lived only 22 months and 29 days. Interment was made in the cemetery at Christian Chapel Church on February 10, 1925, and the funeral service was conducted by the writer.

The Lord giveth and the Lord taketh away; and it is not given to us to understand His ways, but this one thing we know—His will is best. May God give comfort and consolation to the bereaved family and prepare them to meet the little one in that eternal home.

M. E. CHURCH FAVORS UNION.—

Thirty-seven conferences of the Methodist Church have voted in favor of union with the M. E. Church, South, by overwhelming majorities. Seventy-eight conferences which hold their sessions in the fall will act at that time. It would seem that the Methodists of the North favor a union, and we wonder why those of the South do not. What has one to gain more than the other? What a pity it is that brethren cannot dwell together in peace, loving one another according to God's law. How strange a thing it is that we should set our petty prejudices up against what all of us understand to be the will of Him whom we profess to serve, "But not every one that sayeth unto me, Lord, Lord, shall enter into the kingdom." We shut ourselves from the face of God with many things, not the least of which is our prejudice.

FEDERAL COUNCIL TO ADVANCE.—

At the April meeting of the administrative council of the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America, several lines of advance came up for consideration. Since the resignation of Dr. H. L. Willett, the Western secretaryship has been vacant. The council is now considering the addition of two new secretaries, one of whom will have his headquarters in Chicago, and manage the Western office there. The specific work of these secretaries will be that of organizing city councils of Churches. The increased use of women in the council was taken under advisement, and a detailed study of the status of women in the various denominations was approved. Memorials have been sent down from the various denominations requesting the last two steps. These steps will mean much in the advance of the work, and the more co-operation that can be secured among the various Churches the greater will be the efficiency of the work of the kingdom.

METHODISTS OPPOSE WAR.—

The Pueblo (Colo.) District Conferenec of the Methodist Church went on record as opposed to the war gestures now being made by the navy of the United States. They opposed the projected voyage of the navy to the Orient, the teaching of military training in colleges and summer camps, defense day programs, and pledged themselves, as individual ministers, to work against such militaristic gestures in their fields of work. The pulpit is still, we believe, the most potent force in the world, and if the ministers of the country will consistently and unequivocatingly oppose war, for war to come will be all but an impossibility. The task of correcting the social, as well as the spiritual ills of men, lies upon the ministry of the land. It is a task which they cannot safely shirk; one, however much they may dislike it, which they must face and perform. For that work of saving the world through the Christ, we need men in the fullest and most comprehensive sense of the word.

A MAN WHO BUILT MEN.—

The man who, at the age of sixteen, got his first job cutting and packing soap fifty-seven years ago, died last week after a most successful life. William Hasketh Lever was this man. He rose steadily in the soap business, married at the age of twenty-two, and ultimately went into the soap business for himself. He bought land on the Mersey River, just across from Liverpoor, and built innumerable cheery cottages for his workmen, and equipped the town with Churches, schools, parks, and everything essential to the welfare of his people. He called this little city Port Sunlight. He was created baronet in 1911, and later made Viscount Leverhulme. Every time that we buy Lux, Lifebuoy, Sunlight, and other brands of soap, we are adding to the Leverhulme fortune. Viscount Leverhulme represented the transition from one period to another. His business was to make money, but his chief business and concern was to grow the finest type of men and women possible. He cut the working-day to six hours and put on two shifts. "Let the machinery sweat, not the men," was his comment, and it paid well. He gave his people an opportunity to obtain stock in the business, and they owned sixteen million dollars' worth of it at the death of Viscount Leverhulme. He was a fine type of the Christian business man at his best, and an example for those who would really practice the teachings of Jesus.

BISHOP BARNES TELLS WHY.—

Many men and women have been asking why young men who have large ability do not enter the ministry. Some do, but Bishop E. C. Barnes, whose career as Bishop of Birmingham, England, has been attended with much discussion, said as to this oft-recurring question recently: "How can you expect intelligent young men, say in our universities, not to be alienated by conflicts within the Church and by teaching which ignores biblical scholarship and the picture of the universe which modern science presents? The type of man who years ago considered ordination, now chooses some other career and satisfies his religious instincts in social service. This alienation of the most thoughtful sets the fashion for others. As the Churches become less well supported, those in official charge of them fall into poverty—they cannot buy books and reviews; they do not know how thought is developing; they have no message for the more educated members of the community, and this means in practice that they fall back upon sentiment, emotion or the overelaboration of ritual."

We wonder if Bishop Barnes has about properly diagnosed the case? At least, his words are worth thinking about for a while. We must, somehow, induce men of highest calibre and first magnitude to enter the Church if we are to hold those we educate as laymen in the Church. We must see that the Church meets their needs.

THIS NEEDS NO COMMENT.—

As the trustees of the University of Georgia face the selection of a chancellor to succeed Chancellor Barrow, the students of the university are manifesting much interest; so much, in face, that they have written a letter about it. The editor of the university paper, the Georgia Cracker; the editor of the university annual, The Pandora; the president of the student council, and the chairman of the student committee signed this letter, which reads in part: "The position of a young Georgian in the year 1925 is not the easiest one to be fancied. We approach maturity with jostlings which, it seems to us, are peculiarly violent. Growing up in a happy, fulsomeness of State pride, we begin as students to encounter facts which make that pride less and less sure of itself. In one field of laudable activity after another, Georgia foots the list—that is the truth.

"People say that dirty politics is our chief trouble, and we believe that is the truth also. This foul stick has been slung around in Georgia with startling abandon and has tarred many whom it should not have tarred; but the office of the chancellor has fortunately always been spared. Most fortunately, as we see it, even the dimmest suspicion that a chancellor owed his place to any type of selfish political trading would immediately turn his most wholesome words to stale clabber. Such a man would be a joke to us, and a pretty sickening one at that. In this matter, our confidence in Chancellor Barrow is absolute. With him there has been no hint of subservience to narrow personal interests whether secular or sectarian. He seems to us quite irreproachable.

"For our next chancellor, we are asking of you a man even better than the one who was chosen for us last. It is a hard request, but we are youngsters, and we want the world. Does the whole United States not offer what we need? We beg you to give us a man who, more than being pure and lovable and wise, is boldly aggressive and comprehendingly aware of every phase of contemporary life and thought, whether here or yonder. Give us this leader. Try us. We will respond."

NOTES-PERSONALS

Elonites are delighted to greet President Caris, of Defiance College, at Elon this week. President Caris delivered the baccalaureate sermon last Sunday.

Many old friends met at Elon this week and renewed the fellowship of other days. Elon commencement is a great get-together occasion for friends, new and old.

The mass-meeting for men only, composed of men's Bible classes, filled the City Auditorium last Sunday. The large audience was addressed by Hon. James T. Lloyd, of Washington, D. C.

Mrs. W. R. Sellars, treasurer of the Woman's Board of the North Carolina Conference, presents a fine and quite encouraging second quarter's report. We are pleased to present it in full elsewhere.

Among those attending Elon College commencement this week from Richmond, Va., are Rev. W. T. Walters, D. D., pastor First Christian Church, and Mr. P. J. Carlton, both of whom are college trustees.

"Miss Pattie Coghill, of Elon College, N. C., is completing her first full year at Boston University School of Religious Education, and plans next year to give full time to the work of missions and religious education in the Southern Christian Convention."—Herald of Gospel Liberty.

"Rev. R. F. Brown, of Pleasant Hill, Ohio, and his family left for North Carolina and Georgia this week. They expect to be at the Elon commencement and then will spend a month's vacation among friends and relatives in the South." —Herald of Gospel Liberty.

Though he cannot be officially received, Sean O'Kelly has arrived in Washington as envoy of the "Irish republic," and personal representative of Eamonn de Valera, "president of the republic of Ireland." The United States recognizes only Prof. Timothy Smiddy as the official representative of the Irish Free State.

Rev. J. A. Ledbetter is serving as our pastor at Youngsville, N. C. He is one of our earnest preachers and successful evangelists. He is open for evangelistic work for the summer months, and any pastor or Church that may secure his services will be fortunate. Bro. Ledbetter may be addressed at Gibsonville, N. C.

Fowler McCormick, heir to the great reaper industry and its millions, is working as a laborer in the Milwaukee plant of the International Harvester Company. He is learning the business from the ground up. His present job requires overalls and grimy hands. John D. Rockefeller, his uncle, has congratulated him on his $21-a-week job.

We understand that the protracted services, beginning Monday evening, June 22d, in Bingham Methodist Church, located at Nortonsville, Va., will be conducted by Prof. A. R. Flowers. Bro. Flowers is a man who lives above sectarian prejudices and is highly esteemed by the people of the different denominations in this section of Virginia. Mt. Olivet Christian Church, of which he is pastor, is preparing its program for its educational rally service to be held Sunday evening, July 5th.

Rev. H. C. Caviness, Apex, N. C., our noted and successful evangelist, will begin a meeting in Lillington, N. C., May 24th, at 11 A. M. It is a union meeting, and the first service is to be in the Methodist Church. Later, a tent is to be used in the meeting. The evangelistic singer, Mr. J. Charles Yelton, and Miss Ruth Johnson, pianist, of Fuquay Springs, N. C., who, besides being skilled as a pianist, is a trained children's worker, are to assist Bro. Caviness in the meetings. SUN readers are requested to remember in prayer these workers, as they undertake the great task before them.

The board of control of Franklinton Christian College met at the college Wednesday, May 20th. The annual commencement was on and the exercises were of a high order. Rev. A. C. Hook, our beloved pastor at Henderson, delivered the baccalaureate address to the delight and edification of the large audience present. President J. A. Henderson is a fine executive and is doing a great work in helping educate the boys and girls of his own race. Rev. J. L. Foster is the financial agent and is working zealously to raise funds for the completion of the new dormitory. The number of students Franklinton has is limited only by the capacity of our equipment and accommodations there. The new building—a commodious, semi-fireproof, steel-and-brick dormitory for girls—is sorely needed, and should, by all means, be completed before the next term begins in September.

CHILDREN'S DAY PROGRAMS.

A "Children's Day" program has been prepared by Miss Pattie Coghill, field secretary of the Board of Religious Education, and are for free distribution to the Sunday Schools.

The second Sunday in June has been designated as "Children's Day" by the Southern Christian Convention, with the request that the offering be sent to the Board of Religious Education. Write to Miss Pattie Coghill, 11 Newton Street, Boston, Mass., for your programs.

WHAT TWO JUDGES SAID.

America is sick with immorality and crime, but there is a remedy. The New York Herald-Tribune and the Philadelphia Record were recently commenting upon the startling statement of Judge Alfred J. Talley in welcoming a new member to the bench of the General Sessions Court in New Work: "You have come on the bench of the greatest criminal court in the world at a time when this country is suffering under an indictment which proclaims it to be the most lawless on earth. You will find that the United States must plead guilty to that indictment." About this time a session of superior court was being held at Statesville, N. C., at which a brother, aged 65, and a sister, aged 70, were litigating over five acres of land not worth much more than one hundred dollars. Judge Stack called the aged litigants before him, urged compromise between "kinspeople so near the grave," and added, "What you need is a genuine, old-time revival of religion in your neighborhood. Go and get somebody to hold a revival in your community." The North Carolina judge's remedy is just as good a remedy for the New York judge's diagnosis of national illness as for the land law suit for which he proposed it. Are you praying with the Great Commission Prayer League for this sort of revival all over our land?—Sunday School Times.

MEN AND MILLIONS MOVEMENT.

Lieutenant-Governor J. E. West, chairman of the Mission Board of the Southern Christian Convention, composed of Christian Churches in Virginia, North Carolina, Georgia and Alabama, which has charge of the Men and Millions' Movement, says that, while the full financial goal was not reached on April 30, 1925, the results accomplished have been gratifying, and attest the loyalty and liberality of the membership and the rapid expansion and progress of the Christians South.

The financial goal of the Men and Millions' Movement, initiated five years ago, was $2,000,000, of which $1,500,000 was for all benevolences and $500,000 was for Church extension. There has been collected in cash $1,842,093.29, of which $1,035,005.37 was for all benevolences and $807,087.92 for Church extension. The per capita for the entire fund was $73.68, of which $41.40 was for all benevolences and $32.28 for Church extension.

In addition to hundreds of tithers and life recruits, the membership of the Southern Christian Convention increased 15 per cent.

Lieutenant-Governor West was secretary of the Twentieth Century Fund of the Southern Christian Convention, and raised the first real endowment fund for Elon College about twenty-five years ago. When he compares results, then and now, Mr. West is amazed at the wonderful increase of wealth in the South and in the Christian Church, as well as the liberality of the people.

J. E. WEST, Chairman.

"The Christian Sun" is primarily the advocate of all authorized enterprises of the Church and the guardian of the interests of its members—on this basis it asks support.

SOUTH MUST GROW TREES.

"Experts of the paper manufacturing industry are looking toward the South as the logical field for future expansion, but the South will not realize this great opportunity unless our people take steps to provide a continuing growth of timber," said Mr. Lincoln Green, assistant to the president of the Southern Railway System, in discussing the need for permanent forestry work in the South.

"The heavy grades of paper, such as wrapping paper, boards and boxes," continued Mr. Green, make up about 40 per cent of the paper consumed in the United States, and the wood of the Southern pines is well suited for their manufacture. Abundance of water, cheap power, good transportation facilities and proximity to markets are other important factors in the paper industry, all of which the South has.

"Paper manufacturing is now being conducted successfully at several points in the South; waste from lumbering operations which otherwise would be a total loss being used. The rapid growth of timber in the South, the opportunity to produce naval stores as a by-product, and the further opportunity to use thinnings and waste from lumbering operations in the manufacture of paper, all combine to offer the South the opportunity to produce real wealth from lands which are now lying idle.

"If some one of our Southern ports should take up the provision of a permanent timber supply in its immediate hinterland, there is no reason why it could not make paper manufacturing a successful industry, along with the production of lumber and naval stores."

"At least one religious paper should go into every home. We would like to see THE CHRISTIAN SUN in every home in the First Christian Church. It is only $2.00 per year, or $1.00 for six months. If you are not taking it, see the pastor or P. J. Kernodle, the managing editor."—Bulletin First Christian Church, Richmond, Va.

DO YOU KNOW—

That 21,000,000 letters went to the dead-letter office last year?

That 803,000 parcels did likewise?

That 100,000 letters go into the mail yearly in perfectly blank envelopes?

That $55,000 in cash is removed annually from misdirected envelopes?

That $12,000 in postage stamps is found in similar fashion?

That $3,000,000 in checks, drafts and money orders never reach intended owners?

That Uncle Sam collects $92,000 a year in postage for the return of mail sent to the dead-letter office?

That it costs Uncle Sam $1,740,000 yearly to look up addresses on misdirected mail?

That 200,000,000 letters are given this service?

That it costs in one city alone $500 daily?

And Do You Know—

That this vast sum could be saved and the dead-letter office abolished if each piece of mail carried a return address, and if each parcel were wrapped in stout paper and tied with strong cord?

Moral: Every man knows his own address, if not that of his correspondent. Put it in the upper left-hand corner!

THE OLD WAGES.

There is a story of a certain unprincipled feudal lord who gathered about his men of like stamp, employing them from time to time in his lawless raids. Finally, one of these men, having displeased his lord, was summoned into his presence to be punished.

"What is thy trade, varlet?" asked the tyrant.

"I am an ironsmith, sire," was the reply.

"Go home and make a chain three feet long," was the command. The unhappy wretch did so, and in time brought it to the tyrant, who examined it and said: "Now go home and make it twice as long."

This was done, and again the unfortunate presented it, and was commanded to make it still longer.

After the third inspection, the tyrant was satisfied, and exclaimed, "The work is well done. Bind him with it and thrust him into the dungeon. Thus," he cried, "do I reward those who serve me and displease me!"

It is not hard to find the application of this little story. The devil is a hard taskmaster, and in much the same manner does he reward those who have given their lives to his service.—Ex.

City clergymen do not do well in country parishes, according to Canon Robinson, of Winchester. County parishoners won't follow the spiritual guidance of clergymen who don't know oats from barley, the canon declared.

One-cent stamps cut in half can't be used to make up the new fractional postage, the Post-Office Department warns. Accordingly, it has held up mail matter on which mutilated stamps appear. The department has renewed its demand that all who receive mail from street carriers provide a door slot or receptacle for it.

PRINCIPLES OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

(1) The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.

(2) Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.

(3) The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.

(4) Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship, and of Church membership.

(5) The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by, all.

THE PURPOSE OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

The purpose of this Church is to cultivate a spirit of union among the followers of our Lord Jesus Christ of every persuasion, and to secure, if possible, the associate efforts of all true religious teachers in pointing the wicked to "the Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world."

The peculiar doctrines and tenets which have confused and distracted the Christian world are remanded to private judgment, and hence cease to be matters for debate, only in so far as may be necessary to prevent a sectarian influence from entering the Church.

This Church requires no compromise of faith on the part of any child of God in order to communion or fellowship; here denominational distinctions cease to exist, and Christian love binds the brotherhood together.

The purpose of this Church will be consummated in the conversion of the world and the union of all Christians.

THE CHURCH AND MISSIONS.

In Rev. 21:22, we read, "And I saw no temple therein, for the Lord God Almighty and the Lamb are the temple of it." The sole purpose of the Church is to make Christ known to the world. In the consummation of the ages, when Christ shall have been made known to the world, the Church will be done away. That is the reason why John, the revelator, saw no temple, no Church in heaven. The Church had fulfilled its mission, and so was not any more needed.

The only question arising, therefore, is, "How far and to what limit shall the Church go in making Christ known to the world? On this question, we find division and disputation. Some believe, or pretend to believe, that the Church has fulfilled its obligation to the world if it bends all its efforts to making Christ known to the community where the Church is situated. Because of its strict limitation and narrow confines, this class of believers may be called anti-missionary. They believe in making Christ known to the limited number of the elect who come within their confines. A second class are of those who believe that the Church has fulfilled its mission if it goes into the poorly Churched, or non-Churched communities of its own race or nation and seeks to make Christ known to the few of that race or nation for whom Churches should be built. Such thinkers believe in home, but not in foreign missions, and may be classed as non-missionary. The third class of believers are those who hold that the field is the world, and that Jesus the Christ is Saviour and Redeemer of the yellow man and the red man and the black man as much so as He is of the white man, and that it is the imperative command, as well as the everlasting obligation of those who have the gospel to bend their best and noblest energies to giving that gospel to those who have it not, even to the uttermost parts of the earth. The Church that holds this latter view may alone be called missionary in spirit and in activity. Speaking by and large, it may be said that Churches of the first class (anti-missionary) have no growth, and never have had any. They suffer retrogression rather than enjoy progress. Churches of the second class (non-missionary) have a struggle to hold their own, and do not advance as rapidly as is the increase of the constituency they serve. Churches of the third class alone show real progress and growth. The missionary peoples alone show growth, progress and continuous development. This is as it should, and must, be, and is inevitable, according to Christ's will and command in the matter. Triumph is to attend the footsteps of those who follow a triumphant Lord, and only those who obey the commands of the victorious Lord are to share His conquests and His victories. "Lo, I am with you unto the end, on condition that you go unto the ends of the earth to carry the message as I have commanded you and be witnesses for me every where," is but a free and truthful translation of our Lord's last command and promise. It becomes, then, of superlative importance that the Church give immediate and unconditional obedience to the carrying out of the great commission if it expects or hopes to enjoy prograss, power, growth.

One knows of no graver mistake today than to suppose that the Church can have any option in carrying out, or not carrying out, the great commission. It is none of my affairs to say that I, as a Church member, do or do not believe in foreign missions. The only question with me should be: "Did Christ, my Saviour, believe in them?" If H ebelieved in missions and I do not believe in them, then am I a rebellious subject and not a loyal son?

III. RESPONSIBILITY OF THE CHRISTIAN DENOMINATION IN EVANGELISM.

The test of the genuineness of a man's call to the ministry is not his eloquence in the pulpit, as beneficial and desirable as that is, and for which every true minister will strive; nor is the test of the genuineness of a man's call to the ministry determined by his ministerial mannerisms, or by his ability in public prayer. One test of a man's call to the ministry is whether or not he is bringing things to pass in his Church and in his community. But the final test of the genuineness of any man's call to the ministry is his passion for souls, his persistency and winsomeness in the work of winning people to Christ, and at least some measure of success in winning souls. If a pastor himself is not a fisher of men, how can he expect his people to be concerned about this primary Christian obligation. Any pastor who is too timid to talk to men and women individually about their need of God and God's need of them, has no right to claim to have been called to the work of the ministry, for to be a fisher of men is the minister's first commission, his first obligation, and his greatest joy. No minister should be satisfied with winning fewer than fifteen persons to Christ and the Church each year the Master grants him the privilege of laboring in His vineyard.

How long would a life insurance agent hold his position in a company if he could not persuade even five times that number of people to invest in life insurance each year? If any business enterprise used as little system and as little enthusiasm in promoting their business and in increasing its clientele as many of our Churches do, they would go defunct before a year's time. Every up-to-date life insurance man has to programize his work, and each month he prepares a list of names that he must see during the month. Nor does he give up because his first interview does not win a response. By careful planning and by observing every art of tactfulness, he cultivates his approach and follows it up until he wins, if there is any possibility of winning. And he has to report to the home office each month as to the number of new prospects he has interviewed. The security of his position depends upon his resourcefulness in developing new prospects.

How different it is with the pastor! He is a law unto himself. He goes when he wants to go; comes when he wants to come. There is no home office to which he has to report the number of new prospects he has developed for the kingdom during the month. And yet the God of Heaven knows just what every pastor is doing in the work of developing new prospects an drecruiting new enlistments for the kingdom. And Christ, our Captain, is expecting every minister thus to do the work of an evangelist, and to do it all the time.

History shows that our denomination has practically the same membership it had thirty-four years ago. Even as far back as in the year 1825 —nearly a hundred years ago—Kinkade states, in his records, that there were more than 50,000 members in the Christian denomination. If our denomination had had a definite and comprehensive program of evangelism back in those early days and down through the years, our pastors and laymen had recognized the denominational responsibility in evangelism, that every Church should reproduce itself even in every twenty years, our denomination would by now have numbered at a conservative estimate 1,500,00 communicants. Nor would such have been beyond the range of the possible. Other denominations have done as much. The Disciples' Church, which came into existence twenty years after the origin of our denomination, has reproduced itself in less than every ten years on an average. In the April issue of the Christian Evangelist, a table of statistics shows that the M. E. Church has doubled its membership since 1890, and that the Disciples' denomination has practically trebled its membership since 1890, whereas the Christian Church has little more than maintained its numerical strength.

Since twenty years after our inception, when the Christian denomination had a membership of more than 25,000, it has reproduced itself on an average of only once in thirty-five years. Whereas, during the first twenty years of its history it reproduced itself every eight years, even though it had no definite program. Some one says, "Certainly, it was easier for the Church to reproduce itself in those early days because the membership was so much smaller." But such reasoning is as fallacious as to contend that it is easier for a man who has a small income to tithe than for a man who has a large income. In both instances the exact opposite is true. There are several other denominations that have no better record than we have; but that is no contention for us. Our record should be as good as the best—that is our challenge!

A denomination with 100,000 members ought to be able to reproduce itself more easily than a denomination with 10,000 members. Likewise, a Church with 400 members ought to be able to reproduce itself more easily than a Church with only 100 members. The moral and spiritual gravity of a Church should be increased in proportion to its increase of members.

Our Churches must rekindle the fires of evangelism upon their altars, and all the Churches and Conferences and Conventions of the denomination should co-operate in assuming the responsibility of the denomination in evangelism, if we are to continue to function as a Christian denomination.

EVANGELISTIC SPIRIT OF JOHN WESLEY.

By Rev. H. H. Smith.

John Wesley has been referred to as churchman, itinerant preacher, theologian, Church-builder, and reformer. We must bear in mind, however, that first of all, and above all, he was an evangelist. As an evidence of his evangelistic passion, we hear him cry out, "Church or no Church, we must attend to the work of saving souls." A glance through his journal, with reference to the texts he used in preaching, clearly reveals the fact that he constantly sounded the evangelistic note.

Using such texts as the following, he did the work of an evangelist and was indeed a herald of the good news of salvation through Jesus Christ: "He hath anointed me to preach the gospel to the poor." "Repent and believe the gospel." "I came not to call the righteousness, sanctification, and redemption." "Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ and thou shalt be saved." "I will heal their backslidings; I will love them freely." "Almost thou persuadest me to be a Christian." "He was wounded for our transgressions; He was bruised for our iniquities." "What shall it profit a man if he shall gain the whole world and lose his own soul?"

From these and similar texts—and the list might be greatly extended—he preached time and again, calling upon men to repent, and multitudes heard the Word and were saved.

The phrase, "a passion for souls," has lost much of its force with us, but it may be auplied to Wesley with its full significance. It is no exaggeration to say that a yearning to save the lost dominated his whole life. We hear him cry out, "I must, and will, save as many souls as I can while I live."

Such an evangelistic passion caused him to look for conversions where others regarded the conditions as forbidding. He did not despair of seeing the drunkard converted even while he was intoxicated. He handed an intoxicated man a tract, "A Word to a Drunkard," and describes the incident as follows: "He looked at it, then at me, and said; 'A word—a word to a drunkard; that is, sir, I am wrong; I know I am wrong. Pray let me talk a little with you.' He held me by the hand for a full half an hour, and I believe he got drunk no more. I beseech you, brethren, do not despise drunkards. 'Sinners of every sort,' said a venerable old clergyman, 'have I frequently known converted to God, but an habitual drunkard have I never known converted.' But I have known five hundred, perhaps five thousand."

Now, let us pause for a moment, and let that picture impress itself indelibly upon our minds. There stands John Wesley, a graduate of the world's leading university and one of the foremost scholars of his day, with the best English blood coursing through his veins, gentleman, scholar, minister—there he stands holding for a half-hour the hand of a drunkard and talking with him about the salvation of his soul!

We have the "bandit" with us today, but in Wesley's day they called him a "highwayman." On one occasion, Wesley was held up by a "highwayman," who demanded his money or his life. Under such circumstances, the average person woul dhave been so agitated and unnerved that he would have thought of nothing but how to escape with his life. But Wesley was so absorbed with the desire to save the lost, and had such self-possession that, after giving up his money, he turned to the highwayman and said: "Let me speak one word to you. The time may come when you will regret the course of life in which you are now engaged. Remember this, 'The blood of Jesus Christ cleanseth from all sin.'" No more was said, and they parted. Many years after, as Wesley was going out of a Church in which he had preached, a stranger introduced himself and asked Wesley if he recalled being waylaid at such a time. He told him he recollected it. "I was that man," said the stranger, "and that single verse you quoted on that occasion was the means of a total change in my life and habits. I have long since been in the practice of attending the house of God and giving attention to His word, and trust that I am a Christian."

Those who use the pen to do evangelistic service have been called "knights of the golden pen." We need more of these "knights" among our Christian workers today, and it may help us to see how Wesley used letter-writing to call men to repent. His nephew, Charles Wesley, was a prodigy in music, and a very bright young man, but he was not a Christian. Here is the way Wesley addressed him:

"Dear Charles,—It has been much upon my mind today that I a mstill indebted to you. There is a debt of love which I should have paid before now. But I must not delay it any longer. I have long observed you with a curious eye, not as a musician, but as an immortal spirit that is come forth from God, the Father of spirits, and is returning to Him in a few moments. But have you well considered this? Methinks if you had, it would be ever uppermost in your thoughts. For what trifles in comparison of this are all the shining baubles of the world!

"Wise is the man that labors to secure
The mighty, the important stake;
And by all methods strives to make
His passage safe, and his reception sure."

God has favored you with many advantages. you have health and strength and a thousand outward blessings. And why should you not have all the inward blessings which God has prepared for those that love Him?

"You are good-humored, mild and harmless. But unless you are born again you cannot see the kingdom of God. But ask, and you shall receive; for it is nigh at hand!

"I am, dear Charles, your affectionate uncle."

This letter brought forth a gratifying response, and we wish we had space to give Wesley's second letter. But may we not learn much from this letter? It is simple, brief, to the point, and, withal, direct from the heart.

The last entry in his journal refers to a sermon he preached on "One Thing is Needful," and he adds, "I hope many, even then, resolved to choose the better part." And last of all, with his dying breath he gave orders that a sermon which he had preached on "The Love of God to Fallen Man" should be scattered abroad and given to everybody. How well he lived up to his motto: "I must and will save as many souls as I can while I live."

PORTO RICAN KINDERGARTEN WORK.

I just wish every cradle roll superintendent and every mother could walk into that nice, clean, white room in Doctor Coleman's hospital at Troy, Ohio. For you know by this time that Miss Williams has returned from Porto Rico and is now occupying that little sunshiny room.

When you go in, you are impressed with the immaculate whiteness of the room and its occupant but the blue of her eyes is like the blue of heaven and her smile makes you feel that "God is in His heaven and all's right with the world."

And if you could hear her talk! Talk about the work that has been her life. We talked about the babies and kindergarteners of Porto Rico. I think American mothers who have everything to do with and everything to make our babies nice and clean and comfortable forget that down in Porto Rico, in the poorer homes, there are little, dark babies who come into the world whose mothers do not have a single garment to put on them—not even a cake of soap to wash baby's face, nor nice, soft powder to make it sweet and clean. Only a bunch of dirty rags in a corner is all baby has in the way of a cradle. Then in a few days, and sometimes the next day, the mother must get out and go to work and the little one is left with its older sister to be taken care of.

And then you know that when your American baby grows up to five and six years old there is a kindergarten where you can send your child. But when these Porto Rican babies get to be kindergarten age, there is no kindergarten to send them to—nothing but the street—no clothes to wear; not food enough to nourish their bodies.

Several years ago Miss Williams saw a Porto Rican girl, Caledonia Vasquez, whom she thought would make an ideal kindergarten teacher, and so out of her own funds she sent her to be trained for this work. She came back and started a kindergarten. Miss Williams prayed that at least twenty-five children would come, but instead of twenty-five there were eighty-six. Just now there is a new kindergarten which the Mortons are directing in Santa Isabel, and Miss Rosina Lawrence is taking Miss Williams' place with the children at Salinas.

The little children cannot come to school without clothes, so Miss Williams has been giving out the little dresses the different Churches have sent her. The ones who are able, pay 5 and 10 cents for the dresses.

Miss Williams' work begins right with the cradle roll. When the baby arrives, she sends a cake of soap, some powder and a little band, and we can realize something of the happiness of the mother.

While the busy mother is working, the smaller children are put in charge of the older sister and, as we said before, are on the streets. These are the children that Miss Williams has been gathering in for her kindergartens. Did you hear about the little boy who was so anxious to go to school, but did not have clothes? He went home and got a gunny sack and cut a hole to slip his head through and went back to school dressed in the gunny sack. We throw away so many things here in America that would help those children to go to school and to hear about Jesus.

I think it would be nice for each cradle roll, at their June party, to have a little shower of soap and powder and send it to Porto Rico. In the city especially we get a lot of samples of soaps and powders, and we could be saving these up until the June party. Then we get samples of tooth paste and we could bring these for the kindergarteners. Our cradle roll superintendent, I am sure, will be glad to mail these things to Porto Rico, and we won't even miss them while they will bring joy to the Porto Rican mothers, and coos instead of crys from the babies.

Now, let's just cram our mite-boxes full and pay up all of our dues and go next-door and get the neighbor's baby for the roll. And, mothers, let's look at our sweet, clean babies, and as we thank the Heavenly Father for them, let us ask Him to give us unselfish hearts, that we may send Jesus to the other babies.—Christian Missionary.

SUFFOLK LETTER.

Unique entertainment was held in the main Sunday School room of the Suffolk Christian Church Friday evening, May 15th. The week was being observed as "Mothers' and Daughters' Week." Pastor H. S. Hardcastle had preached sermons in harmony with this observance on Sunday, the women had conducted the prayer service on Wednesday night, with a large attendance, led by the pastor's wife, and the climax came with a banquet-supper on Friday night. The Baraca Class, of which Col. E. E. Holland, ex-congressman, is teacher, and of which H. Woodward had been teacher for some twenty-five years, gave a supper to the one hundred men of the Church. About two hundred women were present. Thirteen tables, flower-laden and furnished in fine dining-room fashion, under room decorations by the Christian Endeavor Society, the colors, sharpened by the electric lights, made a beautiful picture of hospitable art.

The men of the Church had bought the provisions in regular market style, cooked the meat and potatoes, made the great cans of coffee, made the salad, provided the pickles, cake and cream, and had everything ready at 6:30 P. M.—supper time. Miss Vina Oliver and her fine orchestra occupied the platform and rendered enchanting music. Hersey Woodward, Jr., led the singing, and Mrs. Dr. J. E. Rawls invoked the divine blessing. The women were seated at the tables, the men were clad with regular high-class hotel white and served as waiters, course by course, in modern style; but English custom was observed—no tips allowed. The women did not know that men could prepare and serve such a sumptuous and savory meal, and the married women began to talk among themselves of using their husbands during the summer months in the kitchen and dining-room. With this in view, they praised the men for the good eats and good time they had enjoyed.

Mr. E. G. Barbee presided. A toast to daughters was given by Mr. W. H. Andrews, and to mothers by her daughter, Mrs. Mary Rallings. Mr. W. H. Yates gave a toast to the women who were not mothers, but who help mothers with their children. "Mother Machree" was sung by Miss Gladys Dole, accompanied by Miss Elizabeth West. Miss Virginia Riddick sang "Mother," and Mrs. Tuttle, of Norfolk, a former student of Elon College, rendered "Neighbors" and "Cottage in the Dell" in a delightful manner, while Rev. W. W. Staley told a few "stale jokes."

After the supper was ended, and the toasts and music had vanished in the air of a sweet evening of Christian fellowship and care-forgetting joy, the men could be seen in the serving-room washing dishes in genuine feminine fashion. Rev. H. S. Hardcastle was "chief cook and china washer, and added another star to his crown of hospitable service, while the men earned anew the respect and confidence of the women.

CAVINESS-YELTON MEETINGS.

Rev. H. C. Caviness and Charles Yelton are known by but few in the Christian Church. Bro. Caviness is a native of North Carolina. As a youthful student, he was almost without a peer. He entered Guilford College before he was fourteen years old, completed his law course at the University of North Carolina, and was licensed to praceice law before he was twenty-one. He rapidly arose to prominence as a young lawyer, and was distinguished as but few young men have been in his chosen profession. Continuing in the successful practice of law, after a few years God's voice was heard and it was made clear to Bro. Caviness that his Lord wanted to engage him as a retainer in His great service. Thus a real struggle began that finally culminated in a surrendered life three years ago. At that time, he was thirty-five. He has spent much time at the Moody Bible Institute. There he was licensed to preach by the M. E. Church. He has been doing evangelistic work for two years in this and other States.

Successful meetings have been held in many places. By associating with and helping Rev. J. Lee Johnson and others in meetings in our Church, Bro. Caviness decided to cast his lot with us, and joined the Eastern North Carolina Conference last November, and was ordained by the State Conference one week later as an elder in our Church.

Chas. Yelton, Bro. Caviness' singer, is a young man of twenty-three years, from the State of Indiana, also prepared for service at the Moody Bible Institute. Mr. Yelton is a member of the Baptist Church. It has been my good fortune and great pleasure to have these brethren hold meetings for me at Clayton and at Liberty, Vance. The Clayton meeting ran through three months. Preaching at night only, except Sundays. Much house-to-hause canvassing was done. Most of this time a prayer meeting for men at 9 A. M., and one for women at 2 P. M., was held. Perhaps a revival was as badly needed at Clayton as at any place. These dear men of God were the ones who were used, in a wonderful way, to bring that revival. The gospel hammer was powerfully pounded on the professing Church until convictions came. The Holy Spirit did His work. The Word was verified, "If any man have not the spirit of Christ, he is none of His." Men and women, representing all the Churches, were led to "present their bodies a living sacrifice," as these men lived the gospel, preached and sang as the Spirit moved them. Many were heard to say, "I never saw it this way before. I thought that Christianity had lost her old-time power." But, thank God, it hasn't. Many, perhaps, were in the Church without the new birth. Others had backsliden until the joy of salvation was gone. But few had ever known the victory of a real, surrendered life. As this good work continued, the interest became so intense that many were unwilling for these men to leave the town. The last service was held on the third Sunday in March in the Baptist Church. The Sunday School rooms, gallery and all being used to try to accommodate the great crowd that was so eager to hear. And then the crowds pressed to say, "Please stay longer."

Bro. Caviness believes that the Churches need true Christian men instead of more members, and preaches to that end. Several hundred professed conversion or reconsecration. Twenty have joined the Christian Church, and many have joined other Churches. Once nominal members, are now on fire for God. Clayton is saying, "We must have Caviness and Yelton back again. Bro. Caviness is regarded as the strongest and most successful preacher that has ever visited Clayton. Bro. Yelton has made a wonderful impression as a singer and as a model gentleman.

Miss Ruth Johnson, daughter of Bro. K. B. Johnson, Fuquay Springs, N. C., rendered most valuable and faithful service as pianist during the entire Clayton meeting.

The Liberty meeting began on the fourth Sunday in March and continued for four weeks. Here, too, the aim was to revive the Church people. Many were truly revived. Bro. Caviness' messages were strong and well delivered under the power and demonstration of the Spirit.

Mr. Yelton sang to the great delight and inspiration of all. Eternity will reveal the great good that was accomplished at Liberty. Perhaps more than 300 members of this and other Churches reconsecrated their lives, or were first really converted. Almost all, except little children, who attend Church in this community are Church members. However, about twenty members were added to Liberty and several to the surrounding Churches. Bro. Caviness is a fluent and forceful speaker, expresses himself to the delight of the cultured; but best, and without which all is a failure, he has the love mentioned in 1 Cor. 13, and lives in the assurance of Psa. 23:1. He spends more time in prayer than any man I have ever been associated with. God is using him in a wonderful way, and I take great pleasure in recommending him to any pastor or Church who may need an evangelist, sound in the faith, filled with the spirit, and prepared to purge the Church and revive the people.

Mr. Yelton, too, I would especially recommend as being the most generally loved of any singer I have known and one who is especially talented in the training of children to sing.

May God's richest blessings follow these good men.

ELON CHAUTAUQUA AND SCHOOL OF METHODS.

The Elon Chautauqua and School of Methods will meet this year from July 27th to August 7th. The opening session will be Monday evening, July 27th, when Mr. Hermon Eldredge, Field Secretary of the Department of Christian Education, Dayton, Ohio, will deliver the first of a series of five addresses. This will be followed by an informal get-together in the parlors of West Dormitory, in order that every one may know every one else from the beginning. The closing session will be Friday evening, August 7th, when a commencement address will be delivered and diplomas awarded.

The college has been very generous in furnishing the dormitories, with water and light, for the use of the guests, and the other college buildings for class rooms. Every one will be interested in the splendid new buildings at Elon, the new wall around the campus and the beautiful gates and driveways, and especially the Mooney Christian Education Building, where the classes will be held during the morning. The evening lectures will be given in the Whitley Memorial Auditorium.

Ever since the establishment of the Chautauqua and School of Methods at Virginia Beach in 1913, it has been a source of inspiration to many of our Christian Church people. A number of people have supported it from the very beginning, attending practically every session, if not all of them; among them have been Dr. C. H. Rowland, Dr. Staley, Dr. Harper, Dr. Atkinson, and many others. The time has been extended from one week to ten days because of the many requests from people who attended last summer and because we feel that more and better work can be done with longer time. The lengthening of the time has made it possible for us to plan a much larger program than in previous years, and more courses for international credit.

Children's workers will be especially interested in the two courses in primary work which will be taught by Miss Margaret Clemens, of Philadelphia, and the two courses in junior work which will be taught by Mrs. M. L. Bryant, of Norfolk,

Va. One of the courses for primary and junior workers will be in the theory of the work, with a study of the needs of the child and child psychology, and one of the courses will be in methods (worship programs, the use of pictures, use of the story, sand tables, etc.). Miss Clemens is assistant editor of the children's publications of the American Baptist Publishing Society, and Mrs. Bryant is president of the Eastern Virginia Woman's Conference, and a teacher in the public schools of Norfolk. A daily vacation Bible school will be conducted each morning from 10 to 12 o'clock, with Prof. Bennett, of Elon College, in charge.

Miss Martha Stacy, one of our missionaries from Japan (who returns in September), will teach a ocurse in missions, presenting the mission study books and lecturing on the work in Japan. We feel that we are especially fortunate in getting her.

Dr. Roy C. Helfenstein, pastor of People's Christian Church, Dover, Del., who has gained national reputation for his work in evangelism, will teach a course in evangelism and will deliver five addresses in the evenings. Dr. W. H. Denison, Stewardship Secretary, Dayton, Ohio, will teach a course in stewardship and a course in Church organization.

This year, special emphasis will be given to young people's work, and an organization for the promotion of young people's work will be formed. Different young people will conduct their own worship each morning. Mr. Hermon Eldredge will teach a course for young people in the work of the Christian Church and a course for young men and boys in "What Shall I Do With My Life?" A similar course for young women will be taught by Mrs. Patton. There will be a course in music for young people, Christian Endeavor, Camp Fire Girls and Boy Scouts.

Mrs. E. F. Burkholder, of Richmond, will conduct happy hour, which is held from 7 to 7:30 on the campus each evening. Mrs. Burkholder has had wide experience in this type of work. Mrs. W. D. Parry, of Raleigh, N. C., will be the Chautauqua organist.

Much will be made of the recreational part of the Chautauqua this summer. Mr. W. A. Welch, secretary of the Y. M. C. A., Henderson, N. C., will have charge of the recreation, and his plans are great. He has games and good times planned for all from the youngest to the oldest. Mr. Welch has been very successful in recreational work in Henderson and other places. Every one will be expected to bring tennis rackets, bathing suits, low shoes, and comfortable clothings.

Those who have attended the Chautauqua for the past two years will be pleased to know that Mrs. Kirkland will again be in charge of the dining-room. Much of the success of the Chautauqua has been due to the efficient services of Mrs. Kirkland.

PATTIE L. COGHILL,
Secretary.

THE GIRL WHO LOST THE RACE.

In the days when Rome was young and gay, and people had a great deal of time for pleasure, there lived an athletic young girl named Atalanta, who was the fastest runner in the land. After outrunning every one whom she raced, she tired of victory and offered to marry the man who could outrun her, thinking that would spur her contestants on to greater efforts. There was also a young man who fell in love with Atalanta when he saw her in a race, and he determined to try to beat her and so have her for his wife. He asked his goddess what he could do to win, and this is the advice she gave him. She told him that Atalanta loved gold, and if he could get three golden apples and throw one of them off a long distance every time Atalanta got ahead of him he would win the race. So the young man did as he was told. The day of the race arrived, and the athletic grounds were filled with thousands of people to see the race. The signal was given and they were off. Soon Atalanta was a few feet ahead, and off went a golden apple to one side. When she saw the sun shine on it, she turned aside and ran after the bright apple, and fell behind in the race. But soon she caught up and was ahead again, when out went another, and she was off after that like a hunting dog after a bird, and she fell behind once more. But soon she got ahead again, and the third apple shone in the sun as it was thrown far away to the side, and while she was going after that apple, the young man crossed the line and she was beaten. The young man won the race and the girl he loved.

We are all, more or less, like this foolish girl, who was so anxious for the gold that she lost her honors as a runner. We have one purpose in life, and that is to seek the kingdom of God; but we love the glittering things of the world so much that we leave the main thing and go off after these golden apples, these pleasures that last but a little while, until we are in danger of losing the race of life and the goal and the prize, the kingdom of heaven.—R. D. Dodge, in Christian Work.

SHADY GROVE, N. C.

We were with Rev. J. W. Knight at the above-mentioned place the third Sunday and Saturday before. It was the memorial occasion. The congregation was very large; they had a fine program and it was well rendered, after which the writer spoke. Then the flowers were placed on the graves. Song and prayer were held, and then a sumptuous dinner was served, and at 2 P. M. the writer preached to a fine congregation. Forty-one years ago, the late Rev. J. P. Barrett and the writer were here at an annual Conference. This occasion was a very enjoyable one. Bro. Knight, the pastor, is very highly esteemed. At 7:30 P. M. we preached at Ether to a small congregation. The evening was very stormy; hence a small congregation.

Pope's Chapel and Mt. Carmel.

Fourth Sunday we supplied for Dr. D. A. Long at this point. This was another memorial occasion. After preaching to a large audience and the distribution of the flowers, a bountiful dinner was served. We were once pastor of this Church for ten years, but many changes have taken place. We only found a few familiar faces; most of the fathers and mothers were absent. It was a real joy to the writer to have this privilege. We heard many regretting that Bro. Long is going to leave them after this year.

At 2:30 P. M. we met at Mt. Carmel, another fine congregation. We delivered a message to this people, flowers were placed, benediction pronounced. Here we hear regrets on account of Dr. Long's leaving them. The writer was once pastor of this Church, and many of those who were then members have passed into the spirit land. God bless these two Churches.

CHRISTIAN TEMPLE.

At a meeting of the official board of Christian Temple, held April 27, 1925, our friend and brother Rev. William T. Scott favored us with a few remarks as to his work during his term of office as assistant pastor, expressing the opinion that the aggressive program of the Christian Temple had made its impress on the community and city. Rev. Mr. Scott leaves on May 15th to pursue his studies further in preparation for the gospel ministry.

Whereas the official board of Christian Temple desires to record, in some measure, its high regard for the services of Bro. Scott, and in especial recognition of his work among the children and young people of our Church and community; therefore, be it resolved:

1. That the official board record its sincere appreciation of his faithful service among us in behalf of Christian education and the teaching of high ideals of morality and Christian living to the children of our Church.

2. That we extend to him the best wishes of the Church for the continued success of his work in the gospel ministry, and in his effort to better prepare himself for a useful life in the Master's vineyard.

3. That a copy of these resolutions be entered upon the Church record, a copy presented to Bro. Scott, and a copy sent to THE CHRISTIAN SUN for publication.

GETTING RID OF TROUBLE.

How can we get rid of our troubles? There is plenty of advice to be had. A recipe frequently seen is that we free ourselves from trouble by helpful service for others. Thus: "When I dig a man out of trouble, the hole that he leaves behind him is the grave where I bury my own trouble." That sounds plausible, and it may work sometimes; but there are troubles that are too big to be buried in any grave of human digging. For troubles are often the result of sin; and no form of service or self-effort can do away with sin. Yet there is a sure way to get rid of trouble. It is to take it to the Lord Jesus Christ. He bore in His own person all the sins and all the resulting troubles of all men. When we come to Him as Saviour and Lord, in full surrender and entire faith, He first puts our sins behind His back—that means He puts Himself between them and us; He buries them in the depths of the sea; He removes them from us farther than the East is from the West, and He remembers them no more. "Cast thy burden upon the Lord, and He shall sustain thee; He shall never suffer the righteous to be moved." The end of our troubles is found not in what we can do for God, but in what God can do for us.—Sunday School Times.

GOD'S PEOPLE AND MONEY.

Money for foreign missions, as well as for other departments of the work for the upbuilding of God's kingdom on earth is greatly needed by our Church and by all other branches of the Church. Is this because God's people have not the money that is needed and that they can give for this cause? Or is it that, as a whole, they do not realize the relative importance of the objects for which they spend their money. The American Digest gives the following estimate of the way in which the average American spends his money, and it deserves very careful study. For the Church, ¾ per cent; schools, 1½ per cent; government, 4½ per cent; crime, 8¼ per cent; investment, 11 per cent; waste, 14 per cent; luxuries, 22 per cent; living costs, 24½ per cent; miscellaneous, 13½ per cent.

STEWARDSHIP AND PROMOTION.

BY WARREN H. DENISON, Secretary.

Building a Church House.

It is an important matter when a congregation plans to build a new house of worship, or to undertake extensive remodeling, or enlargement of the present plant. There are at least four things that need to have special attention and careful consideration.

(a) The preparation of the congregation for the building campaign. If this is well and tactfully done, carefully planned for, it will give great impetus and unity to the movement. Correct preparation means so much for the spirit of co-operation, and for the initial giving and subscriptions. Many blunders and delays may be avoided if proper thought is given to the preparation, and consultation had with those experienced in such matters. It is not enough to know that a house should be built. One should seek to know how to get it done.

(b) The planning of the Church building for worship, education, service. It has been my privilege to dedicate and rededicate many Church buildings. How often has the heart ached when I saw a nice building, but so poorly fitted and arranged for worship, education, service. The same amount of expenditure, or even less, might have easily provided so much better equipment and arrangement. All architects, contractors, builders, are not fitted to plan Church buildings. They may be well qualified for office or factory buildings, but Church buildings are in a distinct class. These architects and builders are not abreast in matters of religious education, modern Sunday School work, present-day needs of worship. The building was nice perhaps, but so inadequate because our Christian Education Department had not been called into consultation. How much Mr. Eldredge, Dr. Fletcher, or Dr. Harper might have helped both in the planning, and frequently in the saving of funds. That is one phase of their work. Take time to make your Church plans.

(c) The securing of subscriptions and the collection of payment on them. There are ways to do it, and ways not to do it. They will mean much for the success or failure of the enterprise. System and wise, approved methods in securing the preliminary subscriptions, and in the payment of the same, as well as in the raising of funds when the work is completed, if it is necessary to raise funds then, should be carefully sought. Financial methods and principles need most careful consideration with those familiar with such matters. The completion of the financial part should be a real victory and make a definite contribution to the spiritual force of the Church.

(d) The services of the day of dedication or rededication. Such matters of importance as the date of the service, the program and speakers for the day; the matter of raising funds, if that is necessary; the full completion of the work before dedication; consultation with the one who raises the funds as to program, and the making of the occasion a permanent asset to the local Church and community.

Tithing Testimonials.

These two are from two of our young college graduates, both of whom are entering our denominational work.

Miss Marian L. Morrill, Defiance graduate, missionary education for our Mission Board, says: "Recognizing that all I have comes from God, I can surely do no less than return one-tenth of the money I earn to Him. And after the tenth is paid, then comes the joy of giving more."

Miss Gertrude Browne, Elon graduate, field secretary of the Woman's Board of the Southern Convention, says: "To me, tithing means the enlargement and enrichment of our spiritual lives. Giving is such a joy when given according to God's plan. We are stewards of our time, talent, money and life. Tithing is simply a method of expressing our stewardship. I would that every Christian nontither might be won to partake of the joy of tithing."

LIBERTY THROUGH LAW.

"Take my yoke upon you."—Matt. 12:29.

(Baccalaureate address by President W. A. Harper, Elon College, Sunday P. M., May 24, 1925.)

Our age is restless under restraint. Discipline is distasteful to us. Law, we regard, seemingly, as the necessary antipode of liberty, while freedom increasingly tends to become license for not a few. The beloved President Harding, in taking the oath of office, made reference in his inaugural address to "liberty under the law," the natural inference of which for many is that law impedes liberty. I doubt not that most of you who constitute the class of '25 have the idea that the college regulations are an interference with the personal liberties of students, as something to be endured for the sake of the coveted goal of a college degree, and as something to be escaped from as soon as possible. The hour of your absolution is now at hand. Soon the hampering restrictions of faculty and student government will be over, and you will be free to order your conduct according to your own standards.

But you are destined to be suddenly disillusioned. Our local, State, and national governments each have laws which must be obeyed. Society has its customs and conventions enforced by the stern arbitrament of public opinion. Social ostracism is the severest penalty conceivable, unless it be the outlawry applied to a man who has violated the ethical standards of his profession or business. Law, custom, convention, ethical standards confront us on every hand. There is no escape from their presence. The network of legal requirements in some form is as universal as the law of gravity. Savages have no laws, but the more advanced a people are in civilization and culture, the more numerous are their laws. Simple life requires few laws, but highly organized life functions always through a correspondingly intricate legal system. We have no international law in the strict sense, our best jurists tell us, and that is why the world is cursed by periodic wars. Every game must have its rules. The greatest game is life. The rules of its game we style law, custom, convention, professional ethics. Lawmakers are not the enemies of our life. They are its friends. Sooner or later, we will come to this conclusion; the sooner, the better. Law is what experience suggests as helpful to life enacted into statute. Custom, convention, professional ethics are embryonic laws. They may or may not become statutes.

Recently, a fine young fellow was objecting to his father's ruling respecting a certain course of conduct. His father had always tried to reason things out with him, and was usually successful. But in this instance his son seemed obdurate. After a prolonged argument, the young fellow straightened himself up and said, "Well, dad, I would have liked so much to have had your approval, but it seems that you older men just can't get the viewpoint of youth." It is a sad day where a son talks that way to his father; a sadder day for the son than for his father. The son, who honors his father when their judgments differ, will have occasion to rejoice in the years that are to come to him that in a critical experience he was strong enough to overcome his desire and obey the judgment of the one whose years and experience, not to say sacrifices for him, gave him the right of ultimate decision.

I want to give you a little incident or two out of my own knowledge and experience as the president of your alma mater. Some dozen years ago there graduated from Elon a fine young fellow, whose spirit during the four years of the college course had rebelled against the regulations that the faculty deemed necessary to govern the institution. He frequently expressed his resentment to me relative to the interference with his rights to decide his own conduct. One day he said: "I don't mind doing what the rules require, but I don't like to be required to do anything." He began teaching school. I visited his school at the following commencement. His patrons told me he was the strictest disciplinarian they had ever had. He had learned his lesson. He was man enough to confess to me he had been mistaken in his attitude toward college regulations. "You just must have rules if you conduct a school," he concluded.

Another young fellow, brilliant but radical and erratic, and proudly so, had frequently during his college days expressed his unqualified opposition to any regulations. I had always tried to show him that a well-ordered society required rules, and at times he seemed convinced. On one particular day, he declared I was hopeless and incapable of getting the viewpoint of the students. The time had come, I thought, for me to talk firmly, and so I asked: "Has it ever occurred to you that it is your duty as a student to get the viewpoint of your college?" After that conversation, we never discussed the matter again, but his whole attitude was changed. He honestly endeavored to get the viewpoint of those who had been charged with the government of the college. He had learned his lesson. Today, he is reflecting honor on his alma mater in the serious effort to get younger men than himself to understand the viewpoint of the school in which he is a very successful teacher.

On another occasion, I met an Elon graduate, and we fell to talking about his college days. He had never been before the faculty nor before the student senate, not even as a witness. "Did you find the college rules interfering with your freedom of action?" I inquired. "No, indeed," he replied; "they made my life regular by suggesting what I ought to do." And then he added: "I never even saw a college rule violated." The good citizen of the college community thus exerted a wholesome influence for right conduct over his fellows. There are some persons whose law-abidingness makes law-breaking unthinkable in their presence.

The apostle Paul declared the Mosaic law to be a schoolmaster to prepare those who obeyed its precepts for the larger law of love in Christ. Jesus Himself invited those who listened to his matchless teachings to take the yoke of obedience upon them, promising them rest for their souls. The yoke is not a burden to the ox, but a lightener of burdens. An ox with a yoke will do far more work and with far less exertion than a yokeless ox. "My yoke is easy and my burden is light," says our Master in His invitation to come to Him.

It is even so with the law. There is no opposition between liberty and law. It is not even as President Harding said, "liberty under the law." It is liberty through the law, because of the law. Law increases rather than limits human freedom. The society with the most laws always enjoys the largest liberty. The absence of law means the breakdown of liberty, a social order in which every man must look out for his own interests and wherein no man would be free to pursue a consistent course of conduct.

Take a simple illustration from the realm of custom. We, in America, have decided to pass on the right on our highways. It would have been just as reasonable to pass on the left, as in England. But suppose custom had not decided this matter for us, leaving each individual in every instance of meeting or passing to decide whether he will go to the right or to the left! How many miles could we, under such uncertainty, travel in an hour? And how many accidents would we have? In cities, it has been found necessary to make certain streets one-way streets and to halt all traffic at intervals on certain other congested streets. Motorists know these traffic regulations do not impede travel, but that they rather facilitate it and at the same time make it safe.

Take a further illustration of the legal character. The law forbids theft and obligates the whole people to protect every man in the possession and enjoyment of his property. Suppose we had no such law, a man could own only so much property as he could protect with a gun, and he could not enjoy that for fear it would be taken from him. But protected by the strong arm of the law, he can lie down and rest at night and in his working hours can devote himself wholeheartedly to honorable and serviceable pursuits. The law makes freedom possible for men, and so do custom, convention, and the professional ethical standards. Being always blessed by law and custom in the service of life, we can never fully appreciate their blessing and boon to us.

But this freedom is never an end in itself. It is itself a yoke. It is meant to be used for desirable ends. Freedom is not emptiness. It is related life. If there were only one person in the world, there would be no freedom. Liberty is a social concept and also a social product. It grows and increases as our contacts and relationships with other lives multiply. Freedom must have motive. It must be directed toward the realization of certain objectives, and these objectives need to be worthy of the freedom that suggested them as goals of endeavor. It is here that religion renders a splendid service to man, religion which summates all the good of all law, all custom, all convention, all professional ethical standards, and gives them universal and abiding sanction by relating them to God.

The moral man is a law unto himself. He is spiritually uncivilized. The moral man has no objective standard of right living around which he may organize his life. But the religious man is possessed of a larger, ampler freedom. He has a standard outside himself around which and in terms of which he may organize his life and motivate his conduct. That objective standard is the will of God as revealed in Jesus Christ and as constantly interpreted to him as duty by the Holy Spirit. Religious law conceived as the will of God for the individual man, guarantees the largest freedom, and the more completely and earnestly Christian a man is, the freer he is in all the relations of life. The uninitiated, the inexperienced do not so understand it. You can never understand Christian freedom by looking on from the outside.

For him who observes and studies Christianity from the outside, there is a feeling that the Christian life circumscribes the liberty of a man, but there is no foundation in experience to warrant such a conclusion. Just as law guarantees freedom and enlarges it, so does religion make for largeness and fullness of life. But the Christian religion does transform life. It does modify the desires and aspirations of the heart. It does to all practical purposes make the man who professes it a new creature, so that the things he once hated and regarded as burdens unworthy to be borne, he now loves and accepts as opportunities to be seized for the profitable investment of his life and talent; and in the midst of this transformation, he experiences a rebirth into a larger, a more inviting and satisfying freedom. The liberty wherewith Christ makes free is no sounding phrase, but a blessed reality rejoicing the heart of the man who has experienced it. Herein lies Christianity's chief glory.

We Christians enjoy this larger freedom because of the law of love, love of God and love of brother-man, which we acknowledge as operative in every realm of our experience. We are free to choose our courses of conduct, but love lends us to choose the things that are consistent with the will and way of Christ, and for us that memorable saying of Browning has a deep and imperative meaning—"All's love, yet all's law." Christianity's law of love is for us the evidence and the substance of freedom and liberty, a freedom and a liberty that abide forever because they have enduring foundations.

A distinguished theologian has recently raised the question of God's limitation. "Is God limited?" queries Bishop McConnell. Is God subject to law? And is that subjection to law evidence that He is not possessed of perfect freedom? We have seen that law does not impede our own free action, but rather amplifies it. We have also seen that religion is not a shackle on the spirit of man, but rather a spur to noble living. God is limited by the inherent goodness of His nature. He is perfectly free to do wrong, but His moral fullness intervenes. His freedom is, therefore not abridged by the law of His own loving nature and personality. With Him and with us, the law to which He is inherently obligated does not deprive Him of perfect and absolute liberty of action and freedom of choice. It is not that God cannot sin, but He will not sin. The law of His own loving nature is, therefore, no limitation on His perfect freedom.

We have dared to carry our discussion to the ultimate realm in its implication. We have done so reverently, and I trust profitably. The will of God, it therefore appears, is not something thrust upon humanity and which necessarily must limit our freedom of choice and liberty of conscience and action. The will of God does not deprive us of anything, but it unmeasurably adds to our freedom. The law of love, which is the will of God for men, when operated in every realm of our human experience, becomes the law of life, and it makes living a constant joy and growing satisfaction. The Christian knows this and rejoices in it

We who are so soon to pass out from the cloistered life of the college campus into the larger world of every-day life, are challenged on the threshold of this larger experience to exercise our freedom of choice in deciding not only what line of work we will enter upon, but equally and more essentially the spirit in which we will undertake this work. We will find that there are two systems of law bidding for our adherence, the law of selfishness and the law of unselfishness, both offering us freedom, both seeking our allegiance. A closer examination, however, will reveal the fact that the experience of men has discredited the law of selfishness. Men have learned that its liberty is a sham affair. Our college days have surely taught us the undoubted value of altruistic, unselfishness service. But we are, nevertheless, free to choose. Wise is he who chooses unselfishness as the law of his life and who fashions the edifice of his character in terms of Christian love, the law of life that guarantees perfect freedom, the noblest passion, too, that can stir the aspirations of man's inner nature, the only passion of which we shall never have occasion to feel ashamed. This choice will bring us into harmonious relationship with the will of God for us and in the progressive realization of that will not only shall we find our deepest joy, but our amplest freedom. Christian liberty, the blessed liberty of the children of God, is guaranteed us through obedience to Christian law, His law of love. through this law and not under it or in spite of it, we have the joys of the satisfying liberty of the sons and daughters of God. And so we may gladly accept our Master's invitation to come to Him and to take upon us the yoke of His law of love. In that yoke we shall find not only help for our daily burdens of life, but rest to our souls. So does the law in every realm of our life and experience bring us aid, multiply our successes, and vouchsafe us true and abiding freedom.

RELIGIOUS EDUCATION

MISS PATTIE COGHILL, Field Secretary, 11 East Newton St., Boston, Mass.

INTERNATIONAL UNIFORM SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON.

June 7, 1925.

Subject: "Peter's Broadening Vision."

Golden Text: "Of a truth, I perceive that God is no respector of persons."—Acts 10:34.

Lesson: Acts 10:1-11-18.

Devotional Reading: Isa. 61:1-9.

It seems strange that a man who had led other men to a saving knowledge of Jesus Christ through the Holy Spirit should be called upon to vindicate his action in eating and having fellowship with those men. And yet that is what actually happened in the case of Simon Peter. Instead of being commended for his great service, he was condemned for his breach of ceremonial law, and he was obliged to defend and to justify his action. His defense was a recital of events that bore such genuine evidence that they had been wrought by God that "when they heard these things they held their peace, and glorified God, saying, "Then hath God also to the Gentiles granted repentance unto life."

As a matter of fact, the lesson might well be called "The Story of Two Hungry Men." In the one case, the man, Peter, was hungry for bread. Unlike so many men who fume and fret when dinner is not ready, he had gone apart to meditate and pray. And while he prayed, he had a vision that was far-reaching in its significance; so far-reaching, as a matter of fact, that the genius of foreign missions has its rise in that vision. He saw a sheet let down from heaven in which there were all manner of animals, many of them unclean, from the standpoint of the Jews. And yet he was commanded to "kill and eat." The command was thrice repeated. Peter, like so many of us, could stand a great deal of repetition, especially on matters in which we have deep-seated prejudices. It is interesting to note that Peter's answer is typical of so many of our answers to new demands by God. "Not so, Lord, for I have never eaten anything that is common or unclean." It was something new; it had never been done before. This lame excuse is still given by many of us as we face the demands of the new age in which we live. "What God hath cleansed, make that not common." The forgiven harlot or the reformed drunkard is not unclean. They have been washed in the blood of the Lamb.

The other hungry man was Cornelius. But he was hungry for the bread of life. He had followed what light he had, and as is always the case with such a man, he got more light. He, too, had a vision, and obedient to that heavenly vision, he sent his deputies to Joppa for Peter, who, when he had come, led Cornelius and his household into the light of life. There is a somewhat humorous, and certainly a significant sidelight on the meeting of the two men. Peter reminds Cornelius that it is unlawful for a Jew to have fellowship with those who are unclean from the Jew's standpoint. In a sense, it is a rather ungracious remark and might have stung under certain circumstances. But Peter goes on to explain that he came because it was the manifest will of God. Cornelius, on the other hand, reminds Peter that it is somewhat out of the ordinary for a proud, official Roman to send for a Jew, but adds that he, too, is acting on a manifest sanction of God. In obedience to the Spirit of God, men can readily lay aside their deep-seated prejudices and have fellowship together. Perhaps those who are bitter in the fundamentalist-modernist controversy will do well to think on these things. Cornelius added that he had sent for Peter that he might speak to those gathered the "words whereby they should be saved." The minister is not to attempt to deal with questions and issues except as they are related to the individual and social salvation of his hearers. As a matter of fact, people go to Church for the bread of life, and the minister who proclaims the gospel with conviction and power will always have a hearing.

When men committed to the will of the Spirit get together, things begin to happen. And even while Peter spake, the Holy Spirit came upon his hearers. God is no respector of persons, and wherever He finds open-minded hearers and responsive wills, He pours out His Spirit without measure. So far as Peter was concerned, he was convinced that the gospel riches were for the Gentiles. How could he believe otherwise in the light of what had happened before his eyes and in his heart.

We need this lesson for our day and time. In spite of the open vision that has come to many, there are many people today who are not missionary in spirit or even in vision. We need to learn that "to the Gentiles also God hath granted repentance unto life."

The lesson is full of suggestive and challenging truths. Here are a few of them:

1. We often find God in unexpected places and in unexpected persons.
2. He who gives alms and prays in sincerity is in an attitude that will make it possible for God to reveal Himself more fully.
3. Ministers of the gospel should be able to tell men what they ought to do to be saved and what they are saved to do.
4. Distance in miles and degrees of social standing are no barriers to men who are committed to the way of the Lord.
5. Visions come, as a rule, not in the hurry of life, but in the quiet hours of meditation.
6. We see not because we wait not.
7. When God has a purpose for a man, He speaks in no uncertain ways.
8. Duty or immediate action usually come hard after a vision.
9. He who knows that he is doing what God wants him to do, need not be afraid to go anywhere or to do anything.
10. God speaks to men through men.
11. God has many angels, or messengers, beside men.
12. Obedience is the road to knowledge.
13. When people come to Church they should hear the things that are commanded of God.
14. A characteristic quality of the Master's life was that He went about doing good.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

June 7, 1925.

Topic: "How Should We Invest Our Lives?"
Scripture: Rom. 12:1-2; 1 Cor. 10:31-33.

Worship.

Love thyself last; look near, behold thy duty
To those who walk beside thee down life's road.
Make glad their days by little acts of beauty,
And help them bear the burden of life's load.

Song: "O Master, Let Me Walk With Thee."

Leader: No man liveth to himself alone.

All: Let me live in a house by the side of the road, and be a friend to man.

Leader: Who shall ascend unto the hill of the Lord, or who shall stand in His holy place?

All: He that hath clean hands and a pure heart.

Song: "Lord, Speak to Me, that I may Speak."

Prayer to be read: "Heavenly Father, Thou knowest we desire to do our whole duty now and always. Give us open minds to hear Thy call and willing hearts to respond. May we be able, through Thee, both to do and to dare. Keep us from faltering or turning aside from any task Thou hast given us. May we be strong, having on the whole armor of God, and on every battlefield may we acquit ourselves like true soldiers of the cross. Amen."—Judson Swift.

Song: "I Would Be True."

Suggestions for Leader's Talk.

Too long we have thought that the minister, the deacon, the missionary, and the other definite Christian workers alone should be deeply concerned with the investment of their lives. The business man, the lawyer, the farmer, the housewife, are just as responsible for the right investment of their lives as is the minister. God has made us all stewards of our own lives—our talents, our money, our personality—and we are each personally responsible for their use. God has made us free to choose our own life-work, to decide our life problems, and to live our own lives, and we should be very careful of the trust that is ours.

Some one has said: "Life may be invested in business for the glory of God; to show how business may be conducted in the spirit of Jesus, or to make work for others, and money for the kingdom." It is trite to say "Ge get the most out of life who put the most into it," or "We get out of life just what we put into it," but both statements are very, very true. People should consider this when they choose their life-work.

Mr. Hermon Eldredge will teach a course for young men at the Chautauqua this summer on "What Shall I Do With My Life?" This will be a discussion of the problems which face any ordinary young man in deciding his life-work, and how to meet them. A similar course will be given for young women. Rev. E. H. Raney, a recent graduate of Elon College and Yale divinity school, will deliver a series of addresses on "What it Means to Be a Christian," dealing with such subjects as "The Simplicity of Our Faith," "The Fact of God," "Meeting the Master," "Conversing with God," "Bible Knowledge," and "Life After Death."

Character Investment.

(2 Peter 1:1-11) This is one of the most helpful passages to be found in Bible about the way one should invest his or her life. First, seek a knowledge of God and Christ. This is a good guide, because, as Hosea in Old Testament contended, to know God is to love and serve Him. Through prayer, one may find a closer fellowship and trust in God, and may let Him be the guide to his life. "Add to your faith virtue; and to virtue knowledge; and to knowledge, temperance; and to temperance, patience; and to patience, godliness; and to godliness, brotherly kindness; and to brotherly kindness, charity." We may spend the greater part of our time on amusement and pleasure, or in service to others, helpfulness and enriching our own character.

Christian Orphanage

Dear Friends:

I want you to consider yourself in the position of the superintendent of the Christian Orphanage for just a short time with 112 little children gathered around you, looking to you for food, clothing, and a place to sleep, and also a chance to make good citizens, and with seventy-five fatherless ones pleading for a place, and also realize that it takes money to buy all these necessary things. Then I want you to also realize that you are supported by charity, and that you must entirely depend upon the kind Master, through the Church, to furnish all the things needed to care for the fatherless ones. I wonder if you would not be glad for each Church to be loyal in the work, and when you call for a monthly offering, a special Easter offering or a special Thanksgiving offering if you would not like to get a hearty response. Now, my friends, this is the position I am in as your humble servant, trying to care for the little children placed in our care. I have the utmost faith in God, and know He will do His part in giving you this world's goods with which to feed His little ones, but what are you going to do with what God has given you? That is what concerns me.

I was looking over my record book today and noticed so many Churches that have not sent in offerings to help us in this work. I wonder what use the members of those Churches are making of funds God has placed in their care.

I wonder if they give anything to missions or the college! If not, then what do Church members do? If they have faith, what is faith without works? The Bible tells us it is dead. We go to Church and sing and pray; but did you ever think how much we do pray for God to bless us? give us something? do something for us? We will be so grateful if He will do something for us. God wants to do lots for us, but so many times we won't let Him. Why don't we pray for God to let us do something for Him by using us and the means He has entrusted to our care to carry His gospel to the souls who have never heard of Jesus Christ, or to feed and clothe His orphan children that He has placed in your Orphanage to try your faith and let you prove to Him that you love Him. Or to help support your college, that young men and women may be trained for citizenship. You are God's stewards, my friends. Ask yourself the question, "What have I done for the enterprises of my Church during the last twelve months?" If God calls you to His judgment seat, what kind of report will you have to make? Let us have the utmost faith in God, but let us back up our faith with works. You may have the utmost faith that you will make a good cotton, tobacco or corn crop, but when you plant it you will help the Lord by working it very carefully. You may have the utmost faith that the orphans will be fed; but their food depends upon your gifts. We need the loyal support of you and your Church.

CHAS. D. JOHNSTON,
Superintendent.

young people in charge when they are building their characters and have an important part in the molding of these young lives. Theirs is a responsibile position. The missionary goes out to lift up humanity. It is slow work, and he often wonders if he is accomplishing much, but the good he does lives on. And so it is with whatever work we may choose as long as we do our best and help others. The essential thing is living the Christian life.

Questions.

1. How may one know that his life is being properly invested?
2. How may we overcome difficulties which stand between us and our fullest development?
3. Why should we consider others in the investment of our lives?
4. How may a business man influence others by living a Christian life?

CONDUCTED BY REV. H. E. ROUNTREE,
Our Chaplain in the United States Navy.

MONDAY.

THE ACHIEVING LIFE.

"Covet earnestly the best gifts and yet show I unto you a more excellent way."—1 Cor. 12.

Phillips Brooks said, "The ideal life is in our blood, and never will be still. Sad will be the day for any man when he becomes contented with the thoughts he is thinking and the deeds he is doing; where there is not forever beating at the doors of his soul some great desire to do something larger, which he knows that he was meant and made to do."

Prayer.—Our Father, we pray Thee to show us what is good. Make us keen to see and inspire us always in the right. May we follow the light that is within us today. In His name we ask it. Amen.

TUESDAY.

KNOWING AND FEELING GOD.

"Be still and know that I am God."—Psa. 46:10.

"Life seems a perpetual succession of events, to which man submits. We never know from which direction the sudden blow will come. Misery and happiness enter and make their exits like unexpected guests. Their laws, their orbits, their principle of gravitation are beyond man's grasp. Virtue conducts not to happiness; nor crime to retribution; conscience has one logic, fate another, and neither coincide. Nothing is foreseen. We live confusedly and from hand to mouth. Conscience is a straight line, life is the whirlwind which creates over man's head either black chaos or the blue sky. Fate doth not practice the art of gradation.

"Her wheel turns sometimes so fast that we can scarcely distinguish the interval between one revolution and another, or the link between yesterday and today."—Victor Hugo.

It was the still small voice that Elijah heard amidst the storm and the earthquake and the fire that revealed God. We all need more quiet before God in the mad rush of these days, that we may be at our best and know God.

Prayer.—Our Father, teach us to pray—how to come before Thee each day and live in Thy presence during the day. It is for Thee we would live. In His name we ask it. Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

ORTHODOX HEARTS.

"If a man say, I love God and hateth his brother, he is a liar."—1 John 4:20.

"Whosoever hateth his brother is a murderer."—1 John 3:15.

There is no heresy but hate:
Where hearts with lovingkindness glow
There God Himself doth clearly show.
Ah! there can be no wretched fate
Off in the world beyond this ken
To one who loves his fellowmen;
Ay! of Himself love is a part.
Could God disown a loving heart
And bar against it heaven's gate?

In ev'ry world love is the same,
And clear as day to open eyes.
Each little flower's beauty cries
Praise to the sun from whence it came:
The least of those whose loving ways
For others light life's somber days
Reflects somewhat of Christ's bright flame,
And even now his willing feet
Are treading on the golden street—
The Book of Life enrolls his name.

—Clinton Baltzell Adams.

Prayer.—Our Father, increase our love for Thee and mankind. Send us forth to keep the needy, and let at liberty them that are bruised. In His name we ask it. Amen.

THURSDAY.

HELPING THE BRUISED.

"The spirit of the Lord is upon me, because He anointed me to preach good tidings to the poor; He hath sent me to proclaim release to the captives, and recovering of the sight to the blind, to set at liberty them that are bruised."—Luke 4:18.

It is amazing what cripplings bruises will make of us. It is not necessary to break a bone or lose a limb. A bruise makes life intolerable and fills it with misery.

It is a very gracious word of our Lord's which declares that He has come to help those that are sore. Are we sore about anything? Have we been treated unkindly, or have we been overlooked? Have we suffered misfortunes from which we will never recover? Are we sick or disconsolate? Has sin stolen our peace or suffered from the viles of Satan? Christ would set us free. He has compassion. He forgives. He saves. He takes His own above it all. He throws the force of His mighty arms around us, heartens us, inspires us with hope. Bruises in the Lord are easy to bear and pass away. Suffering is the base of all sympathy. Our griefs may be our greatest blessings. At least, in His presence all bruises will be left behind—all spots will be wiped away. We shall be like Him.

Prayer.—Our Father, humbly before Thee we bow. We thank Thee for everything good. We repent our sins. Bless us with full pardon. Sanctify us with Thy grace. Send us out to serve. In His name we ask it. Amen.

"No minister should be satisfied with winning fewer than fifteen persons to Christ and the Church each year the Master grants him the privilege of laboring in His vineyard."—Roy C. Helfenstein. True! and every enterprise of the Church likewise.

FRIDAY.

THE FACE IN THE MIRROR.

"Stand fast in the faith, quit you like men, be strong."—1 Cor. 16:13-14.

In the shop of a Philadelphia dealer in antiques was a mirror with an odd history. On the back was the date 1736, and under that the name of the French maker. Careful scrutiny disclosed that the glass was not truthful. It diffused false portraitures. Even the thinnest face filled out under the magic of its slightly curved glass. There was a tradition that had come down with the mirror through the years to the effect that the glass had been made for an angular woman of colonial days. The glass had been made to flatter her.

Whether the legend is true or false, it will illustrate the truth that Satan has a trick mirror. Conducting man or boy to the falsifying glass, the enemy of men's souls shows him a weakened, effeminate vision of himself. "See," whispered the evil one, "that is what the Church would do for you. It is the refuge of stripling souls. Strong men do not need religion."

How different was Paul's conception. The truly religious man is the strong man. If any one doubts the manliness of a truly religious life, let him spend an hour reading the life of Paul. No timorous soul could have endured the almost incredible hardships. "Be strong, quit you like men!" A man's man wrote that injunction.—Rev. John Harrison Allen.

Prayer.—Now, to Him who has no greater desire for us than our welfare, we will give all the praise, and trust Him through all the unknown future, knowing His care for us will uphold us. In faith in Him who is our Redeemer. Amen.

SATURDAY.

RIGHT USE OF MONEY.

"Wherefore do ye spend money for that which is not bread? And your labor for that which satisfyeth not."—Isa. 55:2.

"He that hath a bountiful eye shall be blessed; for he giveth of his bread to the poor."—Prov. 22:9.

"The liberal soul shall be made fat; and he that watereth shall be watered also himself."—Prov. 11:25.

"There is no happiness in mere dollars. After they are acquired, one can use but a very moderate amount. It is given to man to eat so much, to wear so much, and to have so much shelter, and more he cannot use. When money has supplied these, its mission, so far as the man individually is concerned, is fulfilled, and man must look still further and higher. It is only in wide public affairs, where money is a moving force toward the general welfare, that the possessor of it can possibly find pleasure, and that only in constantly doing more.

"The greatest good a man can do is to cultivate himself, develop his powers, in order that he may be of greater service to humanity."—Marshall Field.

Prayer.—Dear Father, forgive us of our stinginess and miserliness. Cause us to do our part with our means toward public interest and charity, and make our money a blessing. In His name we ask it. Amen.

SUNDAY.

THE FAITH WE NEED.

"Abraham believed God, and it was counted unto him for righteousness."—Rem. 4:3.

"With the heart, man believeth unto righteousness.—Rem. 10:10.

The faith our Lord demands of us is the acceptance of truth as the will of God and placing implicit trust in Him. It is relying on the positive power of our loving to keep us in the right way and to keep us from wrong-doing. It is a power to know Him and to realize that what is real to Him is real to us; that the good He possesses we may possess. It is a faith which applies Christianity to society with a confidence that establishes better conditions and perfects growing souls.

We need the faith that brings truth, goodness, beauty and character as the chief delight of man. We need the faith that is firmly set in the right, that "abhors evil and cleaves to that which is good." Everybody needs to believe that wrong can be made right and right can be made to prevail.

If men will put their faith in God and their life's effort in achieving these things, sin and Satan will break down.

Prayer.—Our Father, forgive us of all our sins. Baptize us with Thy love. Inspire us to Thy service. Give us the joy of being partners with Thee, in the loving of souls. In His name. Amen.

THE TENTH COMMANDMENT.

This is a unique commandment. Search all the laws of the world, and you will not find one which resembles it. The Tenth Commandment is the complement of all the rest. It shows that God requires of us not only outward virtue, but inward holiness; that He demands in us the sacrifice of the will, from which wicked actions spring; that sinful imaginations are a crime against Him as well as wicked acts.—Dean Farrar.

LOVING JESUS.

Loving Jesus, meek and mild,
Look on me, a little child;
Make me gentle as Thou art,
Come and live within my heart.
Take my childish hand in Thine,
Guide these little feet of mine.
So shall all my happy days
Sing their pleasant song of praise;
And the world shall always see
Christ, the Holy Child, in me.

DICKY AND SQUEEDEE HAVE A CHAT WITH YOUNG SAPSUCKER.

By Blanche Silver.

Dicky stood watching the black and yellow bird clinging to the trunk of the tree. He was so intent on the bird that he didn't see the wee elfin Squeedee until the tiny hand touched his arm; then Dicky nearly jumped out of his shoes.

"Goodness, Squeedee! I thought that bird's mate had nipped me, as sure as I'm alive," he laughed. "I'm glad to see you. Say, isn't that a queer looking Woodpecker? Most all Woodpeckers I've seen have a red head, while that fellow has a red-brown chin and throat. Who is he anyway?"

Squeedee glanced up at the tree, then shook his head. "I'm sorry to have to tell you, that's Willy Sapsucker, Reddy Woodpecker's cousin. Too bad, but Willy Sapsucker is the black sheep of his family. He does one thing that we can't make him stop."

"And that's what?" asked Dicky, his eyes as large as saucers. "Maybe if you talked to him he would change his ways."

"No, I don't think so," replied Squeedee, shaking his head sadly. He gets his name honestly. Willy Sacsucker! Now, Reddy Woodpecker pecks holes in trees, but he does it to get out the insects that would destroy the trees. But Willy Sapsucker doesn't. He drills holes in the trees to suck the sap from the tree. Why, in a short time a Sapsucker can kill a tree. That's why he hasn't many friends. He drills into the inner soft bark and sucks the sap. Before he gets through he'll have a whole belt of holes around that tree trunk."

"No he won't if I can help it," laughed Dicky. "Let's call him down and talk to him. I've never seen him very close anyway."

Squeedee whistled and Willy Sapsucker flew down to his side. Squeedee introduced him to Dicky, and he bowed and strutted very politely.

He was just a wee bit smalled than Robin Redbreast. Black, yellow and white above with a bright red crown, chin and throat. The black on his breast formed a crescent. A yellowish white line, starting at the bill, ran down into a pale yellow vest. His wings were spotted with white and his tail was black, with a wee bit of white on the middle feathers.

"Sapsuckers are a nuisance, I'll agree," he chirped sadly. "We destroy trees; but, oh! that juice is good. After we peck a hole in the limb we can sip the juice until we are almost drunk. But I don't believe I've ever killed a tree. I rather like to get a little sap here and there, but I promise you one thing—I won't bother your trees any more." With a merry chirp, Mr. Sapsucker sailed away over the treetops to the woods beyond.

"Well, he's a mighty pretty fellow all right, Squeedee," began Dicky, but when he turned around he found he was alone. Whistling merrily, he trudged off to school, wondering where Willy Sapsucker would spend the day.

ONE-DAY SCHOOL OF MISSIONS.

The one-day school of missions of the Wake-Harnett-Johnston District met at Wake Chapel April 29, 1925, and was called to order by Mrs. L. L. Vaughan, district leader. The devotions were led by Mr. C. N. Johnson. Special prayer was offered for the following: (1) the increase of Christian fellowship and co-operation; (2) each member realize his own responsibility; (3) the health and courage of our missionaries in foreign fields, and that missionaries may be reared amongst us; (4) wisdom and courage of our Mission Board.

The following Churches responded to roll-call: Catawba Springs, 7; Piney Plains, 18; Raleigh, 10; Wake Chapel, 30; Wentworth, 5; Auburn, 2. The representative of Piney Plains gave a splendid report; Catawba Springs reported a recent organization, and keen interest in future duties; the Raleigh Church reported four missionary organizations; the Woman's Society reported about $400 on the Church building fund, dues $125; Rocky Ford Church, $50; silver, china, etc., for the local Church, $350; table linen, etc., $150; visits to the sick, 736; trays and fruit to sick, 324; flowers to hospitals, cakes and ice cream to the penitentiary and work camps, and religious services held in the camps. A fine report was given of the Wake Chapel Willing Workers' Society.

The minutes of 1924 were adopted as read, and the superintendent's message was given. Miss Gertrude Browne gave some vital glimpses of the work at Fancy Gap and Rocky Ford.

A solo, "I'm so Glad You Let Me Come," was rendered by Mrs. J. Beale Johnson. A beautiful message on the cradle roll work was given by Miss Julia McGee. Dr. Lawrence brought us his impressions of the great missionary convention in Washington.

An offering was made for the Rocky Ford work amounting to $17. The following committees were appointed: nominating, place, resolution. The meeting then adjourned for lunch.

Afternoon Session.

Devotional exercises by Mr. Milton Banks. Discussion and report of the work of the Willing Workers by Miss Lena Barrow; Young People's work by Miss Lucy Branch; "Women's Societies from a Man's Standpoint," by Prof. L. L. Vaughan.

Solo by Mrs. Wheeler.

Mr. H. C. Caviness brought a clinching message in the theme of "Jesus Christ the only Solution in Every Problem and Effort of the Mission Work."

A playlet, "A Woman's Missionary Meeting," was given by five girls of the Willing Workers' Band at Wake Chapel.

The nominating committee placed the present officers for consideration, and by vote they were re-elected—Mrs. L. L. Vaughan, superintendent, and Ruth Johnson, secretary.

The place committee named Raleigh Church for next year's meeting.

The resolution committee submitted the following: (1) Be it resolved, That we, as a band of women working together to promote the cause of missions, desire the prayer, sympathy, and co-operation of every one present, that we may have courage and wisdom for the task. (2) That each member of the body express our deep gratitude to Mrs. Vaughan for the splendid service she has so nobly and efficiently rendered in the work. (3) That we express our appreciation to Dr. Lawrence for his inspiring message. (4) That the people of the Wake Chapel Church be assured of our deep gratitude and thanks for beautiful music, most bountiful lunch, and splendid entertainment.

The meeting adjourned, with prayer by Mr. H. C. Caviness.

Most headaches due to lack of internal cleanliness

WHEN you are constipated, poisons form in the accumulated food waste and are carried to all parts of the body. Headaches follow. Biliousness, insomnia, lack of energy, all result from constipation, which if unchecked will lead to serious results.

Avoid Laxatives—Say Doctors

A noted authority says that laxatives and cathartics do not overcome constipation, but by their continued use tend only to aggravate the condition.

Medical science has found in lubrication a means of overcoming constipation. The gentle lubricant, Nujol, penetrates and softens the hard food waste and thus hastens its passage through and out of the body. Thus, Nujol brings internal cleanliness.

Nujol is used in leading hospitals and is prescribed by physicians throughout the world. Nujol is not a medicine or laxative, and cannot gripe. Like pure water, it is harmless.

Take Nujol regularly and adopt this habit of internal cleanliness. For sale by all druggists.

A TRAGIC END TO LIFE.

A tragedy, sudden and dramatic, brought to a close the dinner of the National Press Association, held on Tuesday of last week at the Trocadero Restaurant in London, when George Whale, who presided, suddenly collapsed and died in the presence of the 200 guests of the evening. The banquet, which was held in honor of the centenary of the birth of Thomas Huxley, was intended also to encourage a campaign against the Christian Churches. Mr. Whale, responding to a toast to the association, said: "Let us eat, drink, and be merry, for tomorrow we die. Do I say that? No. I say, take heart and help, for today we live." He also delivered a speech in which he attacked the dogmas of Christianity and its ministers. He had just ridiculed a statement that the "light of the Holy Ghost has guided the Church for nineteen centuries." "When the light does come, I predict it won't have the dazzling effect of the light which fell upon the apostle en route to Damascus—a light which left him dazzled for the rest of his life," Mr. Whale said, while the guests laughed appreciatively. A little later they were just beginning to applaud the first sentence of a toast in his honor presented by Major G. H. Putnam, American Civil War veteran, when Mr. Whale collapsed. Hushed whispers and awed, stricken faces replaced laughter and smiles. Then followed a tense silence, broken only by the dying man's strangled breathing. The incident may be explainable in a perfectly natural way, but it at least gives emphasis to the need of a decent reverence for those things that many good people hold sacred. The Bible speaks of the sin against the Holy Ghost. The Whale speech, as reported, comes perilously near to such a type of transgression.—Zion's Herald.

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT.

Whereas, it has pleased God, in His infinite wisdom and mercy, to remove from this world to a place of eternal joy and peace our beloved sister, Mrs. J. W. Austin, one whose life was spent in the service of the Master, and in her presence was always sunshine and good cheer;

Therefore, we the members of the Ladies' Aid and Missionary Societies of Bethlehem Christian Church, hereby offer the following resolutions:

1. That in her death, our societies have lost a faithful member; one who was always abounding in good work and whose Christ-like life shall ever be an inspiration to us.

2. That while we mourn her departure, we realize that our loss is her efernal gain, and that God, who gave, has taken her spirit unto Himself to live in perpetual bliss, in the home prepared for those who love and serve Him.

3. That we extend our deepest sympathy to the bereaved ones, in whose heart she is enshrined, and pray that God may be their ever-present help and comfort through life.

4. That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family of the deceased, one to The Christian Sun for publication, and a copy spread on the records of our societies.

EDWIN MARKHAM'S CREED.—

Some time ago Edwin Markham, the beloved American poet, sent a complete statement of his creed to the Universalist Leader. His creed interested us, and we pass it on:

"Here is the truth in a little creed,
Enough for all the roads we go:
In Love is all the law we need,
In Christ is all the God we know."

We are inclined to think that Markham's creed, lived up to, would bring a great deal of harmony into the world which men do not now know, and any creed that can bring us peace without and within is worth our pondering, for, after all, we are seeking for just that—peace without and within.

CONCERNING MURDEROUS SUPPLIES.—

Forty-three nations have convened at Geneva for discussion of the traffic in arms. This meeting is participated in by four powers not members of the League of Nations—the United States, Germany, Turkey and Egypt. The meeting was necessary because our government, fearing that the right of revolution might be interfered with, would not sign the convention of St. Germaine. It is proposed that zones be established into which arms may not be shipped. Persia, China, and Abyssinia have protested or are ready to protest against being placed in these zones. We are wondering what nations are willing to be placed in such zones. It seems that all export of arms must be prohibited or nothing can be done in the matter. This country is the possessor of a large share of the trade in arms.

HINDENBURG TAKES OFFICE.—

The old Imperial Nationalists had hoped that the election of Field Marshal Von Hindenburg meant a return to the old order, but they were doomed to disappointment. When the former general came to Berlin to take the oath of office, the old German colors—red, black and white—were fluttering in the breeze, but the government had given orders that no martial music should greet the President-elect on the six-mile ride from the station to the chancery, where he was to spend the night. Hindenburg took the oath of office clothed in plain black civilian clothes. He wore not a single decoration, and took the oath to support the Constitution of the Commonwealth, and added to the oath the religious phrases so sacred to him. Four times during the day he repeated his intention to support the Constitution, and to devote his energies to the maintenance of the republic. He paid high tribute to his Socialist predecessor, Friederich Ebert. It would seem that the old general has realized that he lives in a new Germany, and would stand true to it, and give the German people an honest administration.

ANOTHER MINE ACCIDENT.—

The third great accident in the mining history of North Carolina during the past thirty years occurred on May 27th, when some seventy men were entombed in the Carolina coal mine at Cumnock, N. C. Rescue parties are being hurried from West Virginia, and from Birmingham, Ala., by the Bureau of Mines at Washington. Governor McLean has done all in his power to send aid to the stricken community. There were three explosions, and the gas fumes made rescue work impracticable all during Wednesday. The first explosions which entombed the men occurred between 9 and 10 o'clock, while the full shift of miners were on duty. The Carolina mine is situated at Cumnock, N. C., where is also the Cumnock mine. Work in the Carolina mine has been in progress only about three years. It was in 1895 that the first of the series of catastrophes occurred in the Cumnock mine, claiming forty-three victims, and the second in 1900, which took a toll of twenty. The accident of May 27th seems to be the most tragic so far. A majority of the entombed men are reported to be white. Fifty bodies of the men who were in the shaft have been rescued. The total number entombed is not yet certain.

The Christian Church has a number of members connected with the work of the mines at Cumnock, and will deeply sympathize with the stricken people. Highway Commissioner Page, at the head of a corps of engineers, and Adjutant-General Metz have gone to the scene of the tragedy to give aid to the rescuers.

RUM ROW IN TROUBLE.—

Colonel Lincoln C. Andrews, whom the government has placed in charge of the task of suppressing liquor smuggling into the United States, is determined that the illicit traffic must cease. He is attempting to put an end to the custom of certain British schooners of anchoring off the coast from twelve to fifty miles, all the way from Cape Anne to Cape May, and then unloading their cargoes of poison on us by selling them at good profits to swift motor boats. Col. Andrews has four boats to one about each of the schooners on rum row, and bathes them at night in the brilliance of searchlights. So far, only one boatload of liquor has made it safely to shore. Some two years ago, Sir Broderick Hartwell put out his bid for capital to carry on the rum-running business. He has evidently been successful until the Andrews plague struck the business. He had sixty-one thousand cases of good liquor, and the government had the effrontery to seize thirty-two thousand of them, and he sold six thousand, and now he declares that he cannot sell the other twenty-three thousand on account of the tremendous risk involved. He is now making frantic efforts to save something from the financial wreck, which seems inevitable. It is an excellent thing that the government has secured such a man as Col. Andrews for the task, and we wish him much luck on the job. He will take care of the great sources of supply, and the local authorities will take care of the local stock. Maybe we can break the bootleggers financially, if we cannot get them in person.

NEGROES WANT NEW FREEDOM.—

The trouble at Howard University, the great negro institution of Washington, D. C., coming as it does so quickly upon the heels of a similar manifestation of unrest at Fisk University, the negro school at Nashville, Tenn., means something. Dr. F. A. McKenzie, a man of high scholarly qualities, was forced to resign after the white police force had been called in to quiet the negro students. Dr. McKenzie had refused to grant any form of student government or student expression, and the outbreak occurred. The same thing has happened now at Howard, and the Northern philanthropists are coming to see that the negro, which they began to educate half a century ago, is now a different person, and is demanding rights equivalent to those extended to whites. They believe that they are entitled to all the liberties and privileges accorded to white students, and are demanding this new freedom. It must either be granted them or negro education is doomed. The negroes have not demanded a negro president at Fisk, but they have demanded a new regime.

They are full of race pride, born of great accomplishment, and the negro students who are engaging in the outbreaks in the universities are a part of the great youth movement of the world. The Northern Churches and philanthropists are but reaping the results of their sowing. It is a dangerous thing for the exploiting race to educate the exploited race, and it was done only because it is so much more dangerous not to. Now, those who began the movement and those who have continued it must face this new situation. The negro stands upon the threshold of a new emancipation. He is demanding freedom. He wants to have an opportunity to grow and to develop, and he has a right to it without a doubt. It is now a case of granting his request or of withdrawing all the aid which has thus far been given, and no one would dare to do the latter.

NOTES-PERSONALS

Rev. B. J. Earp, pastor, reports the work in a flourishing condition and going well at First Church, Newport News, Va.

The Ham-Ramsay meetings came to a close at Burlington last Sunday. The meetings have drawn great congregations, and the people of Alamance and adjoining counties seem united in the conviction that great and lasting good has been accomplished through these services.

Chaplain H. E. Rountree, U. S. N., will conduct the morning services at Elm Avenue Christian Church tomorrow in the absence of Rev. Van Talmage Crawford, pastor of the Church. The evening service will be conducted by Miss Annie B. Palmer, associate pastor of First Christian Church.

Chaplain H. E. Rountree, U. S. N., conducted the services at the Fourth Street Baptist Church yesterday (May 24th) in the absence of the pastor, Rev. A. R. Love. He is in great demand in portsmouth, and is most generous with his time as both preacher and singer, and draws large audiences.—Portsmouth Star.

Rev. F. D. Ballard, one of our fine and promising young ministerial students in Elon College the past year, is now at Walters, Va. He will be pleased to engage in Christian work this summer if any of our Churches, pastors or Sunday Schools need and should demand his services. Bro. Ballard did good service with, and made a fine impression upon, congregations he visited near the college the past year.

Rev. J. Elwood Welsh, pastor of the Court Street Baptist Church, delivered the memorial address at the exereises conducted at 10:30 o'clock this morning (Saturday) at the naval hospital. Devotional exercises were conducted by Chaplain H. E. Rountree. Flags were placed on each grave of the cemetery in the naval hospital grounds, and "taps" were sounded. The flags were furnished by Ladies' Auxiliary of Portsmouth Post, No. 37, American Legion.

It is of interest to learn that the father of our noted evangelist, Rev. H. C. Caviness, Apex, N. C., was a student of Dr. D. A. Long's, at Graham, N. C. The father died when the present evangelist was a small boy, and the widow married a brother of the late-lamented Deacon John A. Mills, of Raleigh. The father was a devoted friend to the Christian Church before the child was born, and so Bro. Caviness comes to his own in casting his lot with us. He is an asset to any Church that is seeking to save souls and build up the kingdom of our Lord.

We acknowledge with appreciation the following: "Mr. and Mrs. Wilson J. Holland request the honor of your presence at the marriage of their daughter, Lois Maie, to Mr. George Dewey Underwood, on Friday P. M., June 12th, at 8 o'clock, Holland Christian Church, Holland, Va." Both Mr. Underwood and Miss Holland are graduates of Elon College, and since their graduation have been successful teachers for two years, the former in North Carolina, the latter in Virginia. They are quite favorably known to many SUN readers, who will join the editor in wishing them a long and happy married life.

The mine disaster at Coal Glen, N. C., is appalling beyond measure. More than forty women widowed and nearly 100 children orphaned in the twinkling of an eye calls for pity and compassion. A number of these are among our own people, members of the Christian Church. At last reports, fifty bodies had been taken from the mines, and it is thought that more than ten others are yet entombed. These men were working at their daily task, that the wheels of industry might keep moving and that they themselves might earn their daily bread and a competence for their wives and children. And yet our God, who knows all things and controls the destinies of men and worlds in His majesty, doeth all things in wisdom and in love.

Rev. J. W. Wellons ,D. D., though now in his hundredth year, was able to attend the annual meeting of the Board of Trustees of Elon College, of which board he has been a member since the founding of the college, and to remain with the board in its session all day. He also attended and took a lively interest in the graduating exercises and heard with great joy and satisfaction the literary address by Dr. Kelly. He is as deeply interested in Elon and all that pertains to the Christian Church and its progress as he ever was. He honestly believes if some Church were now to call him to be its pastor he would consider the call a long time, if in very truth he did not accept and undertake the work. And he is as progressive in spirit and ideals and plans as he ever was. What are you going to do about a man that lives to be a hundred and refuses to be shelved or to grow old in vision and in plans?

Many of our busy pastors found time to spend a day or two at Elon last week attending commencement. We had the joy of conversation and fellowship for a season with Dr. L. E. Smith, Norfolk; Rev. H. S. Hardcastle and Dr. W. W. Staley, of Suffolk; Dr. W. D. Harward, of Windsor, Va.; Rev. F. S. Lester, Franklin; Dr. W. D. Parry, Raleigh; Dr. G. O. Lankford, Burlington; Dr. W. T. Walters, Richmond; Dr. C. H. Rowland, Greensboro; Rev. R. A. Whitten, Reidsville, and possibly others. These brethren report the work going well in their respective fields, and several of them were rejoiced over recent occasions and many additions to their Churches since the annual Conference. Suffolk Church, we learn, is preparing to put on a much-needed and rather ambitious building program adequate to the growing demands of that strong and growing congregation.

BIBLE DISTRIBUTION.

An increased circulation, through its foreign agencies, of more than 500,000 volumes, was announced by the American Bible Society at the close of its one hundred and ninth annual meeting held at the Bible House, on Astor Place, May 14th. The total issues for the year amounted to 6,652,299 volumes, and were in 172 languages, dialects and Scriptures for the blind.

From the Bible House almost 3,000,000 volumes of Scripture in 116 languages were sent to the ten home agencies, the auxiliary societies and other organizations, for distribution in the United States, and to the six agencies in Latin-America and to other foreign lands.

The National Capital Agency, with headquarters in Washington, D. C., has been established, and the operations of the society in the United States are now carried on through ten home agencies, the other nine of which are located at New York, Philadelphia, Richmond, Cincinnati, Chicago, Denver and San Francisco.

In addition to the circulation by the home agencies, the State and local societies have borne their part in circulating the Scriptures in their respective areas. The Maine and Massachusetts Bible Societies carry on their systematic county by county canvass. The Maryland Bible Society, the Virginia Bible Society, the Cincinnati Young Men's Bible Society, and the Chicago Bible Society co-operate fully, as do more local societies, and all unite in the heartiest good will and effort to bring true the motto of the society, "A Bible in Every Home."

MEN AND MILLIONS MOVEMENT.

Lieutenant-Governor J. E. West, chairman of the Mission Board of the Southern Christian Convention, composed of Christian Churches in Virginia, North Carolina, Georgia and Alabama, which has charge of the Men and Millions' Movement, says that, while the full financial goal was not reached on April 30, 1925, the results accomplished have been gratifying, and attest the loyalty and liberality of the membership and the rapid expansion and progress of the Christians South.

The financial goal of the Men and Millions' Movement, initiated five years ago, was $2,000,000, of which $1,500,000 was for all benevolences and $500,000 was for Church extension. There has been collected in cash $1,842,093.29, of which $1,035,005.37 was for all benevolences and $807,087.92 for Church extension. The per capita for the entire fund was $73.68, of which $41.40 was for all benevolences and $32.28 for Church extension.

In addition to hundreds of tithers and life recruits, the membership of the Southern Christian Convention increased 15 per cent.

Lieutenant-Governor West was secretary of the Twentieth Century Fund of the Southern Christian Convention, and raised the first real endowment fund for Elon College about twenty-five years ago. When he compares results, then and now, Mr. West is amazed at the wonderful increase of wealth in the South and in the Christian Church, as well as the liberality of the people.

NEW BOOK.

A noteworthy recent issue of Fleming H. Revell Company is "An Adventure in Evangelism," by Daniel A. Poling, LL. D., co-minister with Dr. David J. Burrell, of Marble Collegiate Church, New York. Dr. Poling is a robust and engaging figure in the religious life of his time—a man of manifold activities and interests, a man who, in the best reading of that term, is "serving his day and generation."

Dr. Poling's new book is a record of the fine work being done under the auspices of the Church he so ably serves and which, as most people are aware, stands on that rialto of the rich—Fifth Avenue. The story of the way in which all classes of the community are being reached is fascinating reading. The point of Dr. Poling's book is that all men need Christ, and that even "on the avenue," where Church-going has the name of having become a formal and perfunctory practice, lost sheep, long strayed and weary, are continually being sought and brought back into the fold of the Good Shepherd.

While we are profoundly grateful to the schools named for their liberal offering and to the other schools which contribute monthly to missions, it is noted with regret that there are quite a few schools in the Southern Christian Convention not yet sufficiently interested in enlarging the kingdom and building up schools and Churches elsewhere to make a monthly contribution. For the next few months these contributions, not otherwise designated, will go to the support and extension of our mountain work in Carroll County, Va., and it is devoutly hoped that many of our schools not already doing so will vote for and send us one offering a month for this most worthy and needy work of the kingdom.

PRINCIPLES OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

(1) The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.

(2) Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.

(3) The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.

(4) Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship, and of Church membership.

(5) The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by, all.

THE PURPOSE OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

The purpose of this Church is to cultivate a spirit of union among the followers of our Lord Jesus Christ of every persuasion, and to secure, if possible, the associate efforts of all true religious teachers in pointing the wicked to "the Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world."

The peculiar doctrines and tenets which have confused and distracted the Christian world are remanded to private judgment, and hence cease to be matters for debate, only in so far as may be necessary to prevent a sectarian influence from entering the Church.

This Church requires no compromise of faith on the part of any child of God in order to communion or fellowship; here denominational distinctions cease to exist, and Christian love binds the brotherhood together.

The purpose of this Church will be consummated in the conversion of the world and the union of all Christians.

OUR EMERGENCY MISSION FUND.

The Mission Board of the Southern Convention, composed of as intelligent and loyal men and women as we have in all our Southern Convention, is doing its best to enlarge the borders of our work, build up the kingdom of our Lord, and keep the work going at home and abroad. This board, in good faith, made pledges and took obligations to mission points and to places of great opportunity and service with the hope and expectation that our income would continue as it had in the past.

However, our board, like all the other mission boards, has felt the pressure the past two years from reduced income, and now realizes that it must increase its revenue or decrease the work and the workers for whose support, obligations and promises had been made.

We do not believe that the loyal and faithful members of the Christian Church will suffer our mission interests to wane, nor our mission work to be crippled in this time of great need and great opportunity.

The board must have $20,000 as an emergency fund. This will be easy to secure if those who paid five times this much on a five-year installment plan would pay this year what each paid during one year of the five-year period of their pledge. Many, we are happy to say, are doing this. One dear, good woman whose pledge was $250 for the five years, sent, the past week, a check for $100. A young woman whose pledge was $100, sent her obligation for $25 on the emergency fund. A good brother whose pledge was $100, sent a check of $25. Another whose pledge was $50, sends us $10, with the purpose of sending a like amount a little later.

There are hundreds who did not contribute on the original fund because they were not visited or called upon. If these will now send a voluntary donation to missions, the great and good work will be accomplished and our missionary enterprises will not be crippled.

It is safe to say that our opportunity as a Church was never so inviting as at present, and the outlook for growth and expansion so inviting and promising. Surely no money can be better invested on the part of our loyal and faithful membership now than to make a donation to our emergency mission fund of $20,000.

MANNING OUR COLLEGE.

One of the heaviest responsibilities resting upon the board of trustees of a college is providing the officers of instruction and administration. Elon's Board of Trustees take their responsibilities in this regard with becoming concern, and they have during their thirty-five years of experience acquired an ability to function in such matters that is hardly to be surpassed. These servants of our Church come and work while others enjoy commencement. They come at their own expense. A noble body these Elon trustees are.

There were few retirements from the faculty this year, it is officially announced; only three, in fact, and their places are filled by competent persons. Two of the music teachers retired. Their places are filled by Prof. and Mrs. C. James Velie, of the Lansing, Mich., Conservatory of Music. These friends are members of the Christian Church and splendidly prepared for their work. Prof. Velie becomes head of the music department and professor of organ and piano. His wife becomes teacher of piano.

Prof. M. W. Hook, graduate of Elon and Yale, becomes assistant professor of mathematics and engineering. He is a loyal and devout member of the Christian Church. His father (now deceased) and his mother, still active in Christian work, were both ordained ministers of our Church. Three of their sons are Elon graduates.

Miss Helen R. Stearns is a graduate of Mt. Holyoke College and of the Boston School of Religion and Social Service. She becomes professor of religious education in the Mooney Building, giving her teaching strength to the children's division professional subjects. She is a member of the Board of Christian Education of our General Convention, and especially recommended to us by Dean Walter S. Athearn, of Boston.

THE CHRISTIAN SUN is happy to announce that every literary teacher in our college will, on September 1, 1925, be a member of the Christian Church, and most of those who teach the special departmental subjects will likewise be. This is not sectarianism, but an inspiring fact. It takes time for a Church to grow such a faculty as Elon has. It has taken us a generation thus to be able to man our college. We congratulate the board of trustees on their achievement, and we congratulate the Church.

We cannot close this editorial without saying again how proud we are of our college, and that our earnest prayer and our confident expectation are that our people will measure up becomingly in their patronage and financial support. We have the finest college plant in the country, manned by a company of splendid teachers and administrators, faith of our faith, and we should unite to a man in thoroughgoing, unalloyed support of them and our institution. God bless Elon College. She is ours. We have manned her. We love her.

But words cannot prove our love. Christ showed Peter that. Three times over Peter avowed his love for his Lord. But his Lord was not convinced by those words. "If you love me, feed my sheep"—prove your love by your deeds. For the next three months especially, many SUN readers will be in position to prove their love for Elon. Will we measure up in deed to the standard of our solemn declaration?

REVIVALS AND EVANGELISTIC CAMPAIGNS.

The subject of evangelism is one that the Church has always to consider. The work of evangelism must be done if the Church is to live. How can the work of evangelism best be done is a question that every Church and every pastor is confronted with. There is a sentiment in many quarters, and it seems to be a growing sentiment, that the old-style revival and the professional evangelist have both about served their day of usefulness.

Revival meetings have been the mediums through which the Church has received untold blessings in the past. But in recent years it is growing more and more difficult to have what is considered a successful revival. Many good people have come to feel that the Church is at work only during a revival. That is the only phase of Church work that they really consider worth while. There are many who are attracted only by the sensational methods of evangelism. There can be little doubt that a certain type of professional evangelist has been responsible for this. Nor has the evangelist been entirely to blame. Many Churches have desired to lay the burden of reaching the unsaved upon the shoulders of the evangelist. The membership has been unwilling to pay the price in self-sacrifice and service as individuals. They have sought for evangelists who would attract the crowds and reach large numbers. All that the individual members would have to do would be to attend the services, and assume the financial responsibility, which, in the main, would be borne by the crowds that would attend. The evangelist faced with such a situation has felt that his professional reputation was at stake, and has consequently exerted himself and used every means at his command to achieve the desired results. Sometimes the means adopted have been questionable in themselves. And where they have been above reproach within themselves their very intensity has made it more difficult to arouse the people at the next meeting except through still more extreme methods. This viscious circle has tended to bring the old-style evangelistic meeting, and the old-style evangelist into disfavor with many pastors and Church leaders.

The most of the evangelical denominations are experimenting with and adopting new methods of evangelistic effort. But, is it really a question of method? Is it not rather a question of following certain fundamental principles that must operate in every form of true evangelism? We would like to consider some of these fundamental principles that underlie all true evangelism.

It seems to us that the first thing to be considered is the quality of the Church members, or the individual Christians that make up the Church or the community in which you are working. The Church, after all, is judged by outsiders, mainly by the quality of the men and women it produces. It is a Christian test. The Master said, "By their fruits ye shall know them." It is unreasonable to expect the unconverted to have a very favorable opinion of a religion when the professors of it do not manifest evidences of true Christian piety, and seek for the things that are spiritual in their daily lives. Our evangelistic efforts would doubtless be more successful if they should begin with a season of confession, repentance, and consecration.

There must also be an interest, an enthusiasm, a passion for souls in the hearts of the Christian people. There can never be anything perfunctory about real evangelism. A cold Christian never developed any more power than does a cold engine. It is the burning heart that warms and fires other hearts. Not much is going to be accomplished until you get above the boiling point. Many things feed the fires of spirituality. But two things are especially effective. They are prayer and personal work. Communion with God warms the heart as does nothing else. But nothing drives a man to God like the task of undertaking to lead another to Him. The very inadequacy of human strength, and human wisdom, and human logic, drives a man back upon the divine. That is why personal work often works such wonders for the worker. It forces him to seek the help of God, and his own soul is energized by fellowship with God.

Then there is the strength and effectiveness of united effort. It is wonderfully effective in an individual congregation. When all the members of a Church bend their efforts toward reaching the unsaved, there is created a wealth of spiritual energy that can work wonders. And when there are several Churches in a community or city, and they unite their efforts for the one purpose of reaching the unsaved, there is created a spiritual force that is well-nigh irresistible. Many times an evangelist gets the credit for a great meeting, when the only reason why so little has been accomplished in the past was that the several Churches had never united their efforts before. They could have worked wonders in evangelising the unsaved without the evangelist, without a preacher even, if the believers in Christ had united their efforts and prayers.

So far, we have been thinking in terms of the human element, and especially of the individual Christian's part. When we come to consider the evangelist's work, two things are indispensable—preaching the Word of God, and relying upon the power of the Holy Spirit to do the work. Every element of the preacher's personality has its part in attracting people. His appearance, his manner, his style of delivery, all these exert an influence in drawing people to the services; but his unfolding the Scripture, and the power of the Holy Spirit, save them in Jesus Christ. For we are but the instruments in God's hands for the work of evangelism. The Word gives enlighten-

"WHAT ABOUT PETER?"

The Roman Church has, in every way possible, magnified the merits of Peter. Their greatest cathedral bears his name. His statue in copper or marble graces their Churches in foreign lands, and, by many, it is believed that for one to kiss the toe of St. Peter's statue is the closest approach to the divine approval.

It is easy to understand why the Roman Catholic Church has thus eulogized and magnified the character of Peter, for they trace the lineage of the pope back to Peter, to whom were given the keys to the kingdom. But it is difficult to understand why Protestants have allowed themselves to be carried away with the Catholic's evaluation of Peter's discipleship. How often Protestant ministers have presented Peter as a sort of a model Christian, and sought to curry favor with their audiences by saying that Peter was so human and so much like the average Christian that a special interest is attached to the study of his life for the Christians of our day. How often, too, laymen have justified themselves for their weakness, their moral laxity, their impetuous blunderings and religious vacillations by saying that they were so much like the disciple Peter, who denied his Lord, but who, in spite of his weakness, was chief in the Master's appreciation. A good many unpardonable offenses against Christian discipleship have thus been justified in the eyes of the offenders themselves by citing the apostle Peter as their example. Thus, in so many instances, the life of the apostle Peter has been misinterpreted, and his discipleship wrongly evaluated. His devotion to Jesus before the resurrection has been overestimated. His character has been eulogized far more than his discipleship merited. His devotion to Christ after the resurrection is another question.

He was certainly not 100 per cent loyal in his relationship to Jesus until after the resurrection. He was always in close contact with the Lord, being "one of the ever-present three," and should have imbibed the Master's spirit of love and courage to equip him for every emergency. But somehow he failed to avail himself of the benefit the close fellowship with his Master offered him. He failed to respond to the divine impact Christ sought daily to make upon his life.

Peter was disloyal to his Master. In the hour of trial, the time when Peter could have proved his friendship the most convincingly, he "followed Jesus afar off," and warmed himself at the enemy's fire. There is not much credit due any one who forsakes a friend in the hour of greatest need.

Peter was a coward. Notwithstanding the fact that in a moment of excitement he drew his sword and cut off the ear of the servant of the high priest, yet, after reflecting on what the consequences might be to him, according to the old Judaistic law, "an eye for an eye, and a tooth for a tooth," or an ear for an ear, he risked his soul in defense of his ear, and brazenly lied to the two maidens and to the group who asked him if he was not one of Jesus' friends. Certainly little credit is due any one for thinking more of saving his ear than of saving his soul.

Peter was a despicable ingrate. After all that the fellowship with Jesus might have meant to him; after all the love the Master had lavished upon him; after all the favors the Master had shown him; notwithstanding the matchless honor conferred upon him in being chosen as one of the twelve disciples—still he declared that he was no friend of Jesus, and that he never knew Him! Yes, he even cursed and swore in protesting against being known as a friend of Him to whom he had pledged life allegiance. So he denied his Lord by his bold declaration, and also by his manner of speech, for cursing and profanity were not in keeping with the lives of those who had been in close discipleship with Jesus, and this every one knew well. The people had learned that strangely, somehow, the Man of Galilee, by His life and teachings, caused people to speak praises and not cursings. Peter's Galilean accent might have aroused suspicion, but his cursing corroborated his witnessing that "he knew not the man."

It was to Peter's credit that a look from the Master brought condemnation upon him. But it is sadly to his discredit that instead of his acknowledging to the group that he had been lying, and then boldly walking up and taking his place with the friends of Jesus, he simply went out and wept bitterly because of self-condemnation. If Peter had been at that time the man he is so often held up as being, he would have acknowledged his guilt and then and there sought forgiveness from Christ and from the rest of the disciples, who naturally lost confidence in Peter when he openly disowned their Lord. Peter felt condemned because of being so weak, so vacillating, so unfaithful, but still not enough to drive him to his feet again to speed to his Master's presence. Those last hours of Christ's earthly life could have been sweetened so much by the presence of Peter. The time of trouble, the time of need is the time to prove one's friendship—"a friend in need is a friend indeed."

There is certainly little to Peter's credit up to the time of the resurrection. He had willfully severed his relationship with Christ and the disciples by his own word of testimony, "I know not the man."

The offense would not seem so great had it not been for the fact that, only a few hours before, Peter had so enthusiastically pledged his allegiance to Jesus, "Lord, I am ready to go with Thee, both unto prison and to death," and yet he was not willing to stand by Him in the hour of trial.

Let no Christian look to Peter's relation to Christ before the crucifixion for help and inspiration, or for reason to justify his religious laxity. Unbelievers or sinners may get some satisfaction from Peter's character before Christ's resurrection, but the Christian finds little in Peter before that time. He was not even converted until after that. Why should weak, vacillating, unfaithful, professing Christians today seek to justify themselves because of Peter's impetuous and unstable life before his conversion? Let professing Christians point to Peter after his conversion; let them be challenged by his life after Christ's resurrection. Then there will be no easy and soft smoothing over of their inconsistent vacillations by contending that they have much in common with Peter; for if they have something in common with Peter after his conversion, they will manifest no wavering, no side-stepping, no vacillating, no impetuosity, but only bold and courageous loyalty.

Peter was not converted until after Christ's resurrection. His attitude toward Jesus during the Master's earthly life did not merit any special commendation; in fact, it merited condemnation instead.

When the angel admonished the women at the empty tomb to "go and tell His disciples, and Peter," the wording of the admonition does not infer, as is so often interpreted, that Peter's name alone was mentioned because of his superior importance over the other disciples. In fact, it is quite the opposite. The inference is that he was no longer considered worthy of being included in the group of disciples. He had excommunicated himself by his open denial of his Lord, declaring that he did not even know the Christ and, by his own personal testimony, that he was not one of the disciples. A man has it within his own power to say whether he is a disciple of Christ or not. True, some may declare that they are Christ's friends and still not be. But no one can deny that he is a friend of Christ and still be a friend. Peter deliberately forfeited all claim to discipleship by his repeated denial, his cursings and his rejection.

His bitter tears did not reinstate him. Had he sincerely repented when the cock crew, he would have openly confessed his denial and boldly stood with the rest of the disciples as a friend of Jesus at the trial.

The words of the angel, "Go and tell His disciples, and Peter," imply that, though Peter had denied his Lord, and was no longer considered worthy to be called one of ths disciples, that still it might be worth while to tell him. There was still hope that he would reinstate himself. And he did!

The Holy Spirit, the spirit of the risen Lord, completely transformed the life of Peter. And the story of Peter's life after his conversion, the story of his life after Christ's resurrection, is one of the most inspiring, one of the most challenging of any story in Christian literature. Peter the liar became Peter the preacher; Peter the sinner became Peter the Christian; Peter the coward became Peter the hero. There was nothing wavering about him, nothing compromising, nothing impetuous about him after his conversion. He was a completely changed man, and as such the story of his life after conversion is a challenge to every Christian to live a changed, a transformed life.

The sinner may look at Peter's life before Pe-

SUFFOLK LETTER.

Faith and knowledge enter into the life and business of mankind. Faith is a much larger thing than knowledge. Faith is unlimited, knowledge is limited. The illiterate with faith is much larger than the literate without faith. "We walk by faith, not by sight"; sight is knowledge. What we see, we know; but we do not know the path of life—we enter it and walk in it by faith. The farmer knows how much he made in 1924; he has faith to believe that he will reach the harvest in 1925. He plants, cultivates, and works on till harvest by faith. The wisest head is inferior to the feeblest heart of faith. "Without faith it is impossible to please God," and it might be said that without faith it is impossible to please men; for our faith in men is larger than our knowledge of men.

In religion, faith is essential and more valuable than knowledge. "No man hath seen God"; but millions believe in God. Faith is the big thing in the Church. The confidence men have in men and institutions makes the Church, the State, and the school. It is the heart of home. It is the bond of married life. It is the security of society. It is a heart action, a soul function, a tie that lives after death. It breathes the atmosphere of confidence; it sheds an influence that is felt, and binds the life to God.

In business, faith turns the wheels of industry, exchanges the products of nations, and feeds the world. Its notions are as regular as the tides of the ocean, and as benevolent as the shining of the sun. Small business can be done in the field of knowledge, but large business can be done only by faith. Currency is nothing more nor less than the promise of the government to pay, and yet it passes as cash. Some Confederate money still exists, but it is worthless because men have no faith in it. Most all big business is done on credit, which is the same as cash; yea, more, for an honest man can purchase more with his credit than with his cash. Credit is the largest asset possessed by a man, a corporation, an organization, or a State. It is more important for men to take care of their credit than of their cash, though men should be careful with their cash. When men trust you beyond your cash it means faith in your word, and that means faith in you. Here, faith is larger than knowledge, for no man knows you.

In education, faith again is the largest factor in human progress. Your knowledge of history is based on faith. If you do not believe history, your knowledge of what it says has no meaning and no value. No man could know his own name or his age without faith. Knowledge is the most limited thing in the world. All education should be larger by faith. The more men learn of men, the more faith they have in men. The credit of the world is on the increase all the time, and it increases faster than knowledge. Faith has preceded every great discovery and invention. The steam engine was seen in vision before it was seen in fact. The electric light was seen by faith before it was known. Faith is greater than knowledge, because it includes what is known, and more. The exercise of faith is the beginning of knowledge. The child believes before it knows, and men know God only by faith. The greatest school is the school of faith—faith in God, faith in self, and faith in others.

ELON LETTER.

Commencement brings together an impressive group of visiting people. Fathers and mothers with glad faces that beloved children have completed their courses of study and are about to be decorated by their college are always a welcome contingent on such an occasion. Young people ready for college and wistfully anticipating the day when they too shall be graduating into the world's bustling activities each year constitute a bright and cheery addition to the life and gayety of the commencement season. Trustees charged with heavy responsibilities as the policy-makers and administrators of the college lend their weight and the dignity of their presence. And then the speakers who are to bring the messages and be the pace-setters in the realm of ideals are a never-ending stream of influence and inspiration.

This thirty-fifth was the first commencement to be held in the now completed greater Elon plant, and inevitably it brought back a fine group of alumni and gathered around itself unusual interest. One alumnus had not seen his alma mater since before the fire of 1923. With tears of joy in his eyes, he told me of his impressions and of his gratitude. He wanted to enroll as a freshman, he insisted, and take another college degree, and he is no emotional man either. The address of Mrs. L. E. Smith, '07, on the "New Woman" was right in line with the new plant of her alma mater, and a most opportune message. Elon's alumni are proud of their college, and ought to be.

I was particularly interested to discover the impression of the new plant on the trustees and specialists in education who visited the college. With one accord, the trustees praised the plant after a detailed inspection of it. "It cost a lot of money," one of them said; "but it is worth twice what it cost," and he is a builder of many buildings.

Dr. Albert G. Caris, of Defiance College, said he was proud to see such a plant here, that he was amazed to see it so thorough and complete and so adapted to its special needs. Dr. Robert L. Kelly, who is intimately associated with all the institutions of higher learning in the country, publicly and without any suggestion that he do so, declared that no college plant anywhere could surpass it in its conception, its efficiency, and its beauty. There are great universities that have larger plants, but none better adapted to its program and place than Elon, he declared. A college president who recently visited the new plant expressed himself to similar effect.

There is compensation in this chorus of approval, appreciation, and praise for those who, as members of the emergency and building committees, as trustees and professors and students, and as liberal and generous friends, have worked and suffered and sacrificed through the two years of rebuilding during which this new and better (we devoutly pray) Elon has slowly risen from the ashes of what portended to be her demise into a newness and largeness of life and opportunity. The new Elon, a thing of strength and beauty, as the Hebrew of her name implies, now greets our gaze. God bless her and every one who has contributed in any way to make the vision we behold the gladsome reality that is to be an inspiration perennial to our Christian Church.

W. A. HARPER.

ELON COLLEGE COMMENCEMENT.

The second day of the Elon College commencement was the baccaulaureate day. Three services were held. Dr. Albert G. Caris, Lit. D., president of Defiance College, Defiance, Ohio, delivered the baccaulaureate sermon at the morning service. Miss Katheryn Nolan, head of the organ department, gave an organ vesper service at 4 o'clock in the afternoon, and President W. A. Harper, of Elon, gave the annual baccalaureate address in the evening.

The morning session was presided over by President Harper, who introduced the speaker of the occasion. Special music was rendered by the college choir. Their selection was "Lift Up Your Heads," by J. L. Hopkins. Also Miss Florence Fisher sang a solo, "Ave Maria," by Boch-Gounod, following the sermon.

The subject of President Caris' sermon was "God's School," and is published in THE CHRISTIAN SUN.

The organ vesper service by Miss Nolan was well attended, and is the last vesper service of the college year. Miss Nolan has been giving these services all year on certain Sunday afternoons, and they have been especially pleasing numbers, as was the one today.

At the evening service, as is customary, President W. A. Harper gave his final words of advice to the members of the graduating class in the baccalaureate address. Special music at this service was given by the woman's chorus, singing "The Lord is My Shepherd," by Smart, and also by Miss Pauline T. Nelson in a violin solo, "Nina," by Pergolesi.

Dr. Harper took for the theme of his address the title "Liberty Through Law," and chose as his Scripture text Matt. 12:29, "Take My Yoke Upon You." His words were mainly to the graduates, urging upon them proper respect and appreciation of law, and showing that only through law and order may freedom be achieved. This splendid and practical address appeared in full in THE SUN last week.

The alumni address by Mrs. L. E. Smith, Norfolk, Va., of the class of 1907, was the outstanding feature of the Monday session of the Elon finals. She spoke at the evening session in the Whitley Auditorium, and took as her theme the "Place of Womanhood and the New Era."

Mrs. Smith is the wife of Dr. Smith, pastor of the Christian Temple, at Norfolk. She is a popular and capable member of the alumni, and her election to give the alumni address this year was pleasing to all the alumni.

She spoke on items of interest to women outside the home, but her major emphasis was placed on the home. Her address was well received, and was a fitting close to the third day of the commencement exercises.

Following the alumni address by Mrs. Smith, the Alumni Association held its annual business meeting in the Literary Society hall in the Alamance Building.

The class-day exercises of the seniors began the day this morning at 10:30 o'clock. The welcome address for this occasion was given by J. O. Atkinson, Jr., president of the class. This was followed by the class history by Ruby Atkinson, the class poem by Louise Watkins, and three humorous items, the class prophecy by Rose Howell, last will and testament by Lillian Harrell, and the delivery of trophies by Olyn Barrett.

Leon Williams delivered the senior mantle to Clyde W. Gordon, representing the junior class, charging the members of that class to uphold and faithfully perform all traditional rights and privileges of the seniors.

The afternoon of Monday was given over to the Literary Society representatives, and to the domestic science and fine arts exhibits. The exhibitions of the dressmaking and painting departments were of especial interest to the visitors on the hill, and were well attended.

Miss Hennie Malone furnished music on the organ for the society representative speakers, playing one solo as an interlude, Pilgrims' Song of Hope," by Batiste.

Two speakers were chosen to represent each of the four literary societies of the college—two societies for men and two for women. Representing the Psiphelian was Ola King Cowing, whose subject was "Beauty," and Lillie Horne, who spoke on "The King of the Forest." The Philologian Society was represented by W. A. Lindley, "Responsibility of Christian Citizenship," and H. E. Crutchfield, whose oration was entitled "The Value of a Vision."

Alma Smith and Annie Simpson were from the Psykaleon, and their subjects were "Twentieth Century Slavery," and "The Modern Girl." For the Clics, G. C. White spoke on "Religious Education in the Public School," and D. L. Harrell, Jr., the "Moral Value of Athletics."

The graduation exercises this morning brought to a close the four-day session of the Elon College commencement season, the conferring of degrees and the literary address by Dr. Robert L. Kelly, executive secretary of the Council of Church Boards of Education of the Federal Council of Churches, being the outstanding features.

Six members of the senior class spoke preceding the literary address by Dr. Kelly in competition for medals, the young ladies giving essays and the men orations. Rose Howell began these speeches with her essay on "The Lights Around the Corner." The other speakers and subjects were as follows: Sallie Mae Oliver, "The Other Half Emerging from the Shadows"; J. O. Atkinson, Jr., "Andrew Jackson"; Kate Vance Strader, "The Call of the City"; J. Newman Denton, "The King's Highway," and Ferry Lee Gibbs, "An Earth Touched by Immortality."

President W. A. Harper, who presided over this exercise, introduced Dr. Kelly, paying tribute to his high place in the realm of Christian education. Dr. Kelly chose as the subject of his address "The New Era in American Education," and his emphasis was on the unifying tendencies of education today.

In substantiation of his discussion on the tendencies toward union, Dr. Kelly cited the boards of education of the Protestant Episcopal Church and the Presbyterian Church, as well as those of the Methodist and Congregational, as illustrations; but particularly did he mention the Board of Education of the Christian Church, of which President W. A. Harper, of Elon, is the head, saying that this board has gone further toward unity than has that of any other Church. "As indicated in its organization," Dr. Kelly stated, "it now undertakes to compass the entire field of Christian education from the standpoint of the Church. There is included in its program religious education in the home, in the Sunday School, in the week-day program, in the vacation schools, in the young people's societies, and not only the schools of the Church at home, but also abroad, work for students in State universities, theological seminaries, recruiting, missionary education, financial campaigns, publicity, teachers' appointment bureau, etc. This is the most daring and challenging gesture toward unity of program yet issued by any Protestant Church."

"Such a college as Elon," Dr. Kelly said, in concluding his address, "not limited by external interference and representing a Church that sees the problem of unity steadily, and sees it as a whole, is most highly equipped for the next great step in American education."

Forty-five academic degrees were conferred upon the seniors by the faculty and trustees, four of which received the master of arts degree. Thirty received the bachelor of arts, ten the bachelor of philosophy, one the bachelor of music, and sixty-three students received diplomas and certificates for completion of the courses in the special departments of the college.

Rose Howell, of Candor, N. C., made the valedictory address, having made an average of 92 per cent on her college course out of a possible 95 per cent. Miss Dorothy Lowe won the salutatorian's place, with an average of 91 per cent on all her college studies.

Bibles were presented to each member of the graduating class by Dr. W. W. Staley, former president, as a graduation gift from their alma mater.

Those who received degrees were: bachelor of arts—S. H. Abell, Richland, Ga.; J. O. Atkinson, Jr., Elon College; Ruby Atkinson, Dendron, Va.; Olyn Barrett, Ponce, P. R.; York Brannock, Elon College; Marjorie Burton, Brown Summit; Thelma Cates, Haw River; J. N. Denton, McCrae, Ga.; J. H. Dollar, Roanoke, Ala.; W. C. Master of arts—S. C. Deskins, Burlington; S. M. Lynam, Wadley, Ala.; J. E. McCauley, Halifax, Va., and D. C. Woodburn, Pleasant Garden, N. C.

The board of trustees of the college adjourned yesterday following the closing of the commencement exercise. Routine business was translated in which included financial matters connected with the rebuilding work.

The committee on memoirs, of which Dr. I. W. Johnson, of Suffolk, Va., was chairman, drafted special resolutions for Dr. W. S. Long, a member of the board and founder of the college, who had died during the year. These resolutions were read at the graduation exercises by Dr. P. H. Fleming, secretary of the board, and Dr. W. W. Staley announced that the trustees have voted to erect a bronze tablet to his memory in the Alamance Building, and also to place a marble statue of Dr. Long on the lawn of the campus.

The resolutions in respect to Dr. Long were as follows:

During the past year, your board has sustained a great bereavement in the death of Ex-President Dr. W. S. Long. His great work as an educational leader in the founding of Elon College, his untiring devotion and loyal service in the affection and memory of our people. Your committee offers the following—resolved:

"1. That the board of trustees record its sincere appreciation of his life and labor in behalf of the cause of Christian education in general, and Elon College in particular.

"2. That we bow in humble submission to the will of our Heavenly Father, who doeth all things well.

"3. That we express our deep sympathy to the family of our deceased brother.

"4. That a copy of these resolutions be entered upon the records of the board of trustees and that a copy be sent to the family of the deceased."

Those members of the graduating class to win honors and medals were Rose Howell, Candor, N. C., valedictorian; Dorothy Lowe, Elon College, N. C., salutatorian; F. L. Gibbs, Burlington, N. C., winner of the Stanford orator's medal; Sallie Mae Oliver, Cedar Grove, N C.,; Moffitt essayist medal; Dorothy Lowe, Elon College, Morrow thesis medal. Also three members of the junior class won medals from their literary societies for commencement orations and essays—D. L. Harrell, Suffolk, Va., Clio oratorical medal; Lillie Horne, Burlington, N. C., Psiphelian essayist medal, and H. E. Crutchfield, Kernersville, N. C., Philologian oratorical medal.

The officers elected for the Alumni Association next year were H. S. Hardcastle, Suffolk, Va., president; H. S. Smith, Chicago, Ill., vice-president; Pattie Coghill, Boston, Mass., secretary-treasurer. J. A. Vaughan, of New York City, was elected the alumni speaker for next commencement, with H. Babcock, of Williamsburg, Va., as alternate.

The Alumni Association, in its meeting, perfected plans for the completion of the scholarship fund began two years ago, and for erecting class organizations in all of the classes.

SUNDAY SCHOOLS CONVENE.

The Sunday School and Christian Endeavor Convention will be held at New Hope Christian Church, Chambers County, Ala., Saturday and Sunday, June 27th and 28th. We want a real convention; one of which we will all be proud; one that will send a thrill of enthusiasm back to every Sunday School and Christian Endeavor Society in the Conference.

Can we have such a convention? I answer, yes, on this condition: if every pastor, every Sunday School superintendent, every Christian Endeavor president, in fact everybody, will just get busy and do their part, we may expect the greatest convention we have ever had. We want a full delegation. New Hope is a fine place, is centrally located, and one of the best communities in the State. They are anxious for a large attendance.

Now, let us get busy and talk convention from now until the night of June 26th. Get up early the morning of the 27th; send a large delegation of our young people to New Hope to a great convention. Yours for a great convention,

J. H. HUGHES, President.

DALLAS, TEXAS.

Dear Dr. Atkinson:

Mrs. Long is here with me, attending the thirtieth annual convention and reunion of Sons of Confederate Veterans. Several thousand of the old Confederate soldiers remain. Many of them are very feeble. A few are so vigorous that they spring to their feet, give the "rebel yell," and dance when the band plays "Dixie."

The hospitality of Dallas is unbounded. The city claims a population of 250,000, houses from one to twenty-eight stories high, hundreds of new buildings are being rushed to completion, and bountiful harvests are gathered in Texas without the aid of fertilizer. This, you know, is the only State that was annexed to the United States. Texas has the right to be divided into four States. The people are too proud of having a big State ever to divide.

Promoting Better Church Methods.

No one rightly questions for a moment that matters pertaining to the spiritual life of the Church should have first and most important consideration. We must never get away from the teaching of the Scriptures, "Not by might nor power, but by my spirit, saith the Lord of Hosts." But that does not mean that a Church shall not avail itself of the best methods, systems and plans. Spiritual Churches are always seeking the best ways to advance the kingdom. Spirituality does not mean lack of system, haphazard methods, obsolete plans. The kingdom is a growing kingdom, and as it unfolds it becomes more complex in all its activities. Witness the financing of the kingdom formerly and now. It was very simple then, for there were no great Sunday School movements, Christian Endeavor activities the world over. Think what great Christian education work, home missions, foreign missions, orphanages, homes of various kinds, hospitals, religious press, week-day schools of religion, colleges, large Churches and other enterprises of the kingdom are carried on now. There were none scarcely formerly. The Church message touches a thousand questions now such as the outlawry of war, Christian unity, evangelism, illiteracy, law observance, destruction of the drug habit, and must help to settle them rightly. Nothing but Christ, His Church, His message can do it. The kingdom work becomes more complex. We are responsible for making our efforts count for the most.

The New Testament Scriptures did not neglect to give basic methods of work, simple and general, but adapted to the needs of the expanding kingdom. No Church can afford to be careless or neglectful of methods needed for the time and in harmony with the Scriptures. For instance, there is the method of dealing with members, the masses, by division into small companies, as revealed in the feeding of the fifteen or twenty thousand with the loaves and fishes. There is method there as well as teaching. The group system of our Forward Movement has been a blessing to Churches using it. It would help many other Churches to use this scriptural plan. Then there is the scriptural method of visitation by twos. It was used many times. God has always blessed its use, whether in soul-saving, the every-member canvass, surveys, social visitation. Then there is the New Testament method of Church finance—"On the first day of the week let each one of you lay by him in store as God hath prospered you, that there be no collections when I come." There it is, weekly, not monthly, not when I sell my crop; every one of you, not husband alone, but wife, children, every man, every woman, every boy, every girl, even the babies; no annual deficits; proportionately, not with as little as I can get by with; there is system, worship, regularity. Methods of discipline and correction of Church rolls are also revealed. It is always better to follow the Bible methods than self-proposed plans. The local Church is within the spirit and letter of the New Testament when it introduces simple, effective methods.

It is the desire of this Bureau to be of service to the Churches and Conferences, to assist them in using scriptural, simple, effective methods of Church organization. Hundreds of Churches have derelict organizations floating around in them. These dead and useless organizations are preventing better methods being used. Many Churches have no constitutions, no regular methods of procedure. This bureau is desirous of assisting the Churches to the use of approved methods of work and to better organization. Our Convention did well when it adopted the fivefold program—devotion; evangelism and life service; Christian education; missions; stewardship-finance. A local Church, large or small, city or rural, does well to so organize itself with these five departments. All the work of any Church among us can ordinarily be well cared for effectively under these five departments. It is simple, all-inclusive, efficient, and scriptural. We would emphasize it.

THE RELATION OF I. C. E. TO THE CHURCH.

There is a time in the lives of most boys and girls when they do not seem to belong anywhere. They are no longer at home in the Junior Society, yet they are strangers in the Senior Society.

The Intermediate Society takes boys and girls at the most important age, which is the age of adolescence. This is the age of decision. Destinies are made at this age, the boys and girls either turn to Christ or against Him. Young people who are led to take a definite stand for Christ during this period usually grow into Christian men and women. Then why should we let them drift during this period and wait until they become seniors, when most likely they will not come to Church at all, much less take any part in the meetings. The reason for this is because they drifted away in the important age.

Some people say the Senior Society does more good for the mother organization than the intermediate. This I have found is not exactly true in my own Church. In our Church the intermediates are always on the job; they have twice as many at their prayer meetings as the seniors, and about one-half of our regular Church attendance is made up of the younger people. They got this training in the Junior Society, and as they did not skip over the most important age of religious training they are still attending the services.

So take a boy out of the Junior Society and place him in the senior and he seems to be lost. When you call on him to pray or take some other part in the meetings, he is awkward and embarrassed, and probably will not come back to the next meeting. Then the people say, "Why, that boy is in high school; he should be able to do better than that." Yes, he may be in high school, and getting along fine in his studies, but in the high school he is not getting the religious training that he would be getting in the Intermediate C. E. Society.

If a Church once loses its grip on its young people, if it lets them drift into some outside organization, good enough in its way, but one that does not keep the boy and girl keyed up to a definite religious youth, the probability is that it will lose them later, so far as the Church work is concerned.

After the boy or girl leaves the Junior Society, you say let him drift until he is old enough and then we will get him into the Senior Society. Yes, let him drift, but nine times out of ten he will join some other organization during the intermediate age and no amount of persuasion can induce him to leave it—then where are our Senior Societies and Church leaders of tomorrow? Lost! Yes, lost; and yet most people seem to think that the Senior Society is more important than the intermediate.

I know of a particular case where there was a boy who went to the Junior Society; then he became too old for it; he refused to go in the Senior Society; he drifted away from Sunday School, and he never came to Christ. Then an Intermediate Society was organized, and he was persuaded to join. The next term he was elected president, and did wonderful work for the society. Now he is nearly always at Sunday School and never fails to attend Church either Sunday morning or Sunday night. Yet where would he be today if it had not been for the Intermediate Society? If we had met him on the street today we would have said "That boy use to belong to our Church, but he drifted away in the adolescent age, and now he cannot be persuaded to return."

Intermediate Christian Endeavor has a special place in a city Church. The pull-away from Church influence is particularly strong in cities. The theater and the movie must be counteracted by entertainments that the intermediates are too glad to get up themselves. The alluring dance must be fought with clean socials, the craving for outdoor activities must be met by clubs and games and hikes.

Now, if the period of adolescence is the impressionable age, when it is easier than at any other time to form religious ideals, to choose your way to live a Christ or a Christless life, then why should we not seek to gather our young people into an organization that provides these ideals so simply, directly and steadily as the Intermediate Christian Endeavor Society. The Senior Society is for older people who should have already had most of their religious training, whose characters are already formed, who have passed the age when training will impress them to a very great extent. They have passed the age when it is so vital that they should have religious training. Senior societies are good; every Church should have them for the older people, but why should we sacrifice the life of the boy and girl today, who will be the seniors and leaders of the Church and the nation of tomorrow.

GOD'S SCHOOL.

Mr. President, Men and Women of the Graduating Class, Students, Patrons and Friends of Elon College:

In our worship together this morning we are recognizing that education and Christianity have been vitally related since the beginning of the Christian era. We may go even farther back in history than the time of the historical Christ and find the intimate relation which has always existed between the religious aspirations of man and what we include in the phrase "his educational development." But since the days when Jesus taught in Palestine, the greatest agency in inspiring and promoting educational effort has been the Church which He founded. In this day of advancement, our public schools, and practically all of our independent and State colleges and universities, although officially without religious function, actually recognize this historical relationship by holding formal baccaulareate services when those about to be graduated meet to worship together. In an institution of this kind whose ideals and purposes are frankly and openly stated as Christian, and within whose walls the student has been confronted with the truths and the challenges of the Great Teacher, Jesus, from the day of entrance until graduation, we come together for this formal period of worship as the most natural consequence of our thinking and learning and striving during the four years just closing. As we come together today in this formal fashion, may we forget for a brief time the forms and ceremonies which very properly dignify the occasion, and worship in simple fiashion the Great Author of our lives and opportunities.

It has seemed to me that a fitting theme for the meditative part of our worship is "God's School." There are so many passages of Scripture that might be chosen for this theme that it is difficult to select the one which shall direct our thought, but of the many let us use as our text a clause from one of the verses of the Sermon on the Mount, "That ye may be sons of your Father who is in heaven" (Matt. 5:45).

God's School.

We are all pupils in this school, and are yet in its lower grades. In our country we have a wonderful system of public schools. A pupil of the first, second or third grade cannot understand its purposes, nor can he comprehend its completeness. He is beginning to undertake some of its aims and ideals, and his comprehension of the system of which he is an insignificant and yet a vital part is developing day by day. So we, as elementary pupils in God's school, are very immature and elementary in our meditation concerning it. Yet as the school teacher is pleased to see in the mind of the youngster the dawning interest in the real purposes of the school and the growing understanding of its workings, so, we believe, is the Great Teacher pleased to have His pupils attempt to appreciate His plans for their development. With humility and reverence, then, but with the consciousness of doing that which is pleasing in His sight we begin our study.

Our own world is our school room, the ordinary tasks and experiences of life are our laboratory exercises, and the vital temptations and periods of critical decisions which come to all are the tests or examinations. We are individual pupils, each succeeding or failing as the case may be, and humanity as a whole is a pupil making its halting progress toward its divine goal. Though the lessons to be learned are infinite in number and variety, it seems to us that they may be grouped into three major classifications. Three great fundamental lessons are set for us; three major courses, each with an infinity of subcourses comprise our curriculum.

There are three great textbooks interrelated and supplementing each other from which our lessons are gleaned. With his finger, God has written the story of His majesty and power, and His love of design, and color and music in the material universe. It is the text in science and art he has prepared for us. He has imprinted His own image and the dawning of His own characteristics in the life of each of us and in the life of the race, in such fashion that our own conscience and God-given intelligence constitute the second text. Through the agency of pupils more apt or more sensitive to His promptings than are the rank and file, He has given us what we reverence as the Word of God—the Bible. From these three texts—the material universe, human nature, and the Bible—we may learn the lessons of life and discover the secrets of success as God sees it.

The Imperative Command to Subdue the Earth.

The first of the fundamental lessons seems to be an imperative command to conquer the material world. It is written in unmistakable terms in all three texts. We find it expressed in one sense in Genesis, in the story of the early race. The command was to subdue and have dominion. It is graven deeply in the hearts and lives of all men. Their very natures prompt them to overcome. Stormy seas exist to be crosses; steep mountains must be climbed; the far corners of the earth must be searched; rivers must be bridged, and their waters harnessed; deserts must be irrigated and swamps drained; artificial channels must join alien seas, and tunnels must find their ways through the mountains; we must find our way under the sea and through the air. A task or a difficulty is a challenge to our God-given desire to overcome, and in accepting that challenge we help make ourselves and the race. We have not only the desire to do—we wish to know. Our curiosity ever pushes us onward. All nature seems to have been designed to feed our curiosity. The glimpses of her secrets lure us onward and ever onward in our desire for knowledge and she spreads before us an ever-increasing array of tempting fields of discovery. Each secret learned, only tells of a host of others to be uncovered. Individual men continue their pursuit of knowledge with zest for a few years, but the race goes on in its pursuit with no lessening of its interest or enthusiasm.

If the desire to conquer and the urge to know are not sufficient to lead us through the tasks of this first course in God's school the stern necessities written in our lives by God drive us to the task. Hunger, cold, and disease are cruel taskmasters and use the lash of pain and suffering without stint. "Conquer the material universe or die," is God's command to individual and race.

While it is impossible to do more than sketch in broad outlines the character of this problem or lesson or task, we must not pass this part of the study without reminding ourselves that it is not alone the external material world which must be conquered.

The materialistic parts of our own lives furnish the strongholds and the citadels which require the most persistent and the most intelligent attack. Many a man has been able to stand high in his list of victories over the external materials of the world, but his own tastes, his own passions, and all the parts of his life which feed on the materials of the world may remain unconquered by him. Put under control and properly subdued, the material world is a willing and profitable servant. Unconquered, it is an enemy, and ten times more potent if within the walls of our own lives. Please keep in mind as we pass from point to point that in every case the application may be made to the individual life and the race life as well, though we need not pause to call attention to it in each case.

It may be profitable for us before naming the second great lesson or course to ask ourselves concerning our success with the first. What progress have we made in conquering and subduing? For individuals, there are as many degrees of success as there are individuals. Men have conquered and are conquering. The race has conquered and is conquering. We cannot even mention the great victories. The globe has been explored; the depths of the sea have been charted; the air has become a highway; electricity has been harnessed and made a servant; thought may be projected round the world in the fraction of a second; and the deeply hidden treasures of the earth are being revealed every day and furnish our structures, our machines and the power to run them. The energy of the atom has been discovered and the time of its harnessing approaches; the cells of living tissue have been found and the laws governing their development are better understood each day; the principles of heredity and of adaptation to environmment are being written in common language for all to read; diseases have been driven back step by step until the expectancy of human life has increased tremendously; food is produced in more abundance and in more pleasing variety; and luxuries, once the possession of only favored few, have become the common heritage of the majority. Yes, the race has been obeying the command. But to subdue the material world is a never-ending task, whose purpose is educational. The development of those engaged in the task is the prime consideration. Mere accomplishment is of far less importance. It is more important that the task shall continue in a vitally important way for the benefit of the oncoming pupils. All indications are that it will so continue, and our children will be confronted with detailed problems which will be much more complex than our own in the same degree that their resources of knowledge and their fund of human experience from which to draw will be greater than ours.

The Insistent Demand for Social Justice.

The second great course or division of studies in God's school involves human relationships. Its central thesis is " Human relationships must be righteous and justice must prevail in the dealings among men, or individuals and the race will fail or perish." It is an insistent demand for social justice, and it is permanently written in God's three great texts.

It is written in the Bible. We find it in the early pages of Genesis. Cain's cry, "Am I my brother's keeper," is only the first of an immense number of puzzling questions which involve human relationships which become increasingly complex as we turn the pages of Scripture. The historical books picture just and unjust dealings and tell of God's laws which should govern. The laws handed down through Moses emphasize retribution. If a man did violence to his neighbor similar violence would be done to him. The psalms voiced many beautiful thoughts of friendship, confidence in fellows, loyalty to common interests and strength through co-operation. In all these early writings, both the positive and the negative sides of the theme are presented. The righteous man prospers, he is revered by his neighbors, and he finds satisfaction, peace, and plenty. The unjust man fails sooner or later. The sturdy prophets voiced the lesson in ringing tones which have echoed through all subsequent history. God requires justice and sacrifice, and formal acts of worship can never take its place.

RELIGIOUS EDUCATION

INTERNATIONAL UNIFORM SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON.

June 14, 1925.

Subject: "The Church in Antioch."

Golden Text: "The disciples were called Christians first in Antioch."—Acts 11:26.

Lesson: Acts 11:19-30.

Devotional Reading: Isa. 12.

The enemies of Christianity thought that persecution would stamp it out. Instead, it spread it out. And they which were scattered abroad upon the persecution that arose about Stephen traveled as far as Phoenecia, Cyprus, and Antioch. And as they went, they preached the word. But they were just a bit near-sighted in their vision of the scope of Christianity, for they preached only to the Jews. We must not be too quick to condemn them, however, for today, even after nineteen hundred years, there are a number of people who have not interpreted Christianity in terms of the world or even in terms of other races.

Some of the disciples, either by virtue of their background or because of a broader vision, saw the larger implications of Christianity, and when they came to Antioch they began to preach the Lord Jesus unto the Greeks. Their names are unknown, but their service is immortal, for in a sense they were the incarnate spirit of modern missions. They had had a vital experience of the living Christ. They were moving in the midst of their fellow-men who had a deep, even though ofttimes unrecognized, need of the Christ who had met their need. And all unconscious of any breach of orthodoxy, they proceeded to tell others, even the Gentiles, the "good news." There was no mistaking their message; they preached the Lord Jesus. And because they did this, the hand of the Lord was with them. It always is. Whenever men undertake the will of God, His resources are at their command. The eternal God is our refuge, and underneath are the everlasting arms.

These men were so earnest and so persistent that great things happened at Antioch. A great number believed and turned unto the Lord; such a great number that the tidings of the great things came unto the ears of the Church at Jerusalem. It was a little out of the ordinary, and the Church had not fully absorbed the implications of Peter's experience with Cornelius, so the Church promptly dispatched a man to look into matters and make a report. They were wise in this, and still wiser in the man whom they selected, for they could have done no better than to select Barnabas, a man already known for his generosity, and already priceless to Christianity because of his kindly interest in Paul. Furthermore, Barnabas was a man who was not only friendly to men, bue to new ideas, and when he came and saw just what was taking place, he recognized the great things that were being done and rejoiced in the work. It takes a great and good man to do that. Perhaps that is the reason why Luke says that Barabas was a good man and full of the Holy Spirit and of faith. We need more men of the type of Barnabas today. The Church is facing a changed and changing world. It is no time for reactionary ideas to dominate Church life. We need men who believe that the gospel has a message for this new age and who show their faith by their works.

The work grew to such proportions that Barnabas saw that it would be necessary to have help. Then departed Barnabas to Tarsus for to seek Saul, or Paulas he was now known. And here again Barnabas showed the stuff of manhood. He knew full well what kind of man Paul was. He knew, too, that Paul would increase while he must decrease. But Barnabas was the kind of man who put the interests of the kingdom above personal ambition and especially personal distinction. It takes a great and good man to do this.

The disciples had been sent to Antioch by a persecution headed by Paul. By a strange turn of chance—no; by a strange providence of God—that same Paul now came back to them as their leader in the Christian movement. God makes the wrath of man to praise Him. For a whole year they worked and grew because of the power of the Lord with them.

"And the disciples were called Christians first at Antioch." It would be sufficient if they were still called only Christians. For what better name could those who are trying to follow Christ have than Christian?—Christ-men, or Christ-like. The Christian Church affirms that "Christian is a sufficient name for the Church." And Christian character is a sufficient test of Church membership.

The Christians showed their faith by their works. When they learned of a famine in Judea they gave, every man—it was universal, according to his ability; it was proportionate, to send relief; it was practical, unto the brethren; it was a gift of love, which they did; it was prompt, sending it by Paul and Barnabas—they were business-like. In doing this, they were manifesting a fundamental characteristic of the genuine spirit of Christianity, for we are to bear one another's burdens.

Teaching Points and Pointers.

1. "The blood of the martyrs is the seed of the Church."
2. Unknown men are often pioneers in Christian service.
3. The experience of Christ gives impulse to tell others.
4. Christianity is for all men.
5. The hand of the Lord is with those who try to do His will.
6. When the Lord manifests His power, men are turned to Him.
7. God needs dependable men for strategic places.
8. The world needs men who are receptive to new ideas.
9. Freedom from jealousy over another's success is a good test of a man.
10. Christian is a sufficient name for those who are Christ's.

Song: "Have Thine Own Way, Lord."

Suggestions for Leader's Talk.

The aim of the Christian Endeavor movement is that of making Christians and building Christian character, and this embraces all the lesser aims. Without a doubt, the next greatest aim of Christian Endeavor is to develop leadership and to train the members to be good Christians and good Church members. If our Christian Endeavor fails to do this, something is wrong. It may be that one person guides the activities of the Society, giving few others a chance to develop their own qualities of leadership. This shows that even in the training of leadership there should be some one great leader who is helping to make others leaders. What is our society doing to develop leadership? Do we owe that much to the Church?

Ways in which a Christian Endeavor Society may develop leadership:

1. Give every member something to do. Enlist the interest and ability of every one in some definite way. This is the great reason why the committee work (prayer meeting, membership, program, social, missionary and others) is so important.

2. Send some delegates to conventions. They will bring back inspiration to the society, and giving the report when they return, and participation in the work later, will help to make leaders out of them.

3. Help to pay the expenses of some of your members (at least one) to the Chautauqua and Summer School of Methods. There they will have a chance to take courses in the investing of life, Christian Endeavor work, and many other things which will help to make them leaders.

4. Plan a course within the Church on leadership training, or teacher training. Nothing could be more helpful to the Church and the Sunday School. Such a course could be arranged in every Church, and should be. Your minister will no doubt be glad to teach such a course, or some member of the Church who has had some experience and training in that kind of work.

Qualities of Leadership.

Have you ever watched a group of children playing, and noticed which ones of them were natural leaders? There are always children who will be the leaders and exercise initiative, and others who make good followers. These same people will be leaders all of their lives because they are "born leaders." But people who are not naturally leaders may easily become leaders through sympathetic understanding of other people, loyalty to great causes, and a conscious exercise of initiative.

Any leader must have certain things which make him or her a leader. Some of these are:

1. A sympathy for other people and a keen interest in the people around them. A selfish person cannot be a good leader—his activities will be centered around himself. A person who builds a certain piece of assigned work (or a job) around himself to such an extent that the work fails when he gets out, does not mean that he is a great leader; it means that he has more or less failed in his task because inspiring others and developing leadership is one of the greatest tasks of a leader.

2. A good leader will spend time, money, strength, thought for others.

Christian Orphanage

Dear Friends:

The board of trustees, in their annual meeting, passed resolutions, adopting the plans of the architect for the new building and appointed a building committee to take charge of the work and instructed them to commence the construction of the building as early as arrangements can be made.

This building has been made necessary from the fact that our two present buildings are full to the limit of their capacity, and more, and the cry of more than fifty little children, many of them members of our Church, who have been left fatherless and homeless, was too touching to turn a deaf ear to.

"Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these, ye have done it unto me." It will take thirty-five thousand dollars to build this building. To be able to pay our bills as we go, we have asked two hundred and twenty-five Churches for a certain amount; we have made a calculation as to the amount we thought would be each Church's part, and have mailed subscription blanks to a member of each Church, and have asked them to present the matter to their Church, and either raise in cash or subscriptions the amount asked for. No Church has been asked for more than it can raise easily, and if each Church will raise its quota, the building will go up and be paid for when completed. Won't it be just grand if each Church will raise the small amount asked for, and every Church have a part in this new building!

If you invest your money in a nice farm, a nice home or a fine automobile, you are interested in it because it is the thing you have invested your hard-earned money in. If you will invest some of your money in this new building and watch the little fatherless children grow up to be splendid citizens and go out to be doctors, nurses, teachers, mechanics, and home-builders, you will be interested because you will see the fruits of your investment. We have two splendid girls who complete their course as trained nurses the 1st of July and will go out to nurse sick humanity. They are trained nurses because you invested in them. They have made good. You ought to be proud of your investment. Now, let us pull together all at one time and raise enough money in the next few weeks to build this new building. Don't fail us. We have heard from a number of Churches, and all heard from seem to be delighted to have this opportunity to help the helpless and will raise their quota and more. May your Church do likewise.

3. Faith in God, who is the source of strength; confidence in one's self and others—the happy way of expecting big things to happen.

4. Humility, willingness to sacrifice for others, a willingness to stay in the background and let others think they thought of one of your own ideas first. Give others the credit for work which is accomplished.

5. A leader should be willing to train himself for worthy leadership (by prayer, planning, thought of others, reading, studying). It it is worth developing, it is worth developing well.

Rewards of Leadership.

1. A consciousness of doing some good for others and making people a little bit happier perhaps.

2. Influence of the right kind.

3. Responsibility and an opportunity to do more and bigger things.

4. A richer life through strengthening one's own character and inspiring other lives. A good leader must also be a good follower. A leader has certain qualities which makes him a leader, and he is responsible to God for his use of these qualities.

Questions for the Meeting.

1. What do you think made Jesus a great leader besides His divinity? A great teacher? A great shepherd of His flock?

2. What do you think a leader in business should be like? A doctor? A lawyer?

3. Name some of the responsibilities of leaders.

4. How do you know a good leader when you see one?

WELL ATTENDED TO.

A boy of twelve went to his teacher and handed in the following note from his mother before taking his seat:

"Dear Sir,—Please excuse James for not being present yesterday. He played truant, but you needn't whip him for it, as the boy he played truant with and him fell out, and he licked James, and a man they threw stones at caught him and licked him, and the driver of a cart they hung on licked him, and the owner of a cat they chased licked him. Then I licked him when he came home, after which his father licked him, and I had to give him another for being impudent to me for telling his father. So you need not lick him until next time."

FAMILY ALTAR

CONDUCTED BY REV. H. E. ROUNTREE,
Our Chaplain in the United States Navy.

MONDAY.

"Grow in grace and knowledge of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ."—2 Peter 3:18.

Judge Gaynor, an eminent jurist of New York and judge of the Supreme Court, once said: "You cannot force the growth of human life and civilization any more than you can force these slow-growing trees. That is the economy of Almighty God, that all good growth is slow growth."

These words are more than a truism. A child is born with the heritage of a statesman, but not a statesman. It takes a long life of devotion to that calling to attain statesmanship. That is true of any calling. And it is true of Christian character. It comes of a life of consecration to that end. As excelling comes to an athlete by training, so Christian character comes by training. When God made man, He made him innocent, but not perfect in character. He gave him the power of spiritual discernment and the exercise of choice. By this he is to grow in grace into perfection. Our resolution is to make everything we do a choice of the good, so that it may count for growing better every day.

Prayer.—Our Father, give us discernment to see the light and the right the dim shadowy maze of this life. In deep humility, tender penitence and with a contrite heart, may we always come to Thee, and at last be like Thee. Amen.

TUESDAY.

THE WORST OF WAR.

What distinguishes war is, not that man is slain, but that he is slain, spoiled, crushed by the cruelty, the injustice, the treachery, the murderous hand of man. The evil is moral evil. War is the concentration of all human crimes. Here is its distinguishing, accursed brand. Under its standard gather violence, malignity, fraud, perfidity, rapacity and lust. If it only slew men, it would be little. It turns man into a beast of prey. Here is the evil of war—that man, made to be the brother, becomes the deadly foe of his kind; that man, whose duty it is to mitigate suffering, makes the infliction of suffering his study and end; that man, whose office it is to avert and heal wounds which come from nature's powers, makes researches into nature's laws, and arms himself with her most awful forces, that he may become the destroyer of his race. Nor is that all. There is also found in war a cold-blood indifference to human miseries and wrongs, perhaps more shocking than the bad passions it calls forth. To my mind, this contempt of human nature is singularly offensive. To hate war expresses something like respect; but in war, man treats his brother like nothing worth while, sweeps away human multitudes like insects, tramples them down as grass, mocks at the rights, and does not deign a thought to their woes.—William Ellery Channing.

The only warfare enjoined is against sin.

"Stand, therefore, having your loins girt about with truth, and having on the breastplate of righteousness. And your feet shod with the preparation of the gospel of peace. Above all, taking the shield of faith, wherewith ye shall be able to quench all the fiery darts of the wicked. And take the helmet of salvation, and the sword of the Spirit, which is the Word of God."—Eph. 6:14-17).

Prayer.—Lord's Prayer (all joining).

WEDNESDAY.

TRUST GOD AND DO RIGHT.

"God is faithful who will not suffer you to be tempted above that ye are able; but will, with the temptation, make also the way of escape, that ye may be able to endure it."—1 Cor. 10:13.

Harriet Beecher Stowe said, "When you get into a tight place and everything goes against you till it seems as though you could not hold on a minute longer, never give up then, for it is just the place and time that the tide will turn."

There are two reasons for overcoming sin—and fight until we do overcome: (1) God's faithful promises to give us the victory; and (2) others have done it. When we give up, we make God a liar. God holds supreme power over temptation. Satan admitted it about Job, and He is faithful who shall establish us and guard us from the evil one and every evil thing.

Prayer.—Our Father, take away our blindness and ignorance and waywardness and help us to be on Thee. Amidst the dispairs and ruins of life, when the heavens do not shine and the stars refuse to give their light in the firmament of our sculs, shine on through Thy promises and teach us to lean on Thee. Amen.

THURSDAY.

THE COMING OF ETERNITY.

"Remember thy Creator also in the days of thy youth, before the evil days come and the years draw nigh, when thou shalt say I have no pleasure in them."—Eccl. 12:1.

Age; that lessens enjoyment of life, increases our desire of living. Those dangers which, in the vigor of youth, we had learned to despise, assume new terrors as we grow old. Our caution increases as our years increase, fear becomes at the last the prevailing passion of the mind, and the small remainder of life is taken up in useless efforts to keep off our end, or provide for continued existence.

Whence, then, is this increased love of life which grows upon us with our years? Whence comes it that we thus make greater efforts to preserve our existence at the period when it becomes scarcely worth keeping? Is it that nature, attentive to the preservation of mankind, increases our wishes to live, while she lessens our enjoyments; and, as she robs the senses of every pleasure, equips imagination and the spoils? Life would be insupportable as an old man who, loaded with infirmities, feared death no more than when in the vigor of manhood; the numberless calamities of decaying nature, and the consciousness of surviving every pleasure would at once induce him with his own hand to terminate the scene of misery; but happily the contempt of death forsakes him at the time when it could only be prejudicial, and life acquires an imaginary eternal value in proportion as its real value is no more.—Oliver Goldsmith.

Prayer.—All join in Lord's Prayer.

FRIDAY.

HIDDEN RESOURCES.

"And he saith unto them, How many loaves have ye? Go and see. And when they knew, they say, Five, and two fishes."—Mark 6:36-44.

No man knows how much he is worth. Moses had to learn the value of a little rod which he held in his own hand. Now, the disciples must learn their resources when re-enforced by the power of God.

We discover the resources at our disposal only when we turn them over to Jesus. Strike out the word "loaves." It represents anything we have—knowledge, money, character, power. After we have given these to others, in obedience to Jesus, there is an abundance left over.

It will be a great day in your Church if all or any large proportion of the members bring their resources to Jesus, with faith that they will be re-enforced by the resources of God. "The world," said Lyman Abbott, "the world has seen what God and Martin Luther have done, what God and John Calvin have done, what God and John Wesley have done, what God and Dwight L. Moody have done, and what God and many others have done, but the world has yet to see what God and all His people can do."

When we are discouraged at what seems to be the disproportion between the magnitude of our tasks and our resources, then we are to remember this miracle of our Lord. He will be saying to us: "How much can you furnish? What have you to give? Go and see!" Then we will either make the old excuses, or we shall be conscious of the tremendous power and resources of our God to enable us to do the thing which He asks us to do.—Ernest Bourner Allen.

Prayer.—O Thou, who dwellest in eternity, we would not fear Thee more than we love Thee. But into our renewed minds pour the grace of that spirit of knowledge and power that we need to understand Thee aright. Amen.

SATURDAY.

HOLD FAST TO THE TRUTH.

"Be not carried away with divers and strange doctrines."—Heb. 13:7-9.

Stability is a great virtue. There is no lasting success for the man who lacks it. "Unstable as water, thou shalt not excel." So those who take up with every fad in religion will never come to an adequate, well-rounded conception of the truth. They lack that quality of mind which enables one to judge between lopsided and partial views of the truth, and views that are sane and whole.

Men ought to investigate and come to a knowledge of the truth, and having found the truth, they should stay by it. This is a day when some of the doctrines which many have believed to be unshakable are being questioned. Truth is eternal, and doctrines that are founded upon truth are safe. Honest investigation is scriptural; we are admonished "to prove all things." But when we have found the truth, we should stay by it, and "hold fast that which is good."—Rev. E. V. Cole.

Prayer.—We pray for all those who face the rigors of the winter season with fear and dread, because of physical lack. If we are warm and well fed, may it not make us forget those who are suffering. In Jesus' name we ask it. Amen.

SUNDAY.

"The Sabbath was made for man, and not man for the Sabbath."—Mark 2:27.

"Today is your day and mine; the only day we have; the day in which we play our part. What our part may signify in the great whole, we may not understand; but we are here to play it, and now is our time. This we know: it is a part of action, not of whining. It is a part of love, not cynicism. It is for us to express love in terms of human helpfulness."—David Starr Jordan.

Prayer.—Our Father, we look to Thee for the gold of character today. Fill us with love for Thee and for our fellow-men.—Amen.

ter's conversion, and from his impetuous blunderings see gleams of hope for himself. But the Christian can find nothing in Peter's life before his conversion to justify their blunderings after their conversion. The Christian looks at Peter's life after his conversion, and there sees God's challenge to live the overcoming life.

Kiddies' Korner

MADGE FLEMING MOFFITT, Editor.

Dear Kiddies:

It's time for school to be out now! It's most time to go swimming—and oh, yes indeed, go barefoot too! While you are playing and swimming and eating big red-ripe strawberries, remember that your editor would love to be there too, playing and swimming, and all the rest you are doing.

Oh! I know it would be the best fun in the world to be able to play with all the Kiddies that belong to this Korner.

Now, then, it's most time for you to begin some letters for the Kiddies' Korner. I want to be all covered up in them again this summer, as I was last summer. It was loads of fun.

Who will write the first letter—the first vacation letter? I am looking for it this week.

YOUR EDITOR.

It's not always easy—
To apologize,
To begin over,
To take advice,
To admit error,
To be unselfish,
To be charitable,
To face a sneer,
To be considerate,
To keep on plugging away,
To wear a smile—
But it always pays!

A WORM IN THE BOX.

Hugh stood watching his father put a new ribbon on the typewriter, and when it was done he picked up the little tin box which had the new ribbon.

"What a nice little box! May I have it, Dad?"

Certainly, son; what will you put in it?"

"I dunno—marbles, maybe."

Deep down in the little pocket went the tin box and was soon forgotten by the father, but every time Hugh put his hand in his pocket that day he was reminded of his valued possession.

"I know what I'll do with it. I'll put it in a chair by the side of my bed every night, and next morning I will look to see what is in it; for it is to be my fairy box."

"That's a good idea," said his mother, and maybe the fairies will show you their pleasure or displeasure of your deeds by what they put in the box."

Hugh did not fully understand his mother, but when he undressed for bed that night he put his box close by his pillow, and soon fell asleep.

"There's something in it; I hear it rattle."

The top was tight and it took a long time to get it off, but when Hugh looked inside he discovered a large fat chocolate.

"Maybe she rewarded you for being so prompt about getting your coal in last night."

"I'm going to do it every night without a fall and see if she remembers."

And Hugh kept his word for several nights, and sure enough there was a piece of candy in the box every morning. Then one afternoon Joe and Knox came for a game of ball, and no one thought of coal. So dark came, and still the bucket was empty. Hugh thought of it when he was undressed for bed, but it was so dark in the shed that he was afraid to go out, so he slipped into bed without mentioning coal.

Next morning he was almost afraid to open the box, for he knew he did not deserve the candy. But still hoping the fairies might have overlooked his neglect, he lifted the box top, only to find a lump of coal in the box. In his disgust, he threw it in the waste-basket and dressed himself and slipped down to the coal shed where he filled his basket.

"Did you get a chocolate last night?" asked his mother when they were seated at the breakfast table.

Hugh had feared she would ask that question, so he pretended not to hear her, thinking she would not repeat her question. But again she asked, "Did the fairies bring you a chocolate last night, dear?"

"I guess they forgot it," was the reply, with downcast eyes.

When Hugh's father started down to his office after breakfast the boy followed him ot the steps to say goodby.

"Here's a dime, son. Give one nickel to little sister and you can have the other."

After thanking his father, Hugh stood looking at the dime, wishing nothing had been said about dividing it.

"I want a nickel for an ice-cream cone and a nickel for candy; so I wont say anything to sister about her part, but will keep it all."

That night he felt very sorry that he had done wrong, and would not sit in the room where his father was for fear some mention might be made of the matter. The boy went to bed early, and hoped the fairies would overlook his wrong against his sister and place the usual candy within his fairy box.

Earlier than usual the next morning he was awake, and on opening his treasure box he found it to be full of ashes.

He did not ask what it meant, for well he knew it was because he had cheated his sister out of her money. He slipped downstairs with a sad heart, hoping he would escape being questioned. He ate in silence, and as soon as he was through, he left the dining-room.

"What's got into the boy?" asked his mother; "he is so quiet of late that I fear he is sick."

"Ah! he's all right," replied his father, who suspected what the boy had done. "Don't question him too closely. There's something on his mind. He'll tell us when he wants to." It had not been so long since the father was a boy himself, so he knew the ways of a boy by heart.

All went well for another week, and Hugh got in the coal, did his chores and errands without complaining. Then one day a little girl came over with her doll to attend a tea party given by Hugh's sister. When the girls had their little table all ready for the feast, they went in another room to bring the dolls. As they left the room, Hugh snatched both hands full of cookies and raisins and ran out in the yard.

"Where's everything we had to eat?" asked the girls, coming back.

Their mother looked up from her sewing and saw what had happened and gave the children some more cookies and raisins. Nothing was said to Hugh about his greedy act, but next morning when he opened his fairy box there was a shiny worm in it, and a little note which said: "Little sins are like little worms; but unchecked, they grow to ruin your life."

Hugh felt ashamed and afraid, so going to his mother he told the story of his sins and promised to do right hereafter, but never again did he place the little fairy box by his bedside, but kept it on the mantle, where he used it to hold his pennies and nickels which he saved for his Sunday School class.

The worm story was never referred to by anybody, but Hugh remembers it to this day, although he has grown to be a man, and one day when he was talking to young people he told the whole story, warning the boys to keep out the little sins so that there would be none to grow into great serpents.—Arkansas Methodist.

I LIKE TO GO TO SCHOOL TO GOD.

I like to go to school to God!
I hear such strange, revealing things;
He talks to me where rivers run,
And where a skylark soars and sings.

He teaches me His love and care
Through every tree and blade of grass
Here of the hill where I may sit
And listen while the wild winds pass.

He writes with graciers on the rocks
And with the stars that blaze on high;
With fossil shells and ferns that fall
And leave their imprint as they die.

His books are beds of slate and coal;
His manuscripts are Redwood trees;
Volcanoes punctuate the tale
And turn the pages of the seas!

His blackboard is a canyon wall
Whereon He writes of ages past;
In even lines the strata tell
Of things that shall forever last.

He writes with rivers, and they carve
The crevices He leaves to tell
A story of His living love
In temple, tower and pinnacle.

I like to go to school to God
Because it always seems to me
He talks in every breeze that blows;
Through every bird and bud and bee!
—Wm. L. Stidger, in Christian Century.

THE BIBLE.

This Book contains the mind of God, the state of man, the way of salvation, the doom of sinners, and happiness of believers.

Its doctrines are holy, its precepts are binding, its decisions are immutable.

Read it to be wise, believe it to be safe, practice it to be holy.

It contains light to direct you, food to support you, and comfort to cheer you.

It is the traveler's map, the pilgrom's staff, the pilot's compass, the soldier's sword, and the Christian's charter.

Here paradise is restored, heaven opened, and the gates of hell disclosed.

Christ is its grand Subject, our good its design, and the glory of God its end.

It should fill the memory, rule the heart, and guide the feet.

Read it slowly, frequently, prayerfully.

It is a mine of wealth, a paradise of glory, a river of pleasure.

It is given you in life, will be opened at the judgment, and be remembered forever.

It involves the highest responsibility, rewards the greatest labor, and condemns all who trifle with its holy contents.

Is there no reconciliation of some ancient quarrel, no payment of some long outstanding debt, no courtesy or love or honor to be rendered to those to whom it has long been due? no charitable, humble, kind, useful deed, by which you can promote the glory of God, or good will among men, or peace upon earth? If there be any such, I beseech you, in God's name, in Christ's name, go and do it.—Stanley.

Most headaches due to lack of internal cleanliness

WHEN you are constipated, poisons form in the accumulated food waste and are carried to all parts of the body. Headaches follow. Biliousness, insomnia, lack of energy, all result from constipation, which if unchecked will lead to serious results.

Avoid Laxatives—Say Doctors

A noted authority says that laxatives and cathartics do not overcome constipation, but by their continued use tend only to aggravate the condition.

Medical science has found in lubrication a means of overcoming constipation. The gentle lubricant, Nujol, penetrates and softens the hard food waste and thus hastens its passage through and out of the body. Thus, Nujol brings internal cleanliness.

Nujol is used in leading hospitals and is prescribed by physicians throughout the world. Nujol is not a medicine or laxative, and cannot gripe. Like pure water, it is harmless.

Take Nujol regularly and adopt this habit of internal cleanliness. For sale by all druggists.

CATECHISM.

I. Of Religion in General.

First Question. What is religion?

Answer. Religion is a belief in some power superior to man.

2. What does religion teach us?

It teaches us to obey this Higher Power.

3. What name do men give to this Supreme Being?

God.

4. Can we have any religion without believing in God?

We cannot.

5. Is all religion true?

No; many systems of religion are false.

6. Why do men believe in false religions?

Because of their ignorance, and their proneness to evil.

7. What does true religion teach us?

It teaches us what God is, and what we must do to please Him.

8. How may we tell the true religion from the false?

By our reason.

9. What is the aim of religion?

To make us happy.

10. Do not all men wish to be happy?

They do.

11. Why, then, do they not believe and practice true religion?

Because they do not all know what happiness is.

12. How then may we be truly happy?

By fearing God and doing His will.

13. How can we find out the will of God?

We cannot find it out unless He tells us.

14. Has God ever told us what His will is?

He has.

15. Where?

In the Bible, which is His Holy Word.

16. Is there no other way of learning the will of God?

Yes; we have the light of nature, but this is very imperfect and uncertain.

17. Why do we say that the light of nature is uncertain?

Because no man has ever learned the will of God from it.

18. Who wrote the Bible?

It was written by holy men, who set down such things as were made known to them by God.

19. Did they write by command of God?

They did.

II. Our Relation to God.

1. By whom were we created?

By God, who made heaven and earth, and all that in them is.

2. What does God do for us?

He takes care of us by day and by night, and gives us every good thing which we enjoy.

3. What do we owe to God for His goodness?

Love and obedience.

4. Where shall we learn our duty toward God?

In His Word—the only perfect rule of duty.

5. Do you know what God is?

God is a spirit; we cannot see Him; but He sees us at all times, and He can do all things.

EARL OF YPRES DIES.—

The Earl of Ypres, who, as Field Marshal French, was commander-in-chief of the British armies early in the World War, has died at his home near Deal, England, at the age of seventy-two.

WISCONSIN UNIVERSITY HAS NEW HEAD.—

Glenn Frank, the editor of the Century Magazine, has accepted the presidency of the University of Wisconsin. Mr. Frank has been at the head of the Century for a number of years, and under his editorship this magazine has acquired the reputation of being inclined socialistically.

GOVERNOR DAVIS IS ACQUITTED.—

Ex-Governor Jonathan M. Davis, of Kansas, has been acquitted of the charge of conspiring to solicit bribes for pardons. The charge of accepting a bribe for a pardon is still pending, however, against him and his son Russell. Governor Davis got himself in the limelight several months ago by dismissing the chancellor of the Kansas State University just upon the eve of his leaving office. He was charged with having accepted a bribe for a pardon and with having solicited bribes for others at that time.

A NEW NAME FOR "P. W."—

The Prince of Wales, in his many wanderings about this terrestrial ball, has excited much attention. The latest happening is the bestowing on him by forty thousand natives of a new name. The forty thousand natives of the Union of South Africa met him near Umtata and gave him the name "Likakanya"—the shining sun. The prince had had many honors, but not a new name before. He seems to be well liked by the many peoples of the British Empire, but somehow he hasn't liked any girl well enough to marry, and it seems that he may give England a bachelor king. To say the least, that would be a rare occurrence.

DR. ERDMAN HEADS PRESBYTERIANS.—

When the Presbyterian General Assembly met at Columbus, Ohio, it proceeded to find itself by electing a president. A number of men were nominated, and Dr. Charles R. Erdman, of Princeton Theological Seminary, was chosen president. It will be recalled that Dr. Erdman was nominated for this position last year, but was beaten by Dr. Clarence E. Macartney, a determined fundamentalist. Dr. Erdman is a liberal thinker, but a thorough believer in the efficacy of the Scriptures, and in the great essentials of Christianity. When Dr. Macartney passed the gavel to the new president, instead of saying "It is my pleasure to hand over this gavel to you," he said "It is my duty to hand over this gavel to you." Dr. Erdman is said to be one of the sweetest-spirited men in the Presbyterian Church. Some one has said, "His face shines with an inner beauty." Surely a man of whom that is true, plus tremendous administrative ability, is well fitted to head a great Church.

PROFANITY AN ISSUE IN ITALY.—

The Roman Catholic Church is making profanity an issue in Italy. Signs have been placed in the many cities calling the attention of the people to the folly and uselessness of profanity. Anti-blasphemy days are celebrated, and are marked by processions in which the clergy take a leading part. We are of the opinion that the Protestant Church in the United States needs to do something which will lessen this great evil. It is one which many men indulge in thoughtlessly, and which is corruptive in every insidious way. Profanity is weakening the strength of our speech, and is also weakening the moral power of the people. Clean speech is one of the great needs of this country now.

AN INTERESTING DECISION.—

On June 1st, the Supreme Court of the United States handed down a most interesting decision when it declared the Oregon law, compelling all children within the State to attend public schools, unconstitutional. The law was being contested by the Society of the Sisters of the Holy Names of Jesus and Mary and by the Hill Military Academy. Justice McReynolds delivered the decision of the court, and in doing so he declared that no reason existed for the law, and that parents had the right and the high duty to superintend the education of their children. He pointed out that the children were not merely the creatures of the State, and therefore could not be compelled to accept instruction from public teachers only. He said that the records did not show that private and parochial schools had failed to fulfill their duty to their patrons, the children, and the State. The decision of the court had been awaited with much interest.

GENERAL WOOD RAISING MONEY.—

The War Department of the United States is allowing General Wood to raise one million dollars in this country for the benefit of the Filipino leper colony on the island of Culion. When the Filipinos took over the control of the government, they reduced the appropriation for the leper colony, and the former health officer who had been segregating leper children had to give up in despair, and following the taking over by the Filipinos, more than three hundred babies contracted leprocy. Only two physicians and a few nurses were left to care for more than four thousand sick.

The condition having been called to the attention of the United States government, conditions improved, but now the Filipinos have cut the appropriation by one-third, and General Wood is making his appeal to the American people. In the face of such heartlessness, how can the Filipinos expect us to grant self-government. Instead of self-government, they should be reduced to their former Spanish servitude or forced to care for their sick better.

THOS. R. MARSHALL DIES.—

On Monday, June 1st, Thomas R. Marshall, Vice-President for eight years under Woodrow Wilson, passed to his reward. His death was the result of a heart attack which followed an illness of a week, from which he seemed to be rapidly recovering. His death occurred in Washington, where he had gone on one of his periodical visits. Immediately upon arriving in the city, he complained of exhaustion, and took to his bed. In spite of his seventy-one years, he seemed to be reacting nicely to the treatment of his physician, and the end came as a shock. After a brief service in Washington on Tuesday, the body was placed on a west-bound train and taken to Indianapolis. There a Masonic service was held at the home, and final arrangements made for interment.

Thomas R. Marshall was the first Vice-President to succeed himself in office since John C. Calhoun. He presided over the Senate during one of its most stormy periods, and did it with such fairness and good humor that he left all men his friends.

Like his chief, Woodrow Wilson, Mr. Marshall's rise to political power was almost phenomenal. Five years before his nomination as Vice-President on the Democratic ticket, he was quietly practicing law at Columbia City, Ind. Few knew him, and he seemed firmly established in a quiet law practice. Then suddenly, in 1908, he was elected Governor of Indiana, and went to Indianapolis, where he was serving as head of his State when he and Wilson became yokefellows in 1912.

It is characteristic of the man that he died while reading a favorite passage from the Bible, the Book for which he had the deepest love and to which he had turned for leadership throughout his life. This deep devotion to the simple faith to which he was born, together with his refusal to assume a cloak of dignity, were the two outstanding characteristics of the man. He was given to short and telling speeches. Once when the Senate was worrying itself with much speaking, and many members had stated panaceas for the health of the post-war nation, Mr. Marshall brought silence by his well-known solution, "What the nation really needs," he said, "is a good 5-cent cigar." At the time of his death he had completed the opening of a law office at Indianapolis, and was maintaining a modest home there.

NOTES-PERSONALS

Henderson Christian Church is planning for two weeks of daily vacation Bible school this year, beginning June 29 and concluding July 10.

Rev. A. H. Hcok, pastor of the Christian Church, Henderson, N. C., has recently been elected president of the Ministerial Association of that city.

That is a worth-while Church letter from Henderson. Surely many of our other Churches are doing things that would be suggestive and helpful to other Churches!

The Sunday School of First Christian Church, Richmond, will run its annual picnic excursion to Buckroe Beach June 17th. Train will leave Main Street Station promptly at 8 A. M.

Kingdom Enlistment Week will be observed at the Henderson Christian Church, commencing Sunday, June 7th, with Dr. W. S. Alexander, of Elon College, assisting the pastor, Rev. A. H. Hook.

The lawn party given by the Ladies' Aid Society of First Christian Church, Richmond, at Byrd Park, last week was a success. The object was the raising of funds for Church furnishings, which the society assumed.

"My work this year in going nicely. I am serving the Pleasant Grove Church, and am assisting Rev. J. D. Dollar at the Lowell Church here in Roancke. Our meeting begins here the second Sunday."—S. D. Lankford.

The Churches of Henderson joined in a union service at the Christian Church Sunday night, May 17th. The service was devoted to the interest of the Near East Relief, with Mr. Ballou, of Goldsboro, as the speaker.

Our Fancy Gap mission Church has abiding interest in our Christian Orphanage. At their Church services Sunday, May 31th, the offering went to the Orphanage and amounted to $7.90—more than that of some of our well-established Churches.

"Why doesn't THE SUN give more news from the Churches?" Two reasons: First, the editors cannot create the news; second, the pastors are too timid, or something, to write up the happenings at their Churches—except when they are pounded(?).

One good friend, and one, too, who is sorely afflicted, in sending a check of $20.00 to our emergency mission fund, says: "If all our people would tithe, our Church's financial problems would be solved." That brother is correct, and he might have added, "all of us would be happier, richer and better for following this plan of our Lord as touching our finances."

"There is no dodging the fact that our country is the most wasteful country on earth along these lines [losses by fire]. Our annual fire loss exceeds $500,000,000. Approximately 15,000 people are burned to death every year in the United States, or one every half-hour."—Stacey W. Wade, Ins. Com. of North Carolina. Our habits of wastefulness along all lines prove fatal indeed in the line of recklessness, wastefulness with fire.

Why should not a Christian Endeavor Society endeavor to do something else than just get its members to speak or lead in prayer or something at its open meetings? All this is good, but it is not good encugh—does not go far enough. Recently our Endeavor Society of Durham, First Church, undertook a definite piece of work at Fancy Gap, Va. It is costing them about $75.00, but they have put it over all right and have paid all now but about $13 00. This is endeavor in the right direction.

The Ham-Ramsay revival services created wonderful interest, drew great audiences, and won the praise and high esteem of thousands in Alamance and other counties. At the close, the Burlington News carried this interesting item: "The free-will offering of the community to Rev. M. F. Ham, whose seven weeks' evangelistic campaign here resulted in the conversion of some 3,500 persons, and the union of thirteen different Churches of 650, with as many more expected to join, will reach $8,000, in addition to the expense budget of $6,500. These figures were given out as approximate by Earl S. Rogers, secretary to Mr. Ham, before he left yesterday for Smithfield, where the next campaign will be instituted this week. Exact figures could not be given for the reason that all contributions were not in."

It is learned, with genuine satisfaction and pardonable pride, that Mr. and Mrs. Sam Leonard Davis, music evangelists of our Southern Christian Convention, have just closed a great revival under the auspices of the First Baptist Church at Hamlet, N. C. All the Churches of the city adjourned their services for three successive Sundays to co-operate in the great religious awakening brought about in this revival. Often the spacious Church in which the services were held was crowded to capacity and many were turned away from the service. We are advised that plans are already on foot to have Bro. and Sister Davis return for an engagement at Hamlet next year. Rev. A. R. Brothers, Raleigh, N. C., an engineer of the Seaboard Air Line, and a preacher of the Christian Church, also a recent student of the Moody Institute, of Chicago, led in the preaching-services and delivered messages of power and conviction. If any of our pastors desire the assistance of Bro. and Sister Davis, they should get in touch at once with Rev. J. M. Roberts, R. R. 3, Windsor, Va., who will be glad to supply information and dates.

FAR REACH OF SPIRITUAL AIM.

The Spirit of Jesus Christ is the spirit of missions. Our Lord Jesus Christ was Himself the first missionary. His promise and advent composed the first missionary movement. The missionary spirit is not simply a phase of the gospel, not a mere feature of the plan of salvation; but is its very spirit and life. The missionary movement is the Church of Jesus Christ marching in militant array with the design of possessing the whole world of mankind for Christ. Whoever is touched by the Spirit of God is fired by the missionary spirit. An anti-missionary Christian is a contradiction in terms. We might say that it would be impossible to be an anti-missionary Christian because of the impossibility for the divine and human forces to put men in such a state as not to align them with the missionary cause. Missionary impulse is the heartbeat of our Lord Jesus Christ, sending the vital forces of Himself through the whole body of the Church. The spiritual life of God's people rises or falls with the force of those heartbeats.—The Essentials of Prayer.

"MOST PERFECT" GOOD.

Use of the words "most perfect" in advertising matter issued by the Southern Railway System, describing the accommodations offered by the "Crescent Limited," new de lux train between New York and New Orleans, started an argument as to correct usage, which was referred to a number of the leading English scholars of the country, with the result that "most perfect" was given unqualified approval by four out of six savants who replied to a questionnaire sent out by the Southern's passenger department.

Dean John C. Metcalf, of the University of Virginia; Prof. Henry B. Lathrop, of the University of Wisconsin; Prof. Samuel Moore, of the University of Michigan, and Prof. J. Leslie Hall, of the College of William and Mary, upheld the use of "most perfect." Quotations from the Constitution of the United States, the St. James Version of the Holy Bible, the works of Shakespeare, John Ruskin, Carlyle, Irving, Addison, and other standard English authors were given to show the use of this and similar expressions.

Prof. Robert E. Park, of the University of Georgia, and Prof. J. T. Murray, of Harvard University, ruled that "most perfect" is illogical, arguing that if a thing is perfect, it cannot be more so.

Though it was impossible to get a unanimous decision, "most perfect" wins by a vote of 4 to 2.

MOODY BIBLE INSTITUTE.

A group of eight northside Chicago Churches recently united in a successful evangelistic meeting at the Moody Bible Institute, with William E. Biederwolf as preacher. Dr. Biederwolf, recently returned from his nine months' evangelistic tour in the Orient, says the Koreans are the champion Church-goers of the world. Japan is friendly, but wary. China is, he believes, too friendly to the United States and too suspicious of Japan to form any alliance which would menace Western nations.

That Dr. Biederwolf has lost nothing of evangelistic fervor and persuasiveness was proved by the results of the meeting. Hundreds were converted, and many restored. Some characteristic quotations from his sermons follow:

Among scores of reasons why you should say "today," and not "tomorrow," I want to give you one (Prov. 27:1), "Boast not thyself of tomorrow, for thou knowest not what a day may bring forth." It may bring forth death. Two men die every second. But if tomorrow does not bring forth death it will bring forth a less favorable condition of heart and soul to settle this matter. One time in an audience of 4,000 I found by a test that 3,200 had come to Christ before they were twenty years old, and about 400 between twenty and thirty. Of those converted between fifty and sixty, there were only seventeen; between sixty and seventy, there was one, and after seventy, not one in all the 4,000.

Napoleon sat one day in his tent, pondering the loss of half his army. An orderly brought the word, "Cheer up, sire, you've won the victory." "But," replied the general, "another such victory would cost me my empire." If you go out from here without yielding to God, you have gained the victory over mother's prayers, the Holy Spirit's pleading—but I fear for another such victory to you!

The costliest map in the world is in the Louvre of Paris. It has a groundwork of polished jasper, the principal towns marked with precious stones and their names inscribed in gold. Strips of polished platinum represent rivers.

A SENATOR'S OPINION OF STEWARDSHIP.

By Geo. Wharton Pepper,

United States Senator.

This is written with the profound conviction that these three things are true.

First, that our way of raising money for the Church has been eminently unsatisfactory.

Second, that there is a perfectly definite and available remedy for the evil.

Third, that if the remedy is applied, the campaigns which many so much dislike may become things of the past.

Each a Definite Share.

The fundamental trouble with our attempts to enlist men, women, and money for the service of the Church, is that our system falls short of bringing home to each individual his personal share of the entire responsibility; and only partially confronts him with a concrete demand for the discharge of a definite obligation. The loss to the individual, therefore, is quite as great as to the Church. The Church fails to secure adequate support, the individual is left without a definite standard of Christian obligation.

The remedy must be found by providing an exact measure of individual responsibility, and by effecting such an organization as will secure its acceptance not by a few individuals, but by all.

Stewardship Accepted Solves Problems.

Horace Bushnell probably had such a consummation in mind when he said: "One more revival, only one more is needed, the revival of Christian stewardship, the consecration of the money power to God. When that revival comes, the kingdom of God will come in a day." Or as Mr. Gladstone went so far as to say: "I believe that the diffusion of the principle and practice of systematic beneficence will prove the moral specific of our age."

To gauge the possibility of success in such a venture of faith, it is necessary to picture the state of mind in which the individual churchman would have to be in order that this proposal to end campaigns might actually become effective. If the picture represents something obviously and hopelessly unattainable, it is a mere waste of time to pursue the subject. If, on the other hand, the picture reveals a normal human being, managing his affairs in such a way that business principles and Christian stewardship are seen to coincide, maybe it is really worth while to urge Church people to make the picture a reality.

As you study any man who has adopted this principle, you will see that he has taken a long step toward peace of mind. Indeed, the assertion may be hazarded that no single habit conduces more to happy living than the special account habit.

Heretofore, many appeals which have come have been a cause of annoyance because he was asked to give away what he thought was some of his money. Now that he has set aside in a special account God's money, it is no longer his own, but he has become God's steward with the duty of determining how much of the fund shall be devoted to various kinds of charitable endeavor. When an appeal is made to him which he knows to be for a worthy cause, it is not a question of whether or not his household expenses will be large or small this month; the only question he has to decide is this: "Is there a balance in the stewardship account?" Nobody who gives the plan a fair trial will ever abandon it.

Convinced Stewards Should Win Others.

Perhaps by following this line of thought you have convinced yourself that you, at any rate, will register yourself as a steward in fact as well as in name. If so, you will probably be eager to get somebody else to do likewise; for stewardship inevitably breeds discipleship. Having adopted a Christian principle for yourself, you are not content till you have brought others into the same way of living. A convinced steward must make a disciple out of a fellow-churchman, and do it by going after him and getting him. It is the only way.

Let each convinced steward make it his business to win his pastor, if he needs winning, and between them let them bring it to pass that the next canvass of the parish shall have as its objective the report of a hundred per cent enrollment of convinced stewards. This is the kind of an honor roll for a place on which a parish may well strive.

SPEAKING OF COURAGE.

The boy who never is afraid,
Who laughs at danger, calm and cool,
May sometimes do a useful turn,
At other times be just a fool;
But when a chap comes sharp upon
A scary job that must be done—
Done quickly, although his hands are shaky
And both his knees distinctly quaky—
Hops in and does it, all the same,
And takes the plunge and plays the game—
What if his heart was in his throat?
Pin medals on that fellow's coat!

PRINCIPLES OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

(1) The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.

(2) Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.

(3) The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.

(4) Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship, and of Church membership.

(5) The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by, all.

THE PURPOSE OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

The purpose of this Church is to cultivate a spirit of union among the followers of our Lord Jesus Christ of every persuasion, and to secure, if possible, the associate efforts of all true religious teachers in pointing the wicked to "the Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world."

The peculiar doctrines and tenets which have confused and distracted the Christian world are remanded to private judgment, and hence cease to be matters for debate, only in so far as may be necessary to prevent a sectarian influence from entering the Church.

This Church requires no compromise of faith on the part of any child of God in order to communion or fellowship; here denominational distinctions cease to exist, and Christian love binds the brotherhood together.

The purpose of this Church will be consummated in the conversion of the world and the union of all Christians.

DESERVED TRIBUTE.

It has been the rather sad observation of THE SUN'S editor that many of us Christians feel that we cannot have institutions, interests and enterprises quite equal to those of other Churches and communions. And positively it rather startles us when we are assured that our very own is equal or superior to the best.

At the recent commencement of Elon College, the distinguished gentleman who delivered the literary address on graduating day, in the course of his address exclaimed with emphasis that, in comparison with the number we sought to reach, to serve and to teach at Elon College, there was not a college plant in the United States so adequate, so efficient, so well equipped as our own. And this gentleman declared himself in position to know, and that he was in no sense flattering or exaggerating the facts in the case.

That speaker was Dr. Robert L. Kelly, secretary of the Council of Church Boards of Education. His business is to know colleges in the United States, and to have in mind and in hand their equipment and character. He is, in all probability, acquainted at first hand with more colleges and universities than any man in our country. So much for the man and his statement.

What interests us here is the fact of Elon College as it is physically equipped and manned today. If one now believes, feels, imagines, suspects that Elon College is not equal to any college plant or equipment and where in the South, in the field and character of the work it seeks to do, then all we have to say is—come and see! The equipment is here. The buildings, laboratories, studios, library, offices, lecture rooms, society halls, club rooms and the rest—the latest and most modern word in college construction and finish are here. These are ours. The Christian Church can have, it does have, the equal of any. In this we indulge a pardonable pride and take courage.

FANCY GAP, ELK SPUR, ROCKY FORD.

One suspects that these rather formidable names are more or less familiar to CHRISTIAN SUN readers. We have not known them long, but we are learning to know them well. And the more we know them the better we like them.

Fancy Gap is really the post-office through which we gain admittance to Elk Spur. The latter is higher up, farther on, and is the local name of our Christian Church, school-house and parsonage.

Our Elk Spur plant is serving a great and good purpose. For seven months, two full-time teachers carried on five days of the week in our day school. Then on Sundays, these teachers, with the assistance of our pastor, Rev. M. T. Sorrell, and his assistant, Miss Margaret H. Morey, conducted our Sunday School and other religious services. We have here an ample and adequate Church and school building combined. The Church auditorium will seat 200; the two large school-rooms easily take care of our week-day school and classes in Sunday School. Then, on the grounds and close by, we have the Morey Building, used as combined parsonage and teacherage—our preacher and teachers live there. It was a splendid audience that gathered at Elk Spur Sunday, May 31st. The people were attentive, well-behaved, orderly, reverential. It was a joy to worship there and have fellowship with the saints there.

Rocky Ford is the name of a congregation, but not of an exact place or building. As yet, the people have no house in which to worship. We have been holding Sunday services and conducting week-day school in the shed of a modest dwelling by the courtesy and kindness of the family living there. It is wholly inadequate, yet a Church organization of over thirty members has been effected. A site for a Church on the Hillsville-Mt. Airy highway has been donated us. Here we are to build. We have promised these people now for two years. If our promise is worth anything and the work here is to continue, we must now build.

What are we doing in these mountains? Giving the people, young and old, a chance at the gospel, the privileges of school and Christian teaching, of the Bible and of the life worth while in Christ Jesus our Lord—a chance they have not had before. That is all. And we will never help a more appreciative or a more worthy or a more needy people of these things.

Our Carroll County work is a Christian work worth while. Do you wish a part in it? Then send a contribution to our Rocky Ford building fund.

GOD'S SCHOOL.

Mr. President, Men and Women of the Graduating Class, Students, Patrons and Friends of Elon College:

Jesus voiced a higher expression of the same law. He taught the law of service as the fruit of real love for fellow-men. He said that life, real life, was impossible without love. His disciples continued the theme and traveled through the then known world carrying what they thought spiritual food to starving souls and the water of life to the famished. The impulse was their desire to help, and their cause flourished in the measure that their desire was undiluted by selfish interest and ambitions. In their teaching, life and real love were linked together, while death and hatred were inseparable. The gospels and the epistles are filled with the social message. James' definition of religion, with its emphasis upon assistance for the needy, is only one illustration of many available. The hopeful quality in the world is that human sympathy and love which marks the kinship between God and man. The canker of the world, and the indispensable and ever-present factor in all evil, is selfishness.

But the same story is written in the hearts and natures of men. The gospel message of brotherhood was gospel or good news, because men hungered for that sort of teaching. It is perfectly true that the appetites, the desires for possession and the instincts of self-preservation seem to develop into selfishness. There is really a conflict in each life between the unselfish and the selfish interests, but no one questions the fact that men respond to generous impulses. Sympathy is natural, too, and the love of justice and the demand for a square deal are almost as universal as any other human quality. Who can look with comfort upon the suffering and distress of others? Only those who have developed an armor of indifference, for God has written in our lives this insistent demand of this.

This demand is not only apparent in our tastes and desires, but it is expressed in our necessities. This is especially true of the demand upon the race as a whole. Injustice means danger and death. History is full of examples. The strength of the French Revolution was the unconquerable and uncontrollable feeling that injustice was the portion of the lower classes. The most terrific explosives are composed of elements which, in circumstances are perfectly harmless. So in the many other combinations or in slightly different chemistry of human emotions, some of the noblest impulses may become the most powerful, destructive forces. The race must solve its problem of social justice or die. The problem was comparatively simple in the days of long ago, though the same fundamental principles were involved then as now. Contacts were few, interests were not so intricately involved, and time and distance were barriers between men.

One of the well-known elementary principles of chemistry is that certain substances which do not themselves enter into combination, may, by their presence in a solution, hasten the chemical reactions, though themselves remaining unchanged. The new inventions of today which have brought the East and the West together, the communication of thought round the world, the free interchange of commodities as well as of thought, and the widely distributed knowledge of the life and possessions of other races and classes, act as such catalytic elements in the great test-tube of human society. Reactions between class and class, between race and race, or between nation and nation, come with a new and startling speed and sometimes their reactions are explosive in character and kill and destroy by their force. This is an outstanding problem of today. Justice or death! We might well spend all the time at our command in speaking of a few manifestations of this problem. But only a few need be mentioned.

Artificial and outgrown barriers between States and nations must be eliminated when they block the path of progress toward understanding and common welfare. Some such barriers are built on political advantage which is so solidly entrenched in tradition and habits and customs of men that waves of sentiment and human sympathy dash themselves vainly against them. So long as one nation's prosperity depends upon the lack of prosperity in another, the world is in a dangerous state. Such conditions exist in many parts of the earth. If my fellow-countrymen lack food because the citizens of another country, through special political advantage, are well fed, my sympathy for my brethren of my own nation wars with my regard for the brethren over the division line. When my suspicions are aroused, my fears break loose. When my fears are rampant, I am willing to take any steps which seem necessary to protect the welfare and the honor of my own. It is in this way that wars arise. It is the history of the world that as civilization has seemed to advance, the occasional failures which have resulted in war have steadily increased in severity and danger. The time rapidly approaches when war must be overcome by the power of human sympathy and universal justice or the race will literally destroy itself. The lessons set in God's school are not mere play.

As men group together in closer and closer relationships, their animal natures are stimulated. When we see some one else enjoying a dish with evident pleasure in the eating, we are tempted to indulge. This is the principle involved in the serious tendency to use, or rather to waste, so much life and energy in the pursuit of debasing pleasures. The world needs play. It should be filled with joy and pleasure. But the intoxication from indulgence in sensual stimulation and other vicious practices, so easy to find, destroys life. In the old days, stories would come from across the seas of certain abandoned groups and their debased pleasures. Those things were away from us. Today such things are spread before the eyes of the whole world. Though far away, they are at our very door in radio message, moving picture, or publication. Is it any wonder that youth, looking upon the exhilaration and evident pleasure of the participants, wishes to investigate? This is a social problem. If the generations soon to follow our own are to be strong and virile, their powers must not be wasted in vain pursuits. If the race is to continue in vigor and strength, our social pleasures must be made wholesome. This is an individual lesson of importance, but it is a racial task which must be solved. Other problems of like importance are at hand. Each of us can think of many of them and find our way into the heart of the task of solving them.

Perhaps we should ask ourselves the same question concerning this great course of study—the insistent demand for social justice—as that asked concerning the first great course—the imperative command to subdue the earth. What progress is being made? The story of the race is a long list of victories. Human slavery has been abolished; knowledge is spreading rapidly into the far corners and the dark places of society; human life seems to be increasing in value and consideration, even though the population is increasing; life is pleasanter and filled with richer experiences; woman has a new dignity and a new freedom, and children are looked upon with a reverence new in the history of the race. Yes, great progress has been made, but there is no danger of completing the entire task and leaving no great challenging social task to our children. Just as each revealed secret from nature's vault whispered of other secrets more carefully concealed, so does the solution of each great social problem bring to our attention new demands to be met and new abuses to be corrected.

The Royal Invitation to Sonship.

The third great course of study which we mention is that which gives value to the other sources. It is a royal invitation to become sons of God! Like the other two, it is written in God's great texts. His universe cries aloud of its Creator, of a builder. We have hands, and we build. Some one, or some power with some characteristics like our own, must be responsible for the world and all that is therein. We appreciate and enjoy the music and the beauty spread before us in God's world. Surely, then, we must be like the one responsible for these things. If the mechanism of the universe, and the physical laws which govern its workings are so interesting to us that some of us gladly devote our lives to studying them, and if the secrets are concealed in such fashion as to develop our curiosity, surely we must be something like the one who planned these things! The universe speaks in unmistakable terms of the majesty and the power of God; but it speaks, too, of our relationship to Him.

The lesson is written in our own lives. Every man is akin to the the Divine one, and realizes it. We are told by reliable authorities that no peoples have been discovered without some religious manifestations. The tribal religious legends picture God as a great man or the gods as exalted men. You can hear today in some groups of people in our own country the expression, "The Good Man," a perfectly reverential manner of speaking of God. It is only an indication of the inherent belief or feeling that God and man are related. Look into your own lives with the knowledge that you have of biology. You are at once confronted with the fact that you are much like the animals. Your bodies are subject to similar laws of growth and development, and many of your tendencies are like theirs. Are you satisfied to rest in the belief that you are animal, and animal only! Your inmost being repudiates even the thought. We are animals with animal natures, but we are more. We are men, in the image of God, and the statement in Genesis to that effect is only, so far as we are concerned, a repetition of what has been written in the lives and consciousness of men for countless generations.

But the message finds its clearest expression in the Scripture. We might start with the early verse in Genesis which has already been mentioned, and continue to read the record all through the entire sixty-six books and it would continually speak of God and His relation to men, at once His creatures and His children. But it is not until we come to the brief messages of Jesus that the thought stands out in clearest fashion. He voiced it in new terms. He came with a message of the Father—not judge, not creator, not an author with regard for his handiwork; but as Father. If He is our Father, we are His sons. This was the message of Jesus, humanity has a heritage of sonship, enter into your heritage. And so we finally come to our text, which we use not only as the text of the entire address, but as the fine expression of the third great lesson: "That ye may become sons of your Father who is in heaven." That was the purpose of Jesus' life; that was His message. The material universe had hinted at the relationship; men had felt it; but how clearly Jesus expressed it!

What of our success with this lesson? Have individual men been hearing and heeding the royal invitation? Has the race understood its glorious opportunity? A dispassionate observer must acknowledge that countless millions have learned to call God Father. They have lived during all the historic periods of man's existence, and though their creeds and special beliefs have varied in countless details, their faith in the Father has been a common one. What shall we say of the failures? Perhaps there are failures, but how grateful we are that we do not grade the examination papers in this school! After all, our own information is so scanty that we are not in position to judge the others. But the race, too, has been journeying toward the Father. Our old world, with all its sins and follies, with its crimes of passion and lust, with its hatred and jealousy and strife between classes, with its spots of degredation—has been slowly learning the lesson. No other is so universally accepted as the ideal as is the Man of Galilee. This is true, even though wills and habits do not succumb as readily as intellects and are not fully conquered. Customs and practices of business today are vastly different from those of generations ago. The sense of justice in business is far keener now than then. Business ethics are developing and the new word in the business code is "service"—the word the Master taught. Is it too much to hope that the day approaches when international relationships and the relationships between classes of society may be governed by the same magic principle? We are steadily progressing toward that goal, and this generation has its contribution to make to the advancement. What a glorious privilege it is!

The Purpose of the School.

But we have been speaking of God's school. We have briefly mentioned its great texts and its outstanding lessons. The three lessons we have mentioned are—

The imperative command to conquer the earth,
The insistent demand for social justice, and
The royal invitation to sonship;

And they are written, explained and illustrated in the three great texts—the material world, human nature and experience, and the Bible. But why the school? What is its purpose? Again our text—"That ye may be sons of your Father who is in heaven." To conquer the universe is an empty achievement in itself. The pride of achievement passes and the victory soon slips from our grasp. In the flush of the contest a fight for social justice seems glorious, but the ardor fades, and the task must be done over and over and again. What is the use of it all? In our great wars it seems that even the victor loses. Some such feeling sometimes comes over a soldier in the cause of social justice. Hard won and dearly bought conquests soon lose their significance and are lost in the dreary waste of human tragedies of which there seems no limit. Is our success, after all, failure? Do the advancing knowledge and the increasing appreciation of men of today only mean greater and keener disappointment because of unfulfilled desires and ambitions? Ah! the world would be a dreary place without the promise of the text. The world is not merely a tread-mill with a ceaseless sound of activities. The human race is not merely a purposeless chain with generations for links. The world is a school—God's school—and though we are links in a human chain of purpose and destiny, we ourselves are pupils in that school. If we are successful pupils, and if we attain the ideals in the curriculum, we will enter into the heritage toward which we have striven. We will become worthy sons and daughters of our Father who is in heaven.

Men and women of the graduating class, this is the message I bring you today. As pupils in God's school, work persistently at its tasks. Keep your intellects growing in strength with their victories over the problems of the material world. Enlarge your sympathies, and forget yourselves and become God-like through the abandon with which you pursue the fruits of justice for all, and let not discouragement or temporary defeat so cloud your vision that you cannot clearly see ahead of you the degree toward which you are striving and which, please God, will one day be conferred upon each son of God.

SUFFOLK LETTER.

Local Churches have great opportunities and great obligations in their individual and their organic capacity. As members of the Church, individuals could greatly improve their development and usefulness by the adoption and practice of self-discipline and system. In the first place, this could become a fixed habit in Sunday School and Church attendance. To attend in all weathers and under all conditions would be good personal discipline. Such an obligation, self-imposed, would become a system. System grows into habit, and all pleasure grows out of habit. The easiest thing one does is in the field of habit. Church attendance may become such a habit for the individual that absence renders one restless and unhappy.

What is true of attendance is true also of contributions. It is not so much of importance as to what a Church member gives as the manner or system in giving. It is not worth so much to the member or the Church to give $5.20 at the end of the year as to give 10 cents every Sunday during the year. To give all at one time makes the gift seem larger to the giver; but it is really less because everything to which that gift belongs has to wait for it until the end of the year. When paid all at one time, the giver has to think of it only one time; but when given Sunday by Sunday, the giver has to think of it fifty-two times. If all members "laid by in store on the first day of the week" what they proposed to give, the Church would have in hand, month by month, the sum necessary to meet current expenses. The members who are the best satisfied with themselves and the Church are those who are most regular in attendance and payment of dues. Nothing is said about the sum each member should give; that is a matter for the individual after prayerful consideration of the obligation. But what this letter is concerned about is real system on the part of individuals in attendance and contributions. What is true in the Church relation is true in the Sunday School.

The Church as an organization is nothing more nor less than the sum of the individual members. The lake is made up of rain-drops. The Church is made up of individuals. It is of supreme importance that the local Church shall regard its obligations as sacred, and its method of business should be an example for other lines of business. For the local Church to proclaim good doctrine, insist on good character, and strive after spiritual experiences, and then fall down on common business is pitiable if not tragic. The Church should be an example in prompt payment of financial obligations; but she has been afraid to insist on prompt payment by members lest they would think she was after money only. Ministers have been timid for the same reason. But slack payment means slack prayers, slack faith, and small usefulness. Nothing dwarfs a Church member or a Church so much as to neglect known and felt obligations. It is a rare thing to find a complaining member or Church that has met moral, spiritual, and financial obligations fully and promptly. One never feels so happy as when all obligations are met; and a Church has the same experience.

ELON LETTER.

During her thirty-five years of history, Elon has granted bachelors' degree to 595 persons—347 men and 248 ladies. Twenty-one of these have died—16 men and 5 ladies—leaving Elon 574 living graduates.

It is interesting to note that during the first five years, the college graduated twenty-eight persons, while during the last five years 211 have been graduated. The percentage who graduate is slightly larger for Elon than for the colleges at large. Fourteen out of thirty-eight graduate the country over. Slightly more than this number graduates from Elon.

The lifework of Elon graduates, too, is indicative of the idealism that prevails on the campus. The three essentially altruistic professions are teaching, the ministry and home-making. In these three, Elon graduates rank high. More than half are engaged in teaching, or, to be exact, 251. One-sixth are ministers, or 92 in all, while 74 of Elon women graduates have dedicated themselves to home-making. Four hundred and seventeen out of 574 are devoting their lives to the altruistic callings. This fact is eloquent testimony to the kind of motivation Elon gives her students—a motivation our materialistic age stands sorely in need of.

The other callings represented in the roster of Elon's alumni are as follows: business, 79; engineering, 9; fine arts as a profession, as distinct from teaching, 2; law, 17; medicine, 15; and public service, including unclassified callings, 35.

Elon is willing to be judged by her fruits—the finest standard of judging an institution yet discovered; the test which Jesus declared to be fair and ultimate. Some doubt that Christian character is first and always at Elon the consuming aim, goal, purpose, aspiration of faculty and students. The facts set forth above appear to be a clear indication that Elon does realize measurably her motto in the fruits of her alumni. Add to this the further fact that only one of her alumni is not a professing Christian, and you have a weight of evidence that our college is not only in purpose, but also in fact, Christian, which cannot be successfully impeached.

CARROLL COUNTY, VA.

Sunday, May 31st was set for memorial service at Elk Spur. The weather was ideal and a large crowd assembled, filling the auditorium and one school-room. Our pastor, Rev. M. T. Sorrell, gave a cordial welcome. His brother, Mr. Claude Sorrell, of Catawba Springs Church (N. C.) responded in well-chosen words. He had come up the preceding Friday, bringing with him a cousin, Mrs. Jesse Sorrell, and five members of the Junior Missionary Society. Surely their Churches could have sent no better representatives. These Wake County friends helped very greatly in the musical part of our program.

The Hon. Judge Bolen, who, with his family, became a neighbor of ours during the past year, spoke, relating many interesting incidents in connection with the lives of a number of people who had resided in this vicinity, but have passed on. Many of these are not buried in our little cemetery nearby, so it was not possible for us to place flowers upon their graves, but the kind words spoken by the judge and the pleasant memories which he recalled were a beautiful tribute to those friends whom he knew so well and whom he loves still.

We had with us Mr. and Mrs. Lindsay, Mr. and Mrs. Hylton, and Mrs. McCallum, of Mt. Airy, N. C. Mr. Lindsay and Mr. Hylton had a part in our memorial service last year, and made so many friends among our people here that we felt our program would not be complete without their assistance. They had much to say that was helpful and inspiring and all were happy to hear them again.

The last speaker was Dr. J. O. Atkinson, who gave us a message that lingers with us. He spoke from Heb. 11:40, and no one could have listened without having an increased desire to attain to that which is higher and better. Dr. Atkinson is greatly loved by the people here, and nothing could have afforded them more pleasure than his presence at this service.

Our junior choir sang a number of songs, and we hear many words of praise for them. One little girl of five years sang several stanzas alone. The children at Elk Spur always enjoy a song service, never refusing to take part.

Our program was concluded at the cemetery, where flowers were placed on every grave.

At 4 P. M., Dr. Atkinson spoke to an attentive audience at Rocky Ford. Our room there being too small to accommodate those who gathered to hear him, we found seats under a large tree. The most desirable seats were reserved for ladies. These were logs and rocks which protruded from beneath the surface. However, no one mentioned discomfort. They were so happy to hear him say that we are to begin our Rocky Ford building at once.

Dear people of the Christian Church, our Mission Secretary has received only a small part of the money needed for this building; but we are going to launch out on faith, believing that our Father will make it possible for you to invest in this worthy enterprise.

The site on which we are to build was donated more than two years ago, and these people have waited patiently We must have the house completed for the opening of school. We cannot do this without your help. Are we to be disappointed?

HENDERSON LETTER.

Under the leadership of Rev. A. H. Hook, the young, energetic and consecrated pastor of the Christian Church at Henderson, N. C., the Church seems to have taken on new life, and the members are trying, and are accomplishing, things worthy of mention in The Christian Sun.

"Mothers' and Daughters' Week" was observed, commencing on Mother's Day, at the morning worship, when all mothers and daughters attending Church sat in a body. Tuesday night following was "Organized Class Night," at which time mothers and daughters met and enjoyed the fellowship of an organized class meeting, after which all joined heartily in playing games together. Wednesday night, the prayer service was made appropriate for the mothers and daughters, with a large number in attendance. Friday night a very successful banquet was held at the Church, at which no efforts were spared to give all a good time, from the decorations to the menu. A very delightful program was given at the close of the banquet. The week ended with the mothers and daughters again sitting together in a reserved section of the auditorium on Sunday morning, May 17th, which was observed as "Daughters' Day," with an appropriate sermon by the pastor. Daughters were used as ushers for this service. The week was so thoroughly enjoyed by all participating, that a committee has been appointed to be planning for a similar celebration next year.

The Missionary Society of our Church now has a membership of thirty-nine. We have been studying "Ming-Kwong" this winter, with Mrs. Hook as leader, and have found it most interesting. At our last meeting we voted to use "Ann of Ava" for our summer meetings, and use the new study book in the fall. Our Ladies' Aid Society has for some time been contemplating the purchase of a new carpet for the Church auditorium. Samples have recently been presented to the society, and the carpet will be purchased in the near future.

Some months ago the Willing Workers' class of the Junior Department of the Sunday School decided to buy a bulletin board for the front lawn of the Church. We feel this is quite an undertaking for a junior class, but they are hard at work and have raised considerable towards it already. They have been selling candy, eggs, securing subscriptions for magazines and using their dues. At present, a class in basketry is being held at the Church every week, under the direction of Mr. Hook and Mrs. W. O. Cunningham, and the children are making lovely baskets, for which they find a ready sale. The True Blue Class of teen-age girls, with Mrs. Hook as teacher, recently had an entertainment, from the proceeds of which they bought and presented to the Sunday School a register board, for which the school had long felt a need. The Gleaners' Class —a class of young married laides—recently purchased a complete four-dozen set of attractive dishes for the Church, with a sufficient quantity of silverware to go with it. The Cradle Roll Department of the Sunday School held a baby party recently, at which time the mothers were the guests of the babies for the afternoon. This came at the time when Miss Lucy Eldredge was visiting our Church, and she gave a most interesting talk to the mothers.

Our Church is proud of its organized junior congregation, to which Mr. Hook tells a story or gives a sermonette each Sunday morning. One May day this congregation carried May baskets of fruit, nuts, candy and flowers to the sick, shut-ins and elderly members of the Church and congregation. A large basket was also taken to the county hospital.

We believe the various departments of our Church and Sunday School are progressing, and we ask the prayers of our Christian friends that we may continue, with God's help, to keep on going on. MRS. W. O. C.

ELM AVENUE, PORTSMOUTH.

It may seem a little queer to the general reader, and especially so to the members of the above-named Church for a visitor to assume the privilege of exploiting their conduct and general demeanor as a band of Christians, but as I had the pleasure of being present with them last Sunday, May 31st, I was so impressed with their manner of work, consecration and devotion, I cannot forego the opportunity of telling THE SUN'S readers about it. When I arrived, the Sunday School had just adjourned. A gentleman (not a very bad-looking fellow) came out, looked real straight at me, came up, offered his hand and said his name was Felton. I gave him my name. He then introduced me to several brethren, and informed me that Chaplain H. E. Rountree was to preach for them at that hour, as their pastor was out of town, but said he, "The time for services is up, and if he does not come we want you to conduct services for us." That made me feel a little shaky, and I almost wished I had not come. Yet I soon decided in my mind that I would try. Just at that juncture, in stepped the chaplain. I said, "Amen," almost loud enough to be heard. Well, Bro. Rountree entered the pulpit and preached one of those strong, convincing, inspiring sermons that is, and has always been, his custom. His subject was "The Philosophy of Contrition." At first the subject seemed a little lofty, but he handled it so beautifully, so wonderfully, that it was ladened with comfort, consolation and sweet inspiration. So helpful, so thrilling were his utterances, that many hearty amens were heard in the audience. Bro. Rountree was once my pastor for two or three years, and I learned to love him as I have a very few others in life. The brotherhood at Elm Avenue seemed to be alive to the work of their Master. They impressed me as being loyal, faithful and ready for any service in the kingdom. They spoke of their pastor as a leader, possessive of the finest qualities; they spoke in terms expressive of the utmost confidence they had in him as a pastor and a leader or counselor; they seemed to love and esteem him for his ability, nobleness, worthiness and loving nature, and also for the progressive spirit manifested since he had been their pastor. It has always been a source of great pleasure for me to mix and mingle with God's consecrated and devoted children, and that pleasure was mine last Sunday. May the Lord ever keep this dear people in the way they now seem joyously moving is my prayer.

PASSING THE TORCH.

BY REV. J. W. WELLONS, D. D.

I have just been thinking about that great, good man, Rev. Isaac Mooney, of Kansas, whom I knew and loved in this life and whom I expect shortly to join in the spirit world. I have often thought of Bro. Mooney, whom I regarded as one of the sweetest-spirited men of our ministry, a man who preached the old-time religion, who was interested in the Church and in the schools and colleges, and who brought up his children in the nurture and fear of the Lord.

I have been thinking of him today and during our commencement here at Elon because a splendid building stands here erected to his memory by his son-in-law, Bro. Orban, and his daughter, the wife of Bro. Orban, a building that has cost, as it now stands, $125,000, furnished with everything necessary to train college students to be Christian workers and preachers and to teach the children of the community here true religion. It has been a pleasure to me to see this building arise out of the ground here and to come to completion and now to full use in the social and religious life of the college and the community.

This building this year had four professors of Bible and religion teaching in it, with more than 200 college students studying to be preachers and teachers of religion. In addition to this, more than 300 boys and girls of the community came to the week-day school of religion in which the college students engaged in teaching them religion in the week under supervision of Prof. Bennett and his assistants. It is a beautiful thought to me that my good Bro. Mooney and his good daughter and son-in-law have in the very first year of the use of this building been able to reach 500 young lives with the gospel message, and I know that the soul of good Bro. Mooney has rejoiced at every good thought that has been presented and every good resolution that has been formed and every good deed that has been done in this building erected to his memory.

As the years come and go, countless thousands will receive their instruction and training in religion in this beautiful building, which, to me, is a torch lighted by Bro. Mooney and passed on to his daughter and son-in-law, and now planted here for the teaching of religion to the glory of God and the saving of souls. How I do rejoice to see this building, and how glad I will be to be able to describe it in the spirit world to Bro. Mooney. And may God bless Bro. Orban and Sister Orban for their generous kindness in making the planting of this torch here at Elon possible. May the good Lord bless them is my prayer.

DIRECT LETTERS PROPERLY.

While it is generally accepted that this is not the age of miracles, nevertheless, there are thousands of patrons of the United States mails who take it for granted that Uncle Sam has many wonder-workers on his pay roll.

The very fact that there are wizards in the employ of the Post-Office Department—men and women who are uncanny, to say the least, in deciphering illegible hand-writing—has caused no end of trouble and expense to the government, as well as to the taxpayer, along with inconvenience in the receipt and delivery of mail matter.

Yet, with all this expert handling and careful study of hand-writing on the part of the postal clerks, the annual revenue from dead mail matter received by the government amounts to approximately $300,000.

Last year, the dead-letter office received $120,000 from the sale of orphaned packages which could neither be forwarded to the addresses nor returned to the senders because of inadequate addresses. The same office turned into the United States Treasury $55,523.96 in cash removed from misdirected letters or found loose in the mails.

Postage stamps were taken from letters or found loose in the mails having a value of $12,165.67, almost double the entire revenue of the postal service in 1789.

Three-cent fees collected for the return to senders of letters which could not be delivered totaled $92,007.54.

But this is not half the story. Checks, drafts and money orders, whose owners could not be located, and amounting to $3,546,542.54, finally found a resting-place in the dead-letter office.

For want of correct or complete addresses, 21,000,000 letters were deposited in the dead-letter office, not to speak of 800,000 parcels which had been improperly addressed or wrapped.

Strange to say, this depositing of letters and packages in the mails with incomplete, inadequate or incorrect addresses and wrapping comes, in a large majority of cases, from those patrons who are the most liberal contributors to this branch of the United States government.

It has been estimated by postal officials that 200,000,000 pieces of mail are given "directory service" every year, which means that employees must take time from the regular handling and dispatching of mail in the endeavor to provide correct addresses for this huge volume of misdirected matter. In New York City alone, the cost of this service approximates $500 every day in the year, and the total amount through the country is stupendous.

While the revenue from the dead-letter office is sufficient to keep that branch of the postal service functioning, it is not nearly enough to pay the annual toll for support of the "nixie."

A "nixie" is a letter or parcel so improperly addressed that it can neither be delivered to the address nor returned to the sender without special treatment. This special treatment costs the Post-Office Department or the taxpayer in the final analysis approximately $1,740,000 every year.—U. S. P.-O. Bureau of Information.

The congregation of the Park Avenue Baptist Church, New York, has voted to call Rev. Dr. Harry Emerson Fosdick to be its pastor, and though several speakers expressed strong opposition to the conditions Dr. Fosdick imposed, only seventeen members voted against calling him.

STEWARDSHIP AND PROMOTION.

BY WARREN H. DENISON, Secretary.

Financial Aims for a Local Church.

The following aims should ever be kept before a local Church by its stewardship-finance department and pastor. Study them over and see how high a grade your Church would pass now on these important objectives.

1. Every member a giver in accordance with 1 Cor. 16:2.

2. Every member bearing his rightful share both in the local Church and in the world-wide work.
work.

3. An adequate and growing Church budget in both parts, the local current expenses and the denominational benevolences.

4. Thorough preparation of the congregation preceding the annual every-member canvass.

5. An actual every-member canvass of the membership of the Church and its constituency.

6. Weekly giving for both parts of the budget.

7. Two treasuries, with two treasurers and one financial secretary. The financial secretary may or may not be the Church stewardship secretary.

8. A stewardship secretary as one of the regular Church officers heading up the stewardship department.

9. An increase annually of 15 per cent for Church benevolences.

10. Quarterly financial reports to the Church and to all contributors.

11. An efficient follow-up system to secure the payment of pledges regularly.

12. Monthly or quarterly remittance of all benevolent funds.

13. Prompt payment of all bills.

14. All books audited annually in detail by the Church auditor.

15. Every dollar to go for the purpose for which it is given.

16. Opportunity given to add to regular benevolences when a benevolent enterprise is presented educationally on a regular occasion.

17. All business done in a business-like way, using checks, receipts, and other good business methods.

Do You Tithe?

Listen to the testimony of two of the women of our Church on this important matter.

Mrs. F. C. Coffin, Albany, Mo., writes: "I have proven to my own satisfaction, from my own experience, and from the experience of others in whom I have confidence, that tithing embodies a principle that naturally produces material, as well as spiritual, results for the giver, besides the great good it does in other ways. But in order to get such results, one must not give 'grudgingly nor of necessity,' nor with thought of personal gain in even the least sense. Tithing is orderly giving, and order is heaven's first law.' "

Mrs. W. M. Jay, Everett, Pa., says in a recent message: "To me, tithing is the only systematic way of giving; the tithe-box and its contents are sacred because they are the Lord's, and the joy comes in using it as we think the Lord would want it used. We are His stewards in life and service as well."

May we have your personal tithing testimony?

STEWARDSHIP READING CONTEST.

We arranged with Dr. W. H. Denison for a program of a model stewardship reading contest for the month of February. As this program would require too much space to include in this summary, we suggest that our Churches obtain a copy by writing to Dr. Denison, at Dayton, Ohio.

The pastor prepared for and helped during the contest. Our stewardship secretary, a very busy man, Mr. George Good, president of the Exchange Bank, served as general superintendent, and was keenly alive to the success of the contest.

We organized our congregation into twelve groups, divided these groups into two sides of six groups each, appointed a leader and an assistant leader for each group, and a captain for each side. The stewardship secretary, with the two captains, selected the group leaders and their assistants. They prepared a list of all the families of our congregation, divided these families into groups, assigned the leaders and assistants to each group, gave each side a name, and arranged the same number of readers for each side. Mr. J. L. Priddy was captain of the "Reds," and Mr. Guy Huber was captain of the "Blues." It would be difficult for any congregation to obtain two better captains than we had. They were on the job all the time, looking after their group leaders, and each urging his side forward to victory. The finest kind of co-operation of the group leaders and their assistants made splendid results possible.

Each reader was put upon his honor to report his credits to his group leader, who reported to the captain of his side, and each captain reported the total number of credits for his side by groups each Sunday, both captains urging weaker groups to obtain more credits, with an occasional word from the pastor. The interest was as keen as that of an automobile race as a side gained or lost credits each week. The pastor supplied both sides with literature. His study served as a clearing-house from which group leaders obtained literature, and to which they returned the same as soon as read, thus keeping reading material in circulation.

The material we used included everything published by the Layman Company of Chicago, the Herald of Gospel Liberty, the Christian Missionary, all denominational literature we could obtain, stewardship mottoes, Bible references, sixty-eight different stewardship booklets, in addition to the following books: "Money the Acid Test," "Church Finance," "You and Yours," "The Competent Church," "Modern Church Finance," "A Man and His Money," "The Christian and His Money Problem," "Studies in Stewardship," "The Larger Stewardship," "Stewardship for All of Life," "The New Christian," "The Victory of Mary Christopher," "Life as a Stewardship," "Woman and Stewardship." We also gave credits for attendance at Bible school, Christian Endeavor, preaching services and Church nights, at all of which some phase of stewardship was presented. We used readings, playlets, special articles, talks, discussions, and sermons. We gave special credits for all new and renewal subscriptions for both Herald of Gospel Liberty and the Christian Missionary. Attendance at all services increased.

A total number of 424 readers participated. There were ten new subscriptions and twenty-one renewals for the Herald, there were twelve new subscriptions and eighteen renewals for the Christian Missionary, or a total of sixty-one new and renewals for both. Fifty-three signed tithing pledges, and others will do so. We will have a special service soon, at which all who signed tithers' pledges will be guests of honor, and our tithers' honor roll will have a place of distinction. The contest concluded with a stewardship institute conducted by Dr. Denison Saturday night and three services on Sunday. Dr. Denison is the right man in the right place. He will be a benediction to every Church that will arrange such an institute. The total number of credits were 177,708 for the "Reds," and 174,609 for the "Blues."

Our thought was to get the most good out of the contest rather than penalize the side that lost. In keeping with this, we had a "Church Family Night," when an abundant supper was served, our orchestra rendered a beautiful concert, a program of live-wire subjects presented, and a social period enjoyed. All members were urged to attend, and those having been recently received into membership were the guests of honor. No financial consideration was connected with the occasion, as its purpose was a closer fellowship within our Church family. Mr. G. M. Gephart presided as toastmaster in his pleasing manner. As a result of this contest, the Church voted to pay for a lot, build and furnish a chapel in Porto Rico by September, 1925, and I have learned that when the First Christian Church of Warren undertakes a task it does it well. CENTENNIAL AT PLEASANT HILL.

BY EUGENE A. THOMPSON.

Sunday, May 17th, a centennial celebration and memorial service was held at Pleasant Hill, southern Alamance County. At 11 o'clock the service started with singing by the local choir. After a few brief remarks by the pastor, Rev. J. E. McCauley, he introduced Dr. W. A. Harper, who delivered the centennial address.

Dr. Harper delivered a forceful address, in which he paid tribute to the early founders of the Church who fought and conquered all opposition that the name of Christ might be carried forth. He gave the Church high praise for the progress it has made, and gave as a reason for this progress that it had always been optimistic.

The Church was warned not to be too proud of her achievements, nor to stand still, because "Pride goeth before destruction, and a haughty spirit before a fall"; also one who stands still impedes progress. After enumerating some of the problems of the past, Dr. Harper entered a plea for some of those facing the present generation. Among those of the present time, he called especial attention to the following five: (1) the problem of war and world peace; (2) racial prejudices as pertaining to individuals and nations; (3) the problems arising from industry as to capital and labor; (4) the right kind of environment for our children, so as to perpetuate our name as a Christian people; (5) a unity of Christian religion that can give facts upon the solution of the national and world problems of our time. This was an address filled with suggestions that fit the needs of the present time.

At the noon hour, a most sumptuous dinner was spread which was very much enjoyed by all. In the afternoon, Dr. Alexander, of Elon College, delivered the memorial sermon, after which a short service was held in the cemetery. After paying proper respect to those of former days, Dr. Alexander challenged the present generation to a life of honest labor and service, that the work they had started might be carried forth and the cause of Jesus Christ perpetuated unto the end of time.

The day was a most enjoyable one, and one to be long remembered in the minds of men. The crowd was said to be the largest ever assembled at Pleasant Hill on any occasion. Old acquaintances were renewed and many new ones made.

The following historical sketch of the Church was read by one of the local members at the morning service:

In the year 1783, Rev. John Allen, of Orange County, a member of the Christian Church and a faithful preacher of the gospel, began preaching in this section of the county, and was soon followed by preachers from different parts of the country. Their preaching was attended with power to the awakening and conversion of many souls. In 1824, Martin Staley got subscriptions for the purpose of building a meeting-house. The house, a one-room frame structure, located just opposite the cemetery from the present building, was built in 1825 and named pleasant Hill by Rev. Nicholas Barrons. From that time to this, regular preaching has been kept up.

Benjamin May and Shubal Evans were the first deacons of the Church. They were ordained in 1827 by Rev. John Allen, the founder of the Church. Up until 1829 no regular time was set for preaching except as men saw fit to conduct services. Upon the motion of Rev. Martin Staley, it was decided to hold a regular service the first Sunday in each month. The first Communion service was held the first Sunday in May, 1861, by Rev. E. W. Beale.

The Church has ever been active in all good works, for as far back as 1855 we have record of it paying money to the missionary society and also donating to the upkeep of THE CHRISTIAN SUN. The first Sunday School was organized the third Sunday in April, 1871, through the influence of Jacob Garrett, Malcom Murchison, and J. N. Farrel, pastor.

December 19, 1874, the idea of a new Church building was introduced. However, it was discussed both pro and con for seven years. Finally, in 1881, under the leadership of Rev. John T. Ball, pastor, the Church decided to build. W. G. Murchison, A. H. Way, and Christopher Teague were the men who had charge of the work. The new Church was a one-room frame house without the present Sunday School rooms and pulpit. It was completed in the early part of the year 1883, under the leader ship of J. W. Holt, pastor. W. G. Clements, a visiting minister, preached the sermon of dedication the first Sunday in September, 1883. The old Church building was sold by W. G. Murchison, trustee, for $16.50. The first sexton to receive pay for his service was William H. McPherson in 1884. He received $1.50 per year to be deducted from his Church assessments.

A centennial service was held the first Sunday in August, 1894, commemorating the one hundredth anniversary of the Christian Church, of which Pleasant Hill is a part. The cemetery was inclosed with a fence in 1901.

August 1, 1908, a committee was appointed to build a recess pulpit and paint the interior of the house. The work was completed in due time. The Sunday School rooms and entrance way at front of house were erected in 1913. Cement steps were built at front door in October, 1915. Chairs bought for pulpit in May, 1916. May 6, 1922, the idea of recovering and repainting the house, staining the pews, and building two Sunday School rooms was introduced. In due time, the house was recovered and pews stained, but the Church did not see fit to paint the house and build Sunday School rooms at this time. However, in 1924, a committee was appointed to build one room at each side of the Church, enlarge the Church windows, repaint the outside of building, and make such inside changes as they thought best for the Church. This work was completed in May, 1925.

The entire Christian Church is only 131 years old, so we see Pleasant Hill is one of the oldest Churches of the Christian denomination. The Church lot was deeded by Martin Staley in 1833. Lovina Vestal gave more land to enlarge the lot in 1859. The lot contains fourteen acres, more or less.

The total membership for the first sixty-five years was 371. The records were incomplete for a period of years during and after the Civil War; therefore, we can't tell the total membership for the whole history of the Church, but a rough estimate gives us between 800 and 1,000.

As before shown, John Allen, Martin Staley, and others had charge of the Church the first eight years. Louis Craven was the first regular employed pastor, at a salary of $9.80 per year. This was a larger salary, however, than some of the pastors received in later years. In all, there has been during the hundred years of Church history a total of thirty-nine different men served as pastors, besides a number of volunteer preachers and co-workers. Twenty-seven of these pastors served only one year. Three, namely: John Farrel, L. T. Cox, and P. H. Fleming, served as much as five years in one ministry. Alfred Isley served eight years, however, at five different times as pastor. A. Frank Isley served eight years in two ministries. L. T. Cox served the longest ministry of any one man, that of eight years. The average ministry of each pastor is 2.5 years. There are twelve preachers living now that have served as pastors. The only one to die while in service here was W. L. Hurley, who died in 1907.

The entire amount paid pastors is $5,706. The lowest salary that we have record of was eight dollars per year. The average yearly salary for the first twenty-five years was $11.23. There has been almost twice as much paid to pastors in the last thirty years as was paid in the first seventy years of the Church's life. The average salary for the whole one hundred years is $57.06.

There has been raised for pastors' salaries, orphanage, missions, and all other benevolent purposes in the last ten years the sum of $5,953. You see, more money has been raised for all purposes in the last ten years than was paid pastors in the whole one hundred years of Church history. The Western North Carolina Conference is composed of thirty-three Churches, and Pleasant Hill is one of them. Of this thirty-three, only three have a larger membership than Pleasant Hill, and six pay their pastors a larger salary. According to reports, the Church has made more progress in material things in the last twelve years than in all the eighty-eight previous to that time. We know that it has grown spiritually as well as materially, for there are more worthwhile members working in perfect harmony than at any time in past history. All worthwhile benevolent organizations receive such aid from here as we see fit to give.

The Sunday School, too, under the leadership of Mr. W. A. Harnaday, is in the most progressive state it has ever been. Located, as it is, in a field where "the harvest truly is plenteous" and under the leadership of its able and devoted pastor, Rev. J. E. McCauley, we see no reason why Pleasant Hill should not continue to grow in "the fear and admonition of the Lord."

WAKEFIELD NEWS.

Many things have happened since we last reported. Our revival was held in the latter part of April. The Christian Church and the Methodist Church in our town united their efforts and put on a ten-day campaign, the services being held in our Church and Rev. Rosco Jones, a Methodist minister of Cape Charles, did the preaching. His messages were well delivered and helpful. All business places closed for one hour in the afternoon, and the attendance, both in the afternoon and evening, was unusually large. Quite a number made their decision for Christ and united with the various Churches of the town, five being added to our Church.

May the 31st was a great day for the Churches of the Wakefield charge, i. e., Wakefield, Ivor, Barrett's and Burton's Grove. All four of these Churches met at the latter at 10 o'clock for a get-together day. The day was started with a union S. S., and there was a large number present. W. H. Clark, of the Wakefield Church, superintendent, and all enjoyed the service fine. At the 11 o'clock hour, Rev. H. E. Truitt, of Wavely, preached a fine sermon from the text "We are Laborers Together with God." He set forth some of the great things man, working with God, had been able to accomplish. His message was well delivered and well received. Following this, Rev. W. D. Howard led in the celebration of the Lord's Supper, this being a very impressive service. Then, for one hour and a half, the crowd enjoyed a fine dinner spread—and a dinner it was! Everybody spread their vitals they had brought together, and there was an abundance. At 2:30 the crowd reassembled for the afternoon service, the congregation was highly favored with two short talks by Revs. W. D. Howard and W. B. Fuller; these talks were short and to the point. Brother Howard spoke on "Copying the Master," and Bro. Fuller on "Union." It was a joy to all to have these brethren present, as both of them have labored in the field before. We esteemed it a great privilege as well as an houor to have Bro. Truitt with us also.

Following these short talks, a short business meeting was held, in which the Churches voted their pastor a month's vacation during the summer. Then it was unanimously decided that the four Churches would hold a fifth-Sunday meeting every fifth Sunday at one of the four Churches. The following officers were elected: president, R. E. Hines; vice-president, W. R. Clark; secretary, Mrs. C. H. Brittle; treasurer, E. W. Carrell. Program committee—Mrs. B. H. Laine, R. U. Laine, F. E. Branch, and Mrs. L. B. Faison, with the writer to assist.

The next meeting is to be held at Barrett's the fifth Sunday in August. We are looking forward to that day, and all the others, to make plans for a larger and more efficient Sunday School work. It is our aim to have some experienced Sunday School worker with us in every meeting to lecture on the best methods of Sunday School work. We are trying also to have our field well represented at the Summer School of Methods at Elon.

MOHAMMEDANISM SPLITS.

Rev. Mills Rodin, of Upsala, Sweden, who has been at work among the Moslems of Abyssinia, writes: "And what about the results of our mission work among Moslems? When the Swedish mission, about thirty years ago, began work among the Moslems of the Tigre tribes, they could hardly get any children in the schools. The Moslem parents ordered their children to look to the right side, and not to the left where we had our mission station, when they passed on the road. 'That place is dangerous,' they said, and it seems to have been so for Islam. Now the Moslem parents themselves are coming with the children to the school, and when the children wish to become Christians, their parents go forward with their children in the Church, and give them their blessing. They have seen in these thirty years that Christ makes them better than Mohammed—the old folks do not wish to change their religion, but they allow their children to do so. In Somali Land, we have about 250 Moslem converts; in Abyssinia there is a mass movement towards Christianity. About 7,000 of them have been baptized in the Abyssinian Church."—Alliance Weekly.

INTERNATIONAL UNIFORM SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON.

June 21, 1925.

Subject: "Peter Delivered from Prison."

Golden Text: "The angel of the Lord encampeth round about them that fear Him, and delivereth them."—Psa. 34:7.

Lesson: Acts 12:1-24.

Devotional Reading: Psa. 91:1-12.

Herod was doing his worst. He had already killed James, the brother of John, with a sword, and because he saw it pleased the Jews, he proceeded to take Peter also. Like many another man in high places, he loved to bask in the sunshine of popular approbation. And like many another man, he was willing to pay almost any price for cheap popularity. What mattered it if he did have blood on his hands! His course of action was pleasing to the Jews. And he layed his itching palms on Peter, the natural leader of the twelve. But even Herod had some compunctions of conscience. He was nominally a Jew—his grandmother, Mariamne, was a Jewess—and Herod was most scrupulous as to all Jewish observances. It would be all right from his standpoint to kill Peter at the end of the Passover, or after Easter, but it would be a vile breach of religious etiquette to kill him during the Passover. What strange freaks the minds of men play on them in order to justify their actions.

"Peter, therefore, was kept in prison." And there was nothing lax in Herod's method of imprisonment. Four squads of four men each were detailed to guard him. Furthermore, Peter was continually bound with heavy iron chains to two of the soldiers. As an extra precaution, he was confined to the inmost ward of the prison. Looking at it from the human standpoint, Peter's case was hopeless. It might be remarked in passing that, in spite of the stone walls and iron chains, Peter was perhaps the freest man in the jail. For stone walls and iron chains do not a prison make. He who is master of himself is freest of the free, while he who is a slave to himself is never free.

Yes, Peter was kept in prison, and his case did seem hopeless. But—and thereby hangs the tale —"prayer was made without ceasing of the Church unto God for him." In another part of the city, a little group of people, warm, personal friends of Peter, and devoted servants of God were setting in motion spiritual forces that should triumph over material things, and which should release and restore him whom they loved and whom the Church needed. Their prayer was a model one. It was earnest; it was united; it was specific; it was intercessory; it was born of faith, and it was directed unto God. Because it was all these things, it was effective. "The effectual, fervent prayer of a righteous man availeth much." The Master has said, "Ask and you shall receive," and the disciples took Him at His word. In all too many cases we have not, because we ask not.

On the night before the morrow on which he would have been brought forth, Peter's delivery took place. Peter evidently belonged to the "I Won't Worry Club," for he was sleeping soundly between two soldiers. He evidently knew whom he had believed, and believed that He was able to bring things to pass. What difference did it make anyhow, for as Peter later wrote, "If ye be reproached for the name of Christ, happy are ye; for the spirit of glory and of God restest upon you." And "If any man suffer as a Christian, let him not be ashamed; but let him glorify God on this behalf."

The spirit of glory and of God did rest upon him, for "An angel of the Lord stood by him and a light shined in the cell; and he smote Peter on the side and awoke him, saying: 'rise up quickly.' And his chains fell from his hands." Freed thus from his bonds, he was able to help himself, and he girded himself, bound on his sandals, gathered his garment about him, and followed the angel. It was a strange procession; so strange, indeed, that Peter did not believe that it could be true, but thought he saw a vision. "God works in mysterious ways his wonders to perform." On and on they went, pass the first guard, pass the second guard, even unto the iron gates that leadest into the city. And lo! it opened unto them, seemingly of its own accord. And they went out. When they had gone through one street, the angel parted from them. God helps men when they cannot help themselves; but He helps them to help themselves. God had helped Peter thus far; it was now up to Peter to help himself.

It may have been coincidence that Peter turned to the house of Mary, the mother of John Mark, "where many were gathered together and were praying." But it is not difficult to believe that Peter was led as truly by the spirit of God as when the angel walked by his side. He had had a great experience, and he wanted to share that experience with those with whom he had so much in common. But may it not be that God wanted to teach His children about to set out on the task of evangelizing the world, that more things are wrought by prayer than this world dreams of.

Now, we come to the strange part of it all. Here were men and women praying earnestly that Peter might be spared, and now that he had been spared and presents himself to them, they do not believe that it is he. In fact, he had a difficult time in convincing them that it was he. "And they were amazed." We are sometimes baffled when God does not answer our prayers. In all too many cases we are amazed when He does answer them. As a matter of fact, no sincere prayer offered in humble faith ever is unanswered. God simply answers according to His will and our needs, and not always according to our understanding and our wishes.

"And he departed and went to another place." Spiritual experiences are not ends in themselves; they are simply the preparation for larger service.

Prayer for strength to overcome temptation, doubt, hatred, fear, misfortune, selfishness.

Song: "I Would be True," or "Lead On, O King Eternal."

Leader: Wait on the Lord: be of good courage, and He shall strengthen thine heart.

Assembly: They that wait on the Lord shall renew their strength; they shall mount up with wings as eagles; they shall run and not be weary; they shall walk, and not faint.—From Hymnal of American Youth.

Suggestions for the Leader's Talk.

Did you ever see any one run in a hurdle race, when you wondered if they would get over the next one all the way through the race? You wondered if they could possibly go over each one and win the race. You also wondered if they would come out of the race unhurt. The same thing is true of life, which many people choose to call a race. People are constantly meeting obstacles, and either overcoming them or losing out because they fail to overcome them. Some people come out the winner, not only unhurt, but stronger; while others may come out maimed.

Overcoming obstacles is largely a matter of attitude toward life and depends a great deal on one's spirit in regard to meeting them. Here we may distinguish between the optimist and the pessimist. The optimist thinks he can, and this is half the battle. He is constantly looking for the best, and is, therefore, likely to find the best. The pessimist (who sees the hole in the doughnut rather than the doughnut) is not looking for the best; he constantly thinks he can't do things; he hasn't confidence in himself or others; he is afraid to meet facts and face them. He is constantly sidestepping the issue. It is largely, after all, a matter of courage. It is well to think that things always happen for the best, but this can be carried too far if one takes from this moral responsibility for the individual. Each person must fight his battles for himself, and the great joy and comfort in this is the fact that we can commune personally with a loving Father—one who cares for the way we live our lives. Who of us has not been the better person after overcoming some obstacle?

Some Obstacles which We May Meet.

It may be bad health. Many people have been able to overcome this through taking good care of themselves and being cheerful along with it. Others have to overcome a bad temper, a selfish disposition, egotism, carelessness, doing things on the impulse of the moment without thinking of the consequences, thoughtless of others, fear and impatience. All of these may be overcome through patience, a willingness to do it, regardless of how hard it may seem, a reliance on God for strength, and confidence in one's own power to do it.

Christian Orphanage

My dear Friends:

We were very much gratified with the splendid grades our children made in the graded school this year, especially on deportment. Many of them made "A" and "A-plus" during the term.

Last September, when the school opened, we offered a prize to the boy or girl who made the best grades for the entire year, both in deportment and in each study. While many of our children made excellent grades, Clarence McKinney seems to have won the prize. Clarence is a most excellent boy, and worked hard and came out at the end of the school year with the record of "A" and "A-plus" on deportment for the entire year, and only one "B" and one "C" during the year on his studies, making "B-plus," "A," and "A-plus" on the rest of his work.

We are happy to add to our list of monthly contributions this week Elk Spur S. S., our mountain mission, with an offering of $7.50—perfectly grand! We have promised our dear friend, Dr. Atkinson, to go with him some time this year to visit this people. We want to meet them and worship with them. May God's richest blessing rest upon Bro. Sorrell in his great work in this field.

We want to call the attention of our Churches to the special Easter offering. If you have not sent it in, please do so. We depend upon this offering to tide us through the summer months. Don't forget us, please.

Then the pretty new building—you know you want a part in it! See to it that your Church raises the small amount it has been asked to raise to help finance the building. Let us raise it and send it in at the earliest date possible. We can do it. Let us all pull together for the little fatherless children and do a real living service in the Master's vineyard.

FAMILY ALTAR

CONDUCTED BY REV. H. E. ROUNTREE,
Our Chaplain in the United States Navy.

MONDAY.

"Oh! that my ways were established to observe Thy statutes."—Ps. 119:5.

To travel on, unceasingly—
This is my prayer;
To journey on, though I may be
No flying bit of destiny;
To take the path God marks for me,
Though it lead anywhere!

To travel on, as happily
As life permits—
This is the prayer, I ask, today
On bended knee.
God points the way—
A way that, through His mercy, fits
My every need. —Anon.

O Lord, establish our footsteps in Thy way, and let not iniquity come nigh us. Prosper, we pray Thee, our going forth, and have mercy on us. Let it be known every step of the way that Thou art God, and we Thy servants. Preserve us and make Thy face to shine on us in loving-kindness. Amen.

TUESDAY.

THE CHRIST FOR A YOUNG MAN.

Let me introduce you to the most attractive, most delightful man in the world. You have never heard Him as He really is; all the pictures ever drawn misrepresent Him. They have made Him out a weakling, a woman's features with beard—He who for thirty years swung an adz and drove a saw through heavy timbers, who for long days tramped the borders of His loved lake and would not sleep indoors if He could slip away into His garden.

An outdoor man He was; a man's man, who could stand watch when all His friends deserted Him in sleep and could face the tempest in a little boat calm-eyed and unafraid.

They have called Him a pacifist. How could they forget the day, I wonder, when in the midst of the hard-faced crowd He stood, and braiding a little whip, drove them out before Him?

Think you it was only the glance of righteous anger in His eye that sent them scurrying? I tell you that behind that little whip were muscles of iron, made strong by many years of labor, and a spirit that never once knew fear, not even in the presence of the cross.

They killed Him, of course, in the end, and sometimes I am almost glad—glad that He died at thirty-three, with youth still athrob in His veins and never an illusion lost or an ideal dimmed by age. Claim Him, you who are young and love life; let no man dispute your claim.

For He, too, was young, and is; He, too, loved laughter and life.

Old age and the creeds have had Him too long; I offer Him now to you (not in deed, but in truth) —Jesus of Nazareth, the joyous companion, the young man whom young men can love.—Bruce Barton.

Prayer.—Our Father, give unto us the vision to see Christ, Thy Son, as He is; to know Him in His grace and love, and to share in the fullness of His life today. Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

THE IMPORTANCE OF THOUGHTS.

"Whatsoever things are true, whatsoever things are honorable, whatsoever things are just, whatsoever things are pure, whatsoever things are lovely, whatsoever things are of good report, if there be any virtue, and if there be any praise, think on these things."—Phil. 4:8.

"We learn that any person who will not accept what he knows to be truth, for the very love of truth alone, is very definitely undermining his mental integrity. It will be observed that the mind of such a person gradually stops growing, for, being constantly hedged in and cropped here and there, it soon learns to respect artificial fences more than freedom of growth.

"You have not been a very close observer of such men if you have not seen them shrivel, become commonplace, mean, without influence, without friends and without the enthusiasm of youth and growth, like a tree covered with fungus, the foliage diseased, the life gone out of the heart with dry-rot, and indelibly marked for destruction—dead, but not yet handed over to the undertaker."—Luther Burbank.

Prayer.—Our Father, help us to keep the ideals ever before us, looking to Jesus, the author and finisher of faith. Direct our thoughts toward that which is holy. Make us right in all things. In His name we ask it."—Amen.

THURSDAY.

"God is Love."—Jno. 4:8; 1 Cor. 13.

"Love is the only bow on life's dark cloud. It is the morning and the evening star. It shines upon the cradle of the babe, and sheds its radiance upon the quiet tomb. It is the mother of art, inspirer of poet, patriot and philosopher. It is the air and light of every heart, builder of every home, kindler of every fire on every hearth. It was the first dream of immortality. It fills the world with melody, for music is the voice of love. Love is the magician, the enchanter, that changes worthless things to joy, and makes right royal kings and queens of common clay. It is the perfume of the wondrous flower—the heart—and without that sacred passion, that divine swoon, we are less than beasts; but with it, earth is heaven and we are gods."—Robert G. Ingersoll.

Why didn't Ingersoll say, "God is love?" God is the great underlying, wonderful central channel in which are found the purist elements of beauty that we can offer to the soul. In it, wrong passes away, ugliness is lost, and everything transformed to beauty.

The love of God does not confound the sinners with sin, but raises one to heights where feeblest intentions and the least gesture calls forth His presence.

This means that we shall not be able to tell where the star leaves off and the sky of ordinary thought begins, and in His love we shall walk together in a goodness that shall ever become more and more living, loftier and loftier until complete in Him.

Prayer.—Our Father, nothing shall separate us from the love of Christ; may His love constrain us to love, too, and to do our part to fill the world with love. In His name we ask it. Amen.

FRIDAY.

SINGING THE SONGS OF ZION.

"If I forget thee, O Jerusalem."—Psa. 137:1.

It was a genial day in early summer, and the human beehives on the lower East Side of New York had disgorged their denizens. Grand Street was thronged. Baby carriages and pushcarts, trucks and automobiles—what a medley of noises! With the street clangor and the pounding of Second Avenue elevated trains, however, something else was interwoven. It was the voice of a man, singing in a deep, resonant voice. The singer, an elderly Jew, stood by his pushcart, a veritable fruit-store on wheels. He sang in Yiddish, and the words were: "If I forget thee, O Jerusalem, let my right hand forget her skill."

Unmindful of the multitude, the man sang on to the end of the psalm. It was enough to make a Christian pause and think. Here was one who could hardly have a hope of ever again seeing his beloved Jerusalem, the city of his fathers. An alien in a strange land—lately come from Russia—he held to his faith and spiritual vision.

We, who are Christians, might well interrogate ourselves. It is not hard—nay, it is impossible not to sing when the heart has faith. When questioned, the singer affirmed his faith that God would yet restore Israel to the land of his fathers. Could we, under similar conditions, hold fast to the ideal and make melody unto the Lord?—Rev. John Harrison Allen.

Prayer.—That we, too, may learn to love the song of Zion, and of the glorious Redeemer who gave His life for us.

SATURDAY.

NEVER GIVE UP.

"And he spake a parable unto them to this end, that men ought always to pray and not to faint." —Luke 18:1; Philip. 4:6-7.

"Not to faint" means never to lose heart, never to give up. Jesus was always inspiring men with hope and courage. In one way or another, He was always telling men, "fear not; only believe."

Here is Luke 18:1-8, this counsel is joined to the exhortation to pray and a parable which beautifully illustrates its meaning. In every danger and difficulty, we are to pray; and we are to keep on praying. Our prayer has not fallen upon unhearing ears nor reached an unfeeling heart. Even now the Father may be answering, and He will not fail us, however great the delay.

This is one of the most needed and helpful truths Jesus ever uttered. In one form or another, the temptation to doubt, to fear, to lose heart, and grow weary and give up, is present with us all; but in whatever form this temptation comes, we may hold it up against this great teaching of the Son of Man who was the Son of God, and in the light of His life and counsel, the power of the temptation will dwindle away. In the midst of earth's trials and hardships, He bids us go sturdily on, believing that God will surely answer prayer and in His own way make things come right.—Rev. George W. Barton.

Prayer.—Lord's Prayer, all the circle joining.

SUNDAY.

THE LIFE FARTHER ON.

"I am he that liveth, and was dead; and, behold, I am alive for evermore."—Rev. 1:19.

The hand of Thorwaldsen lost cunning when he had once acquired a masterpiece that satisfied him. If life were finished here, what an insignificant thing it would be! Time is only the infinitessimal arc of an infinite circle.

Once there lived one who did His best, who used every ounce of His energy for the highest ends; and dying in shame and anguish, He cried with a loud voice, "It is finished!" What did He mean? That His life had ended? Oh, no! for "He that was dead is alive for evermore." That His holy empire had come to naught? No; for He sat in heaven, "expecting, until His enemies shall be made His footstool."

Nothing was ended but the beginning. Shall the servant do better than his Lord? This life is an apprenticeship at best. Blessed is he who lays foundations here for success in the life farther on.—Rev. David James Burrell.

Prayer.—Lord's Prayer, all the circle joining.

An earthquake in western Japan has caused a loss of life estimated at 500 and the injury of 1,000. The property loss was placed at from $30,000,000 to $40,000,000.

Kiddies' Korner

MADGE FLEMING MOFFITT, Editor.

Dear Kiddies:

Well, well! how do you do?

How is all the warm weather anyway? It's too wonderful to be able to go swinning; it's wonderful to see all the beautiful earth covered in bloom—pink roses and white blossoms. Oh, my! it's all just wonderful, dears!

Some of us are thinking about vacation time. Some of us are thinking about "Children's Day," too—that's fun for every one. Now, what shall we have this "Children's Day?" Miss Coghill is sending out some beautiful verses, and she wants all the prettiest and sweetest and best little folks to learn them; and, why, of course, dears, say them at your "Children's Day" program.

All the wee-wee little folks in our Church here are giving their mothers a party—a real cradle roll party, with pretty speeches and funny games—and, oh yes, ice cream; all they can hold, too! Sometimes all the cradle roll babies cry—cry out loud and all at once, too! Um-mm, it's the loudest crying you ever heard; but, dears, it's the very best cradle roll, and the prettiest babies on the cradle roll you ever saw. We love them, whether they cry or not; in fact, they wouldn't be babies if they didn't cry, of course, and what do you think! Some grown-up folks gave these precious wee folks a brand-new piano for their baby room. Not a great big ol' piano made for tall mothers and fathers to sing by, but a wee, tiny piano, made for little folks to sing by. Isn't that good news?

Good-by for today, then, Kiddies.

Your editor,

MADGE F. MOFFITT.

FINE WEATHER FOR DUCKS.

By Winifred L. Bryning.

"Oh dear, I hope that it will not rain!"
Said little Bob to his sister, Jane;
"For we must carry the eggs today
To Auntie Megg at Silver Bay."

"O dear, I hope that the sun will hide!"
Said a little duck by the riverside,
"Because I should like to swim and play;
And I can't abide a sunny day!"

Then a few drops fell, and Bob and Jane
Both sadly feared 'twas going to rain;
But the little duck was very gay,
Because he loved a rainy day.

The children walked to Auntie Megg's,
And left with her the nice, fresh eggs;
They didn't like the sloppy wet,
But they were good and didn't fret.

The ducklet saw them as they came back.
He flapped his wings and cried, "Quack, quack!
The weather's fine, so fine today!
Come into the water, and let us play!"

DUTY FIRST.

The summer noonday sun shone broadly and brightly over the hay-fields. The birds sang in the trees. The rabbits ran in and out of the hollows. The insects hummed overhead. The merry little brook went tumbling along, and the fish came leaping out every now and then, their silver sides flashing in the warm light. In the hayfields, the mowers were busy and borne on the gentle wind, softened to a musical murmur, came the voices of the men and the sharpening of their scythes. Ben and his little cousins, Jenny and Jake, were as happy and bright-hearted this bright summer's day as any three children could possibly be. They were in the middle of an exciting game, when Ben heard his mother calling him, and ran to the house to see what she wanted.

"Ben, dear," she said, "It is your father's dinner time, and I have made him some stew. He is working in Farmer Rix's hayfield, and I should be glad if you would take his dinner. Here it is in this little pail. Be careful not to spill any of it, my boy, for it is not often that I can afford to buy meat nowadays."

Ben took the pail and started back, but on his way met some boys. Setting the pot down in a corner of the fence, he began to play with them. It was a good two hours before he remembered the errand on which he had been sent. The game had been so full of fun that the thought of his poor father working in the hot sun had quite escaped his memory.

"Oh, dear me!" he cried suddenly; "how stupid I've been! I don't know what father will say at being kept waiting so long, and the broth is all cold."

When he got to where his father was at work, he saw him standing by the fence, talking to his mother. Both looked anxious, but brightened up when they saw Ben. His father, after waiting some time for his dinner, had gone home, and there heard that Ben had started so long before with the dinner they feared he had got lost or hurt in some way, and his mother had come back to help find him. Mrs. Brown felt very sad when she heard the truth, but thought that Ben's sorrow was punishment enough.

Ben resolved then and there that he would always make duty come before pleasure. We are happy to say that Ben kept his resolution, and through life he found that the happiest, as well as the safest, motto was "Duty First."

THE DAFFODILS.

"It isn't raining rain to me,
It's raining daffodils;
In every dimpled drop I see
Wild flowers on the hills.
The clouds of gray engulf the day
And overwhelm the town—
It isn't raining rain to me,
It's raining roses down.

"It isn't raining rain to me,
But fields of clover bloom,
Where any buccaneering bee
May find a bed and room.
A health unto the happy,
A fig for him who frets—
It isn't raining rain to me,
It's raining violets."

THE WAVES.

"I cannot do it alone,
The waves run fast and high,
And the fogs close chill around,
And the light goes out in the sky
But I know that we two
Shall win in the end—
Jesus and I.

"Coward and wayward and weak,
I change with the changing sky;
Today so eager and brave,
Tomorrow, too feeble to try;
But He never gives in,
So we two shall win—
Jesus and I."

The worm story was never referred to by anybody, but Hugh remembers it to this day, although he has grown to be a man, and one day when he was talking to young people he told the whole story, warning the boys to keep out the little sins so that there would be none to grow into great serpents.—Arkansas Methodist.

PUGH.

Mrs. M. E. Pugh died at her home, in Morrisville, May 20th, in her sixty-eighth year. Her children were all with her when the end came. She was a member of the Morrisville Christian Church, and was faithful to her Church, but had not been able to attend services in the past two years. She was a good friend, neighbor and mother. A good woman has left us. She will be greatly missed in her Church, community and home. Her former pastor, Rev. W. C. Wicker, conducted her funeral. Many of her friends and relatives gathered to pay the last tribute of respect to this good woman. Her body was laid to rest in the family burying-ground.

We bow in humble submission to God, who makes no mistakes but doeth all things well. Her grave was covered with beautiful flowers. How sweet it will be in that beautiful land so free from all sorrow and pain to meet those who have gone before! FRIEND.

WILSON.

Sudden death came to a number of men in a mine near Comnock, on May 27th. In this number was David J. Wilson, the son of Henry Wilson. He was brought home and placed in the cemetery to rest until the judgment. He was born February 2, 1894; was killed May 27, 1925; age, 31 years 3 months and 25 days. He leaves a father, brothers and sisters, and many friends and associates to mourn his departure. He was buried at New Center Christian Church, the service being conducted by the pastor, assisted by Rev. W. E. Farmer and Rev. H. F. Way.

W. J. EDWARDS.

WHITE.

Miss Ora White, Moncure, N. C., R. F. D. 1, departed this life on Wednesday, May 13, 1925, and her body was impressively buried at Center Grove Church on the following Friday. She was nearing her forty-fourth birthday. Two brothers and one sister survive. They are Rev. T. E. White, Graham, N. C.; Grover White, Siler City, and Miss Notie, Moncure, R. R. 1.

She became a member of Center Grove Christian Church in early life, and during my pastorate of six years no member has been more deeply interested in and loyal to that Church than was she. She had no compromise for what she believed to be sinful, but was quick to observe and praise the goodness of others.

Many of her friends from several sections of the State attended her funeral.

B. J. HOWARD.

JOHNSON—KNIGHT.

Mr. O. C. Johnson and Miss Hazel Elizabeth Knight were united in marriage by the writer at the home of the bride's parents, in Rockingham County, N. C., May 23, 1925, in the presence of a few relatives and friends.

The ring ceremony was used. Mr. Johnson is principal of Alamance High School, and Mrs. Johnson is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Knight, of Stokesdale, N. C.

They left for a trip to the mountains of western North Carolina. On their return, Mr. Johnson will be connected with Guilford County Board of Health, and Mrs. Johnson will continue work with the Jefferson Life Insurance Company, a position she has held for the past three years.

We join their host of friends in wishing that their wedded life may be long and happy. J. W. KNIGHT.

THE SOUTHERN SERVES THE SOUTH

Whose interest in the Southern is greatest?

We who are devoting our lives in the service of this railroad like to call it ours.

The investors who have put their faith and money into it to make it an efficient transportation machine—they speak of it as theirs.

And you who travel on it, whose goods it carries, and whose business depends on its regular service day in and day out —are you not entitled to call it yours?

We all have a feeling of pride and proprietorship in the Southern, and it is through the cooperative efforts of all of us that it has come to be the great railway system that it is.

This spirit will build a greater Southern to serve a greater South.

SOUTHERN RAILWAY SYSTEM

CATECHISM.

6. How can we please God?

By doing our duty towards Him and towards our fellow-men.

7. What is our duty to God?

To fear and honor Him, to love and serve Him, to pray for His mercy, and praise Him for His blessings.

8. What is our duty to man?

To obey our parents and those in authority over us, and to be honest in the sight of all men, loving them as ourselves, and doing them all the good we can.

9. What shall we gain by serving God?

We shall become His children, and have Him for our Father and friend forever.

10. What if we do not fear God, nor seek His favor?

His wrath will come upon the children of disobedience.

11. Why should we fear the wrath of God?

Because He is able to destroy both soul and body in hell.

12. But have we not already sinned against Him?

Yes; we have all, even the least of us, sinned and come short of the glory of God.

13. What do we mean by sin against God?

To do what we ought not to do, or to leave undone what we ought to do.

14. Will God excuse us, as we have already sinned against Him?

Yes; if we repent of our sins, and ask Him to pardon them for Christ's sake.

III. The Law of God.

1. What law has God given to man?

He has given us the law of the Ten Commandments, which are summed up in two commandments in the New Testament.

2. What is the First Commandment?

I am Jehovah thy God, who brought thee out of the land of Egypt, out of the house of bondage. Thou shalt have no other gods before me.

3. What does the First Commandment teach?

That we must love God more than all things else.

4. What is the Second Commandment?

Thou shalt not make unto thee a graven image, nor any likeness of anything that is in heaven above, or that is in the earth beneath, or that is in the water under the earth: thou shalt not bow down thyself unto them, nor serve them; for I, Jehovah thy God, am a jealous God, visiting the iniquity of the fathers upon the children, upon the third and upon the fourth generation of them that hate me, and showing lovingkindness unto thousands of them that love me and keep my commandments.

5. What does the Second Commandment teach?

That we must not make any image or picture of God, or any other being, to be the instrument of worship, and that we must worship in spirit and in truth, avoiding all superstition.

6. What is the Third Commandment?

Thou shalt not take the name of Jehovah thy God in vain; for Jehovah will not hold him guiltless that taketh His name in vain.

LASSITER.

The home of Mrs. Spencer Lassiter was saddened on May 27th when the death angel called her father, Mr. Jim Lassiter from labor to reward. Mr. Lassiter was 72 years of age. He married Miss Demarius Huff many years ago, and to them were given three children, namely: Sue, Tom, and Jessie. The last-named died while young. The other two still survive. His wife preceded him to the grave more than six years ago. He had been a member of Liberty, Vance, Christian Church for many years. His health had been failing for some time, and the hand of affliction rested heavily upon him. These light afflictions worked out for him a great blessing, as God used them in a loving way to draw him nearer to Jesus. Mr. Lassiter expressed himself as being ready and willing to go when the call should come. He told his loved ones good-by and requested them to meet him in heaven.

The funeral service was conducted from his Church by the pastor, Rev. J. E. Franks, assisted by Rev. A. H. Hook, of Henderson. The body was laid to rest to await the coming of our Lord. He leaves to mourn their loss two children, ten grandchildren, fifteen great-grandchildren, a host of relatives and a large number of friends. May each of these realize that God's grace is sufficient to help in time of sorrow. The beautiful floral tribute was a token of how they loved him. May God comfort the bereaved ones is the wish of the writer.

MRS. R. J. NEWTON.

By Rev. S. M. Lynam.

SEEING WHAT ABRAHAM SAW.—

Sir Frederick Kenyon, director of the archeological expedition, maintained by the British Museum and the University of Pennsylvania, reports that his expedition has discovered sights with which Abraham must have been familiar in the days when he dwelt in Ur of the Childees. A limestone tablet tells how King Er-Engur set up the tower of the temple of the moon god in the year 2300 B. C., and many documents concerning those times are now in the hands of the excavators. These treasures ought to add much to our knowledge of the Old Testament and lead us out into larger realms of truth.

A WORTHY EFFORT.—

One thousand students of the University of Washington have petitioned the regents of that institution for the abolition of compulsory military drill. They point out that the law does not require that the drill be compulsory, but that it be offered. The student movement has the endorsement of the Seattle Fellowship, an organization working in the interest of peace, in which Dr. Sidney Strong, a well-known Congregationalist minister, has born a conspicuous part. The Washington students may have other reasons for desiring the abolition of compulsory military drill, but, nevertheless, men untrained for war, will not so much desire war. A military organization, well trained, is as dangerous as high explosives in the hands of a child, and it is sooner or later sure to cause trouble. Whatever reasons the students may have, the ultimate effect, we think, would be healthful to the nation and to the cause of peace.

COOLIDGE SPEAKS.—

President Coolidge says but little. He has a reputation for silence, but when he does speak he says something—a thing which many might immitate. In his speech at Arlington Cemetery, on Memorial Day, he said things on which we might think. He pointed out that the government seemed to many to be a back on which all sorts of things were unloaded; but he reminded the States that the Constitution reserved to the States a great many very important duties. Law enforcement, education and the protection and taxation of property are all duties of the several States. He then chided the States for lack of adequate law enforcement, pointing out that we have in this country eight times as many murders every year as does Great Britain, and five times as many as does France. Our burglaries are in the same proportion. He remarked that much ought to be done at home before we undertake the government and direction of other countries. We feel much like the President, and we recommend his suggestions to others.

TROTZKY EMPLOYED.—

While the returned Trotzky has been excluded from the Cabinet position of the Russian government, which would have readmitted him to the governing counsel, he has been placed where his restless energy and tremendous organizing ability may mean most to the Russian people, and where he will at the same time be excluded from the political field until Stalin and the rest whom Trotzky's frank criticisms have offended see fit to reinstate him. He has been made head of the technical division of the Supreme Counsel of National Economy. Dzerzhinskie is now head of the counsel, and it is rumored that he will probably be succeeded in this position by Trotzky. The executive ability of Dzerzhinskie, which organized the secret police, is badly needed elsewhere.

The first problem which Trotzky will attack in his new position is that of the hydro-electric development of Russia. This was one of Lenin's most cherished schemes, and he believed that it would restore the industrial stability of Russia. Russia has suffered much, and is suffering much, but she is trying out a great thing, and if she succeeds, the cost will be as nothing to the gain which will accrue to the world by a new idea in a socialized democracy toward which all men have turned their eyes through all the ages.

A GREAT CAMPAIGN COMPLETED.—

Union Theological Seminary has completed its great campaign to raise four million dollars. The commencement was a time of rejoicing over this fact. The largest single gift during the campaign was made by Edward S. Harkness, who gave a million and a quarter dollars. John D. Rockefeller gave considerably more than a million, and others gave largely. There were fourteen thousand five hundred contributors to the fund coming from thirty-five States and fifteen foreign countries. About a million and a half of this amount will be used in building. The plans call for a refectory, an apartment house for returned missionaries and their families wishing to spend a year in study, and the John Crosby Brown Memorial Tower, which will be erected on the corner of 120th Street and Broadway, overlooking the entire group of buildings owned by the seminary, teachers' college, and Columbia University. The tower will be eleven stories high, and will add thirty per cent to the class-room space of the seminary. The apartment house will have thirty apartments. These additions will guarantee to the students, made up from thirty-nine denominations, and their professors an adequate plant for the reverent search for truth and the effort to apply the gospel of Christ to every phase of human life. The Union Theological Seminary ought now to render an even greater service, if such a thing be possible. New York, with its many types of society and its problems, will aid as a laboratory for the work of the seminary. Christianity needs more schools like this one to train men adequately for the biggest task in the world—that of making mankind understand the matchless love of God and bringing them to respond to it.

THE OIL LEASES AGAIN.—

More than a year ago now, the newspapers were full of the Teapot Dome oil investigations, brought about by the discovery of frauds perpetrated under the Harding administration in the Department of the Interior, at the head of which was Albert B. Fall. The investigation resulted, at the time, in the resignation of Harry M. Daugherty, Attorney-General, and Edwin Denby, Secretary of the Navy. The oil leases then under investigation were held by Harry F. Sinclair and E. L. Doheny, great oil magnates. Court proceedings were instituted to cancel the leases, and in that effort the United States has been successful. Federal Judge Paul J. McCormick has just handed down a decision, ordering that the leases of naval reserve oil fields No. 1 be turned over, together with contracts for the construction of oil-storage bases at Pearl Harbor, Hawaii, for cancellation. A master in chancery will be appointed to adjust matters with the Doheny interests, who will be expected to pay for all oil taken from the Elk Hills, Calif., fields, and who will be paid for all construction work done. This order is based on the fact that E. L. Doheny, Harry F. Sinclair, and Albert B. Fall conspired to defraud the government, and that the exchange of one hundred thousand dollars made voidable all contracts, leases and other grants. The second ground was that the transfer of discretionary powers from the Department of the Navy to that of the Interior was not within the power of President Harding, and is, therefore, null. On the day before this decision, Fall, Doheny, and Sinclair were indicted on another charge of conspiracy to defraud. This takes the place of a former indictment which was thrown out of court, and does not charge bribery, but it does show the transfer of more than two hundred and fifty thousand dollars' worth of Liberty Bonds by the Continental Trading Company to the account of Albert B. Fall. The Continental Trading Company is believed to be a dummy company, organized by the oil interests to serve their ends. Let us hope that those responsible for corruption in high places will be brought to full justice.

NOTES-PERSONALS

Our Christian forces lost a loyal and always helpful layman, as well as a faithful and devout Christian gentleman in the death of Bro. John King, at Suffolk, Va., Monday, P. M. June 8th.

Burlington Christian Church has received 128 members so far, as a result of the Ham-Ramsay meeting, which makes a total membership in this Church of 620. Other Churches of Burlington likewise received large additions, and the whole city was greatly revived.

One wonders if writers to Church papers, to magazines and in books consider the weight of Roy S. Durstine's words about the worth of the first paragraph. "Careful writers realize that if a first paragraph isn't good, it doesn't matter much what goes into the second paragraph, because mighty few people will read that far."

Sunday, June 7th, was "Memorial Day" at Pleasant Grove, Halifax County, Va. It was a great and good occasion. There were two services, which enabled old friends and acquaintances to have sweet and renewed fellowship. It was indeed a joy and a privilege to THE SUN's editor, a former pastor, to be present and see once more in the flesh the dear friends of other days.

Miss Margaret Alston, Henderson, N. C., of Liberty Church, as president of the Vance-Warren Missionary District, went recently with several associates to Mt. Gilead, Franklin County, and organized a Woman's Missionary Society in that Church. First Sunday in July she goes with her associates from Liberty to Antioch and Bethlehem, in Warren County, to organize the work there.

Word has just been received that Mr. W. F. Corwith, Brooklyn, N. Y., died June 10th, and will be buried June 14th. Bro. Corwith was a trustee and most liberal friend of Elon College, as well as of all the college enterprises and institutions of the Christian Church. He is the type of Christian layman we most need, and his decease is a serious loss to our cause.

In the decease of Bro. John King, of Suffolk, our Christian Church loses more than an ordinary layman. His addresses at annual Conferences and on many other special occasions were always heard with deep interest and to great profit. His able advocacy of tithing and stewardship helped many into the blessed fellowship and experience of Christian liberality. "Elon Letter" this week pays just tribute to this Christian gentleman and devout man of God.

Rev. J. M. Roberts is highly gratified at the progress and promise of the Church at Cypress Chapel, Va. The new building is rapidly going up, and is to be one of the most ample, inviting and adequate rural Churches in the Conference. This is as it should be, since Cypress is one of our oldest Churches and has on its roll of members some of the best and most loyal men and women anywhere to be found.

Suffolk has on a campaign to raise funds to enlarge or rebuild the Christian Church. Count on it that when Suffolk Christians are done with it, there will be a Church edifice and equipment adequate for every need of that growing congregation, and an inspiration to other sections and cities. Suffolk Christians never do any Church work and kingdom service by halves. They go the limit in all good work and may be depended upon in this instance.

One of our loyal and liberal laymen, cashier of a bank in Alabama, very thoughtfully writes relative to our $20,000 emergency mission fund: "I feel sure that the $20,000 can be raised this year. It must be raised! We can never retrench in our mission work. If we do, our Church, as a whole, will finally retrench, and I feel that we have men and women in our Church big enough to carry on the work already begun." To which the editors and thousands of others will give a most hearty amen.

It is learned with real joy that Damascus Church, Gates County, N. C., and Oak Grove, of the same county, contemplate uniting as congregations, sell or dispose of their old properties and unite in building a house of worship in the neighboring town of Sunbury. Dr. W. W. Staley, pastor of Damascus, and Rev. J. M. Roberts, pastor of Oak Grove, both speak highly of the project and think that it will be carried out by the unanimous vote of both congregations. We have not the least doubt but that the future will highly justify the wisdom of the movement.

Rev. D. A. Long, D. D., writing June 8th, says: "Notwithstanding the dry, warm weather, many people were at New Providence, Graham, yesterday. They were there not only from Alamance County, but from Greensboro, Raleigh, Durham, Goldsboro, Winston-Salem, Statesville and other places. Mr. James Harden, in a very impressive manner, read a tribute to Wm. Samuel Long. Bro. White's tribute to Jacob Allen Long and Jeremiah W. Holt, and Mr. Parker's tribute to Benjamin F. Long were all interesting and kept the attention of the large audience. I preached for Bro. White at Providence last night. One profession of faith and the man immediately joined the Church. He is eighty-one."

We congratulate President Beougher, of Bethlehem College, and those who assisted him in presenting to the public in such neat, substantial and attractive form the catalogue number of Bethlehem College Bulletin. It is the June number and carries more than fifty pages. Besides carrying a catalogue of feats and features already accomplished; it is also the third annual announcement, giving course of study, calendar, etc., for the scholastic year '25-'26. The frontispiece is a cut of the handsome proposed new administration building. The roster of the faculty carries fourteen names. The courses of study offered should attract those in reach of the college, and the Bulletin shows a plant of which the Church is naturally and pardonably proud.

The following announcement will be read with interest by the many friends of the young couple: "C. Graydon Foushee, Elsie Marie Garner, married, Sunday, May 10, 1925, Elon College, N. C." Mrs. Foushee has made her home at Elon College for the past two years, holding a position as secretary to Chas. D. Johnston, superintendent of the Christian Orphanage. Mrs. Foushee is a very attractive young woman and was reared at the Knights of Pythias Orphanage, Clayton, N. C., and received her education here. She will continue her work here until the fall opening of school, when they will leave for Atlanta, Ga., where Mr. Foushee goes to complete his course in dental surgery. He is a man of splendid ability and a brother of Dr. L. M. Foushee, of Elon College, N. C.

Bro. W. T. Dunn, superintendent of our Sunday School, Route 1, Lynchburg, Va., writes, June 12th: "Many thanks for the Burnette booklets (on Christian Church Principles) for our library. We are having our 'Children's Day' program next Sunday and have asked all who could to donate a book each to our library. We hope to get quite a few volumes. We hope to see you at the Sunday School Convention at Shallow Ford in July, and at the Elon Chautauqua, which follows. We are getting along nicely here with our Church and Sunday School work. We have organized a cradle roll and have plans on foot for a 'home department,' to be organized before the Shallow Ford Convention in July." Bro. Dunn is a Sunday School man who believes in doing things for his school, and in getting his school to do things.

WEBSTER COMMUNITY CHURCH.

Until 1924, there was no Christian Church in Maryland, or at least not in this section of the State, and had it not have been for the courage and devoted work of our pastor, Rev. Milton W. Sutcliffe, and his co-laborers for Christ Jesus, we would not be here today.

The Church organized is known as "The Webster Community Christian Church," located about four miles from the city of Havre de Grace, near the historical Susquehanna River, in Harford County, Md.

It has been said by those who have visited the Church, and it is interesting to note the great number of tourists that stop and inspect the Church, which is always opened for them—that it is one of the most complete and up-to-date rural Church buildings they have ever seen, and a real credit to the Church of Jesus Christ and the community. The building is entirely of frame and is 46x113 feet in size, with a basement under the entire lengthe; one of the outstanding features of the building is the tower, standing 56 feet in the air, and on top of which is a six-foot electric cross. It is said that persons living 35 miles away have seen this cross as it sends out its beacon rays lighting men and women to the knowledge of Jesus. A bell that weighs over a ton and a half calls the thoughtful ones to God's service, both the cross and bell being given as memorials of Mr. John Montgomery Macklem, who was the oldest member of the Church when it was organized. The Church is standing on ground secured from Robert Tollenger and his wife and Mr. Thomas D. Miller and his wife, and there is standing next to the Church one of the most complete and up-to-date rural parsonages in our Church.

The Church was organized in January, 1924, on the principles of the Christian Church without any of us knowing about the Christian Church principles at the time, but as an independent Church. When our pastor called on Rev. Dr. Roy C. Helfenstein, of Dover, Del., and told him of the Church, it was then discovered we had actually adopted the principles of the Christian Church. Dr. Helfenstein was invited to address a meeting of the congregation and explain the Christian Church to our people, and he did so. That evening we (92 members; now 172) requested that we be received into the Southern Convention of the Church, and the Eastern Virginia Conference. In March, 1924, without a dollar in hand, but with a faith that would remove mountains, we started work on our Church, and on Sunday, August 24, 1924, about five months after work had started, we dedicated the Church, which was entirely completed, Dr. George Christian Enders, D. D., of Defiance, Ohio, preaching the dedicatory sermon in the morning, and Dr. Thos.

V. Wingate, a Protestant Episcopal minister, preaching in the evening. It was not without much trial that we had reached this point in our history, but in it all God has been wonderfully blessing us, and with His help we have gone ahead for Christ and the Church.

To establish the work and erect a Church building that would do credit to the Christian Church, it was necessary for us to go into considerable debt; however, thus far we have done well. We have experienced a coldness toward us from the other Church bodies, and this has somewhat handicapped us in raising money on the Church. But in the face of this, we realize we need to do something for our Church that no other Church has ever done, and thus win a victory for Christ and our beloved Church at large. We are hoping, in August, to celebrate the first anniversary of the dedication of the Church, and on that day free ourselves of the present indebtedness. We realize that we ourselves cannot do this thing, but we are trusting that some of our brethren in the Church will become interested in this work enough to help us at this time. We are perhaps the baby Church of the whole denomination, and need your help, so that when we become strengthened we, too, can give help to others.

Should you desire to help to gain this victory, we would be glad to hear from you. Send all communications to Miss Harriet E. Cooley, Havre de Grace, Md., or to our pastor, Rev. Milton W. Sutcliffe, Havre de Grace, Md.

"GET-TOGETHER DAY."

In accordance with the request of our faithful pastor, Rev. G. C. Crutchfield, Barrett's, Burton's Grove, Wakefield and Ivor Churches had a "Get-Together Day" the fifth Sunday in May. The meeting-place was Burton's Grove, it being the most central Church. Previous to the occasion, a program committee, consisting of one member from each Church and the pastor, met and planned a most interesting program.

The morning session was made up of a lively Sunday School, which was composed of the Sunday Schools of the Churches represented; music, sermon by Rev. H. E. Truitt, of Wavely, Va., and Communion.

The dinner hour was most enjoyable, as the spirit seemed to be in keeping with that in making plans for the day. In the afternoon some of the former pastors of each Church and the visiting ministers gave talks on whatever subject they chose. They were much enjoyed; however, we regretted all the old pastors could not be there to take part in the program. The business part of the meeting was well carried out, the idea being to formulate some plan for the building up and betterment of the work in the field.

Special mention should be given the music, which was led by Mrs. B. H. Lane, of Ivor, assisted by Miss Susie Mae Joyner, with violin, and Mr. Richard White, cornet. The day was fine, and everybody did their bit to help the occasion to be a success. It was truly a success and well worth mention and repeating, which will be done at Barrett's the fifth Sunday in August.

PRINCIPLES OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

(1) The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.

(2) Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.

(3) The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.

(4) Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship, and of Church membership.

(5) The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by, all.

THE PURPOSE OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

The purpose of this Church is to cultivate a spirit of union among the followers of our Lord Jesus Christ of every persuasion, and to secure, if possible, the associate efforts of all true religious teachers in pointing the wicked to "the Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world."

The peculiar doctrines and tenets which have confused and distracted the Christian world are remanded to private judgment, and hence cease to be matters for debate, only in so far as may be necessary to prevent a sectarian influence from entering the Church.

This Church requires no compromise of faith on the part of any child of God in order to communion or fellowship; here denominational distinctions cease to exist, and Christian love binds the brotherhood together.

The purpose of this Church will be consummated in the conversion of the world and the union of all Christians.

PRESSING TOWARD THE MARK.

"Go forward!" has been the slogan of the Christian centuries. In fact, the slogan had its birth, and became an integral part of religion long before our Christian era began. It dates back to the command of Jehovah God to Moses. "Wherefore criest thou unto me? speak unto the children of Israel that they go forward."

It may be said with truthfulness that the ringing command from the battlements of glory to the sons and daughters of men is now and ever has been, "Go forward."

The Christians are in a position today to appreciate that command and realize on its assets. Back yonder, it has been only a few years, when the Laymen's Missionary Movement was breaking like a mighty flood over the land, it came out in the pictures and the figures that the Christian denomination stood at the bottom of the column in the matter of contribution to missions, home and foreign. That showing humiliated some of us in the dust, and made us hang our heads in shame in grief. The thought, not the thought memely, but the fact, that the Church to which God had entrusted the noblest and most Christian principles was the Church that stood at the bottom of the list when it came to means and measures of winning this world to Him—that was a thought and a fact that almost broke some hearts amongst us, and produced throughout our communion such a sense of seriousness and sober consideration as we had never known before. The Church wearing the name of Christ—Christian—and teaching that He is sufficient for all the miseries, woes and works of this universe; that this should be the most meager and miserly His gospel and building up His was a blow that crushed, was a slur not to be endured. Smarting under such chastisement, our missionary movement broke out in 1916 and '17.

What has happened? Several things. First of all, this Church of ours which occupied bottom place in the list of a dozen years ago, now stands fifth from the top. Only four other communions are giving more per capita to missions and benevolences now than is our Christian Church. Some other things have also happened. Take inventory of just a few in the field occupied by CHRISTIAN SUN readers.

Instead of a wooden frame that nobody, without knowing, would ever have taken for a Church in Norfolk, a magnificent stone temple, one of the most elaborate and costly of any in that city, has gone up; and instead of being a mission point now to be helped, as was the case twelve years ago, this one congregation sends out and supports three or more missionaries. Richmond, Va., then had no Christian Church; today it has a splendid brick building, a membership of over one hundred, a live, wide-awake Sunday School, Christian Endeavor, Missionary Society, and from its membership has come the largest benefactor that has yet been found in all our Southern Convention. Raleigh was then worshiping in an inadequate and dilapidated building; today it has one of the most substantial, adequate and attractive Churches in that city. Our Churches at Winchester, Va., Reidsville, N. C., Columbus, Ga., and a score of others of less magnitude but of no less import to the kingdom, were struggling with unfinished buildings or unpaid debts. We had not then begun our mountain work in Carroll County, Va., nor the building of our string of Churches in North Alabama. A new Elon College has been built, the most complete and efficient college plant, in comparison with the constituency to be served, that can be found in all our land. A new and beautiful "baby home" at our Christian Orphanage has been erected. And more missionaries have been sent by us to the foreign field within the last five years than we had sent out previously for twenty-five years.

Only a very few of the many marked events and achievements of the last dozen years are mentioned, since that showing went out through the Layman's Missionary Movement to all the world that the people calling themselves "Christians" only were at the bottom of the list in the matter of contributing to mission and to benevolences.

But we shall not be satisfied with climbing, in a dozen years, from bottom place to fifth from the top. The Lord God said to Moses, and is saying to all Christians today: "Wherefort crieth thou unto me? speak to the children of Israel that they go forward."

And Paul taking up the slogan, accepted the challenge, which should be that of all Christians, "I press toward the mark for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus."

The Lord has a work for us Christians. As we became missionary in spirit, in giving, in activity, and in attitude, we shall do that work. Oh, Lord, help us to obey the parting command of Thy Son, our Redeemer, "Go!"

ROCKEFELLER-FOSDICK CONCORDAT.

The Park Avenue Baptist Church, New York City, of which John D. Rockefeller is a member, has installed Harry Emerson Fosdick as pastor. Dr. Fosdick had recently been ousted from the pastorate of the Fifth Avenue Presbyterian Church because he would not leave the Baptist Church and become a Presbyterian. He said he could not subscribe to any creed as a test of fellowship or Church membership.

When called to the Rockefeller Church, which has long been open-Communion, Dr. Fosdick stipulated that he would not accept unless the congregation should vote to admit members coming from other Churches not baptizing by immersion without rebaptism. This was acquiesced in by congregational vote, whereupon a beloved and honored SUN reader writes jubilantly that Fosdick has come over to our platform.

We rejoice over this Rockefeller-Fosdick concordat. It means much for the progress of Christian toleration. Our Church has always rejoiced in every advance step taken by any denomination in the direction of larger tolerance. But Dr. Fosdick will have to go one step farther before he reaches our platform in its completeness. He and his Church must agree to baptize candidates for membership by any mode they may elect or to receive them into fellowship without any baptism except of the Spirit if they so elect. They have gone a long step in the right direction by this most recent concordat, but they must go the full limit. When they have done so, they will be on our platform, or we will be on theirs—which does not matter, since we will be the same in intent and practice.

Query.—When will the Southern Baptists ever exhibit such brotherly spirit?

PASTORS AND THE CHAUTAUQUA.

It is to be hoped that a very large per cent of our pastors will be able to attend the Elon Chautauqua this year—July 27th to August 7th—and the Bethlehem Chautauqua, Wadley, Ala., August 10th to 17th. We have not seen a program, but are assured that teachers and preachers, expert in the work they are to do, have been secured.

Rev. W. H. Denison, D. D., Stewardship Secretary of the General Convention, is among the number to teach during these sessions, and his work is to be that of stewardship. There is no topic more vital and more necessary to our ministers at present. It will be well worth the while of our pastors to be present if for no other purpose than to take the work offered by Bro. Denison.

One is fully aware that this is revival season in our Churches, but the minister, as well as the congregation, has to be considered some time, and it would seem that every congregation should desire that their pastor have a week of training once a year in one of our Chautauquas and Schools of Methods. It has been the writer's privilege to attend these Schools of Methods for several summers, and he can truthfully say that the courses offered and the work done are highly advisable to every pastor.

Prepare the way now and make plans for attending the Chautauqua.

A BOOK WORTH WHILE.

THE SUN's editor wishes to recommend to every pastor in the Christian Church, and also to about 10,000 laymen, that they sundry, each and all, secure for themselves their study tables, their libraries, and for their children a volume just from the presses of Fleming H. Revell Company, New York and Chicago. The book is entitled "The Foreign Missions' Convention at Washington, 1925," and is sponsored by the Foreign Mission Conference of North America, Fennell P. Turner, secretary, New York. The selling price is $2.50 per copy. The book contains all the addresses and papers presented before this epochal meeting, and carries also a splendid index. It is in itself a whole library of missions, and contains, of course, the best thought of the ablest living authorities on missions. The volume is invaluable to one who cares for the best that the missionary literature of our day has to offer.

EVERY CHRISTIAN A MISSIONARY.

By James Cannon III.

It has been strikingly and too truly stated that the really serious obstacles in the way of the evangelization of the world lie not in heathenism, but in Christianity. While the vast numbers of unevangelized peoples, their diversity of race, their widespread illiteracy, and their preoccupation with inadequate religions are all unquestionable obstacles in the way of the speedy or even the remote winning of the world to Christ, yet these may be expected to give way or be overcome with far greater readiness if Christians once seriously altogether face the fact that perhaps the most effective hindrances to the making of a Christian world order lie in the Christian body itself. For the condition of heathendom is no worse now than it was in the day of Jesus, and yet with certainty He said to His followers that if He were but lifted up He would draw all men to Himself. It is the ineffectiveness of Christians in exalting the crucified Lord to the place of supremacy in their own lives and civilization's which is really holding us back from the great missionary victories throughout the world for which we long.

Stated in rather blunt terms, the obstacles to the Christianizing of the heathen world which lie in Christendom itself and which must first be removed that we may be true physicians in plucking the motes from the eyes of the world are:

1. The indifference of the average Christian to the cause of Christian missions.

2. The failure of Christianity to Christianize its own society.

3. The unworthy lives of "political" or "racial" Christians lived in foreign countries.

These we will consider in reverse order, taking first the fact that thousands of persons reared in lands which are nominally Christian, many of whom would be highly indignant if told they are not Christians, as a matter of fact so conduct themselves and their business as to almost negative the work of the missionaries sent to these lands by the Churches of which the persons first mentioned are often technical members. Roughly speaking, there are over thirty thousand Protestant foreign missionaries in the various mission fields of the world. But these are by no means all the professing Christians who live in those fields. There are at least ten persons who profess to be Christian in their civilization to every one of the missionaries, or about 300,000 members of Christian nations living side by side with the missionaries sent out by Churches to these lands. Let us consider for a moment two classes of these Christians. One class is made up of a few very devout and high-minded laymen who consider it their business to witness for Christ in mission lands at the same time that they are officials or traders or trevelers. For their devotion, no words are too eloquent. Their assistance to missionaries is beyond calculation. The other class, by far the larger number, are those who do not do honor to the name of Christ in life or word or deed. Some of them are simply indifferent. Others live, on the whole, the same kind of life they would lead at home, not attending Church, taking no part in organized Christian work, and not very bad morally. These, however, are a great handicap to the missionary because of their negative attitude. They are stones about his neck. Then there are those who exploit the people among whom they live for a dollar or a vote or a concession. Some of them lead flagrantly immoral lives. They oppose the missionaries, if not actively, at least by their conduct. They are perhaps the greatest single obstacle the individual missionary faces in his field. We say at once they are not Christians, and we are right! but the people among whom they live cannot be expected to see as clearly as do we that in the Christian religion a man cannot be a Christian at all and live a bad life, for in most instances they have not learned the relation between faith and life. If we could but persuade our people who go abroad to do honor to the faith of their native lands and to help present Christ to the world, we would have quadrupled our effective missionary force abroad without sending a single additional man or dollar. If "Christians" would only be Christian!

Again, however, when we look at our own country, we find that our corporate life does not exalt Christ. Non-Christians say to us truly that just as we judge their faith by the life of their communities, so our faith is to be judged by the life of our people. And they do so judge us. But in too many cases they find among us greed, vice, lust, class pride, hatred, "the lust of the flesh, the lust of the eye, and the pride of life." Our people who go abroad and are unworthy simply reflect the life they have lived among us. Christians abroad are not Christian, and Christendom is not Christian. Corruption in government, protected vice, shady politics, and cruel industrialism are all evidences that Christ is not exalted among us at home. Who is responsible? Who but the individual Christians who do not work and pray and seek for the coming of the kingdom of God among us? It is therefore the obligation of every Christian to be a missionary Christian to his world, his world at home and his world abroad. He cannot hope that he himself is doing Christ's will unless he takes an aggressive attitude and carries out the principles of Christ in his own personal mission field, "for all the world's a field, and every man and woman in it" a missionary of Christ.

This brings us, then, to the fact that the average Christian is simply not interested in missions. He thinks of missions as something added on to his profession of faith in Christ rather than as being the very essence of his profession. To be a Christian is to be a missionary. We are said by Secretary Hoover to have contributed $70,000,000 to foreign missions and similar enterprises abroad in 1923. This is a large sum, but it is a very small sum when compared to the things we spend the rest of our money on—not as much as we spend for nonessentials. If each of the 35,000,000 American Protestants were to spend on foreign missions—or rather invest in foreign missions—the price of a good moving-picture show this year, our gifts to foreign missions would be two and a half times as much as they have been in the best year on record.

There are, no doubt, excuses, but no reasons, for this indifference. Ministers are not all interested, but that is an excuse. Each Christian is responsible for his own personal relation to his God. His preacher has a duty to him, no doubt, but the soul is accountable to its maker, and not to its preacher. Simply by examining the sources of information open to him without the services of a preacher, each Christian should be able to determine his responsibility for the evangelization of the world. If one should seek to work out for himself the grounds of this responsibility of his as a Christian to be a missionary Christian, he would find that we are obligated to world missions on the following grounds:

1. We have a missionary God. His chief characteristic is love, forthgoing, redemptive, seeking love, which is not satisfied until it has brought the world to Him in devotion and communion. His love is not satisfied by mere contemplative affection, but must do something to bring to truth and purity and freedom the objects of that love. Throughout the history of the universe he has been seeking to bring us to himself. Yet, in so doing, He has carefully guarded the rights of the human personality so that only through the personal choice of each individual soul does it or may it come into the service of its Lord. He does not force love for Him into our hearts; we are not unwilling slaves even of that love. Just as He cannot save one man without that man's co-operation, so He cannot win a race or a group without human co-operation.

2. We have a missionary Saviour. Saviourhood is missions. The supreme demonstration of the love of the Father is His sending of His Son, through whom we might know the Father. He "came not into the world to condemn the world, but that the world through Him might be saved." Rightly understood, His work is to bring the whole human family into right relations of sonship to God and brotherhood to all mankind. This Saviour went about among men revealing the character of God and doing good to men, serving as a missionary to the world and founding the Church.

3. The Church is a massionary society. There are at least two instances on record of men who, when urged to join in the formation of missionary societies within the Churches of which they were members, replied that the Church itself is a missionary society, and in this they were undoubtedly right. For the Church exists for the purpose of making Christ known to the world. It has works of comfort and mercy to perform, but its chief work is the proclamation of the Gospel to a lost and needy world. So one who enrolls in its ranks is committed to the cause to which it is committed. He cannot shirk his responsibility behind the fact that he has a disinterested pastor or an uneducated Church. His only excuse may be that he tries to interest that pastor and educate that Church until he has done his missionary task perhaps by setting Church and pastor to work in co-operation with himself for the conduct of missions.

Christ, then, must come into his own in the hearts of His professed followers. He must, through those individuals, transform the society of which they are immediate members. This must be done at home and at the same time messengers sent to other lands to publish his gospel there. There are none excused from the task. There is not a passage of Scripture which can be cited in proof of anyone's contention that some must be missionary Christians and that others are excused. There are no two kinds of Christians; there is only one. This, then, becomes the supreme duty of the Christian body, to carry on missions. And by this we do not mean foreign or home missions. One may offer for the foreign field and be rejected. Does that relieve him of the obligation of preaching the gospel at home? One may live all his mature life abroad in a pagan land. Does that excuse him from using his voice and tongue and pen to aid in the Christianizing of the world at home? May not each of these be the more effective because of their relative position to the kingdom of our Lord?—Christian Advocate.

NOTICE.

The Sunday School and Christian Endeavor Convention of the Georgia and Alabama Conference will meet with First Church, LaGrange, Ga., July 4th and 5th. It is urged that all Sunday Schools and Christian Endeavor Societies of the Conference have delegates at this Convention. If all have not already elected delegates, they should do so at the first session and urge that those who are elected attend. We are hoping for a largely attended and a profitable Convention.

SUFFOLK LETTER.

John King dead! No more sudden and unexpected event has occurred in Suffolk for years than the death of John King on Monday, June 8th. Mr. King was born in Nansemond County, Va., June 8th, 1865, and passed away, after a brief illness, on his sixtieth birthday. He is survived by his wife, who was Miss Mary Emma Crump, of Chuckatuck, of Nansemond; one brother, Charles T. King, of Windsor, Va.; two sisters, Mrs. R. W. Nelms and Mrs. Norfleet Harrell; two nephews, W. C. King and C. E. King, of Suffolk, associated with him in business; Mrs. Leroy Coghill, a niece, of New York City, with her husband, and other relatives.

Mr. King was an orphan at an early age, was educated at Suffolk Collegiate Institute, and entered upon business while young. His first position was with Col. J. R. Copeland, of the Farmers' Bank of Nansemond. Having saved some money, he opened a store in Windsor, Va. Later he entered the peanut business, married Miss Crump, who was the daughter of General J. C. Crump, who was for years a member of the Virginia Senate. In 1897 he removed to Suffolk, and with Col. John B. Pinner, Capt. P. H. Lee, Mr. A. T. Holland and others, organized the Suffolk Peanut Company. After years of the successful operation of the Suffolk Peanut Company, Mr. King withdrew and organized the John King Peanut Company and was president of that company at the time of his death.

Mr. King was also interested in farming, meat packing, and the manufacture of candy. Mr. King went abroad as a member of the Commercial Congress in 1923, and during their stay in Berlin his wife was run over by a bicycle and seriously injured. She has just recently laid aside crutches and sticks, and now this greater blow has crushed her heart and crippled her life.

Mr. King was an active member of the Suffolk Christian Church, interested in the general enterprises of the denomination, and more, in the kingdom. He had made a reputation among the Churches as a speaker, and many of his friends called him a preacher. He was especially active as a speaker during the Men and Millions campaign, going from Church to Church with a message. At a social dinner and fishing party of the Ministerial Association of the Eastern Virginia Conference, at Lake Cahoon, on the Tuesday before he passed, he was there with his help and his genial fellowship. His wife also added to the convivial occasion. One pleasantry was his unanimous election as a member of the Ministerial Association. In less than a week he was gone.

Funeral services at the home, on Washington Street, 4:30 P. M., Wednesday, June 10th. Hundreds of friends from far and near, hundreds of floral designs sent by individuals, organizations, banks, and other business concerns with which he had been associated, added to the occasion so full of meaning to all. Eleven ministers were present, a double quartet rendered sweet music, and his mortal remains were laid to rest under a mountain of flowers in Cedar Hill Cemetery.

ELON LETTER.

John King is dead, and many a heart will feel a loneliness that long years will not remove. It is sad to think that this courtly gentleman should be cut off in his sixtieth year and on his sixtieth birthday, June 8th.

It was characteristic of him that he took his bed only a few days before his decease and that those nearest him did not know he was seriously ill till within two hours of his death. At 11 o'clock he was signing checks as an officer of the great corporation his genius had created and over which he presided. At 1 o'clock he passed away, with never a word of complaint, as was his wonted custom.

For the past few years the changes in the peanut business had rendered it impossible for him to make the dividends it had been his pride and joy to earn legitimately and by public service honorably performed for the stockholders associated with him in the John King Peanut Company. Always a hard worker, this inability pressed like a leaden weight upon him. He redoubled his energies and, refusing to regard regular hours for work, devoted himself at all times to his business. It became too much for him, and acute indigestion hurried away, in the prime of his useful and honorable career, such a rare and radiant spirit as one seldom meets. "Just six months more of this hard driving," he promised his stricken companion a few days ago; "just six months more and all will be well." All is well with him; but lonely, aching hearts tell a tale of sadness, of bereavement, of personal loss that language cannot record.

John King was a Sir Galahad in his home. As a host, he had the prime endowment of making the guest feel he was himself entertaining his host. As a husband, his affection for his wife not only beautified her lovely character, but filled every heart privileged to associate with them with the joy that comes of contact with a situation of perfected beauty. In recent years, since Mrs. King's injury, sustained when they were traveling abroad as representatives of our government, Bro. King's devotion to his wife was, if possible, even more tender and pronounced. The best in human companionship clusters around the hearts of such a home.

John King shined with brilliant luster in his religious life. When young and poor, as well as when business success had crowned his efforts, he was the devoted churchman. He had had an experience of God, and it could but radiate in all his life. During the Men and Millions campaign, he developed such excellency as a speaker that his admiring friends styled him "Parson King." He delivered his messages with such fervent zeal and illustrated them with such quaint and telling humor that large audiences always greeted him when it was known he was to speak. Conducting services in out-of-the-way places was his specialty. He looked wistfully toward the day when he should retire from active business and give himself completely to Christian service as a layman.

His funeral, though held in his home, in accord with his modest spirit, was literally thronged by hosts of people who came to show their appreciation for one whom many of them described to me as "a real man." Flowers were banked everywhere. Strong men shed tears and were not ashamed thus to express their sorrow. The colored people, some of whom had been in his employ for thirty years, were there and wept sympathetically for "the best friend I ever had." Every minister in Suffolk was present, and of our own brethren of the ministry besides the four residing in Suffolk, Dr. J. O. Atkinson, Dr. L. E. Smith, Rev. J. H. Lightbourne, and Rev. J. M. Roberts were present. It was sad, but it was spiritually uplifting to be privileged to attend the burial of my beloved friend and to drop a tear of sorrow and sympathy by his flower-covered bier. With a host of others, I shall ever cherish the memory of this noble Christian brother. John King has gone to be with the King, to the progress of whose kingdom his splendid energies of heart and soul were devoutly consecrated. W. A. Harper.

Summer School of Religious Education, or the Chautauqua and School of Methods, will begin Monday, August 10th, and close Sunday, August 16th. It is hoped that many of our pastors, Sunday School superintendents, Christian Endeavor workers, and lay members will avail themselves of the help to be derived from this school.

The regular fall term of school will open at Bethlehem College September 7, 1925. We expect not less than 200 students to register for work in the college and academy on that date.

LIFE AND DEATH.

By Joe W. Stout.

Memorial Address.

My subject today is "Life and Weath," and I wish to discuss first the subject of "Life."

The time, place and condition under which we receive life are all beyond our control, and for which we are not responsible.

Life is indeed a strange fight, and its privileges are mysterious. When we first receive it, our admiration and delight prevent us from reflecting upon the great gift we have received and from seeing ourselves as nothing in comparison with the great giver of life. Our first and strongest impressions are gathered from our first experience in life, and while in childhood the splendor of this newly found treasure so enthralls us that we forget that it may be taken from us. We know our existence only by ourselves, and the feast of reason and the flow of the soul, of which we are presently possessed, prepare us to observe the great pageant of nature which is soon to be unveiled before us. It is a glorious privilege to live, to know, to love; to see the golden sun, the blue sky, the outstretched ocean, the green earth; to see the sun sinking slowly behind the line of the horizon; to look down the yawning precipices; to study the history and the glory of nations and cities that preceded us; to be a spectator and a part of this ever-moving scene; to witness the change of the seasons; to have pleasure and pain; to see beauty and deformity; to know right from wrong; to gather up the wisdom of the ancient, or to pry into the future; to hear the trump of war and shouts of victory; to plead the cause of humanity; to observe the world in action, as nature pours her treasures at our feet. To be and to do this is life.

Men differ from each other much in life. It is true that some are given more years than others; but that is not the important part of life. Quality of life, rather than quantity, makes for success. We would rather live and know and love for a year than to be a plant for a century. In looking back over life, we often find a day or a week standing out longer in memory than months or years that have followed or preceded it. It was longer in significance and meant more to us in memory than years of mere routine existence. Life is always measured in terms of quality and the standard of the soul. There is, however, one encouraging and consoling thought in connection with the human life—that is its growth; and as we grow, we develop our mental and spiritual faculties, becoming thereby able to overlook the weaknesses in our fellow-men and completing our preparation for living in the world without sorrow and trouble.

No one has success in life until he has possessed the abounding life, made of activity, energy, enthusiasm and gladness. It is to arise in the morning with joy that you are living, and go forth to meet your fellow-man with happiness and a smile. The life that is worth living is the honest and useful life, the unselfish life; the battle that is worth fighting is the battle for justice and equality, the breaking of bands that strangle real liberty and cleanse the fountains of our national life from commercial, social and political corruption; to teach our children by precept and example the honor of serving our home, our Church and our county.

To the young people, I would like to say that life is before you. Two voices are calling—one coming from the camps of selfishness,, greed and force, where success itself is a failure; the other voice calls from the hilltops of justice and progress, where even failure brings glory. Two lights can be seen in your horizon—one is the fast-fading light of power, greed and gain; the other, the slowly rising light of human brotherhood. Two ways are open for you—one leads to the lower plains, where will be heard the cries of hunger, despair and agony; the other leads to the highlands of the morning, where are heard the glad shouts of humanity and where honest effort is rewarded with immortality. And remember this: if your progress in life, in the fight for the high ideals set forth herein, is slow, that you cannot hurry the growth of civilization; that it is the economy of Almighty God that all good growth is slow growth.

The successful life must be generous in its praise and appreciation of the efforts of others; to give without expectation of return; practice humility and self-restraint and seek truth and righteousness, aspire to greater things daily, labor cheerfully, and when you have done this you will have eternity as a rest, revenge will never worry you, injustice will never crush you, and you will live the useful, calm life, looking to the end.

Death.

We are spirits. We are passing from God to God through this life, and bodies are loaned us for the purpose of making this journey, so long as they can afford us pleasure and assist us in doing good to our fellow-creatures, and it is a kind and benevolent act of God to allow us the use of these bodies; but when they become unuseful for the purposes for which they were given us and furnish us pain instead of pleasure, and answer none of the purposes for which they were intended, God has provided a way by which we are relieved of them, and that way is the way of death. The poet has said:

"Leaf after leaf drops off, flower after flower,
Some in the chill, some in the warmer hour;
Alive they flourish, and alive they fall,
And earth, who nourished them, receives them all.
Should we, her wiser sons, be less content
To sink into her lap when life is spent?"

In the democracy of the dead, all men at last become equal. There is neither rank nor station in the realms of the grave. There the song of the poet is silenced, the philosopher ceases to be wise, the rich relinquish their millions, and the poor give up their rags; the creditor loses his interest, and the debtor's debts are paid; the proud surrender their dignities, the great men their honor and power; the sick are relieved of their suffering, and the laborers rest from their toil; the strong have no supremacy, and the weak need no defense. And, as we look back from the threshold of the grave, we will recognize that the river of life flows on with regularity. We would be glad to give all we possess if we could call back a few hours and check the flow of its waters. Perhaps there have been times when we would have liked to speed the waters more rapidly on, but all efforts are futile, and it is only while the river flows over the mill-wheel of today's life that we can utilize it. Once it is past, it enters into the great sea of eternity.

In conclusion, let me say that this sacred spot grows nearer and nearer to me each year, and I long for the time when I may find the trail that leads back to this place on Memorial Day. I am proud to claim you as my people, and I wish to congratulate you upon the spirit and reverence that prompts you to come here once each year to commorate the memory of those who have passed the great threshold and have entered into the democracy of the dead. It proves to me that you stand solid for the distribution of education among our people, solid for the great character instead of the material wealth, solid in sentiment for noble womanhood and manhood, and solid for the love of home and fireside and for the maintenance of pure Christianity, and I hope that it shall be my pleasure and privilege for many years yet to come annually to visit these grounds and meet these people, and when finally I am called and my eyes shall look for the last time upon this sacred spot, I trust that I may see a united community for home, Church, State and country, and a community dedicated to the upbuilding of liberty, generosity and Christianity in the human heart—and remember that the record of a generous life twines itself like a vine around the memory of our dead, and every unselfish act will bloom into a perfumed flower.

Sunset and evening star,
And one clear call for me!
And may there be no moaning of the bar
When I put out to sea.

But such a tide as moving seems asleep,
Too full for sound and foam,
When that which drew from out the boundless deep
Turns again home.

Twilight and evening bell,
And after that the dark!
And may there be no sadness of farewell
When I embark.

For though from out our bourne of time and place
The flood may bear me far,
I hope to see my Pilot face to face
When I have crossed the bar.

BURLINGTON CHURCH.

Just a line to say to The Sun that the Ham-Ramsay evangelistic meetings which closed on Sunday, May 31st, brought a great revival to Burlington and to this section of the country. And the Christian Church is having a great harvest these days as a result of the same. We have received to date a total of 128 new members, with some others to follow. Present membership of the Church is 620.

Last Sunday was indeed a great day in the Burlington Church. We had present in the Sunday School 465. Received fifty-five members at the two Church services—fifty-one in the morning and four at night—and baptized sixty-five persons at the night service. A great work has been done, and is being done, in our midst.

OREGON SCHOOL LAW INVALID.

The Supreme Court of the United States, on June 1st, declared invalid the Oregon compulsory education law requiring children between the ages of eight and sixteen to attend the public schools. Associate Justice W. C. Reynolds wrote the decision. The court sustained the decision of the Federal district court and held that the State cannot compel attendance of children in public schools to the exclusion of private or parochial schools.

Intense interest has been aroused in the case throughout the country, partly because of its bearing on such laws in other States which have been either passed or proposed. The court finds that the Oregon law "unreasonably interferes with the liberty of parents and guardians to direct the upbringing and education of children under their control." This decision is of vital interest to all who are concerned over the Christian education of the young.—Ex.

"I want to thank the doctors, nurses, superintendent and matrons at Christian Orphanage for their kindness shown us during the serious accident to my little boy. We appreciate your help, also the flowers and other nice things. We thank every one for rendered help. God bless you all."

STEWARDSHIP AND PROMOTION.

By Warren H. Dennison, Secretary.

In the Western Convention.

Following May 3d and 4th at Urbana, Ill., where an institute was held for the Urbana Church and the Churches of the Central Illinois Conference that were within reach of Urbana, we spent the entire month of May in stewardship institute work within the bounds of the Western Convention. Eight pastors were at the Urbana institute, and there were representatives from a goodly number of Churches. The writer was a guest of the Champaign-Urbana Ministerial Association at a luncheon, at which he was a speaker. From May 6th to 21st we conducted institutes as follows: Avon, Western Illinois Conference, Rev. J. B. Speaker, pastor; Clemons, Central Iowa Conference, Rev. R. L. Raybourne, pastor; in Western Iowa Conference at Madrid, Rev. J. M. Kaufman, pastor; at Hill of Zion, Rev. Rue Burnell, pastor; at Fairview, Rev. O. C. Huff, pastor; in Northern Kansas and Nebraska Conference at Wayland, Rev. J. W. Fix, pastor; at Red Cloud, Rev. C. G. Nelson, pastor; at Lincoln, Rev. John A. Stover, pastor; at Oronoque, in the Northwest Kansas Conference, Rev. C. E. Huff, pastor; at Towanda, in the Southern Kansas Conference, Rev. R. L. Hendrickson, pastor.

Then we went on to Palmer College, where we gave the commencement sermon before a graduating class of twenty-seven, and from May 26th to 31st we conducted seven stewardship periods at the Western Convention Summer School. Mr. C. E. Booz, stewardship secretary of the Western Convention, directed the itinerary, and it was done in a splendid way. He is doing splendid work and the Convention wisely re-elected him. Pastors and laymen alike co-operated heartily and showed every attention to help make the strenuous itinerary most pleasant and helpful. With the exception of three Churches, there were three sessions a day, with an average attendance of 47 plus at each session. The workers ordered many stewardship books and charts. A number of pastors from our other Churches attended. Some pastors attended two or more institutes.

The Questionnaire.

A very important stewardship questionnaire has been sent to every Church, to its pastor, if there is one; otherwise to the Church clerk. This is very important to make a full survey of our Church financial methods. Many have been carefully answered and returned. Some have forgotten about returning them. Please attend to the matter at once. It will take but a few minutes. They are needed now, and your delay costs us further time and money. Thank you.

Home Missions.

This is the home mission period of our Church, and every Church should not be satisfied with doing less than the 15 per cent increase requested and urged by the General Convention. Our home missions are doing some most important things, and all of us should stand behind that necessary work.

Mrs. Nelle Foust, Warren, Ind., writes this personal message about their stewardship reading contest, and we take the liberty to quote from this private letter: "We have profited and benefited so much by the stewardship reading contest in our Church during February! It has inspired us so much that we are anxious to do things for the kingdom. People are ready and willing to do when they know. Every Church that has had a large ingathering should follow it with such a stewardship program. I do not believe that so many would be lost to the Church and kingdom."

We would call attention to our Lord's word, recorded by Matthew in chapter 6, verse 21: "For where thy treasure is, there will thy heart be also." Where is your investment—treasure?

MEN AND MILLIONS.

As the following report shows, many of our loyal and faithful people are exerting themselves to pay their pledges to Men and Millions. As stated before, while the original time set for the payment of the pledges ended April 30th, the Convention voted to extend the time limit to one year.

Very many wish to pay and will pay their pledges, which they consider as sacred and binding, but have met reverses and have been hindered. We should exert ourselves to pay off all these pledges before April 30, 1926. Every dollar now counts for a most worthy cause and is deeply appreciated. The payments during the month of May, as turned into the hands of Executive Secretary C. D. Johnston, Elon College, N. C., are as follows:

TITHING.

Christian people declare the Bible to be their only rule of faith and practice, yet in the matter of Christian finance, many have ignored its plain teachings and tried every substitute that man has devised. And as a result, every department of Christian activity is suffering for lack of funds.

The Scriptures contain the best system of Church support ever devised.

God's laws are universal. They apply to all times and all places. They are equally binding upon the Gentiles and the Jew, the Roman and the American, the African and the Chinese. These laws do not create duties, they define them. They are the very essence of justice, kindness, and good will toward men. The more we study them, and the better we understand them, the more fully do we realize that they are enacted for our best good, and highest development, physically, morally, and spiritually.

The great God, our Father, who created us, who loves us, and who understands what is best for us, asks for one-seventh of our time and one-tenth of our income.

Religion, experience, and science teach us that if a man is to live an higher existence than an animal, he must take one day in seven to rest his body and time to consider his relations to his Creator and his fellow-beings.

Do you think a person who works seven days each week, and keeps or spends all his income for himself and family, will develop into a better citizen than one who "remembers the Sabbath Day to keep it holy" and pays one-tenth of his income to help win the world to Jesus?

It is a well-recognized principle of law that when a law has once been in force, and the conditions which called it forth still exist, the law is binding till it is repealed. The law of tithing has never been repealed, and was never in greater demand than at the present time.

The law of the tithe, like the law of the Sabbath, was not instituted for the benefit of others, but for ourselves. God does not require the tithe just to keep the treasury full, but to win us from selfishness and covetousness, which were the bane of the Church in both the Old and the New Testament times.

In the Ten Commandments, covetousness is ranked with theft, murder, and adultery. Paul classes this sin among the vilest of sins. In writing to Timothy, Paul warns him against the sin of covetousness, saying, "The love of money is the root of all evil, which some reaching after have pierced themselves through with many sorrows." Judas, being covetous, betrayed our Lord for thirty pieces of silven, then went out and hanged himself.

The supreme purpose of the tithe is to develop character and test our loyalty to God. The payment of the tithe when there is no compulsion and no pressure brought to bear, when it is a matter of a clear conscience between yourself and God, will develop in you those sterling qualities that will make you worth while in the kingdom.

The Bible designates two sources of revenue—tithes and free-will offerings. The tithe is the Lord's whether we keep it or pay it to Him, not because it is dishonest to keep what does not belong to us.

The tithe is our just debt to God and should be paid promptly and cheerfully like any other debt. God has no need of our money (seeing all is His), but requires His share just to remind us that we are in partnership with Him. Just as the tribute money paid to Caesar was an acknowledgment of his authority, so the tithe is the acknowledgment of God's interest in every dollar we receive C. Vernon Fox, M. D.

A CHALLENGE.

"Therefore let us not sleep as do others, but let us watch and be sober."—I. Thes. 5: 6.

Paul was a srong and noble Christian character, immovable in the faith of God, untiring in his efforts to help others by bringing them the glad tidings of the living God. He was subjected to the cruelties of enemies and beaten to death as they suppsoed him to be, and left by the roadside. Again he was arrested and cast into prison, there to live a secluded life of prayer and praise to God as his onlp fortune. Amid all his struggles, his persecutions and adverse criticims he was always a man of good cheer and encouragement. He was a man that had a challenge. He had a challenge to a high ideal a noble purpose and a worthy cause. He had a challenge to love God with all his soul, mind and strength, and his neighbor as himself. A challenge that he could do all things through Christ which strengthened him; a challenge to press forward to the mark of the high calling of God inChrist Jesus. A challenge to help a weak and discouraged brother. He was a man who was always awake to seize every opportunity to render service to Christ and humanity; a man of prayer, of faith of love and sympathy and a friend to all. His life's pathway was not a bed of roses, but of many throns. He was confronted with some of the most perplexing questions that could have been asked a theologian of his day and time. He was forbidden to preach the gospel of Jesus at times, in which service was his joy. His best friends would become discouraged and forsake him as John Mark did on his first missionary journey.

We need more Pauls in our churches today; men that stand unfalteringly when duty calls and, with a faith like Abraham, march forth to battle against sin, vice, immorality, crime. Our communities are filled with too many parasites who want to enjoy living from those things that are degrading to society. They want their children taught by Christian teachers; they want to see the community prosper, their school to be a modern one and their church to be a wide awake enthusiastic, growing and outstanding among the churches in their community. Their pastor must be a highly educated, refined sympathetic, sober and conscientious Christian. The thing they need is to realize their own responsibility as a member of that society in which they are participants. We need to be more consistent in our relationships—being awake to service; contributing to society by lending our lives, our wills, and our influences. If we enjoy living in a Christian community, let us help it be Christian by being Christians ourselves. The sad story about so many of us is that we have gone to sleep. We have professed Christ as our Saviour and joined the Church. We have merely sown the seed and have failed to cultivate our spirits. Men do not attain the highest spiritual experience all at once. It is not a spontaneous, miraculous happening bloomed into full in a moment's time. It is a continual development through association with Christian men and women, by prayer and meditation, and learning to serve by serving. Here is a challenge to service.

Then we have a type of Church members who are good at heart, who are honest and clean in their living, but are careless in their habits of Church attendance. They never have time to go to a business meeting of the Church, but wait for some one else to do that. They are unconcerned about the kind of officers they have in the Sunday School; they are indifferent about the training of the young people; they are too conservative in their methods of teaching. They are more concerned about the worldly kingdom. The thing that our Church members need to inculcate in their lives is that of making lives instead of a mere living. They are afraid, if they lose an hour or so working for God, they will perish. They can find time to go for sport, recreation, joyriding and all that is conducive to a good time; but, the things that are most worth while, they are inclined to leave undone.

There has never been a day in all the history of our land that the Church has had a greater challenge than it has today, when the world is charged with growing worse, when atheism was so strong in the world about the Church and its undertaking, when law and disorder was so prevalent, when education stood on such a high pedestal, when we need the definite training of our young people that they may grow in the nurture and admonition of the Lord. We need to wake up to our responsibility, to answer the call of God. The reason the world isn't any better is because we are not any better. The reason the Church seems to be asleep is because we are asleep. Arise, quit yourselves like men, throw off the shackles of doubt and fear, cease from walking in your sleepy watch and be sober.

Lastly, there is a challenge to press forward. Paul said: "I press forward to the mark of the high calling in Christ Jesus our Lord." With all that he accomplished, amid all the trials and tribulations, the ruggedness of the path which he had traveled he had always persisted in going forward. He never turned backward.

We are living in an age when we must move forward. As the tide of time moves on, we must move with it or soon we will be caught in deep water, there to be tossed to and fro by the waves of sin, discouragement, and ignorance. We must grow in grace and provide spiritual food for the coming generation by living nobly before them. As Jesus has lived and nobly died for us, giving His very life that we might have life, and have it more abundantly, we cannot help but move forward, and as we move may we, as Paul did, press forward, giving our best to the Master. In this gift may we, with the words of the poet, say, as he in duty heard the stern voice of God—

"Serene will be our days and bright,
And happy will our nature be
When love is an unerring light
And joy its own security."

This is a challenge to professed Christians; a challenge to serve, to press forward; a challenge to duty. May we ever keep in mind the noble character referred to in our short discussion, and in keeping in mind this life, heed our challenge as he did his. F. D. Ballard.

Review: "In Judea and Samaria."

Golden Text: "Ye shall be my witnesses, both in Jerusalem and in all Judea and Samaria, and unto the uttermost part of the earth."—Acts 1:8.

Devotional Reading: Psa. 98.

A review really means to view again. If the review is thorough and sound, it will help to fix the view. There are a few fundamental and vital truths in the lessons of the past three months that we ought to fix firmly in our minds and hearts and make them a permanent part of our lives. "For whatsoever things were written aforetime were written for our learning," and "they are able to make us wise unto salvation through faith which is in Jesus Christ."

I. The Blessing of Pentecost.

1. Christianity is a spiritual religion.
2. Jesus Christ, a living personal Saviour, is the life of Christianity.
3. Christianity is for all men.
4. The Church is the organization to carry out the will of Jesus Christ.
5. Christianity went far because it went deep.

II. The Cripple at the Beautiful Gate.

1. There is value in regular attendance at worship.

XII. Peter Delivered from Prison.

1. Spiritual forces are more powerful than material forces.
2. Intercessory prayer changes men and things.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

June 28, 1925.

Topic: "My Answer to the Missionary Challenge."—Isa. 6:8-9; 1 Thess. 2:8.

Some Bible Hints.

We hear the voice of the Lord in the heart only when we commune with Him. V. 8.

God does His work in the world through men, lifting them to fellowship with Him in His tasks, and so training them for higher things. V. 8.

We must make some answer when God calls, either in words, or by act. V. 8.

Our answer must be the response of love, or it is worthless. The missionary giveth his very soul. 1 Thess. 2:8.

Suggestive Thoughts.

Christian Endeavor has led many hundreds to answer "Yes" to God's missionary challenge. What else can a heart pledged to do the will of Jesus say?

Many answer the missionary challenge with the widow's or the widower's mite. That is surely a mean answer to God.

Our answer to God need not be that we will go to the mission field. It may mean the dedication of time to work at home for missions, to "hold the ropes."

We can answer God's challenge by resolving to know more about missions than we do, and then spread our knowledge. We can make a study of missions.

A Few Illustrations.

When a man forgets to wind the clock, the clock stops. We forget missions, and that is why they slow down. We need to wind up our interest.

We dare not send an unprovisioned ship to sea. Dare we send out missionaries without prospect of support? The field calls for men; the Church calls for money to keep them. What is our answer?

Full surrender to God is the only answer we should make to missions. That means that we go if He wants to send us, or give if He wants our gifts.

Some people who are shortsighted have far vision. They do not see what is near them, but what is far away. Are we wishful of attacking distant tasks and forgetting the tasks in our own community?

To Think About.

What is our society doing for missions?

How can we increase missionary interest in our Church?

What story of missions has most interested me? Why?

A Cluster of Quotations.

The Mohammedans are not converted, because we ourselves have not been sufficiently converted.

He needs them all—the open hand,
The willing feet, the asking heart—
To work together and to weave
The threefold cord that will not part.

Fellows, we can if we will.

We can talk about missions; find out new facts about them; read articles and books and tell of them; learn something about the heroism of missions.

A Challenge Contest.

Divide the society into two sides for this meeting. The leader will prepare a large number of questions on the topic and will ask them in the meeting. The sides will answer turn about. If one side cannot answer a question, the other side gets a chance at it. Every question correctly answered counts one point. If a side fails to answer a question, one point is deducted.

ALL THINGS TO ALL MEN.

Christ was a home missionary, in the house of Lazarus.

Christ was a foreign missionary, when the Greeks came to Him.

Christ was a city missionary, when He taught in Samaria.

Christ was a Sunday School missionary, when He opened up the Scriptures and sent men to studying the Word of God.

Christ was a children's missionary, when He took them in His arms and blessed them.

Christ was a missionary to the poor, when He opened the eyes of the blind beggar.

Christ was a missionary to the rich, when He opened the spiritual eyes of Zaccheus.

Even on the cross, Christ was a missionary to the robber, and His last command was the missionary commission.—Amos R. Wells.

Christian Orphanage

Dear Friends:

Harvest is here, and the reapers are gathering in the grain. While we were in the field looking after the cutting of our wheat, we could not help but think of the difference now and thirty-five years ago in harvesting wheat. Then we used a hand grain cradle, and it was slow and hard work to swing it all day long in heavy wheat and then, too, another came along and picked up the wheat and tied it in bundles and that was hard work, too. I have done both, and it was mighty hard work on a hot day.

Now we have a self-binder, pulled by a Fordson tractor. Two men required, one to drive the tractor and the other to handle the reaper. How easy it looks now. The Fordson doing all the pulling and the reaper doing all the cutting and binding, but the little boys had an awful hard time gathering the bundles in piles of ten bundles each, and it was hard for them to keep up .

The Orphanage had thirteen acres in wheat this year, the best we have been able to raise at all on our farm. The shocks are thick on the ground and make us feel proud of our farmer boys. Our oat crop is very good, too.

The continued drouth has about fixed our garden vegetables, and it makes it hard on us, as we depend much on our garden to supply our table in the summer.

Don't forget our pretty new building to care for about forty children! Help your Church raise the small amount asked for, and send it in so we can commence our building. Just a little help from you.

The following has been sent in since last reported: Liberty, Vance, Church, Henderson, N. FAMILY ALTAR

CONDUCTED BY REV. H. E. ROUNTREE,
Our Chaplain in the United States Navy.

MONDAY.

SECRETARY WILBUR ON PRAYER.

In a recent address, Curtis D. Wilbur, Secretary of the Navy, disclosed a familiarity with the subject of prayer that should prove helpful to many. He said: "It is clear that every prayer cannot be answered by granting it, not only because different people would pray for exactly the opposite things to happen at the same time, but also because if a mere petition were sufficient to bring about a result asked for, God would virtually be yielding His sovereignty and jurisdiction to any and every one who happens to be interested enough to submit a petition, even if that request conflicted with His sovereign purpose.

"There is, however," he pointed out, "a law of prayer, and it is suggested that the statement of Christ, 'Ask and ye shall receive,' means that we must ask "according to His will"; that is, if we pray according to the will of God, we then will receive an answer. But we may well say, if we pray according to the will of God, why do we need to pray at all? If it is God's will that things shall come to pass, why do we need to concern ourselves about the result, or to pray for it to come to pass? I think there is a much deeper significance in the principle involved. It is clear that throughout all times, from the very dawn of creation, the laws which bring about radio communication were established, and if there had been creatures knowing enough to bring together the necessary material and to properly operate that material, there would at any time through all the centuries have been the same result as there is upon which our radio communication is based today. We may, therefore, say that it was always according to the will of God that men should be able to transmit intelligency through space. The thing necessary was to ascertain the plan or method of transmitting the voice, and, having done so, to follow that plan."

One of the fundamental requisites of prayer, he pointed out, is that we shall ask for the help, for the light, for the prosperity, for the health, for the preservation which we crave. It may be said, as Christ said, "Your Heavenly Father knoweth that you have need of these things." Some one who is rather skeptical may say: "If God knows that we need these things and loves us, why need we ask Him?" The question is a mere attempt to substitute our way for God's way. We must learn the law of prayer if we are to pray successfully, and the first and most clear requisite of prayer is that there shall be prayer; there is a relation between the asking and the receiving.

"Prayer," he held to be "the greatest problem of life, for in it is hidden the relationship between man and his Maker—the co-operation of the created thing with the Creator—in the working out of the complicated problems in the life of the individual and his relationship to other human beings. Christ said that we should pray without ceasing. It is clear, then, that our attitude, our lives should be one of prayer. We should live a prayer; and to live a prayer, one must seek to have his life and his purpose acceptable to God."

TUESDAY.

NO NEED OF ARGUMENT.

"Let all bitterness and wrath, and anger and Clamour, and evil speaking be put away from you, with all malice, and be ye kind one to another, tender-hearted, forgiving one another, even as God for Christ's sake hath forgiven you."—Eph. 4:31.

Stop it! Drop it! Drop the subject when you cannot agree. There is no need to be bitter because you know you are right.

Prayer.—God, help us to do this, and to live so close to Thee and so full of Thy spirit that we shall not fail. Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

SICKNESS TO BE ELIMINATED.

For 6,000 years the race has been on the "broad road to destruction," going down into death. But it is a long lane that has no turn. The Messianic kingdom has Jesus the Great Physician for its ruler; and He who has the right and power to restore the race to perfection of health will gladly do so when the clock strikes the hour. There is a set time for that great work to begin; and when it is started, nothing can stop its operation for the following thousand years. We have thought of the Great Physician as being interested only with "soul" disease; but the Bible shows that He will also cure every physical ailment. "The eyes of the blind shall be opened, and the ears of the deaf shall be unstopped, . . . the lame man (shall) leap as an hart, and the tongue of the dumb (shall) sing." "The inhabitant shall not say, I am sick." "Deliver him from going down to the pit (shackath, destruction, decay, death); I have found a ransome. His flesh shall be fresher than a child's (in the resurrection); he shall return to the days of his youth."—Isa. 35:5-6, 33:24; Job 33:24-25.

Prayer.—Lord's Prayer, all the circle joining.

THURSDAY.

IN a FRIENDLY SORT O'WAY.

When a man ain't got a cent, and he's feeling kind o'blue,
An' the clouds hang dark an' heavy, an' won't let the sunshine through,
It's a great thing, O my brethren, for a feller just to lay
His hand upon your shoulder in a friendly sort o'way.

It makes a man feel curious, it makes the teardrops start,
An' you sort o'feel a flutter in the region of your heart.
You can look up and meet his eyes; you don't know what to say
When his hand is on your shoulder in a friendly sort o'way.

Oh, the world's a curious compound, with its honey and its gall,
With its cares and bitter crosses—but a good world, after all.
An' a good God must have made it—leastways, that is what I say,
When a hand is on my shoulder in a friendly sort o'way.

FRIDAY.

SUCCESS.

"Whatsoever ye do, do it heartily as unto the Lord."—Col. 3:17.

"If thou doest not well, sin coucheth at the door."—Gen. 4:7.

He has achieved success who has lived well, laughed often and loved much; who has gained the respect of intelligent men and the love of little children; who has filled his niche and accomplished his task; who has left the world better than he found it, whether by an improved poppy, a perfect poem or a rescued soul; who has never lacked appreciation of earth's beauty or failed to express it; who has looked for the best in others and given the best he had; whose life was an inspiration; whose memory is a benediction.—Mrs. A. J. Stanley.

Prayer.—Our Father, may we have the love and the joy of all. May we fill our place well, and help somebody along life's way. Give unto us to do our best and inspire others to their best. Amen.

SATURDAY.

THE SADNESS OF THE EMPTY SEAT.

"Thou shall be missed, because thy seat will be empty."—1 Sam. 20:17-18.

David had decided not to go to Saul's feast. There was good reason. The king might try his javelin on him again. But David had his own seat at the table, and Jonathan said to him, "Thou wilt be missed, because thy seat will be empty."

The empty seat revives many memories and teaches some important lessons. You remember the time you came back from the cemetery, after those sad days? You found that the sad days were just beginning. It is the empty seat that hurts.

There is the empty seat in the house of God, when you stay away without cause. It is your place, and no one else can fill it. If people only knew how they are missed in the sanctuary! Perhaps you are habitually absent. If you could but visualize that gaping vacancy in the sanctuary, you would not be able to stay away. There is an empty seat at the Lord's table, too, and it is for you. It belongs to no one else. No other can fill it. How many communions must pass by in the Lord's house until you come and take your appointed place? The individualism of the gospel is tremendous in its appeal. God wants the vacancies taken. "That my house may be filled."

How many empty seats there are in the world! Some place of duty has been summoning you, lo! these many days, and your seat is still empty. We are missed when our places are empty.—Rev. Edgar Whitaker Work.

Prayer.—Lord's Prayer, all the circle joining.

SUNDAY.

WHEN GOD REBUKES.

"Remove thy stroke away from me."—Psa. 39:7-11.

The word "rebuke" does not sound good to us, and the chief reason for this is that we have grown to think of the word apart from its original meaning. To rebuke is really to keep back, to restrain. So that the thought of the passage is that God finds it necessary to restrain us, or keep us back from something that would not be for our good. There is one motive only in His rebukes—to correct.

Time would fail to tell of all the ways in which the dear Lord may rebuke us. When He met Saul of Tarsus in the way, He rebuked him. Paul tells us that he was "apprehended," but the meaning is the same. The prophet was rebuked when God asked, "What doest thou here?" And every one of us is rebuked when God, through His great grace, lifts us from "the horrible pit and the miry clay."

And so on through our lives, we are rebuked again and again, always and ever with the desire to correct us. And if we could only see this in the proper light, we would as gladly invite the rebukes of God as we do the criticism that we know is designed to help us. It would naturally follow that the more willing we are to be corrected, the less need there would be for correction.—Rev. I. D. Lyttle.

Kiddies' Korner

MADGE FLEMING MOFFITT, Editor.

Dear Kiddies:

Bobby Bear asked his Scout-master to help him buy a Scout uniform; and now since Bobby is a Scout, he is trying to find something to do for other folks all the time. Isn't he a dear little Bear? And what do you s'pose! Bobby's father bought him 'nuff lumber to build an ice-cream stand in the front yard, with a counter to lean up against, and real ice cream, and all Bobby's friends come around and talk, and talk, and talk, just like their grown-up papas! And all day it's the mostest fun! I forgot to say that Mother Bear helps Bobby have a good time. Isn't that grand? She looks after all their sore toes and cut-off fingers, and she hopes Little Brother Bear, when he grows up six years longer, he won't like to sell ice cream. But, oh! all little brothers try to be like their big brothers; so look out, Mother Bear!

I forgot to tell you that Bobby Bear has a beautiful little sister that loves Bobby a lot—oh, my! she does indeed! And just the other day she kissed Bobby in the eye, and it hurt Bobby Bear's eye-blinkers, and he cried.

Dear me! the park is full of Kiddies, playing and swimming; and how happy they are! Come and play in our park, dears. It's a wonderful place for summertime Kiddies to stay.

Here we go now. Your Editor,
MADGE FLEMING MOFFITT.

FROM THE KIDDIES.

Franklinton, N. C., June 6, 1925.

Dear Editor:

Our school closed yesterday. We are out until next September. I like to read the "Kiddies' Korner." I am writing you my vacation letter. I guess I will go to Georgia for my vacation. I guess I will go to Norfolk, too. I would like for you to be with me. Your friend,
KATHRYN WHITAKER.

Reidsville, N. C., June 9, 1925.

Dear Editor:

This is my first letter to THE CHRISTIAN SUN. I am ten years old. When school starts I will be in the sixth grade. My mother takes THE SUN. I read the "Kiddies' Korner" every week. I like the story about "Old Witch Neda," which was published a long time ago. I liked the story about Mr. Barton in China.

We have a Willing Workers' Society in our Sunday School. I go to the Montgomery Street Christian Church, of Reidsville, N. C. I go to Sunday School every Sunday I can.

I want the children of the "Kiddies' Korner" to write to me. I will put my address at the last. I hope my letter will be well enough to publish in THE SUN. I will close. From

NO SIGN OF A POUT.

By Frances L. Johnson.

With a scowl on her face, Dorothy May Peterson awoke. It was Saturday morning, and her mother was going shopping without her. That was why the scowl was there. Because Dorothy did not like to be left at home, she had made up her mind to pout all day long.

As she lay there frowning, her big sister called to her from the foot of the stairs: "Hurry down to breakfast, Dorothy, before it gets cold."

"I don't want any breakfast," answered Dorothy, as cross as she could be. But she got up and dressed and looked at her cross little face in the mirror.

"I don't care!" she muttered.

When she went downstairs she found that her mother had left on the early train. Her sister tried to make her smile. "Come, Dotty, eat your breakfast," she said and pulled out Dorothy's chair.

But Dorothy wouldn't smile, and she wouldn't sit down to breakfast. She took a piece of bread and butter and went outdoors and slammed the door behind her. Presently she started down the street toward her friend Elsie's, but she was still scowling.

Elsie saw her coming and ran to meet her. "Dorothy, just look at Daisy's new dress!" she cried, and she held up her favorite doll.

Dorothy gave a little sniff. "I don't see why you made a new dress for such a pug-nosed doll as Daisy," she said. "She's very homely!"

The happy smile left Elsie's bright little face, and her lips began to quiver. Very slowly she turned away and went into the house.

Dorothy had not meant to hurt Elsie's feelings, but she still felt cross; so she only said, "I don't care!" and went on to her cousin Ruth's.

She found Ruth in the back yard, singing at the top of her voice. No wonder she sang! All her doll's clothes were hanging on the line so early in the morning.

"Hello, Dorothy!" she called, gayly. "Come and look at my wash. Doesn't everything look lovely?"

"The stockings are hung up the wrong way," Dorothy grumbled.

For a moment, Ruth looked as if she wanted to be cross, too; but she changed her mind and went into the house.

"I don't care!" said Dorothy, sullenly, and went into the next yard, where Rose Day was combing the snarl out of her little dog's hair.

Rose looked up with a smile when she saw Dorothy. "Doesn't Jip look sweet?" she asked.

"He looks dirty," answered Dorothy, though her voice wasn't quite as cross this time.

Still, Rose got up and carried the dog into the kitchen. It was hard to keep Jip clean. He seemed to love the dirt.

"I don't care!" Dorothy said again as she saw Rose go. With her head in the air she walked out of the yard and across the street to Jeanette miller's. Jeanette was practicing on the piano, and so Dorothy walked right in. Of course, Jeanette was glad to see her. "Listen to my new piece," she said, and began to play it.

Dorothy listened just one minute. Then she cried out: "That isn't the way to play it. You don't keep the right time."

Jeanette stopped playing and wheeled around on the stool. Her dark eyes were flashing. "If you don't like the way I play it, play it yourself," she said, and ran upstairs.

"I don't," began Dorothy, but she didn't get any further, for two big tears rolled down her cheeks.

She wiped them away and turned back toward home. She was thinking hard. When she passed Elsie's house she saw Elsie on the porch with Daisy in her arms. The doll's long curls shone in the bright sunshine. Suddenly Dorothy crossed the street and called out: "O Elsie, Daisy's hair is beautiful!"

Right away Elsie ran down by Dorothy. "Isn't it?" she cried.

"And the new blue dress is lovely," Dorothy added.

By that time, Elsie had her arm round Dorothy, and Dorothy had her arm round Elsie, and Dorothy felt a great deal happier.

She stayed and played with Elsie awhile, then went back to Ruth's house, where Ruth was just taking down the wash.

"Ruth, I wish you would tell me how you keep the colored dresses from fading," Dorothy said, and this time she smiled instead of scowling.

"Why, I just wash them by themselves and hang them in the shade," Ruth explained, and she smiled too. "Will you help me fold them?" As soon as the clothes were folded, Dorothy went over to see Rose, who was tying a big red bow on Jip's collar.

"Jip looks so soft and silky. I don't see how you got all the tangles out," Dorothy said.

Rose looked pleased. "Jip is very good," she answered. "He lets me comb him until every tangle is gone."

A little while later, Dorothy crossed the street and called on Jeanette again. Jeanette wasn't very friendly at first.

"Will you please play your new piece for me again, Jeanette?" Dorothy asked shyly. "I like to hear you play the runs. You play them ever so much better than I do."

Jeanette sat down to the piano. "I'll play it if you will help me get the time right," she answered with a smile.

In a minute both little girls were as interested as could be. They made a duet of the piece that sounded so good that Jeanette's mother came in to hear it.

Dorothy went home at luncheon time. She was smiling happily, for every one of the girls had promised to come and play with her in the afternoon. When she brushed her hair and changed her dress, there was no scowling face in the mirror, and when she went to meet her mother there was no sign of a pout.

FLEMING.

Mr. Pendleton Fleming was born December 7, 1841, and died June 7, 1925, being 83 years and 6 months old. He had been a member of the Primitive Baptist Church for about twenty-five years. For the last few years he had been a great sufferer from cancer on his face, which caused his death.

The funeral was conducted in Leaksville Christian Church Wednesday, une 10th, and his body was buried in the Leaksville Cemetery. He is survived by his widow, four sons, four daughters, twenty-one grandchildren, and nine great-grandchildren. He was a man of sterling Christian character, a good neighbor, and a good husband and father. He was not only a member of the Church, but a man of prayer. Funeral services were conducted by the writer, assisted by Elder R. H. Pittman, of the Primitive Baptist Church.

Linville, Va. R. P. CRUMPLER.

HERRING.

Mary D. Herring was born May 6, 1850, and departed this life May 9, 1925, at the age of 75 years, 3 days. She was a faithful member of the Mt. Olivet Christian Church, near McGaheysville. Her husband, Bro. Edward Herring, is one of the leading members there. Their home has often been the preacher's pleasant stopping-place when in that community.

The funeral services were held May 12, 1925, at Elkton Methodist Church, and the body laid to rest in a beautiful mausoleum in Harrisonburg. Surviving are her husband, one son, and one grandson.

A. W. ANDES.

BAKER.

Allen Leroy Baker, son of Bro. and Sister J. B. Baker, of New Market, was born December 21, 1921, and died May 19, 1925, aged 3 years, 4 months, and 28 days. The parents are members of Concord Christian Church, and the little body was conveyed to that place May 20th, where funeral services were held and interment made in the adjoining cemetery.

A. W. ANDES.

MASON.

Mabel Kathryn Grubbs Mason was born April 10, 1903, and died May 28, 1925, aged 22 years, 1 month and 18 days. It was my privilege to receive Sister Mason into the Timber Ridge Church about seven or eight years ago, and she remained a faithful member until death. She is survived by her husband, her mother, three brothers, and two sisters.

Funeral services were held at Timber Ridge May 31st. A large congregation attended the services, thus showing the high esteem in which the deceased was held.

A. W. ANDES.

HOLMES.

Miss Longenia Holmes, age 81, daughter of William and Nancy Holmes, a devout Christian from young girlhood, and member of one of the leading families in North Carolina, passed peacefully away at her home on June 10, 1925. Funeral services were held at Pope's Chapel on the 11th. Miss Eliza Holmes is the only surviving sister. "Old age walks thoughtfully upon the silent shore of that ocean upon which it must sail so soon."

THE SOUTHERN SERVES THE SOUTH

Whose interest in the Southern is greatest?

We who are devoting our lives in the service of this railroad like to call it ours.

The investors who have put their faith and money into it to make it an efficient transportation machine—they speak of it as theirs.

And you who travel on it, whose goods it carries, and whose business depends on its regular service day in and day out —are you not entitled to call it yours?

We all have a feeling of pride and proprietorship in the Southern, and it is through the cooperative efforts of all of us that it has come to be the great railway system that it is.

This spirit will build a greater Southern to serve a greater South.

SOUTHERN RAILWAY SYSTEM

CATECHISM.

7. What does the Third Commandment teach?

That we must not swear falsely, or speak of God in a light and careless way, and that we must not use blasphemous words of any kind whatever.

8. What is the Fourth Commandment?

Remember the Sabbath Day to keep it holy. Six days shalt thou labor and do all thy work; but the seventh day is a Sabbath unto Jehovah thy God: in it thou shalt not do any work, thou, nor thy son, nor thy daughter, thy man-servant, nor thy maid-servant, nor thy cattle, nor thy stranger that is within thy gates: for in six days Jehovah made heaven and earth, the sea, and all that in them is, and rested the seventh day: wherefore, Jehovah blessed the Sabbath Day and hallowed it.

9. What does the Fourth Commandment teach?

That we should keep one day in seven as a day of rest from our worldly labors, and as a day of special worship to God.

10. What is the Fifth Commandment?

Honor thy father and thy mother, that thy days may be long in the land which Jehovah thy God giveth thee.

11. What does the Fifth Commandment teach?

That we should fully obey our parents so long as we are under their authority, and that we should love and reverence them so long as we live.

12. What is the Sixth Commandment?

Thy shalt not kill.

13. What does the Sixth Commandment teach?

That we shall not take the life of our fellow-men, except in self-defense.

14. What is the Seventh Commandment?

Thou shalt not commit adultery.

15. What does the Seventh Commandment teach?

That we must not yield to the unholy lusts of the flesh.

16. What is the Eighth Commandment?

Thou shalt not steal.

17. What does the Eighth Commandment teach?

That we must not take what belongs to others without just pay, and that we must in no way deceive them in order to deprive them of their property or money for less than its worth.

18. What is the Ninth Commandment?

Thou shalt not bear false witness against thy neighbor.

19. What does the Ninth Commandment teach?

That we shall not slander others, nor misrepresent them, to their injury.

20. What is the Tenth Commandment?

Thou shalt not covet thy neighbor's house, thou shalt not covet thy neighbor's wife, nor his man-servant, nor his maid-servant, nor his ox, nor his ass, nor anything that is thy neighbor's.

21. What does the Tenth Commandment teach?

That we should not envy others in the possession of anything that is theirs, nor seek to deprive them of it; that we should be more willing to give than to receive.

22. What is the sum of the Ten Commandments?

(1) To love God with our whole soul, mind, and strength.

(2) To love our neighbor as ourselves.

BRITT.

On Thursday, June 4th, Mr. Mills Britt passed from this life to his reward. He had just entered his ninetieth year in this span here that we call our earthly life, or life in the flesh. He was a faithful soldier in the Civil War. I am told by those that knew him best that he was a faithful soldier for his Christ and always ready to testify, as he had an opportunity, to His saving grace and abiding love. In his last days, his physical sight was almost gone, but his spiritual sight was clear and his hope firm.

He leaves two daughters, Mrs. Lewis, of Suffolk, and Mrs. Eulice Hall, of Walters, as well as many relatives and friends. May God's richest blessing rest and abide with his children and those that are left to continue life's toils on earth.

ELISHA BRADSHAW.

MATTOCK.

Mrs. Rebecca R. Mattock, relict of the late-lamented R. A. Mattock, of the Stoney Creek community, Alamance County, N. C., was born August 22d, 1842, and departed this life June 8, 1925. Her age was 82 years, 9 months and 14 days. Three daughters and two sons survive her, namely: Mrs. Frank Barker, Mrs. Mamie Rice, J. W., R. J., and Miss Sallie Mattock. The deceased was a member of Mt. Vernon Methodist Church, and was a most pious and exemplary Christian woman. The funeral services were conducted from Stoney Creek Presbyterian Church by the writer Tuesday P. M., June 9th, there being a large company of neighbors, relatives and friends present to pay their loving tribute of respect. Truly a good and noble woman has gone to her reward.

Religion the Nation's Great Need.—

"Government of a country never gets ahead of the religion of a country. There is no way by which we can substitute the authority of law for the virtue of man. Peace, justice, humanity, charity, these can not be legislated into being. They are the result of divine grace."—PRESIDENT COOLIDGE.

Delaware Law To Be Tested.—

The recently enacted Delaware law compelling the reading of ten verses of scripture in all the schools of that state daily is to be tested by Dr. Clarence B. Skinner, chairman of the committee on Academic freedom of the American Civil union league. Since it is customary to use the King James Version, the law means that only Protestantism can be taught in Delaware, which makes a test imperative. It seems that the Supreme Court is destined to be busy with religiously inclined laws very soon. Dr. Skinner is a professor in Tuft's College.

Law Upon Law.—

During 1924, 38,844 laws were proposed in the Congress of the United States and the legislatures of the various states, and 10,809 of these were actually enacted. This is, we believe, the largest output of our legislative branches in any one year up-to-date. It is absurd to attempt to reform mankind from the outside in. The process must be reversed. There is some chance perhaps, of reforming mankind from the inside out, but that is not done by law upon law. It is done by the love and power of Christ, the one great thing which the church has to offer the world. No set of men or sets of men have a right to waste so much time as our legislative branches wasted last year, besides, all this vast material has to be printed, and we wonded why taxes are so high. The citizens owe it to themselves to send sane men to the capitals of the nation and the states. That is the least which could be expected of them.

Newspapers Win.—

The supreme court of the United States has decided that Newspapers have a right to publish income tax figures. The decision was handed down in test cases of the government versus the Baltimore Post, and the Kansas City Journal Post. The act of the last Congress authorizing the posting of tax lists for public inspection did not mean newspaper publication the government maintained. The newspapers said that it did, and they won both in the lower courts and in the supreme Court. Now we shall know how much income tax the many millionaires of this country pay each year, and that will give us some idea of how wealth is accumulating in the hands of a few. It will probably cause the average man to do some thinking, and some thinking along such lines is needed. When wealth accumulates, men decay, and there is facing this country a genuine problem in this direction.

Clergy Blamed For Tennessee Affair.—

The fear of clergymen to preach what they believe to their congregations is the direct cause of the condition of the State of Tennessee, Dr. Lynn Harold Hough contended in a speech in connection with the Garrett Biblical Institute at Evanston, Ill., where he was formerly a professor. Dr. Hough said: "We are paying a price for our lack of honesty. For twenty-five years the evolutionary conceptions of the old Testament have been accepted by preachers as a. b. c.'s, but we have not preached them to the people as we ought. The same is true of our preaching on the subject of sex. The doctrine of Freud that reproduction is the central motive power in the universe may be true, but it has ruined millions by confining the subject simply to physical reproduction. We must teach young people to face the reality of their fundamental instincts, but they must also be taught the higher motives which transcend the physical."

A Red Letter Day.—

On June 10, three great historical churches of Canada came to an end as individual entities. The Methodists, Congregationalist, and Presbyterian churches came together on that day as the United Church of Canada. This union is the consummation of more than a quarter of century of effort, and has been fraught with many difficulties. The Methodist and Congregationalist churches went into the union as a whole, but the Presbeyterian church split about half and half on the question. The irreconcilables will form a new church, but the United Church of Canada will go on triumphantly. Never before has any considerable number of Christians undertaken so literally to aid in the fulfilment of our Lord's prayer. June 10 is not only a red letter day for the Christians of Canada, but is such a day for all Cristendom. Nothing so stirs the imagination as does such an adventure in brotherhood and understanding as this. It is the most significant thing in the religious life of modern times, and means that a better day is dawning on the world.

The Y. Has Come Back.—

Raisin' was the work in the Detroit Campaign a few weeks ago. Some of the men thought it was California fruit propaganda, but it wasn't. It was the Y. M. C. A. after five million dollars to build in the Motor city a great central plant and seven branches to care for the 141,000 young men and the 60,000 boys. They got it all, and $502.000 besides. The campaign was headed by Honorable Edwin Denby, former Secretary of the Navy, and the most notable Y. men in the country spoke for it from 110 pulpits on the opening Sunday. There were secured in this campaign two gifts of three-quarters of a million each, two of half a million and four of one hundred thousand dollars. 12,400 persons contributed to this gigantic Y. fund. It is the largest Y. M. C. A. fund ever raised any time, anywhere, with the exception of the war fund. It shows that all the criticism which the Y. underwent just after the war on account of alleged mismanagement does not affect the great motor kings of Detroit, Michigan. Most of that criticism emanated from sources which never finds anything good in Protestantism, but the one thing which it shows is that the Y. has come back stronger than before, and that people appreciate what it has to offer the young men of a great city, and are willing to stand behind it to the amount of five and a half million dollars. That spells confidence, and spells it in capital letters, too.

Another Defense Day.—

After having suggested Armistice day for Defense day, and finding that real Americans could not quite stomach the combination of a day set apart to the hope of ending war with preparation for wholesale murder, the War department had to look for another day. The Fourth of July has been determined upon as Defense day. Somehow the War department forgot that the document said that ALL MEN are endowed with certain INALIENABLE RIGHTS, and that among these are life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness. The Department is evidently relying on noise to drown out whatever the church may have to say on the matter. They want us to believe that when you get down to the bottom of the question that national security depends on guns, submarines, airplanes and poison gas, and that all this talk of righteousness, love and brotherhood is of no account. Every Christian who is in touch with the Father knows that nothing in all the world could possibly be falser than this. The church which stands for righteousness, love and brotherhood ought to speak out brave and clear on this point. We are the government, not Secretary Weeks, and as for that matter, all the Washington officials, and we as a people have a right to assert ourselves. Defense day is a militaristic gesture. We fought Germany because she was militaristic, and now we are developing a case every whit as bad. How strange are men, but let us stand firm as a church for the eternal things. Guns, submarines, airplanes and poison gas will pass, but the truth of God is eternal with the Heavens. It shall not pass away. Peace hath its victories no less than war; let us win them. Peace hath greater tests of manhood than battle ever knew; let us stand in the testing.

NOTES-PERSONALS

The Ladies' Aid Society of First Christian Church, of Richmond, Va., will give a Lawn Party on the Church lawn, July 2.

President W. A. Harper made an address last Thursday p. m., before the Virginia State Christian Endeavor Convention in Norfolk.

Rev. W. T. Walters, pastor of the First Christian Church, of Richmond, made an address before the Eastern Virginia Ministers' Conference at Norfolk Y. M. C. A. last Monday.

Miss Pattie Coghill, Field Secretary of the Board of Religious Education, who has been spending a year in the Boston University, stopped over in Richmond and led the Sunday evening Christian Endeavor service.

There were added to The Christian Sun's mailing list twenty-one new subscribers, besides renewals, as the result of the interest developed in the Reidsville Christian Church. We desire to thank the good people of that church through their pastor.

The program for the Elon College Chautauqua is about completed. Those in charge have endeavored to make it the strongest and most practical program presented since the inauguration of the movement. This session will be held July 27 to August 7.

Elsewhere, President C. H. Stephenson, of the Eastern N. C. S. S. and C. E., Convention writes about the next session at Oak Level with interest and enthusiasm. This is one of our best and biggest Conventions and every School, Church and Society in the conference is most likely to be represented, or should be at any rate.

The following is acknowledged—"Mr. and Mrs. John Morgan Darden have the honor of announcing the marriage of their daughter, Gertrude, to Mr. Ford Hopkins Whelden, on Thursday June 18, 1925, 104 Broad Street, Suffolk, Va.," We extend heartiest congratulations and best wishes to these good friends. After August first the happy couple are to be at home at Detroit, Mich.

Rev. P. T. Klapp, who gracefully declines to grow old, in spite of his years, recently supplied for the pastor, Rev. G. C. Crutchfield, at Wakefield, Barretts and Ivor, Va. Brother Klapp reports a pleasant journey and a royal welcome among the faithful ones in these congregations. Brother Crutchfield was away assisting in an evangelistic meeting with our North Danville Church.

In the untimely death of Brother William Frank Corwith at his home, Hempstead, Long Island, N. Y., June 10, our Chrisitan Church and all its enterprises lose a devoted friend, a liberal benefactor, and a generous patron. Dr. W. A. Harper attended the funeral on Sunday June 14, and in his Elon letter of this week pays fitting and beautiful tribute to this worthy and noble character.

More than 600 delegates from different parts of Virginia were in attendance last week at the State C. E. Convention, which met in Christian Temple, Norfolk. President W. A. Harper, of Elon College, was the principal speaker Thursday night, using as his subject, "Youth Facing the Religious Situation of our Time." Brother W. H. Baker, from Newport News Church is president of the Convention.

The Centennial session of our Christian Conference in Ontario, Canada, was held at New Market, June 17-21. Revs. C. J. Felton and E. T. Cotten, from the South, now holding important pastorates in Ontario, had prominent places on the centenial programs, as did Dr. J. F. Burnett, of Dayton, Ohio, and Dr. Fletcher, of our Christian Educational Board.

Rev. Roy C. Helfenstein, D. D., attended the great conference on Evangelism at Northfield, Mass., June 16-18, and presided over the session of Wednesday a. m. the 17th. Dr. Helfenstein is one of the outstanding figures in the field of Evangelism in our country and is rendering great service in that capacity. Other ministers of the Christians attending the Conference were: Brethrens Howsare, Hull and Depor.

Rev. J. M. Roberts, Windsor, Va., was a caller at Elon last week. Brother Roberts has two fine daughters who are making arrangements to enter Elon College at the opening in September. Not having been at the college for several years Bro. Roberts was not prepared to comprehend the progress and improvement made here since he left. He seriously contemplates moving his family to reside here while his daughters are in college.

It is learned through The Herald of Gospel Liberty that Mr. and Mrs. M. Orban, Jr., are to erect a handsome church building in Towanda, Kansas, in memory of Mrs. Orban's father, the Rev. Isaac Mooney. The plans call for a building to cost $100,000, to be begun at once. The Elon College campus is adorned with a building erected by these same generous souls in memory of the same devout man and costing a sum equal to that to be erected at Towanda. Ours is the Mooney Christian Education Building, and is said to be the most unique, efficient for that purpose, and beautiful of any similar building on any college campus in the United States.

Our Reidsville Church having recently received over 100 members, a reception to the new members was given on the evening of June 16, and the following program was carried out:

Song—Blest Be The Tie.
Scripture Reading—Miss Laura Turner.

The Christian Sun, Richmond, Va., "official organ of the Southern Christian Convention," under the heading, "Bible Reading for Ohio Schools," says:

Just before adjournment, the Legislature of Ohio passed the Buchanan bill, providing that ten verses of the Bible shall be read in the opening exercises in every classroom, and that the Ten Commandments shall be learned by every school child. The bill will now have to be signed by the Governor, and if he vetoes it, it will be dead until 1926.

It would not be a bad suggestion if somebody would intorduce a suggestion that "the Bible be read" in the churches. And especially would it be a good thing if somebody would suggest to our popular "pastors" the great propriety of reading, in their churches, the various passages from Jesus and the apostles telling sinners what they must do to be saved.—Gospel Advocate.

THE PREACHER AND THE SCIENTIST.

There is no conflict, or should be none, between the preacher and the scientist, or the preacher and the philosopher. They are friendly co-workers in the fine business of glorifying human life. Each one should stick to his own calling and in that way make the most of both.

The scientist is engaged in showing the meaning, the greatness, and the wonders of the world in which we live—and in teaching us how to make the most of it. The preacher works in the spiritual realm and aims to acquaint men and women with God in order that they may have eternal life and enjoy him forever.—Selected.

NOTICE

The Sunday School and Christian Endeavor Convention of the Eastern North Carolina Christian Conference will hold its next session with the good people of Oak Level Christian Church, near Youngsville, N. C., the second week in July, beginning Tuesday evening the 14th. If you live in the bounds of this Convention and belong to the Christian Church, it seems to me that you owe it to yourself, your Sunday School, your Christian Endeavor Society and your God, to be represented at this Convention, and lend your every possible effort toward making it a great success. Of course we are going to have a big Convention whether You go or not, but think of what you will miss if you stay away, and persist in holding a protracted meeting, going fishing, or making some other excuse. It is YOUR CONVENTION as well as mine. Therefore, I am urging you to be there when it opens, and remain until it closes. The program promises to be a good one. Let all our Schools and Societies get busy NOW, elect a full delegation of live and progressive members, and see to it that they are on the job. I shall expect you, do not disappoint me. Thanks.

WHAT PROHIBITION ACTUALLY DOES.

"Years ago," said Judge E. Y. Webb, of North Carolina, "I stood on historic King's Mountain and saw the smoke of thirty-eight government distilleries. I saw no macadamized roads, scarcely a school house. I saw saloons everywhere. There were only two or three factories, giving employment to two or three hundred people. Some years after the people had driven out this curse, I stood in the same place. I found macadamized roads in almost every part of the county. I saw magnificent churches of almost every denomination. I found school houses in every district of that county. There was not the smoke of a single distillery, but instead I saw the smoke of forty-three of the largest cotton factories in the United States."—Exchange.

NOW I LAY ME DOWN TO SLEEP.

Half a century ago nearly every child in the American Christian home was taught a little prayer of four lines. Notwithstanding the shafts of criticism more recently aimed at this little prayer, it is still enshrined as a gem in the memories of many, and still extensively taught the new generation. Two beautiful illustrations from life indicate how precious this little prayer is to many, both young and old.

A dear old gentleman, over 90 years of age, infirm of body, but mentally as alert as ever in youth, was a frequent guest in the home of his nephew. The door of the guest chamber was left ajar when he retired, that he might the more readily call some member of the family should he be in need during the night. Before he retired he made his evening prayer, and always audibly. And it was the child's prayer:

"Now I lay me down to sleep;
I pray Thee, Lord, my soul to keep.
If I should die before I wake,
I pray Thee, Lord, my soul to take."

He was perfectly familiar with the Lord's Prayer and gifted in extemporary prayer, but in his old age no prayer was so precious to him as that first learned at his mother's knee.

In one of the great city hospitals, says the Youth's Companion, a little girl of eight years awaited a most serious operation, the result of which would be either death, or life with restored health and happiness. The attendants expected a somewhat distressing scene when the ether was administered and were preparing themselves for the cries of fear that frequently occur at such a time. The moment came, and when the attendant approached with the ether, the child lay watching with close attention. Then, suddenly, instead of a cry from her lips, a most beautiful and winsome smile, like the opening of a flower, overspread her small white face. She closed her eyes and reverently repeated in a low sweet voice the child's prayer, "Now I lay me down to sleep," and so on through. There was silence for a moment as tear-filled eyes turned away. Then gently and confidently the serious work began, and the spirit of the little prayer fell as a benediction upon all present.—Exchange.

PRINCIPLES OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

(1) The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.

(2) Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.

(3) The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.

(4) Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship, and of Church membership.

(5) The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by, all.

THE PURPOSE OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

The purpose of this Church is to cultivate a spirit of union among the followers of our Lord Jesus Christ of every persuasion, and to secure, if possible, the associate efforts of all true religious teachers in pointing the wicked to "the Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world."

The peculiar doctrines and tenets which have confused and distracted the Christian world are remanded to private judgment, and hence cease to be matters for debate, only in so far as may be necessary to prevent a sectarian influence from entering the Church.

This Church requires no compromise of faith on the part of any child of God in order to communion or fellowship; here denominational distinctions cease to exist, and Christian love binds the brotherhood together.

The purpose of this Church will be consummated in the conversion of the world and the union of all Christians.

MEN AND MILLIONS AGAIN.

As the report of the Mission Secretary last month showed, and the one for this month will show, many of our faithful and loyal subscribers to Men and Millions are making a worthy and sacrificial effort to meet their obligations. Surely this gives heart and courage to our entire membership. One of our faithful and loyal pastors, living on meagre salary, writes under recent date:

"I am enclosing my check for $25. as another payment on my Men and Millions. I did my best to pay this off before the time was out and I still hope to do so before the year ends through which the Convention has extended the time."

This portrays the spirit of loyalty and devotion worthy of consecrated heart and devoted souls. There are hundreds yet who this year will make a similar sacrificial effort to meet their obligations to this most holy and worthy movement. The Mission Office is sending out statements now to all who are due, advising them exactly how much it will take to pay their pledges in full and discharge their obligations. It is well known beforehand that many will make a desperate effort to discharge this obligation in full, as they learn exactly what the amount is. Many others, of course, because of affliction, will not be able to pay.

Dr. Staley, has well said, "Some, as they look at their pledges to Men and Millions now, may be discouraged, but the remedy for such discouragement is to keep the obligation alive, and bravely and patiently strive to meet the payments. It will not pay to disown these obligations nor to separate them from the real spiritual life. A Christian can no more drop his pledges than he can drop his prayers or his church membership. Misfortune may make it impossible to meet financial obligations. 'When they had nothing to pay, he frankly forgave them both,' Luke 7:42; but not till 'They had nothing to pay.' Obligations to God are as binding as obligations to men, and God will help those who try to keep their pledges." And very many of our loyal and faithful ones are doing their best to keep their pledges.

ARE OUR CHRISTIAN COLLEGES WHAT THEY OUGHT TO BE?

To ask this question is to answer it. Is it not strange that people easily take a fall out of their College simply because they think "it is not what it ought to be." This writer, a while ago, heard a great Christian statesman, orator and scholar, declare emphatically, "Nowhere across the world have we today a single educational institution that is what it ought to be, that is what the men in control of it would like to make it."

When a college establishes itself as a Christian institution, it invites the scrutiny of each Christian within the range of its knowledge. Many have a very high ideal of what a Christian College is or should be, and if there is an event or an occurrence which falls below this high ideal, one is ready to lay the blame at the door of the college. Apply the matter to other institutions. Is there anywhere in the world a local church that is what it ought to be? Is there such a Sunday school, is there such an Endeavor or Missionary Society? Where in all the land is there just such a home as it ought to be, even from the point of view of those who are doing their best to make their home what it ought to be? Where in this world is there a man who is just what he ought to be, from the point of view of all who know him and make inventory of his life and activities?

It was a very good, and now deemed a sainted man, who wrote "Not as though I had already attained, either were already perfect, but I follow after, if I may apprehend that for which also I am apprehended of Christ Jesus. (Phillipians 3:12)

The Christian College touches life at infinite angles and deals at first hand with a multitude of folks. On this account, the way of criticism is broad and easy for its standard of excellence is high and holy. We agree with the Christian statesman who said that no where across the world is there an institution that is ever what the men who are in control of it would like to make it. This does not argue against the institution but for it, for we live in a practical common-place world in which the working out of our high ideals is a dangerous and difficult task.

Our ideals are not to be discarded, however, because they are not attained, but are to be striven for with the greater zeal and effort because they are high and holy and worthy of the very best that we can give to them.

LEARNING THE SPEECH ABOUT CHRIST.

In delivering the closing message at the Washington Conference last February, before an audience that numbered several thousand of our country's most zealous Christian workers, Robert E. Speer used a very significant sentence. It came as the culmination and the grand climax of several days conference in which each speaker had sought to magnify the name of Jesus Christ. It is doubtful, if in any conference of an equal number of days, so many marvelous and superb descriptions and definitions and portrayals of the power of Jesus Christ, were ever given. Then Speer came with this declaration, "There is nothing that can be said about Him (the Christ) that we are not prepared to say about Him, if only we may learn the speech by which to say it." One wonders if this does not to a degree explain some of the accusations and re-criminations Christian brethren in the same camp are using against each other in these days. All are trying to learn the highest and the noblest speech to employ in describing the power, the weight, the influence in the world of our blessed Lord.

Not long since, one who was seeking to magnify His name, a Name which he declared he regarded as above every other name, and the all sufficient Name through faith, that was able to save and redeem mankind, that one would not have to believe in the virgin birth to realize that this was indeed and in truth the Son of God and the Redeemer of Man, for His works and His influence in the world, apart from any incident of birth, substantiated his deity. Was not this brother seeking to learn and employ the speech by and through which he might convey to the world his high ideal and holy estimate of the man Jesus Christ? Immediately, however, there were others equally fair and just who declared this man was a heretic and not true to his Lord.

On the other hand, there are those who according to their own thinking and in the light of their own understanding, are like-wise seeking to employ the speech that will give the finest and most illuminating portrayal of the power of their Lord, an in order to do this they declare that all the halo and all the glory and all the mystery of the virgin birth must be attributed and confessed, both because an authentic prophet had prophesied it, and two of His biographers had declared it as a fact and because the Savior himself by His works had lived up to all the might and the majesty that a wonderous and mysterious and unique birth could confer upon Him.

May not this exaltation, this supreme and unique position of our Lord in the ideals and in the thinking of our day, to a degree, explain some of the divisions, some of the accusations and re-criminations that are being employed among Christians of the same following and household? Get once more the illuminating words of that matchless fundamentalist, but liberal and aggressive Christian Statesman, "There is nothing that can be said about Jesus, the Christ, that we are not prepared to say about Him, if only we may learn the speech by which to say it." One has in mind in this connection the wonderful, the inspired words of St. Paul, in his exhortation to the disturbed Phillipians, "Some indeed preach Christ, even of envy and strife; and some also of good will: . . . What then? Notwithstanding everyway, whether in pretense or in truth, Christ is preached, and I therein do rejoice, yea, and will rejoice. (Phillipians 1:16-18.) Be it said then, in the clamor and tumult of our day, that Jesus Christ is being preached, by some maybe in contention and in strife, by others in all good will and righteousness. May we not with Paul take heart and courage from this fact and with him rejoice, because in it all, Jesus Christ is preached, and the world is seeking a new language and a better speech in and through which to picture and portray Him in all his might, main and majesty to the world?

EVANGELISM.

"He that winneth souls is wise." (Proverbs 11:30)

That was written by a very wise man a long time ago. And the strength of this statement across the centuries has not weakened, but greatly confirmed the wisdom of the wise man's words, He is wise in his day and generation who gives the labor of his hand, the thought of his mind, and the wisdom of his heart to the work of winning souls.

It takes no student of theology, and requires no treaties on science, to convince us that we are in a world of sin. It gets us nowhere to split hairs about total depravity, the fall of man, the innocence or the gilt of the new-born babe. Anyone who has arrived at the years of thinking, or at the period of responsible activity, has confronted the fact of sin. Sin is in the world. The subtlety of its temptations, the allurement of its seductions, the hideousness and the viciousness of its powers are obvious to all who are in the world, and who are capable of observing the experiences and the destinies of mankind. Surely the wise man spoke in the light of infinite wisdom in declaring, "He that winneth souls is wise." The soul is subject to the wiles and allurements of sin, and unless the soul can be won from the ways thereof, only darkness and death await it.

He also was wise and wrote in the light of holy inspiration who said "The wages of sin is death." It is, therefore, contrary to human experience, as it is the height of folly, to ignore the prescence and power of sin. No philosophy, no theology, no science, can obscure the awful fact, the abiding prescence and the deep damnation of sin.

To this end, through all the ages, our God has presented to man a way of escape. Prior to the advent of our Saviour and Redeemer into the world, priestly ceremonies and sacrificial offerings on the sacred altars of God were given through revelation, as the way of man's escape. Since the day of the Cross and the supreme sacrificial offering, there has been a sufficient Name through and by which all who knew Him might escape. The Word tells us that Peter was full of the Holy Ghost and he was, when he declared "Neither is there salvation in any other, for there is none other name under Heaven given among men, whereby we must be saved." (Acts 4:12). That this name might be proclaimed to all men across the centuries that were to come, and may yet be, the Church was estblished.

We shall bear in mind then that while the Church has many other functions, its chief duty is this; namely, to win souls to Jesus Christ. Unless the Church can do this there is no room left for it in the world, it has no function worthy of the name.

The Church may have and must have its auxiliary societies, its schools of training and equipment, its ornamentations and its armament for the training and development of those whom it may reach and of the community it would serve. Nothing, however, can obscure the one primary purpose for which the Church was born in the world and has its place amongst men. "He that winneth souls is wise." That Church membership alone is wise that winneth souls.

As to the methods of evangelism, different periods and different communities require changes, variety and adaptation. However, these may be to suit the conditions, though, attitude and temperament of the times, one fact still remains, that the great objective is winning souls to Christ. The further fact is the proper training of these souls when they are won. It was of these the inspired writer was speaking when he said "Work out your own salvation with fear and trembling." One has no salvation to work out until the same has been given true grace and belief in the Lord Jesus Christ. Yes, the Church must go forward with its training of those who have been won, and seek to help them as they fear and tremble in the process of working out their salvation, but evangelism is the process of wisdom in winning souls, and to this many of our Churches within the next few weeks will be giving themselves with zeal, fervor, and we trust, with prevailing faith and power.

REV. WILLIAM SAMUEL LONG, D. D.

(Prepared for Providence Memorial Association, Graham, N. C., Sunday June 7th, by J. O. Atkinson, and printed by request of the faculty.)

The one who gives to the world an idea compels the respect and wins the esteem of mankind. It is this that gives one weight and worth in the world. Man does not live by bread alone. His meat and his drink are ideas. This is what is meant by doing the will of God—having ideas, and giving them to the world, which ideas help to make strong men and women, able, worthwhile, robust characters in the world who do the will of God in serving well their fellow-man.

Consider him a moment who contributes to the world an idea, a real, stalwart, stubborn, strong, enduring idea. Moses was such a man; likewise David, Isaiah, Daniel, Peter, John, Paul. In times more modern, Martin Luther, John Wesley, John Knox, James O'Kelly, Dwight L. Moody. I speak of men in the moral and spiritual realm. It will be found that each of these men, and all of their kind gave to the world, or were the heroic and uncompromising champions of an idea. The torchbearers of the world have been and are those who go forth with an idea in their minds, hands and hearts. Such men, I say, compel the respect and win the undying esteem of mankind. Why?

The answer is simple. The man with an idea gives other men an opportunity and a chance. Moses had an idea that gave him the name of "Law Giver"—that great law giver. Moses, in giving his idea of law to the world, gave more than a million slaves and bondsmen the chance and the opportunity to become a nation of freemen, and to build up a royal priesthood that was to be famous and noted for all time. David, by giving to his world the idea of poetry, music, sweet songs, all inspired by a simple faith in God, that made a ruddy shepherd's lad a victorious conqueror over a blaspheming Goliath, this man gave a whole nation the chance and the opportunity of becoming, as it did become, a nation of heroes in the armies of the Lord God of Israel in their successful efforts to establish in the world a throne and a standard of righteousness that never should end nor perish from the world. The man who champions heroically or contributes to that world a real, stalwart, worth-while idea gives other men a chance in the world and opportunities they never had before.

In all that has now been said, one who was well acquainted with him is thinking of William Samuel Long, later and better known to the world as Rev. W. S. Long, D. D., teacher, preacher, character-builder. He was born on his father's farm, not far from where we are assembled today, on October 22, 1839, and fell on sleep, in a hospital at Sanford, N. C., Sunday afternoon August 3, 1924, thus making the span of his days on earth eighty-four years, nine months, eleven days. The Word of God tells us to honor our father and our mother, that the days of our life may be long on the earth that the Lord our God hath given us. William Samuel Long honored his father and his mother, and God verified His promise in extending on the earth the life of this man nearly fifteen years beyond our allotted threescore years and ten. Honor, esteem, admiration for his father and mother was a passion with this man, and one would not be in his company long without learning that father and mother were words with him that carried weight, worth, power, respect, honor and reverence. This man believed that parental authority meant something, and that there was no other authority that should or could supplant it, or take its place. He believed with all his heart and soul that obedience was the first plank in the platform of right character-building, and that there was no better place to inculcate obedience than to plant it where it had been planted for him, namely: in the home and in early childhood. We shall never get away from, nor improve upon, this as a necessary and fundamental virtue—that of obedience. William Samuel Long, himself obedient to the best rules of a cultured, dignified and refined manhood, required obedience in those who came under his tutilage and authority.

The nobler and more austere virtues found place in this man's heart and found favor in his sight. He was born of sturdy and austere stock, and was reared in a family whose members came to usefulness, and several of them to fame and distinction in the professions that claimed their talents. Dr. George W. Long, Colonel Jacob A. Long, Joseph Long, John H. Long, Judge Ben F. Long, Mrs. J. N. H. Clendenin, all deceased, and Dr. Daniel Albright Long, the only surviving member of this remarkable family, are names with which all of us are familiar, and all of whom served their day and generation well.

In the person of William S. Long, an idea came to fruitage and to fame that will ever make his memory cherished and his name honored in Alamance County among all citizens, and throughout the length and borders of the Christian Church everywhere. I refer to the idea of Christian education in general, and of thorough and adequate preparation for those entering the ministry in particular. This idea drove this stalwart soul to found, to father, and to foster Elon College. In season and out of season, through rain and shine and shadow, through trials, tears and triumphs he carried, he championed and he challenged this idea. Those who opposed a college, an institution of higher learning, where Christian character should be first and foremost in those who taught and those who learned these, in this section of the Christian Church, could not conquer this man, nor could their indifference and lack of support daunt or deter him. When friends and foes alike said it could not be done, that there were no funds with which to build it, and no students to patronize it, he said with all the mind, means and manhood he could command, "Yes, but it shall be done." And it was done! There is no human power or agency to conquer a man who carries in his heart sealed orders signed and delivered by Him who said, "All authority in heaven and on earth hath been given unto me. Go!" "All things are possible with God."

William Samuel Long believed that one who was right and had God on his side was a majority. And what such a majority said must be done, could be done. And it was done! So the critics wavered and waned and fell by the wayside. Elon College was built and this man's idea took concrete form in brick and mortar and stone and in human character.

This was this man's firm and fixed idea—that the youth in the Christian Church should have a chance at a liberal education and higher learning under Christian influence and guidance. And his idea has prevailed.

True greatness in any man is measured, not by what that man in himself achieves, but in the chance and opportunity he affords to others. George Washington gave a whole country the chance and the opportunity to be free. Hence, we magnify his character and call it great. He gave others a chance—that's all.

Abraham Lincoln we call great and exalt him among the mighty. He gave others a chance—that's all. We always honor men who, by their achievements, give others a chance. All true greatness is measured by this standard.

One is thinking now of hundreds and thousands to whom Dr. W. S. Long gave a chance to achieve in live the opportunity to do and to be. These honor him, and will honor him, as one of nature's and God's noble men because he held to and lived for an idea, which idea resulted in giving many thousands a chance. A clear, forceful and able preacher of the Word, a profound scholar and capable teacher, a gentleman, a man of dignity, refinement and culture, a consistent Christian who, by precept and example, practiced the high principles of Christian-building laid down by our Lord, he lived well and nobly in his day, and the world will not forget him now that he is gone.

SUFFOLK LETTER

This is the age of locomotion and distribution. The world is round and the people go around it. Great men have given place to great things. Men are no longer great because they wear crowns, but because they invent, discover, or produce great things for great uses. Kings vanish and people become great. Men are great in what they represent. Democracy produces that kind of great men. Christianity produces great organizations that benefit mankind. Locomotion is seen on land, on the seas, and in the air. By these means people come in contact with one another, and learn from others. We know nothing except what we learn from others. All teachers and all books simply put us in touch with the thought and achievements of others. Then we learn from nature which is another teacher and another source of information. There are no oustanding scholars in this day as there were a hundred years ago. Education, like material products, has been distributed on such a wide scale that a great scholar does not appear as great as he did years ago.

A diploma does not mean what it once did. High schools graduate students by the thousands all over the country. These graduates wear gowns and Oxford caps and receive their parchments just as university graduates do. The multitudes make no discrimination between diplomas. Hence, a diploma does not have the same value it did when a few people used to have them framed and hung on their walls. The day of diploma aristocracy has gone forever. The public does not want to see your diploma, but you. What you are, what you can do, and the sacrifice you are willing to make for others is the touchstone of this age.

Wealth is greater than ever before, but the rich man is not as great as he used to be. There was a time when the rich were known by the clothes they wore, the houses they lived in, the vehicles they rode in, and the resorts they patronized and the parties they attended. The products of modern civilization are so widely distributed that the rich and poor meet together; the Lord is the maker of them all. The public school educates all alike; the merchant sells to all alike. Human distinctions, other than real distinctions, vanish as civilization moves forward. Among the savages and the semi-civilized, rulers and rich men stand out in bold relief and ladies shine in royal robes; but the day comes on apace when character, ability and willingness to work, are chief factors in human standing. The day of a few big men has passed and the day of many useful men dawns. Christian democracy has lifted all men to a higher level and a better life. Discords vanish and harmonies blend in one common life of service and peace.

ELON LETTER

"Isn't it so, Frank?" queried the boss who was exceedingly anxious to conclude a real estate deal with a hesitating customer. "No, it isn't," instantly returned Frank.

Frank was at that time in his 18th year and had been employed in his present position about a year. During that time, though a mere lad in years and size, he had built for himself an enviable record for integrity. People who dealt with the firm, preferred him to the boss.

When the prospective customer had gone, the boss turned savagely on Frank and demanded to know what he meant by not helping him put his deal across. "You must never do such a thing again," the boss demanded. "I am sorry, sir," said the boy, "I will work for you, but I cannot tell an untruth." "Get out of here," yelled the boss, "you will never make a real estate man."

The brokenhearted boy went to his father's home and then to his minister's. Both assured him he had done right. Within a few days the boss sent for Frank. He went, fearing and trembling, but was delighted to be asked to return to his work. "You are young and inexperienced," the boss told Frank. "You will eventually learn the game." "I will come back, sir," said the boy, "on condition that I work hard for you, but that I always tell the truth." The boss agreed and Frank went to his desk.

Within a year the boy's popularity was such that the boss offered to sell him the business. Being then barely eighteen, and without funds, he felt he could not buy. His father however, mortgaged his home to supply him the money and the business ran for three years in his father's name. When he was twenty-one Frank had repaid his father and began the business in his own name. Later his brother was associated with him in the business, first as an assistant and then as a stock-holder and partner.

On June 7, 1924, W. F. Corwith, for that was the Frank of 1873, celebrated the fiftieth anniversary of Corwith Brothers as real estate and insurance men. The policy of honesty and integrity which Frank Corwith, lad of seventeen, had insisted on had been consistently followed for half a century and with remarkable success in business achievement. Once when I was visiting the head of this firm at his Manhattan office, we went to a bank where he had business. While I was waiting for him the president of the bank engaged me in conversation. One remark I especially remember was that " Corwith Brothers is one real estate firm in Brooklyn whose word is better than many bonds."

My first acquaintance with Brother Corwith came in 1919, when the Elon College Standardization Fund was being raised. He was spending the winter months at Southern Pines. Brother Corwith was always a delicate man and had to garner his strength with sedulous care. For thirty-five years he had been under necessity to winter in a warmer climate than New York,though the last time we talked which was in April, 1924, he assured me he expected to live five years more. My introduction to my friend came through the mails in the form of a simple message. "Will you permit an unknown friend from the North to help you in your campaign? I enclose my check for $1,000." I wrote him my thanks and suggested he might wish to give a subscription for $1,000. each year for four more years. He wrote by return mail for the blanks. Later he visited Elon and voluntarily added another five thousand, for an additional period of five years. This was the beginning of his benefactions to the College, which have reached well up toward the one hundred thousand dollar mark, with full intention to add still more largely in those remaining five years which he confidently expected to live. It was characteristic of him as a giver that he did not require any solicitation. All he desired was a statement as to need and plan. His greatheartness did the rest. He was generous to other Colleges, to the orphanages, to the mission and Church-building enterprises, to the General Convention and its causes, to all that in any way represented the Christian Church. He loved to give. It was a joy to see him modestly donate twenty-five thousand dollars and then quietly add: "Please see that no publicity is given this gift." He made the same reservation with reference to his noble bequest to the General Convention of his Church.

As a friend and guest in the home he was most charming and engaging. The slightest attention brought an immediate expression of appreciation. He loved his friends and they loved him. It was a benediction to them to have him visit them. He communicated the beautiful atmosphere of his own fine character to all in the home in which he was even the most casual visitor.

He was truly a gentle man. The word is now compounded in old English tongue, but you always thought of the adjective and of the noun when you associated the concept with William Frank Corwith. He was all that any man should be an he was gentle. He rarely talked about his affairs, not because he was a recluse, but because he was too gentle and modest to intrude them upon his friends. He talked little, except to his bosom friends, but when he did talk it was an inspriation to be privileged to listen to the flow of his elevated conversation. I count it no small distinction that Brother Corwith felt free to unbosom himself to me.

But it was as the Christian that this good man appeared to best advantage. To him the Christian profession was the highest vocation to which a man could be called. Early in life he felt that God called him to His service. He was organist, trustee, and deacon in our Brokklyn Church for more than fifty years. The most casual stranger would have unhesitatingly classed him as a Christian. His countenance, his voice, his movement, his every demeanor declared "Here is a man who knows Christ and tries to represent Him in his business and in his daily life and aspiration."

William Frank Corwith loved the Bible. To him it contained God's word. He loved his Church papers and admitted to me once that he enjoyed them thoroughly, even to the advertisements. He loved the worship of the sanctuary. He loved to meditate on the goodness of the Lord. He loved to pray. It was his habit to be much alone since the death of his wife in whose memory he founded a professorship in Elon and of his only daughter some years past. Those hours were not lonely some of us knew. They were precious opportunities of happy converse with his Master. What an inspiration his prayer life was to him and to those who were privileged to know of it! His last illness reached from New Year's Eve to June 10, five months and ten days. His translation to the spirit world I am sure was but an unbroken continuance of the spiritual fellowship of thoose long months of affliction. During his confinement, he uttered no complaint. He was prepared and only abided till the curtain should rise upon the dawn of the glorious day when he was able to see his Master face to face.

The Corwith family settled in East Long Island in 1639. They were of ancient and honorable lineage in the land of their origin. It is safe to say that no finer representative of their line ever lived and loved and wrought than William Frank Corwith, born in Brooklyn, N. Y., in February 1855, died at his home in Hempstead, Long Island, on June 10, 1925, and laid to rest in the beautiful cemetery hard by, on June 14. No words of mine can add embellishment to the life of so splendid a man and Christian as he, worthy scion of a worthy race of noble men and women.

That his day and generation rated him high is attested by the honors they thrust upon him. He was director of the Brooklyn Y. M. C. A., director of the Brooklyn Home for the Aged, a member of three Chambers of Commerce and of a long list of fraternities and clubs. He was trustee of the Francis Asbury Palmer Fund, of the Starkey Seminary, and of Elon College. He was a membr of the Board of Christian Education and also of the General Board of the General Convention of the Christian Church. Every cause in the Christian Church has sustained a great loss in the passing of Brother Corwith. Life is poorer by his taking away, for men of his size and character are few and far between. God rest his noble soul in peace!

REIDSVILLE.

A very interesting service was held at our church on the evening of June 16, at 8 P. M. which was a reception for the members who had recently united with the church.

The program rendered for the evening included special music by the choir, the address of welcome by Miss Rosa Walker, the response by Miss Bernice Whitten, church history by the pastor, referring to the local church which was organized on July 14, 1913. The late Rev. L. I. Cox, pastor at the time of organization, continuing until 1917. It was in 1914 that the church was built, and following Rev. Mr. Cox, Rev. W. L. Wells served as pastor for a term of four years, who was succeeded in 1921 by the late Rev. J. Presley Barrett, D.D. Brother Barrett served for one year and was succeeded by Rev. J. A. Leadbetter. who served for two years, up until the time of the present administration.

It was April 30, 1922, during the pastorate of Dr. Barrett that the Church was dedicated, and in connection with reference to our dearly beloved, and lamented leader, Dr. Barrett, it is quite a coincident that the writer has succeeded, both him and Brother Wells for the second time, as both Dr. Barrett and Bro. Wells served as pastor of Rose Hill Church, Columbus, Georgia, and both of them came directly to the Reidsville church from there, which was almost true in my case, as I received a call here in less than 90 days after locating in Greensboro. Therefore I feel that I came from Rose Hill to this work.

At the last conference our church reported one hundred and fifty-one members. This was the number on roll December 1, 1924, at the time of my taking up the work. Since that date we have received into the church here one hundred and twenty eight, 120 of this number were received in our recent meeting. Since my coming, the grim reaper of death has taken from our midst one of our first members, but we have great consolation that our loss is Heaven's gain, Mrs. E. R. Rascoe, being one of the charter members, died in March this year. Of the thirty-one members whose names subscribed to the charter, five have passed to their final reward, but today we have sixteen of that faithful number on the firing line with us. We have granted letters to four, one name by request has been dropped from the roll, and at the present our membership is TWO HUNDRED AND SEVENTY THREE.

As we review the work that has been done in the past, we are conscious that those faithful servants of our Lord did not realize the great work they have done. They have sown the seed and some of them have entered into their rest, but we thank God for the work they have done, and it gives us fresh courage to take a forward look, forgetting the errors of the past, we press forward to greater things in the name of the risen Lord.

A few days ago we ordained four new deacons, which makes nine, a good board of splendid deacons. (Good looking too). Besides we have just organized a finance committee, consisting of sixteen of the most loyal and faithful of our good people. The ladies too are organizing to do some mighty fine things, and we are hoping to hear more from them later. Our Sunday School, well I would not have room here to explain, but briefly we have an average attendance of 250 with as many one Sunday as 287; teachers that are always present and on time, and the Superintendent, well we don't care to exchange with any school, Mr. T. J. Mitchell is our Superintendent.

Going back to the service that I started to write about, our good friend and dear brother, Dr. C. H. Rowland was the principal speaker of the evening, and he brought us a wonderful and inspiring message from the subject, "A fair field and no favors."

The Lord bless the Christian Sun and its readers.

Fraternally yours,
R. A. WHITTEN.

TAXES TOOK 5.4 CENTS OF EACH DOLLAR EARNED BY SOUTHERN IN 1924.

Out of every dollar received by the Southern Railway Company during 1924 for freight charges, passenger fares and other services to the public, 5.4 cents were paid in taxes—federal, state, county and municipal. These figures are taken from the annual report of the board of directors, just issued, covering operations for the year.

"There was no halt in the upward trend of taxes," says the report. "The tax bill of the Southern was $7,702,699. in 1924, compared with $6,994,407. in 1923. This levy called for no less than 5.4 cents out of every dollar of gross revenue of 1924, against 4.6 cents in 1923, a comparative increase of 17 per cent. What this means is apparent from the fact that one-fifth of the net operating revenue was appropriated to government.

"In such a perilous situation the only comfort is that public sentiment seems to be now alive to the vital importance of so reducing governmental expenditures as to make possible relief from the current heavy burden of taxation."

THE CALF PATHS.

BY SAM WALTER FOSS.

One day through the primeval wood,
A calf walked home, as good calves should,
But made a trail all bent askew—
A crooked path, as all calves do.

The trail was taken up next day
By a lone dog that passed that way;
And then a wise bell-wether sheep
Pursued the trail o'er vale and steep,
And drew the flock behind him, too,
As good bell-wethers always do.

And from that day, o'er hill and glade,
Through those old woods a path was made;
And many men wound in and out,
And dodged and turned and bent about
And uttered words of righteous wrath
Because 'twas such a crooked path.

But still they followed—do not laugh—
The first migration of that calf,
And through the winding roadways stalked
Because he wobbled when he walked.

So men prefer to go it blind
Along the calf-paths of the mind,
And work away from sun to sun
To do what other men have done.

"What are you crying for, Bud?"
"I g-g-got a lickin'!"
"Well, don't you mind."
"Aw, gwan! That's what I got licked for!"

EMINENT SURGEON CLAIMS CANCER CAN NOW BE PREVENTED

"Cancer is the great human menace. It is increasing by leaps and bounds. If anything, it is increasing more rapidly in the United States than it is in the British Isles. Of those now in the British Isles, 5,000,000 are doomed to die of cancer if they do nothing to prevent it. In the United States the doomed number is 10,000,000 and might easily rise to 15,000,000 or 20,000,000."

This remarkable statement is made by Sir W. Arbuthnot Lane, Bart., one of the world's most eminent surgeons and dietitians, in an article appearing in the June 20 issue of the Dearbon Independent.

According to Sir Arbuthnot, cancer is not caused by the baccillus that scientists have so long sought and not yet found, but rather by poisons created in the body by the food that is eaten. It is a filth disease, and its prevention is accomplished by keeping the digestive tract thoroughly drained of its accumulations.

Continuing the Doctor says: "What we should do then, if we would avoid cancer, is to eat wholewheat bread and raw fruits and vegetables, shunning all meat, first that we may be better nourished, second that we may more easily eliminate waste products and thus adequately drain the house in which our cells live. Whoever foregoes white bread will perform a great service for himself. It is deadly."

It is a difficult task to change the food habits of a nation, or to induce the people to take sufficient exercise each day. Sir Arbuthnot says, however, that "Whoever will correct his diet to a reasonable extent, take reasonable exercise and keep his digestive tract absolutely clean, need have no fear of cancer."

THE PATIENT CREDITOR.

They were making a device to raise funds for an addition to the Missionary Baptist Church. Two colored sisters called on old Uncle Berry, an aged negro who lived on the outskirts of the village, and explained the purpose of their visit and asked him to give something toward the cause.

"Lawsy, sisters. I sho would like to help you-all along," he said, "but I just ain't got it. Why, I has the hardest time to keep paying a little something on what I already owe round here."

"But," said one of the collectors, "you know you owe the Lord something, too."

"Yes, dat's right, sister," said the old man, "but he ain't pushing me like my other creditors is."

MISSIONS

Rev. J. O. ATKINSON, D. D., Field Secretary.

STEWARDSHIP AND PROMOTION.

Warren H. Denison, Secretary.

A Heart of Appreciation.

Mr. John J. Kyle, Perlee, Iowa, Secretary of the Western Christian Convention and Secretary of the Union Iowa Conference, a busy layman, takes time to write this word of appreciation and to bear a tithing message of high import. It will do you good to read them both.

An Appreciation.

"You and the problems of administration and otherwise that you face are in my thought and prayer, and I would only be so happy if I could ease your load in a large way, but I cannot. Some one else must have that joy. Whether it be he or they, may that joy be full. And you stand not in the breach alone. This may have its encouragement for you, but we of the Church should blush for shame that you, the members of our various boards, the heads of our colleges, our workers in the field, should stand there receiving the shafts for us and having your service lessened by our lack of support. May God bless you, and may the day star of hope again arise for us."

The Joy of Tithing.

As one of the rewards of bringing all the tithes into the storehouse, the writer cannot point in his own experiences to barnes filled with plenty and vats overflowing with new wine, nor has there, from the windows of heaven, been poured to him in profusion our Father's gifts of houses and lands nor the riches of earth that he holds in His hands. Indeed, he may have not met the conditions, for to him "all the tithes" carries a much larger content than just a tenth of his income measurable by his country's unit of value. It does contain this; but if this be all, another unfaithful steward places himself in the long, long line. I pay what I owe to my fellows not for business success primarily, but because I owe it for the same reason and because I love Him who has given me the trust. I try to meet the conditions of His covenant with me—my note to Him.

One who, through a long life, had tasted God's promises, wrote, "I have not seen the righteous forsaken, nor his seed begging bread," and he would have thought no Jew righteous who did not pay the tithe. Another singer through whom God spoke to men wrote, "I know where His islands lift their fronded palms in air. I only know I cannot pass beyond His love and care." These speak my faith and my reward.

We believe that Stephen paid "all the tithes." Yet the windows of heaven opened to view the shower of stones cast by the enemies of him and his Lord. But beyond and above, at the right hand of Him who sat upon the throne, was the face of Him whom his soul loved, and it brought an answering rapture to the face of the martyr. Were the blessings that he had not room to contain denied him, or were they to Paul in his trials oft, and perils many, or to the faith heroes of the ages whose reward was the opportunity to do and dare and die for Him who did all this and more for them? Their rewards measured not by commercial units, but by the throbs of a loving heart are the ones I like to keep most prominently in mind and to look for, that in some measure at least, by God's grace, I may attain to them.

A GOSPEL THAT WILL NOT STAY PUT.

One of the most striking things about the Gospel is that it is always bursting the bounds of place. Its universality manifested itself almost immediately. It came to Jerusalem, but Christ had hardly given it to His disciples before it began to spread into the other cities of Judea. It was given to Jews, but Christ had hardly ascended before it began to seek out Greeks and Romans. So powerful was this element of universality that it swept away deep-rooted prejudices from the hearts of the apostles, and they who were Jews at heart and would confine the Gospel to the Jews became the most ardent missionaries to the other nations. The book of acts is both a revelation of this transforming process in the hearts of the apostles and the record of a gospel reaching out to claim the uttermost parts of the then-known world. Not many years after the ascension of Jesus Christ, the Gospel had spread through Asia Minor, leaped the seas to Greece, and claimed Rome for its own.

This has been its history for the last two thousand years. The Gospel never stays put. Christ commanded His disciples to go and teach all nations, but even this command has never been the chief missionary motive. Had Christ never given it, yet would His followers have gone; for the Gospel is like a spring of water in the heart in which Christ is born—it overflows its banks and the streams flow in all directions.

One of the most significant things in the religious history of the last century was the rediscovery of the missionary character of the Gospel. As a result, the book of acts was reproduced in history. Modern St. Pauls went into India, China, Japan, and Africa. The romance of the acts came back into religion. Today there are twenty-eight thousand foreign missionaries at work, and there are thousands of Churches, hospitals and schools in what were, until recently, non-Christian lands. There were those who would confine it to the Anglo-Saxon, Teutonic, and Latin races, just as in New Testament times there were those who would confine it to the Jews; but, just as Paul was right in insisting it was for the Greeks and Romans, so Judson and Moffat and the rest were right in insisting it was for Asia and Africa. Their claims were justified, and today there are millions of Christians in Asia. Who can doubt, in the light of history, that these lands are destined to become Christ's, as Greece and Rome became Christ's? And just as Rome, as soon as it became Christian, reached out to claim Gaul and Britain, so these new outposts of the Gospel in China and Japan will some day be sending missionaries of their own, begetting into non-Christian lands. So the unending outreach of the Gospel goes on. The acts is an unfinished book. The Gospel is, in its very nature, universal, insistent, and reproductive as nature itself. It will not rest until all peoples have at least known it, even if they do not accept it. Yet in the light of history, its adaptability to all human needs is so manifest, its unlimited power for the victorious life so evident, its divine origin and nature so self-revealing, that we dare predict that to know it will be to receive it. "I, if I be lifted up (made known) . . . will draw all people unto myself."

One should not leave the study of the book of acts without remembering two things. So energizing is the Gospel, so permeative is its nature, so universal its claim, that not only does it make converts; it transforms the ideals and institutions of every land it touches. Not only has it claimed thousands of souls in Japan, for instance, but far out and beyond this it has transformed the ideals and institutions of Japan itself. Japan is a different nation after a century of contact with the Gospel. New ideals, new enthusiasms, new outlooks on life, new standards of conduct, new philosophies, new customs have come, so that—so powerful is the Gospel, so outreaching, so permeative—millions, who know not Christ's name, are living under the truth He taught and the spirit of the life He lived.

The other thing to remember is that at just this time we are witnessing another revelation of this insistence of the Gospel in claiming everything for itself. It is not content in determining our individual ideals and controlling our personal relationships; it insists on claiming the spheres of social, industrial, and international relationships as its own. Some people are resisting this, but the Gospel will not stay put. Everywhere in the world today it is claiming, for instance, that the nations must hold themselves just as accountable to the judgment of Christ as does the individual. There is the same test for national greatness as for personal, namely: service. When Woodrow Wilson said, "There have been other nations as rich as we; there have been other nations as powerful; there have been other nations as spirited—but I hope we shall never forget that we created the nation, not to serve ourselves, but to serve mankind." There was the Gospel claiming a new world. It is insisting that the nations shall put behind them the law of individualism and recognize the community life, as it has set the individuals of the world in communities, where, under the divine principle of the Gospel, they live, "each for all and all for each," instead of each for himself. So the swift, outreaching, inescapable, inevitable Gospel goes on. It is always seeking new worlds to conquer.—F. L., in Christian Work.

OUR OPPORTUNITIES IN CARROLL COUNTY, VA.

To us, at this time, the words of the Apostle Paul stand out in bold letters: "As we therefore have opportunity, let us do good unto all men."

Five years ago, Miss Iola Hedgepeth came to Fancy Gap, Carroll County, Virginia. She found the people of Elk Spur anxious that they might have a school. The way was open, the fit time had come. Many of our people of the Southern Christian Convention have followed the work since the beginning. You will recall that a suitable building for school and for church services was needed. The call for money was made and the response came readily.

More than forty children were enrolled during the past year. The course of study prescribed by the State of Virginia was followed as nearly as was possible. Some of our pupils have completed the eighth grade. Through the day school, Sunday school, and Christian Endeavor these children are being trained for Christian service.

Our equipment at Elk Spur is by no means complete. We should like to see these children of the mountains have an opportunity to finish high school without leaving their homes. But we cannot ask for many improvements at Elk Spur while our people at Rocky Ford are so handicapped by the lack of a suitable building. It is impossible for the children of that section to attend other schools because of the long distance. There is no church near and but few have any means of conveyance.

Soon after the work began at Elk Spur, a day school was opened at Rocky Ford, about four miles away by road. A Sunday school was organized also. The only available place for meeting was an old abandoned cabin. This was also used as a worker's home. There was no permanent location and the crude benches used for seats were carried from place to place. Finally, a small room (12 x 14) was added to the house occupied by Mr. H. T. Rigney and family. Many times it seats only a part of the crowd that gathers for Sunday School and preaching service.

It is for this section that we make a special plea at this time. The land on which to erect a church and school building was donated two years ago, but because the money could not be secured, the members of our Rocky Ford Church, and others who are interested, have faced disappointment time after time.

By establishing a permanent work at Rocky Ford, we shall be able to keep in touch with Sandy Ridge which is contiguous. There is a great need of the gospel at that place.

For us to delay building another summer will be detrimental to our work here generally. We who are on the field can hardly face the situation and continue to apologize for neglect, as it may seem to them.

We have not lost faith in our beloved church, and we believe as the great need is made known, efforts will be renewed and our hopes will become a realization.

"As we therefore have opportunity, let us do good."

ANTIOCH AND OTHER ALA. CHURCHES.

Yesterday we had a fine service at Antioch Church, and also last night.

We had a very happy time in the Worship of God. Yesterady p. m. I preached for the colored Christians at Sweet Home Church, just a few miles north of Antioch. A goodly number of white brethren from Antioch and Roanoke attended. The colored friends seemed to enjoy the meeting very much. I trust great good will come of the services.

A great meeting is in progress at Roanoke, in the auditorium of the Baptist Church. Evangelist Ham, of Atlanta, is doing the preaching. All the churches are cooperating in the meeting and we are praying for great results. Practically every business house, and all of the banks are closing at the hour of service. It is such a beautiful spirit of Christian fellowship and union. Surely, God is well pleased with the effort.

Our Sunday-school and Christian Endeavor Convention meets with New Hope Church the fourth Saturday at 10 a. m. May every school and Society be there in full force. We have a good program arranged and we expect a great time.

Encourage the young people to come, for they will soon take our places in the Kingdom work so let us not be afraid to commit unto them the great work of our Lord. Every body meet us at the Convention.

G. D. HUNT, Pastor.

POLYCARP

The venerable Polycarp, Bishop of Smyrna, was father of the Eastern Church. He was ninety years of age; he had heard the Apostle John discourse upon brotherly love, and he had spent many years in doing good to his fellow men. But neither his old age nor his saintly purity could save him from persecution. In 167 the hue and cry was raised against him. The persecutors tracked him to a neighboring village, and by putting a child to torture found out his place of refuge. He was set upon an ass, and was hurried along a road thronged with pleasure hunters going towards the festive city. By the way, two dignitaries took him up in their chariot, and urged him to change his religion, and on his persistent refusal they threw him out upon the ground. Lame and exhausted, he was dragged into the crowded amphitheatre, and was received with a yell of exultation from rows above rows of excited faces. "Blaspheme Christ!" urged the proconsul. "Eighty and six years," said Polycarp, "have I served Him; nor hath He ever done me wrong. How, then, can I blaspheme my King and Savior?" "Swear by the genius of Caeser," shouted the mob. "I am a Christian," replied Polycarp. "Burn him!" was then the universal cry; and the pile was prepared. When the executioneers would have fastened him to the stake with nails, he said, "It is needless; leave me alone. He who gives me strength to endure the flame will enable me to stand firm on the pile." And from the midst of the fire his voice was heard, praying in almost jubilant tones. when the flames rose, it is said they curved round him, as if unwilling to touch him; and it was necessary to call in the aid of the executioner. —Pryde's "Great Men of European History."

"A FENCE AROUND THE BIBLE."

In a recent address a public speaker inferentially accused the defenders of "the faith once delivered unto saints" of trying to build a fence around the Bible. They are attempting no such thing. And what is more, they don't need to. A fence, or rather a wall, was thrown around the holy scriptures at their completion nearly nineteen centruies ago. And this was done by their Author, the eternal Word. The record of this transaction is found in Rev. 22:18,19: "If any man shall add unto these things, God shall add unto him the plagues that are written in this book: and if any man shall take away from the words of the book of this prophecy, God shall take away his part out of the book of life, and out of the holy city, and from the things which are written in this book." It is high time for every lover of the truth as it is in Jesus Christ to enter a most solemn, earnest, and prayerful protest against the diabolical and damnable program of the extreme wing of the modernists to rob the Son of God of His deity, the Holy Spirit of His personality, the Godhead of its trinity, the atonement of its efficacy, Christianity of its spirituality, hell of its torment, faith of its privilege and power, the Holy Scriptures of their inspiration and supernatural content, and the believer of his only well-grounded hope of everlasting life.—The Word of Life.

THE VALIDITY OF RELIGION.

The liberty, the freedom, the democracy we speak so much about are big ideas and require more of those enjoying their benefits than we are apt to realize. I see no vehicle but the church, with its message to the secret spirit of men, by which to fashion an essential character. This institution, imperfect as it is, divided as it is, partial, priest-ridden, pew-rented, full of dry-bone doctrine and deadly traditionalism, is, in spite of all its defects, the one institution dedicated to making character and basing its message upon the Sermon on the Mount. This badly battered, upheaven world needs nothing so much as a high type of integrity and lofty character, the making of which is the real work of religion.—Dr. Carl Reiland.

INTERNATIONAL UNIFORM SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON.

July 5, 1925

Subject "The Beginning of Foreign Missions."

Golden Text: "And he said unto them, Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to the whole creation."

Lesson: "Acts 12:25 to 13.12.

Devotional Reading: Isaiah 55:1-7.

The foreign mission program of Christianity is a big thing. The average layman, or the average minister for the matter, hardly realizes just what a big thing it is. It involves 27,000 men and women, the majority of them cultured and highly trained, it embraces 125,000 native workers, the product of missions themselves, it has over 40,000 principal stations, over 35,000 substations, 20,000 churches, nearly 3,000,000 communicators, 30,000 Sunday Schools, a Christian constituency of 7,500,000, nearly a hundred colleges and universities, some of them the equal of any university or college in the world, and about 550 theological and training schools and normal schools. The program also includes industrial schools, elementary schools, kindergartens, hospitals, dispensaries, medical schools, orphanages, leper asylums, institutions for the blind and deaf and for opium refuges. The budget for all these things runs between $40,000,000 and $45,000,000 dollars per year. Inasmuch as these figures are based on statistics gathered over ten years ago the present scale of missionary work is considerably greater than even these richly suggestive statistics indicate. It is more true now than ever that the Foreign Missionary Enterprise is the vastest enterprise of the Christian Church.

And it all grew out of such a simple and small beginning. For the foreign missionary enterprise began in a way when Paul and Barnabas, two men who at the time were obscure in a sense, members of a little group of men and women who were persecuted and scattered because of their religious beliefs, started out, they knew not where, to tell others of the good news of the gospel of Christ. The lesson today tells The Beginning of Foreign Missions. As one reads the statistics given above and then thinks of the humble beginning of this great movement his mind goes back to those words spoken by an humble Galilean peasant two thousand years ago, "The kingdom of heaven is like a grain of mustard seed which a man took, and sowed in his field: which indeed is the least of all seeds: but when it is grown, it is the greatest among herbs, and becometh a tree, so that the birds of the air come and lodge in the branches thereof." Or again, "The kingdom of heaven is like unto leaven which a woman took and hid in three measures of meal, till the whole was leavened." One who reads the story of foreign missions learns not to despise the day of small beginnings.

Foreign missions began, of course, in the heart of God. The Father's heart was big enough for all and from the beginning He had included all in His program of redemption. He sent His only begotten Son that whosoever believeth on Him should not perish but have everlasting life. And when in the fullness of time the Son was about to ascend into the spiritual realm where He would be accessible to all, that Son had commanded—He did not request—His immediate disciples to go into all the world and preach the gospel to the whole creation.

Two or three things stand out as high lights in this simple story. First of all, it was while the church at Antioch was "ministering unto the Lord and fasting," that the Spirit said unto them, "Separate me Saul and Barnabas for the work whereunto I have called them." Visions of the whereunto I have called them." Visions of the larger aspects of the kingdom do not come to worldy-minded churches. If we would see visions in our day—and God has visions for us—we must put aside everthing that would have the effect of deadening the response to the Divine Voice.

In the second place, the Church at Antioch gave its best. Barnabas was a man of no mean ability. Judged by any standard he was an able man and he was probably badly needed at Antioch. It was perhaps even more true of Paul, for when one names over the list of really great men from the standpoint of mental equipment and achievements, Paul stands high in the list. The church may well have wondered how it could dispense with the services of two such able and consecrated men. But God wants the best. And He wants the best even where the pagan world is concerned. He who thinks that any kind of man can go to the average mission board. Foreign mission work demands real men and women, the best the church has.

In the third place, the whole enterprise was conducted on a spiritual plane. The Holy Spirit called the men forth. The Holy Spirit guided them and went with them. That is the secret of the phenomenal success which these two men had as they made their initial impact on the pagan world. When will we learn that the mission enterprise is not primarily a matter of dollars and cents and programs, but of spiritual forces.

The first contact of Christianity as represented by Paul and Barnabas is typical of what happens when Christianity touches life. Superstition must give way to truth. Jesus Christ is the Way and the Truth and the Life. He that doeth truth cometh to the light.

Much has been done in foreign missions, but much remains to be done. The challenge is even more pressing in our day than ever before. Let us be about our Father's business.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

July 5, 1925.

Topic: "What Makes a Nation Great? Deut. 28:1-14.

Some Bible Hints.

If a nation fully followed the will and commands of God it would be invincibly prosperous. V. 1.

The nation obedient to divine law does not need to hunt prosperity; prosperity runs after it and overtakes it. V. 2.

True happiness comes to a nation as to an individual, not through self-seeking (America first!) but through right-doing. Vs. 3-6.

Envy may attack a righteous nation (and no nation has yet reached the ideal), but will not overthrow it. Justice stands. V. 7.

Suggestive Thoughts.

Among the influences that make national greatness is the church, which stands for truth, justice, generosity, and all holy ideals.

Men of vision make nations great. They lift the people to see what they see and to strive for high purposes rather than selfish ones.

Industry makes for greatness of a material kind, but it must be allied to justice or the workers will turn rend the nation, or power will blind it. Think of Germany.

No nation is greater than its leaders. Honest public servants are a necessity. Graft in high places, or even in politics is a destructive and disintegrating element.

A Few Illustrations.

Reformations often lead to national greatness. Luther made Germany as much as Bismarck did; but had Luther been fully followed, German history would have been better than it is.

One author writes pleading for a "school of little nations to develop and learn government and self-control. The so-called "great" nations have made this impossible.

Nations set goals, like individuals, or ends they seek. Not a single nation has ever set its goal the life of the kingdom of God and the practice of the Golden Rule.

France has loved and still loves Napoleon and the things for which he stood, and that has colored her thought. If a nation loved Christ in the same way it would be transfigured.

To Think About.

What is true greatness?

How can we as individuals help to make our nation great?

How did Lincoln help to make America great?

A Cluster of Quotations.

They who love their country in the world, when they die love heaven, which is then their country. —Swedenburg.

One danger in patriotism, its deadly enemy, is self-glorification. This does not make a nation great. It belittles it. Patriotism is love of the national good that the nation may serve the world. —Anon.

Equality of opportunity makes for greatness, because true greatness has a chance to rise to the top. Lincoln was a poor man. Grant was a storekeeper, and Garfield was born in a log cabin.—James.

Praise we the peaceful men of skill
Who builded homes of beauty,
And, rich in art, made richer still
The brotherhood of duty.

—W. G. Tarrant.

A SMALL POTATO.

A small potato is a small affair; but it is not wise to despise small things; they may contain the elements and beginnings of greatness.

A man in Tolland, Ct., found a very small potato in one of his pockets when he came in from his work. "Here," said he laughingly, to a boy twelve years old who lived with him, "plant that, and you shall have all you can raise from it till you are of age."

The bright little boy cut the potato into as many pieces as there were "eyes" in it and planted it. In the autumn, he dug and laid by the increase of it and planted that in the following spring. Next year he planted the larger crop gathered the previous autumn.

The potatoes grew healthily and did well, and his fourth year's harvest amounted to four hundred bushels. The farmer asked to be released from his bargain, for he saw the boy's planting would cover all his land.

Small things may be a power for good or evil. Let us foster the good and crush the evil at the beginning.—Selected.

Christian Orphanage

Dear Friends:

The continued dry weather is making it hard for us to give the children a variety of vegetables. It is the first year since we have had charge of the work here that we did not have all the beans and other vegetables we needed and to spare. This spring has been extremely dry on the orphanage farm and cabbage and irish potatoes are about the limit of our vegetables. Our blackberry crop that has always served us so well at this season for pies and dessert is almost a complete failure. We will make some peaches a little later on and the children are wishing every day for them to get ripe so they can enjoy some good old homemade peach pies.

Our farmer boys finished cutting wheat and rye June 18, and the weather was so hot. They were so tired they asked me to tell any one who wanted them to cut wheat for them, that the binder was broke, and it was.

Encouraging news continues to come to us from churches in regard to raising their quota on the new building. Every church that has reported, says they will raise their quota in full. Who is it that has a heart too small to help a little fatherless child? Are you going to see that your church raises the small amount asked for?

FIRST AMERICAN SHOEMAKER.

The first recorded American shoemaker was Thomas Baird, who arrived on the second voyage of the Mayflower in 1628. He was under contract with the Plymouth Cocmpany to make shoes for the colonists. One Philip Kirtland, a Welshman, came to Lynn, Mass., in 1636, and John Adams Dagyr, a celebrated shoemaker, settled there in 1750; so Lynn got an early start in the industry for which it is now famous.

FAMILY ALTAR

CONDUCTED BY REV. H. E. ROUNTREE,
Our Chaplain in the United States Navy.

MONDAY.

"Be strong and of good courage, . . . for there . . . is with us the Lord our God to help us, and to fight our battles."—2 Chron. 32:7-8.

If, when in your endeavor to achieve a high purpose, you meet with difficulty, troubles, misunderstanding, misfortunes, and apparent defeat, let your solace be found in the memory of Him whose mission on earth was frought with opposition, difficulties, dangers, and reverses and culminated in Calvary.

Prayer.—Our Father, help us not to trust in the arms of flesh, but in Thee who is our light, our salvation and the strength of our life. This we ask for this day and this week. In His name. Amen.

TUESDAY.

PRESSING ON FAITHFULLY.

"Be ye steadfast, immovable, always abounding in the work of the Lord."

"I count not myself yet to have attained: but one thing I do, forgetting the things which are behind, and the thing forward to the things which are before, I press on toward the goal unto the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus." —Phil. 3:12-14.

"From strength to strength go on, wrestle and fight and pray; lead all the powers of darkness down, and win the well-fought day."—Chas. Wesley.

Prayer.—Our Father, hold before our eyes all day the supreme value of heavenly citizenship and the glory of any sacrifice and the power of any effort to attain it. In His name we ask it. Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

START WHERE YOU STAND.

When a man who had been in the penitentiary applied to Mr. Ford for employment, he started to tell his story. "Never mind," said Mr. Ford; "I don't care about the past. Start where you stand!"

Start where you stand, and never mind the past,
The past won't help you in beginning new.
If you left it all behind at last,

Why, that's enough, you're done with it, you're through!
This is another chapter in the book,
This is another race that you have planned;
Don't give the vanished days a backward look,
Start where you stand.

The world won't care about your old defeats
If you can start anew and win success,
The future is your time, and time is fleet,
And there is much of work and strain and stress;
Forget the buried woes and dead despairs,
Here is a brand-new trial right at hand,
The future is for him who does and dares,
Start where you stand.

Old failures will not halt, old triumphs aid,
Today's the thing, tomorrow soon will be;
Get in the fight and face it unafraid,
And leave the past to ancient history;
What has been, has been; yesterday is dead,

And by it you are neither blessed nor banned.
Take courage, man, be brave and drive ahead—
Start where you stand!

THURSDAY.

GOD AND BEAUTY.

Lesson: Ps. 19.

"Beauty is an all-prevading presence. It unfolds to the numberless flowers of the spring; it waves in the branches of the trees and in the green blades of grass; it haunts the depths of the earth and the sea, and gleams out in the hues of the shell and precious stone. And not only these minute objects, but the ocean, the mountains, the clouds, the heavens, the stars, the rising and the setting sun, all overflow with beauty. The universe is its temple, and those men who are alive to it cannot lift their eyes without feeling themselves encompassed with it on every side. Now, this beauty is so precious, the enjoyment it gives so refined and pure, so congenial with our tenderest and noblest feelings, and so akin to worship, that it is painful to think of the multitude of men as living in the midst of it, and living almost as blind to it as if, instead of this fair earth and glorious sky, they were tenants of a dungeon. An infinite joy is of this spiritual endowment. The greatest truths are wronged if not linked with beauty, and they win their way most surely and deeply into the soul when arrayed in this their natural and fit attire."—W. E. Channing.

Prayer.—Our Father, as the sun rises in the East the beauty and glory of the day, so rise Thou in our lives and make glorious all that is Thine, and may we rise from strength to strength in Thy likeness until we shall be perfected in Thy glory. In His name we ask it. Amen.

FRIDAY.

FEARLESS TRUST IN GOD.

"Though an host should encamp against me, my heart shall not fear."—Ps. 27.

"Life appears to me to be too short to be spent in nursing animosity or in registering wrongs. We are, and must be, one and all, burdened with faults in this world; but the time will come when, I trust, we shall put them off in putting off our corruptible bodies; when debasement and sin will fall from us and only the spark will remain, the impalpable principle of life and thought, pure as when it left the Creator to inspire the creature; whence it came, it will return, perhaps to pass through gradations of glory.

"It is a creed in which I delight, to which I cling. It makes eternity a rest, a mighty home; not a terror and an abyss. Besides, with this creed, revenge never worries my heart, degradation never too deeply disgusts me, injustice never crushes me too low: I live in calmlooking to the end."—Charlotte Bronte.

Prayer.—Our Father, one thing we ask of Thee; of this we are confident, and earnestly seek after, that we may dwell with Thee all the days of our life and that we may be hiden in Thee when evil would beset us. In His name we ask it. Amen.

SATURDAY.

MAN'S SEARCH AFTER GOD.

"Verily, every man of his best state is altogether vanity."—Psa. 39:4-7.

Wonderful are the achievements of man, as we view his progress in science and invention, the books he has written and the songs he has sung, the buildings he has erected and the structures of steel he has put up, the cures he has made and the institutions he has founded—in these and countless other things. We can also discern man's greatness in his degradation. He is a strange mixture of idealism and grossness. He is a gazer on the earth. His capacity for sinning is one mark of his superiority and daring and initiative. A mere animal—a brute—cannot sin. Sin is possible only to free moral agents and is an unimpeachable witness, though a sorry and tragic one, to the greatness of man.

Rebellion against God is an act of titanic effrontery. The records of sin show a brilliance of imagination which takes a wrong direction. Yet it is man on his knees which reveals him in his highest estate. Man is "incurably religious," says Sabatier. In his aims and ambitions, his reach and grope, his prayers and aspirations, his hopes and dreams, he is nearest his God and Maker; no matter what else man may have done, this is his highest achievement. He has built an altar and knows that God is. Therefore, there is a confident hope for the spiritual future of the human race. Its temples and its forms of worship are an evidence that it has taken a decided step forward.—Rev. Richard Braunstein.

Prayer.—That the spread of the gospel in the homes of America, and throughout this whole land, may bring in many thousands from unbelief and indifference to a closer walk with God.

SUNDAY.

THE SPIRIT OF WORSHIP.

"I was in the Spirit on the Lord's Day."—Rev. 1:10.

There may be a thousand ships at sea, but to only one of them may come the wireless message. That is because that one ship has an instrument which is properly attuned to the instrument from which the message comes. The same music has different effects on different minds. Everything depends upon whether we are in the spirit to enjoy a song or a symphony. There must first of all be the spirit of understanding, and afterward the spirit of sympathy, sensibility, admiration, appreciation.

It is an adage that some things have to be seen to be appreciated. It is quite as true that many things—perhaps most things—have to be appreciated in order to be seen. One visitor carried away with him from the British Museum cherished memories of precious manuscripts he had seen. The other remembered only the immense size of a rubber mat in one of the hallways. To confess oneself unimpressed by some things is a vital admission of mental or moral incapacity.

On the first page of the calendar of a certain Church is an exhortation to all worshipers to preface their public worship with a personal prayer for preparation for communion with God. It is largely within our own power to determine the spirit in which we engage in worship. A preliminary prayer for the minister and for the choir will effectually cast out the spirit of captious criticism. A young bridegroom was waiting in the minister's study for the opening strains of Mendelssohn's Wedding March before meeting his bride at the altar. As the moment for the service grew near, the young man said to the pastor, "Please lead us in a word of prayer, that I may be worthy of her." Such a spirit sanctifies as nothing else can the union of hearts and hands. —Rev. C. C. Albertson.

INTERESTING AND SUGGESTIVE.

Roger W. Babson says church people control 80 per cent of the buying power of the country, and that 80 per cent of the business buildings are owned by active church members. They own 76 per cent of bank savings, 62 per cent of the factories and 81 per cent of the farms. Verily the Lord blesses those who serve Him.

Think of a woman by the side of a dying sister, or a sick child, or a sorrowing friend, or a broken-hearted and broken-spirited man, without a word of heaven in her mouth—without so much as the ability to whisper, "Our Father," or even to point her finger hopefully toward the stars.—J. G. Holland.

MADGE FLEMING MOFFITT, Editor.

Dear Little Boy Blue:

Your little sheep are calling you, so you better wake up—come out in the fresh morning air, and blow your horn, as loudly as you can—the cows need you, the sheep need you too, and best of all your mother needs her Little Boy Blue to help her find the new hen nest, and all the baby chicks, and father is so proud of his Little Boy Blue—he told me so! Oh-oh, what fun it is to live in the summertime.

Little Bo-peep lives just across the street from you Little Boy Blue! And listen, she has lost her sheep—can't you help her find them? It seems I can hear them, now away off, somewhere. Where are those sheep Bo-peep? Oh yes, there they are! They are in the meadow—won't you take them to the barn?

I konw you are having the bestest time, these summertime days. While you are so happy, please do not forget your little animal friends—feed your kitty-cats, and play with your big brown doggie—and Boy Blue please 'tend to your sheep.

Goodbye dears,

Your playtime Editor,
MADGE FLEMING MOFFITT.

Dead Editor:—

I am a little girl eight years old. I have been going to school and I will be in the third grade next year. We are giving a cradle roll play. Francis Boland and I are going to sing a song.

My home is in Charleston, S. C., but I am staying with my grandmother. I am going home soon, and I will be so glad to see my mother and father and little brothers and sister. We all want you to come to our cradle roll play next Tuesday afternoon at 4 o'clock.

Your little friend,
MARILLA ROSEMOND.

Burlington, N. C.

Dead Kiddies:

I am a little boy five years old. I have been going to kindergarten all year, and I like my teacher just fine. I go to Sunday school every Sunday and to story hour every Wednesday afternoon. I like to go to story hour because Miss Moffitt gives us such a good time. I play a saxaphone in the childrens orchestra every Sunday morning and am going to play it in a Japanese costume at our cradle roll exercise next Tuesday afternoon.

Be sure to come and hear us.

Your little friend,
GORDON MALONE.

THE LESSON

One day when my grandmother was a little girl, dressed in a bright red-and-yellow checked dress that she liked very much, she was out in her mother's garden amusing herself by poking a toad about with a sharp stick. Now toads have feelings and don't like to be poked in the back with pointed sticks any more than you or I should like it; and this particular toad hopped about, forwards and backwards, from side to side, trying to get away from the long sharp thing that was tormenting him. But the more he hopped the more my grandmother poked him.

My grandmother's mother went from the house into the garden and saw what her daughter was doing.

"Child," she said, "I am ashamed of you. Do you not know that to torment any living thing is to be cruel, and that to be cruel is wicked? Yes, I am ashamed, but I shall not punish you. What you have hurt does not belong to me, but to Nature; and Nature always punishes those who injure her."

With that my grandmother's mother went back into the kitchen where she was baking pies, and my grandmother on poking the toad.

Next to the garden was a wide field where sheep were grazing. Among them was an old ram, with great horns and an ugly temper, and just then his temper was bad because some one of his flock had found the particular patch of grass that he had picked out for his breakfast and had eaten it.

In the garden next door he saw a bright pretty object bobbing up and down.

"Just the thing!!" growled the ram to himself. "How I hate that color! What right have people to wear that color when they know it annoys me?"

With that he kicked up his heels, uttered a terrific snort and started at full speed for the bright thing in the next door.

The bright thing was of course grandmother's red-and-yellow checked dress. Grandmother was still poking the toad, though her mother had told her not to. When she heard the ram snort she looked up, and the next moment she was no longer poking the toad.

Instead, she was running up the walk to the house faster than she had ever run before. The ram had rushed through the garden and was pounding up the walk after her.

The front door of the house stood open. Directly in front of the door were the stiars, leading to the second story, and from there a flight of back stairs led down again; so that you could go up the front stairs to a little landing and then down the back stairs into the kitchen without turning to the right or to the left. But if you wanted to go to the part of the house where the bedrooms were, you turned and went up a few more stairs, and there you were.

Grandmother ran into the house without stopping to shut the door, and the ram after her. She ran up the front stairs to the little landing, and still the ram kept on. She turned and ran up the rest of the stairs and on into her bedroom and slammed the door. But the ram knew nothing of the turn and the landing and the back stairs on the other side of it. Besides, he was going so fast that he could not have turned or stopped himself on the landing if he had known of them. When he reached the landing he kept straight ahead. The back stairs were before him, and, like a great white snowball rolling down the whole flight into the kitchen, where grandmother's mother was baking pies.

My grandmother's mother was so startled when she saw a ram tumble head over heels down the stairs into her kitchen that she screamed and upset her pies, and because of that my grandmother, who was fond of pie, had no dessert for supper.

My grandmother lived to be a very old lady, but from that day to the end of her life she never tormented a living thing, not even a mosquito.

Mrs. Dash: Is this a pedigree dog?

Dealer: Pedigree? I shoul just think 'e is. Why, if 'e could talk 'e wouldn't speak to either of us.

Just grin—when you come in,
And make it wide—not tight and thin.
Say, "Hello, Bill," and "Howdy, Jack."
And slap the other fellow on the back.
Stick out your mit and crack a joke,
If no one laughs ther's no bones broke.
And by and by you'll make our club
A sort of happy sunshine hub
That radiates good cheer and vim,
Because you grin when you come in.

CAMPBELL—DAVIDSON.

Mr. Russell Arndt Campbell, of Hagerstown, Md., led to the marriage altar Miss Lois Baird Davidson, at the bride's home, in Greensboro, N. C., Tuesday P. M., June 16th. The Davidson home was very tastefully decorated for the occasion, and there were many friends present to rejoice with and shower their congratulations upon this well-known and happy pair.

The attendants at the marriage were two bridemaids, Miss Mary Pearl Mood, of Smithfield, Va., and Miss Winifred Campbell, sister of the groom, Hagerstown, Md.; Mrs. Fred Shumate, Danville, Va., sister of the bride, dame of honor; Miss Elizabeth Davidson, sister of the bride, maid of honor. The bride was given in marriage by her brother, Mr. B. D. Davidson, of Greensboro, and Mr. C. M. Campbell, brother of the groom, was best man. Mrs. W. N. Huff, of Charlotte, N. C., just prior to the marriage, beautifully sang three appropriate selections, and Mrs. Bascom Whitaker, of Oak Ridge, accompanied her at the piano and also played the wedding march.

An enjoyable reception was tendered immediately after the ceremony. The presents to the bride were numerous and costly.

Miss Davidson was a former graduate and teacher of Elon College, and Mr. Campbell, now a successful business man, is also a graduate and former bursar of the college. The ceremony making the two one was performed by the writer.

SIMPSON—WATKINS.

Mr. James Vance Simpson, of Burlington, and Miss Beulah Watkins, of Altamahaw, were united in marriage at the bride's home Sunday P. M. June 7th, by Rev. J. F. Apple, the bride's pastor. Mrs. Simpson is the attractive daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Esker Watkins, and Mr. Simpson is a successful and popular business man of Burlington, N. C.

Rev. J. E. McCauley is pastor of the groom and assisted in the marriage ceremony. Both bride and groom are prominent in Church and social circles and have the best wishes of a host of friends for a long and happy married life.

WATKINS.

Mrs. Catharine Watkins passed from this life to her reward Monday, June 1st, at the home of her son, Bro. J. G. Johnson. She was 93 years of age, her husband having gone several years before.

She professed faith in Christ at an early age, and had been a member of the Christian Church for eighty-one years. There were born to her and her husband three children. She leaves behind Bro. J. G. Johnson and Sister Dona A. Ballard, both faithful members of Mt. Carmel Church. She leaves twelve grandchildren and fifteen great-grandchildren. She will be greatly missed, but we do not mourn as those that have no hope. May God's richest blessings abide with her children and loved ones left behind.

ELISHA BRADSHAW.

DUCK.

On Monday, June 1st, Margaret Louise Duck, the little daughter of Bro. John I. Duck and his wife, Sister Martha E. Duck, took her flight from earth to be with Jesus. She was 2 years, 2 months, and three days old. She was a bright child, and had won its way to the hearts of those who knew her. She was sick for about two weeks. The doctor, parents, friends and nurse did all they could, but God had called, and she must go.

The funeral service was conducted at Mt. Carmel Christian Church by the writer. May God's richest blessings rest and abide with her father, mother and friends, and may we so live that we will meet her in that home that God has prepared for His children.

Walters, Va. ELISHA BRADSHAW.

HICKS.

Bro. Wesley Hicks was born August 28, 1847; departed this life June 8, 1925; age 77 years, 7 months and 10 days. He had been a member of the Pleasant Grove Christian Church since 1866, and served many years as deacon and sexton, and was loyal and faithful to his obligations and to his Church.

He leaves to mourn his departure a wife and nine children, besides many other relatives and a host of friends, among them 3 sisters, 31 grandchildren, and 2 great-grandchildren. A good man is gone, and he will be much missed by his Church and community. The Lord comfort and bless his loved ones. Burial by the writer, assisted by his pastor.

RUSSELL.

Died at their home, Graham, N. C., June 9, 1925, Robert Norman Russell, son of Mr. and Mrs. R. L. Russell, age 4 months and 22 days. Robert was a bright child and a great joy to his fond parents. His death was a great sorrow to them. Their only child has fallen asleep; but his parents live in the glad hope of meeting him in the Christian home in glory. The funeral services were conducted from the home by the writer, assisted by Rev. Mr. Permar, of the Friends Church, and the interment was in the cemetery at Graham. May the blessed Christ comfort the sorrowing parents.

TERRY.

Little Walker Terry, son of Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Terry, departed this life at the early age of 4 months and 26 days, on June 9, 1925. MOFFITT.

Mrs. Ella Rhodes Moffitt was born (Ella Mary Rhodes) October 8, 1875, at Mauzey, Shenandoah Valley, Va. Her parents were J. B. D. Rhodes and Emma F. Rhodes, deceased. She was married to Dr. E. L. Moffitt, of Asheboro, N. C., at her parental home, Linville, Va., December 14, 1897. To this union were born three children—Stewart Rhodes, Margaret, and Emmet Leonidas, Jr., all of whom and the husband survive her. Of her parental family surviving are Miss Sara B. Rhodes, Asheboro; Mrs. J. K. Ruebush, Dayton, Va.; Charles E. Rhodes, Harrisonburg, Va.; Mrs. Robert G. Cooke, Rochester, N. Y., and Miss Bruce Rhodes, Dayton, Va. She joined Linville Christian Church in early life, and later transferred her membership to Asheboro Christian Church.

She was a gentle and humble, but willing and ready follower of the Lord Jesus. She quietly fell on sleep June 15th, and her body was interred in the cemetery of the Methodist Church at Asheboro Wednesday at 11 A. M. June 17th. The funeral services were conducted in the Presbyterian Church, led by Rev. Mr. Smith, pastor of the Church, assisted by Dr. C. H. Rowland, pastor First Christian Church, Greensboro, and J. O. Atkinson. The floral designs were numerous and exceedingly beautiful. They placed her body in earth's silent sepulchre underneath the covering of fragrant flowers and evergreens, but those who were acquainted with this noble spirit realized that no offering of flowers or of growing plants could ever symbolize the fragrance and living influence of this good woman.

Dr. Moffitt was president of Elon College for several years, and hundreds of Elon students, as well as others who made her acquaintance, bear testimony to the fact of her gracious bearing, her cultured and refined dignity, her unselfish and devoted life. She has run the race of life faithfully and came to a quiet and peaceful end, leaving behind loved ones for whom she lived and who throughout their lives will cherish and revere her sacred memory. J. O. A.

RESOLUTIONS.

The following resolutions in memory of Bro. J. S. Rascoe, who died March 21, 1925, were passed on by his Church:

Whereas, God, in His all-wise providence, has seen fit to take to his eternal reward our friend and brother J. S. Rascoe; be it resolved:

First, That we bow in humble submission to Him who doeth all things well.

Second, That the Church has lost a faithful member and deacon, the wife a devoted husband, and the children a loving father.

Third, That we extend our deepest sympathy to the sorrowing ones, and urge them to look to Him who alone can comfort us in sorrow.

Fourth, That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the wife of the deceased, a copy be sent to The Christian Sun for publication, and a copy be placed on the Church record.

BURTON—CHANDLER.

At the home of the bride's mother, Mrs. Rosa Chandler, Virgilina, Va., on Saturday, April 9th, 1925, at high noon, a very beautiful home marriage was solemnized when Miss Esther Katharine Chandler became the bride of Mr. Aubrey Baxter Burton, of Sutherlin, Va.

The home was beautifully decorated with roses and potted plants. Just before the wedding party entered, Miss Mary D. Atkinson sang, accompanied on the piano by Miss Margarette Parbitt, of Sunsbury, N. C. The wedding march was played by Miss Corbitt. Little Rubie Smith, a niece of the bride, made a beautiful and charming ring-bearer. Mrs. Emrun King, a cousin of the bride, was dame of honor, and Mr. Gardner, of Danville, Va., was best man. The bride wore a handsome ensemble suit.

The ring ceremony of the Christian Church was read. The popularity of the young couple was evidenced both by the many beautiful and costly presents and the large number of guests.

Immediately following the ceremony, a delightful luncheon was served to all present. Mr. Burton was educated at Elon College, and has been a successful teacher in Granville County, N. C., for two years. The bride has been an active leader in both the social and religious life of her community. Mr. Burton is an excellent Christian man and holds a responsible position with the Farmers' Co-operative Association. Seldom has it fallen to my lot to marry a more popular couple and one that begins life with such bright prospects. May heaven's blessings attend them.

THE SUN'S OBSERVATORY

By Rev. S. M. Lynam.

Mrs. Montgomery Honored.—

Wellesley College, at its recent commencement, honored Mrs. Helen Barrett Montgomery, a former president of the Northern Baptist Convention, and internationally known leader of woman's missionary work, by conferring upon her the LL. D. degree. The degree was conferred largely because of her work in translating the New Testament, which is receiving a wide reading.

Honor Only English Pope.—

Adrian IV was the only Englishman ever to attain the office of the papacy, and to his memory a tablet was unveiled at the Church of Abbot's, Langley, Hertfordshire, on June 13th. The short service was conducted by the archdeacon of St. Albans. Many years ago, Nicholas Breakspar, a boy of eighteen, applied for admission to the abbey of St. Alban. He was refused, and made his way to the continent, where he won the highest honor within the power of the Catholic Church to confer. Adrian IV is chiefly remembered for his contest with Frederick Barbarossa, a fierce German emperor.

United Presbyterians May Now Sing Hymns.—

The General Assembly of the United Presbyterian Church, in session at Topeka, Kans., will probably be remembered for the reason that it granted, upon the overture of the presbyteries, the privilege of singing hymns in the Church. The Churches, however, are enjoined against the use of hymns until the Church has time to make a selection, which is to be bound with the Psalter. It will be surprising to some to know that there is a denomination which did not engage in the singing of hymns during its worship service, but this was true of the United Presbyterian Church until the very recent general assembly which convened at Topeka.

Many Missionaries.—

The United Church of Canada begins its work with 667 missionaries on the foreign field. Of this number, 333 had been under Presbyterian control, 310 under Methodist control, and 24 under the control of the Congregationalists. In a few instances, two of the Churches have been occupying the same territory, but the merger of the three Churches will greatly extend the sphere of influence of the new Church. More than thirteen hundred native mission workers are engaged in the same missions. The Canadian Church is attempting to do in a practical way in this country what the many missionaries of many Churches have known was wisest for the foreign field for many years.

Some Mouth-Shutting Facts.—

Collier's Weekly is publishing an unbiased account of the success of prohibition, and in the issue of May 2d a few facts and figures are given which ought to shut the mouths of some of those wet gentlemen who believe, or rather attempt to make the innocent believe that prohibition is a success in name only. "We can," the writers in Colliers say, "trace only nineteen million gallons of liquor and ten million gallons of wine to American mouths, and not that much. Now, if we allow five million gallons to moonshiners, and six million gallons to hoochmongers, bringing the grand total up to thirty million, that is but one-fifth of our former supply." These figures show that so far as whiskey is concerned, prohibition is, at worst, 80 per cent successful, and the others prove that in regard to wine it is 75 per cent successful, and in beer's case almost 100 per cent so. These findings are most interesting, and in spite of the many newspaper reports of captured distilleries, we ought to take courage and keep up the good fight. After all, it will be, in the last analysis, the Christian men and women of the country, rather than the law-enforcement officers, who will utterly wipe the liquor business off the earth.

Japan Justly Displeased.—

The proposed plan of Secretary Wilbur to have a fleet of fifty-three vessels sail down to Australia next August is looked upon as a menace by the press of Japan. They are expressing themselves in no uncertain terms in regard to it. The Japanese Pacific Civilization League has proposed that July 1st be celebrated as national humiliation day as an anniversary of the exclusion act passed discriminating against the Japanese.

The Japanese will play fair, however, and will inform the whole people of the efforts of the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America to obtain a revision of the law which will place Japanese on a par with Europeans. The people of Japan are also protesting against the fortification of Hawaii in the interest of peace. They are feeling keenly the discourtesies of the United States, and the militaristic movements which this country is making. They feel that their interests—in fact, their national honor and existence—is being jeopardized. They, perhaps misunderstand much, but we have done enough for them to feel justly displeased. There is a ray of hope left, however. President Coolidge and Secretary of State Kellogg are seeking some excuse for not allowing the plans of Secretary Wilbur to mature. It seems that our secretary ought to recall that hurried return which he made to Washington from Denver about a year ago. His chief's ideas were spoken straight, we were led to think, and he needs another reminder of the same sort. He would have made a good right-hand man to Bismark, but this isn't Germany yet.

Senator La Follette Dies.—

On June 18th, Senator Robert M. La Follette died in Washington, D. C. His death was the result of an attack of pneumonia in connection with a heart disease which had troubled the senator for many years. His body was taken to his home at Madison, Wis., for burial, and lay in state in the State Capitol during Sunday at the request of Governor Blaine. His funeral services were held from the capitol of his native State. Senator La Follette was born on June 14, 1855, on a farm near Madison. He grew up in the face of poverty, and was admitted to the University of Wisconsin on special waiver of the entrance charges. He was called upon after his graduation to support his mother and sister while he taught a country school and prepared for the bar examination. He was admitted to the practice of law in 1880. Very soon he entered politics, and in the teeth of bitter opposition was elected prosecuting attorney of his district. In 1884 he was chosen a member of the Forty-ninth Congress, and was a contemporary of Cleveland, Harrison, McKinley, Roosevelt, Taft, Wilson, Harding, and Coolidge. He began at the age of twenty-nine, and as the youngest member of Congress, his life-long fight was against special privileges. In 1901 he was elected Governor of Wisconsin, and launched a campaign against the railroads and other special interests. In 1904 he was elected to the Senate, and resigned the governorship of the State. In the presidential convention of the Republican party in 1908, Senator La Follette received twenty-five votes for President, and forty-one in 1912. In 1912 he began the Progressive movement, but his health gave way, and in spite of the fact that he kept up the fight, his cause was lost. He voted against the entrance of the United States into the great war, and because of a speech at St. Paul in that year a great mass of petitions were filed, asking for his expulsion from the Senate. Due to gross misquotations by the newspapers, the investigation was dropped. Mr. La Follette opposed the Versailles treaty, and was among the twelve willful men named by President Wilson. The work of Senator La Follette has been on the side of opposition rather than construction, but he has rendered a great service, and is much beloved by the people of his native State. The death of Senator La Follette reminds us that within less than a year five of the veteran Senators have passed across the border—Senators Henry Cabot Lodge, Reed, McCormick, and Brandegee. These men were old in statecraft, and will be seriously missed about Washington, where they were known for so many years.

NOTES-PERSONALS

Notices are going out now to all subscribers to Men and Millions who have not payed up in full, showing them just what the balance due on their pledge is. "If ye know these things, happy are ye if ye do them."

Is your Church preparing to send its pastor to Elon or Bethlehem Chautauqua? Is your Sunday School or missionary society preparing to have one or more representatives present for the session? If not, why not? It is a mighty wise thing to do.

The daily vacation Bible school began at First Christian Church, Burlington, N. C., June 29th, conducted by Miss Madge Moffitt, with efficient and capable helpers. This school proved quite a success last year, and will no doubt prove even more successful this year. In addition to Bible teaching, there are to be classes in cooking, basketry, and sewing.

Rev. C. E. Gerringer, pastor, Jackson Springs, N. C., writes that all debts are paid and the Church at Bennett, N. C., is to be dedicated about August 30th. Bro. Gerringer has been teaching and preaching the past year and for some years previously, but is willing and anxious to give all his time to pastoral duties and preaching should there be a field demanding or desiring his full-time service.

Reidsville Church and Sunday School show their wisdom, as well as their devotion and liberality, in giving their pastor, Rev. R. A. Whitten, a vacation and then present him with a purse sufficient to defray his expenses to attend a summer course in study at the Moody Bible Institute, Chicago. One is in doubt as to which the more deserves congratulations, the fortunate pastor or the wise Church and Sunday School.

"You will find my personal check enclosed for $50.00, one-half of which I wish to go to the Rocky Ford building fund and the other half to mission work, as needed." So wrote a loyal brother to the Mission Secretary the past week. If a hundred others would do likewise, that Rocky Ford Church would be built in a hurry, Bro. Sorrell and our mountain friends would be happy indeed, and our mission work would not have to retrench.

The Mission Secretary received a strange notice the other day: "I have transferred my membership to another denomination. So please cancel my pledge to Men and Millions." Reminds one of the man who, getting behind with his accounts at his bank, notified his bank that he has decided to open up an account at another bank, "so please cancel my obligations incurred in your bank." A rather easy way to cancel an obligation if one disregards all sense of honor.

A dear, good sister, sending an offering for our emergency mission fund, writes: "Retrench —never! Let's not do that. I say, go forward. May be I can help some more during the year. I pray that each one of us may do our part, that our denomination may do greater things for our Master." If all CHRISTIAN SUN readers had the spirit of loyalty and sacrifice as their sister has it, our mission work would not have to suffer nor retrench, but all would go forward.

Dr. P. H. Fleming, pastor, recently received forty-nine members into the Haw River Christian Church as a result of a revival there growing out of the Ham-Ramsey meetings at Burlington. Many revivals have sprung up in neighboring Churches as result of the wonderful Burlington revival.

Mrs. W. A. Harper, wife of President Harper, of Elon College, underwent an operation for appendicitis at a Burlington hospital Thursday, June 25th. The operation proved successful, from all appearances, and the patient, at last reports, was doing well. Her host of friends, regretting her sudden and serious illness, will rejoice at the prospects of speedy recovery.

One of our faithful men of God is Rev. Albert Godley, Tenafly, N. J., who is vice-president and purity evangelist of the International Purity Association. "I am much interested," he writes THE SUN, "in all of our faithful workers in the Christian Church, and often I am led to thank God for the progress I notice." Bro. Godley is doing valiant service in promoting "Graded Purity Booklets"; is devoting his time, talents, and energies to helping make us a purer, better land to live in. Any SUN reader desiring to examine the "Graded Purity Booklets" should address their request to Bro. Godley.

The Lynchburg, Va., Advance, reporting the session of the State Sunday School Convention of Virginia, recently held at Roanoke, says: "Dr. Walter S. Athearn, dean of the Boston University school of religious education, in an address at a denominational conference yesterday, declared that Sunday School teachers and Church leaders on a denominational basis has failed; that competitive denominational rivalry is a sinful waste of the Lord's money, and that the only solution to the problem is for all denominations to put the resources together and secure the best teachers they can find, regardless of what Protestant denominations they belong to. He said all Protestant denominations have a great body of common material that needs to be taught."

HENDERSON.

"Kingdom Enlistment Week" was held at the Henderson Christian Church, starting Sunday, June 7th, with Dr. W. S. Alexander, of Elon College, in charge. The meetings were well attended throughout the week, and fifteen teams of personal workers rendered splendid service.

Fifteen names were presented for membership the closing Sunday, and there are from five to ten more who will unite with the Church next Sunday. Considering the circumstances under which this meeting was held, it was a most successful week, and the Henderson people heartily endorse this form of revival. PASTOR.

FORTUNATE PASTOR.

For several years I have hoped that the good fortune would be given me to attend the Moody Bible Institute summer course. However, up until a few days ago, this was only a dream of the future; but I am sure you will be interested in my story, and rejoice with me that I have the privilege of going to Chicago, and attending this course during July this year.

The Reidsville Church decided a short time ago that either the people or pastor (perhaps both) needed a vacation. Therefore, they voted the pastor a vacation. A few days after the action of the Church, the Sunday School, in that generous and magnanimous spirit that is characteristic of such noble people, raised funds to send me to the Moody Bible Institute, for which I feel deeply grateful, and pray that this effort on the part of the Sunday School may be as bread cast upon the waters, that shall be gathered up again, yielding a large increase.

While I am happy to have this great opportunity and will leave early in July, I am not forgetting the Chautauqua at Elon, and expect to attend this also.

R. A. WHITTEN.

TO OFFICERS OF S. S. & C. E. SOCIETIES.

With Sunday, June 28th, our Convention year comes to a close. Now is the time of reports. Secretary Earp has already mailed the blanks, and they should be in the possession of the secretaries of the schools and societies. They, because there are two of them—our own Convention blank and the survey blank from the Department of Christian Education. Both can be filled out in a matter of an hour, two hours at the longest, and we would like to have them back to the desk of Secretary Earp by July 10th at the latest. Can you do it? Yes, if you want to, and I trust you will want to co-operate with us in this. Secretary Earp will form an honor roll of the ten? We trust some SUN-reading member of every Church of the Eastern Virginia Conference will call the attention of the above-named officers to this notice, for sometimes these notices are unnoticed. J. While we are profoundly grateful to the schools named for their liberal offering and to the other schools which contribute monthly to missions, it is noted with regret that there are quite a few schools in the Southern Christian Convention not yet sufficiently interested in enlarging the kingdom and building up schools and Churches elsewhere to make a monthly contribution. For the next few months these contributions, not otherwise designated, will go to the support and extension of our mountain work in Carroll County, Va., and it is devoutly hoped that many of our schools not already doing so will vote for and send us one offering a month for this most worthy and needy work of the kingdom.

Fraternally,

J. O. Atkinson,
Mission Secretary.

NOTICE

The Sunday School and Christian Endeavor Convention of the Eastern North Carolina Christian Conference will hold its next session with the good people of Oak Level Christian Church, near Youngsville, N. C., the second week in July, beginning Tuesday evening the 14th. If you live in the bounds of this Convention and belong to the Christian Church, it seems to me that you owe it to yourself, your Sunday School, your Christian Endeavor Society and your God, to be represented at this Convention, and lend your every possible effort toward making it a great success. Of course we are going to have a big Convention whether You go or not, but think of what you will miss if you stay away, and persist in holding a protracted meeting, going fishing, or making some other excuse. It is YOUR CONVENTION as well as mine. Therefore, I am urging you to be there when it opens, and remain until it closes. The program promises to be a good one. Let all our Schools and Societies get busy NOW, elect a full delegation of live and progressive members, and see to it that they are on the job. I shall expect you, do not disappoint me. Thanks.

C. H. Stephenson, President.

Raleigh, N. C.

PLEASANT RIDGE.

A very elaborate program was carried out in the "Children's Day" observance Sunday, June 21st, at Pleasant Ridge Church. The service continued throughout the day, dinner being served on the Church ground.

There was much evidence of very fine talent in the delivery of the recitations by several of our boys and girls, and the program was well prepared by the committee, which must have required a great deal of labor and patience to produce.

I regret that I am unable to give more information regarding this splendid service, but am confident that all in attendance enjoyed the occasion.

An offering was taken for the Orphanage.

PRINCIPLES OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

(1) The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.

(2) Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.

(3) The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.

(4) Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship, and of Church membership.

(5) The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by, all.

THE PURPOSE OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

The purpose of this Church is to cultivate a spirit of union among the followers of our Lord Jesus Christ of every persuasion, and to secure, if possible, the associate efforts of all true religious teachers in pointing the wicked to "the Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world."

The peculiar doctrines and tenets which have confused and distracted the Christian world are remanded to private judgment, and hence cease to be matters for debate, only in so far as may be necessary to prevent a sectarian influence from entering the Church.

This Church requires no compromise of faith on the part of any child of God in order to communion or fellowship; here denominational distinctions cease to exist, and Christian love binds the brotherhood together.

The purpose of this Church will be consummated in the conversion of the world and the union of all Christians.

THE SENSE AND GUILT OF SIN.

In reading the biographies of preachers and others who have moved the world with their messages, one inescapable trait stands out. They were all men who had the sense of sin and who held sin up as the curse of the human race. Unless the preacher has a horror of sin, and is seeking, by all he knows, to picture to his people its hideous consequences, he does not get very far.

How John the Baptist did everlastingly lay it on to the folks and Pharisees who came out into the wilderness to hear him: "O generation of vipers, who hath warned you to flee from the wrath to come?" John had a sense of the awfulness and the hideousness of sin. So did Jesus. So did Peter. So did Paul. So did Martin Luther. So did John Wesley and James O'Kelly. So did Jonathan Edwards. So did Dwight L. Moody. So does Billy Sunday, and all others who in the pulpit have moved men and women up toward God.

It has often been pointed out that the very word "sin" has in it the hiss of the serpent. It is real, it stings, it burns, it poisons. Nor is this all. It is universal. The inspired writer says so: "All have sinned, and come short of the glory of God."

It is not sufficient, then, to declare that we should have the sense of sin. We must needs point out the guilt of sin, and realize that this guilt is common to the human race. "As by one man sin entered into the world, and death by sin, so death passed upon all men, for that all have sinned."—Rom. 5:12.

The whole country now has gone to school. We are debating academic, scientific, philosophic questions. Whatever the results may be, whatever the findings are, we shall still be confronted with the stubborn fact of sin, its power to destroy and its fearful consignes as it does destroy.

Shailer Matthews, dean of the divinity school of the University of Chicago, says, and truly: "It is a sense of the reality of sin that alone can make the gospel anything more than a graduate lecture course in Christian ethics. A religious message that cannot stir sinners to repentance is not the gospel of the New Testament."

There is a smooth, easy, sweet, peaceable, comforting side to the gospel; but there is also a side that has fire, brimstone and dynamite in it. He who does not recognize this fact preaches only half of the gospel, and that half not very effectively. That is what a recent writer had in mind when he declared that there was enough dynamite in the gospel of Jesus to blow our civilization into atoms. Sin is an awful fact in the world, and our preaching is to poor purpose if we reveal not that fact.

THE MOST CHRISTIAN THING.

That must be a good sentence. At any rate, President Coolidge used it in addressing the Missionary Conference at Washington, January 28th. Giving the exact words of the President makes it even more striking. "One of the most Christian things I have observed about organized Christianity is the missionary spirit which pervades it. It was this spirit which, from the beginning, gave the gospel of Christ power over the hearts of men."

Now, what our Christian Church has lacked these past few years was, and is, power over the hearts and lives of men. And this lack has come because we have not been missionary in spirit and in activity as our Lord commanded that we should be.

This writer is told that many of our pastors preach for weeks or months without mentioning from their pulpits, or in anywise emphasize, the missionary teaching of our Lord and His gospel. Not a few of our Sunday School teachers go before their classes Sunday after Sunday without ever driving home to the minds and hearts of their pupils any missionary message whatsoever. This may seem strange, and it is strange, when one considers that the Bible is a missionary Book throughout, and the characters mentioned therein as heralds of our Lord's gospel are missionary characters in a most marked manner.

The people who wear the name Christian only should be the most thoroughly and active missionary people in the world. And they would be if they lived up to their name and profession. To be missionary is to desire with a consuming zeal that the blessed name of Christ should be carried to all parts of the earth. This is the most Christian thing in the world.

IN THE MATTER OF MONEY.

A keen English critic recently declared that America was no longer a country—it was a picnic. This was said in the light of our accumulating luxuries, holidays, short work hours, high wages, exorbitant salaries and abounding wealth.

The mind of America has turned itself to wealth-getting, and it is getting the wealth at a furious and frightful speed, such as was never before witnessed in all the world.

According to figures given out recently by the American Bankers' Association, in 1912 there were 12,584,000 people in the United States having savings deposits in the banks. These accounts amounted to $8,125,000,000. Twelve years later, in 1924, the number of savers had gone to 38,867,000, and their savings accounts to $20,873,000,000. In addition to this, there are 18,000,000 who have insurance on their lives, amounting to $40,000,000,000.

When it is called to mind that wealth carries with it the weight of responsibility, and the further thought is added that it is riches, and not poverty, that destroys a nation, we begin to realize the necessity of teaching in our Sunday Schools and preaching from our pulpits the lesson of stewardship—that all our wealth is a trust put into our hands by our Creator, and He holds us responsible for the way and manner in which we employ it. Unless Americans can learn from the Word of God the necessity of diverting an ever-increasing ratio of our resources into the channels of Church and benevolence, there is no hope for America to prevent its going the way of Babylon and Greece, and Rome, and the other civilizations that grew rich and forgot God.

"ONWARD CHRISTIAN SOLDIERS."

How It Came to be Written by a Clergyman

Although we have as many, if not more, public holidays as they have in England, they have some which are little known here. One of them is Whitsuntide, which falls seven weeks after Easter.

On Whit-Monday, 1865, the children from two small villages in Yorkshire were uniting in a school festival. Among other events of the day there was to be a procession, and those in charge were anxious to have a hymn with such a good swing that the young people would heartily join in singing as they marched along. The clergyman of the Anglican Church in one of the villages was Rev. S. Baring-Gould, and, as he had already written several hymns which people liked, he was asked to white one for the Whit-Monday procession. He sat down and worte "Onward Christian Soldiers," which is one of the best known and most-looved hymns ever written. The hymn was written especially for boys and girls, but grown-up folks appear to like it juss as well. During the days of the Great War, it was a great favorite with the soldiers and must have been sung thousands of times.

"Onward Christian Soldiers" is not the kind of hymn people care to sing sitting in their seats. There is a grand swing to it and a heartiness about the words themselves which makes everybody want to sing and do his best. It was said of a great military leader that when his soldiers grew weary during their long marches, he used to order the band to play and the music seemed to put new life into the men. That is just the kind of thing that this splendid hymn does. It puts new life into people, and many an audience which had become listless has had new life brought to it when everybody was asked to stand and sing this hymn.

The author of the hymn did not live in a great city. Practically all his life was spent in a few small villages. In 1881 he was appointed vicar of a small parish where the total population was only about 250, and there he remained until his death, January 2, 1924. He wrote a great many hymns, the best known of which are "Onward Christian Soldiers," "Now the Day is Over," "On the Resurrection Morning," and "Throough the Night of Doubt and Sorrow."

The idea of hymn suggests that all Christians are engaged in a great battle—the greatest of all battles—the conflict against evil. An army is divided into many regiments and every regiment has its own uniform and its own part to play. This hymn recognizes that there are many regiments in Christ's army, but emphasizes the truth that when it comes to the great question of loyalty to the Master all the regiments are united. This is the idea expressed in the lines:

"We are not divided,
All one body we;
One in hope and doctrine,
One in charity."

There have been many great empires in history. The Egyptians once were a great people, but their glory has long since passed and they can scarcely be called a nation today. Assyria terrified Judah with a cruel tyranny, but the prophet's prediction of their doom has long since been fulfilled. The great Babylonian empire has completely vanished and men today scarcely know where the great city stood. Greece and Rome also have long ago ceased to have more than a shadow of their former glory.

In contrast with these passing kingdoms, the hymn sets forth the truth that the church of Jesus continues to grow, and the gates of hell shall not prevail against it. There is a magnificient ring in that stanza:

"Crowns and thrones may perish,
Kingdoms rise and wane,
But the church of Jesus
Constant will remain;
Gates of hell can never
'Gainst that church prevail;
We have Christ's own promise,
And that cannot fail."

There is a good deal of evil in th world, no sensible person denies that, but there is also much good, and the forces of evil will eventually be overcome. That fine courageous note sounds in the last verse of the hymn. As brave soldiers fight even in the face of great odds. Christians must fight looking on and being inspired by the magnificient example of Jesus. Christians must follow the flag of Jesus ever going on before:

"Onward, then, ye people,
Join our happy throng,
Blend with curs your voices
In the triumph song;
Glory, laud, and honor
Unto Christ the King;
This through countless ages
Men and angels sing."

MAKE YOUR CHURCH ATTRACTIVE.

In a recent issue, the American Lutheran puts in a plea for clean and more attractive Churches. It says:

"Some people refuse to believe it and stubbornly maintain that the Word of God must do the work and that the Word is operative, irrespective of external conditions and surroundings. We have no intention of questioning the efficacy of the Word as the sole regenerating agency given to man. But we do desire to emphasize that the package in which the pure goods of the Word are to be offered to men, is a matter of weighty consideration. In our office as stewards of the mysteries of God, we are dealing with human beings, and we are unfaithful stewards when we offer the precious heavenly treasures in a way which from the outset antagonizes all decent tastes and instincts and arouses all normal prejudices. An attractive house of worship, kept in perfect repair, well-equipped, clean and cheerful, with orderly arrangement of its appurtenances, is the proper setting for the effective preaching of the Word. Of course, the Word does the work, but a Church that in every phase of its physical appearance represents carelessness, that never begins its Church services on time, that presents dusty pews, dirty windows, torn hymnals, an untuned organ, an indifferent organist, an ill-prepared sermon, languid deacons and a general air of slovernliness, will not impress the unchurched much by the claims about the purity of its message.

"Let us pay attention to the attractiveness of our house of worship and to the details of the Church service. The precious treasure which we have to offer to the children of men deserve the most attractive setting we can possibly give it. No Church has the right to advertise the preciousness of its message to the outside world unless it gives tangible and ocular demonstration of its own appreciation of its vaunted preciousness by clothing it in the best possible garb."

Without indulging the spirit of fault-finding, we would say that the well-kept Church, which is clean and comfortable, whose aisles and pews are cordially inviting, and which is well ventilated and lighted, has attractions that cannot be gainsaid. We have seen in some Churches, however, stained walls, dirty windows and dusty pews, the whole structure draughty and ill-heated. The Lord's house should always be inviting; it should never be a place which we are ashamed to have our friends visit and worship with us. Its pews ought to be well stocked with Bibles and songbooks, and these should not be of the last generation, but clean and attractive. Dusty pews and badly kept books in a Church make one feel instinctively that he is worshiping with an indifferent audience. Nothing is too good for the house of God!

ABIDE IN CHRIST.

As we have recently been studying what that really means, we desire to give a few thoughts as obtained therefrom. "Abide in me and I in you. As the branch cannot bear fruit of itself, except it abide in the vine, no more can ye, except ye abide in me" (John 15:4).

First, let us understand. To abide means to stay. If we request company to abide, to stay, we at once understand that those addressed are already there. Now, Christ's word to the sinner is "Come," because he is out of Christ; but His word to the believer is "Abide," stay, because he is already in Christ. No one can be in Christ and not have received the Holy Spirit. It is impossible, for He is the giver of the Spirit. In Him is life, and the instant we are united to Him by faith, we must receive the Spirit. "I am the vine, ye are the branches." What must the branches do? Be submissive to the life of the vine.

If we fail to abide in Him, we become a dead branch, that is good for nothing but to be cut off and cast away. Then, what must we, as the branches, do? Be fully surrendered to the life of the true vine. If we would bear fruit, we must be filled with the Spirit. To be filled with the Spirit, we must be willing to say, "Here, Lord, I give up all my plans, and purposes, all my desires and hopes, and accept Thy will for my will. Wherever Thou mayest lead, I will follow. Whatever Thou wouldst have me do, reveal it. I come to do Thy will."

To be filled with the Spirit means to be unfilled with worldly things. A vessel cannot be refilled if it be already filled. Often we wait, crying and petitioning to God for His blessings when we have no right to expect them. Prayer is all right with obedience, but not instead of it. Obedience is better than sacrifice. God is asking for you and me, and there is no substitute for our act of surrender. So obedience is better than prayer if it is the thing God is asking. We need give ourselves. "My son, give me thine heart." That is what our Lord wants; not time, or gold, but our hearts. When He wins the heart, He will have control over all, for "where your treasures are, there will your heart be also." Our God is a jealous God, and therefore wants first place in everything. Our Lord is worthy of trust, absolute trust, and He wants us to trust Him fully. It is God that worketh; for the Spirit must work in you ere He can work through you. He must purify the gold before He can send out the sterling coin. Trust Him as He works in you and trust Him as He works through you.

Now, what is it to abide in Christ? The difficulty here, as always, is that we seek men's thoughts instead of God's thought about the truth. God's definition of it is as clear, simple and practical as He alone could make it. We find in 1 John 3:24: "And he that keepeth His commandments abideth in Him and He in him."

Abiding is thus the constant keeping of His commandments. Some one says if abiding in Christ depends upon my keeping the multitude of commandments, I can never do it. Turn again to 1 John 3:23, "And this is His commandment, that we should believe on the name of His son, Jesus Christ, and love one another." To us who are under grace, all the commandments are fulfilled in the twofold commandment of faith and love. Do we realize that our walk in the Spirit is to be a constant momentary life of faith, as truly as our salvation was by act of faith? Faith is the doorway of communion with God. Love is the doorway of ministry to men. Faith is thus the channel of divine inflow. Love is the channel of divine outflow. Through faith, God has all power to work through us. Faith, which worketh through love, is the way Paul puts it in Gal. 5;6. The faith that looks hourly to Jesus, constantly receiving His inpouring life, and then pour it out through love. Faith is the one great thing needed in this day. Oh! that we might have faith to take God at His word, believing each promise given, and then through love for Him tell others the glad story. Faith and love, the two doorways into the state of happiness. He who keeps them both open has learned to abide in Christ. Through faith the doorways open God-ward, that we may receive the divine communion. Through love the doorway opens manward, that we may ever give out the divine life in ministry and service. The channel which shuts either door ceases to be a channel. As inflow and without outflow means stagnation, and outflow without inflow means emptiness, we must pass from the inflow of communion to the outflow of service.

The life of Jesus was twofold—that of communion with the Father, and service to others. Are we following His example? If not, why not? We realize that "He is love"—love of others. He wants us to be like Him, and therefore says, "A new commandment I give unto you, that ye love one another, even as I have loved you." Are we obeying this command by giving up self-love and making the supreme purpose of our lives to love and serve others for His glory? How did Jesus love? His love covered all things. He did not rebuke, find fault, criticise, make fun, but rather he saw the good and forgot the bad. Would to God that the people of this day would do that! Jesus said, "Love one another, even as I have loved you." How can we obey him? To do this, we must renounce self—all self-seeking, self-praise, striving, toiling and scheming for self. Crown Jesus and seek to suffer, sacrifice, plan, plead, pray and live for others. Are we asking ourselves day by day, "Did I do this in love for others? Did I speak this in love for others?"

Won't you work and pray for this love to be shed abroad in the hearts of all men, and especially in the lives of those professing to belong to His Church? The world can only see this love (Jesus) through the Church. Are you keeping both these commandments continuously? Are both doors open? If so, let us rejoice, because we have the promise as His Word declares: "Hereby we know that He abideth in us by the spirit which He hath given us."

SUFFOLK LETTER.

Many young people are thinking of what they will do for a life-work. That is a vital question not only for parents and young people, but for the people among whom they will live and work. There are three ways by which life-work is determined. These are by choice, finding one's place and circumstances.

The majority of the young want to choose their life-work, and the greatest number of mistakes are made by this method. There is in this method the largest element of selfishness. The mind looks over the field and prefers the best paying and most prominent position. The expression, "I would like" such and such a place enters largely into a position which is entered by choice. Of course, choice is a factor in the determination of life-work, no matter what method of determination is employed; but where choice is the main factor, the leading element, there is great danger of mistake. If a human being gets into the right place, or the right occupation, success is assured. It may not be the success the individual would choose, but it will be the best for the individual and society.

Finding one's place in life is a very different thing from choosing one's place. Capacity has something to do with decision. It is all-important to discover one's capacity by himself or by the help of teachers. The music teacher can help to discover musical talent. The mathematician can help discover that gift. The mechanical gift can be discovered in the same way. Bent of mind may help one to find his place. Never hunt an easy place. Never hunt for a big-pay place. Hunt for the place where the best work can be done. Many young men would do well to follow the leading of the Holy Spirit, inner convictions, especially in relation to the ministry. This is no place for choice. It is the place to hunt for the right line to follow. God will take care of this work. Do not enter this path if you can keep out. When the life feels the call, "follow me," follow; when the life feels the call to "go preach," answer it with the whole being and the whole life, and "go preach." Never choose preaching; but do not resist the call to preach. Moral obligations are felt: commercial obligations are chosen. More mistakes are made in setting life-work than in any other honest field.

Circumstances may determine duty in the field of service. Government may call for men in time of war. Mother and sister may be on a farm and son may find it necessary to remain with mother to care for her and sister. This is a common experience. It is not a matter of choice, and not a matter of talent, but of circumstances. No matter by what road one gets into life-work, if into the right place, life is satisfactory to self, approved by others, and useful to mankind. The most important step in life for the young is to find his true place. When the decision is once made, preparation should follow with thorough surrender to the work, no matter what that may be. There would be no failures, if all men and women were in their right places.

ELON LETTER

Twenty-six years ago, J. L. Cash, of Granville County, moved to Durham. Before leaving the country for the city, he was what he called a "sawmill chauffeur." The automobiles he drove were decorated in front with a pair of horns each and made about four miles per hour. He sometimes drove six such "automobiles" at the same time, but his rate of locomotion remained the same. From them he learned the grace of sticking to it.

The first thing he did after arriving in the city was to find a Church and join Sunday School. J. L. Cash's religion was not left behind when he moved to town. He has the original quarterly now that was given him when he became a member of the Sunday School of the Durham Christian Church, and money cannot buy it. Bro. Cash has not missed Sunday School a single time during the past twenty-six years. If any one else can surpass that record, I wish to be informed and will promptly write of it in the "Elon Letter," which is a real honor. Only great folks and great events and great thoughts find place in the Elon Letter. This is a well-known fact.

Bro. Cash is not only present at Sunday School, but he believes in preparing his lesson. He delights in finding the truth in the passage of Scripture set for study. He endeavors to live that truth all the week. He is a deacon in our Church, more than a tither in his generosity, and never passes up an opportunity to help the enterprises of the Church. He is an easy mark for everything but the ladies. For some unaccountable reason, he is still "batching it." Persons interested in relieving his sad and lonely condition may apply to the writer. Their sympathy will be broken to Bro. Cash gently and confidentially. I wish I could also say confidently, but I fear he is afraid to attempt to be happier than he now is.

A man who is thus loyal to the kingdom is bound to succeed in business. Bro. Cash is a furniture dealer and has the confidence and respect of all in his business dealings. There is not a man in his city who enjoys a higher reputation for integrity and the square deal than our genial brother of the bald-head-and-full-moon face who would rather be in Sunday School than in bed, even when he is sick.

The fine and devoted loyalty of Bro. Cash deserves every commendation. We need more such men in our Sunday Schools. May his good example continue unbroken and his good life be spared for many useful years of devoted service and fidelity. W. A. Harper.

ARE WE LIVING OFF OUR CHILDREN?

Should We Pass On Our Financial Burdens to the Rising Generation?

By Russell Bryon Williams.

No we are not living off our children in the sense that we depend on them for our everyday requirements of meat, coffee or shoes. But we are more and more obligating our children with indebtedness for the municipal, state and Federal pleasures we have today. When we float a bond issue to pay the cost of a war, defray the expenses of a soldier's bonus, build roads or dredge rivers, we are living on money borrowed from our children, for they are the ones who will have to retire those bonds.

If you walked into a clothing store, outfitted yourself with a suit of clothes at a cost of $100, then said: "My son here, who is four years old, will pay for this suit when he is 24 years old"—you would be doing personally what you do when you permit your legislature, your county board or your city council to walk into a "good roads" store, order a thousand miles or so of concrete highways, then say to the bankers who advanced the money: "This loan will be paid back in twenty years"—knowing full well that in 20 years your sons, not yourself, will be footing the bills.

To just what extent we have obligated ourselves with debt is best shown by the figures recently compiled by the National Industrial Conference Board. They, better than anything else, reveal the extent to which we are living on borrowed capital. While our national wealth has increased 72.2 per cent during the ten years from 1912 to 1922, our total indebtedness increased almost 300 per cent. In terms of dollars, the increases are as follows:

National wealth:
1912	$186,299,664,000
1922	320,803,862,000
Net total indebtedness (municipal, county, State, Federal):
1912	4,850,862,000
1922	30,845,626,000
State indebtedness:
1912	345,942,000
1922	935,544,000
Counties, cities, villages:
1912	3,475,954,000
1922	7,754,175,000

History shows there to be three distinct stages in the financial status of every empire. In the first stage tax receipts balance expenditures; in the second stage bills are paid by borrowing, and in the third stage bills are paid by issuing paper money. The United States is just now leaving the first stage; France is nearly through the second and Germany has almost completed the third. When the final stage has been passed, the nation is bankrupt, as is the case with Russia, Poland, Austria, and some of the smaller European principalities.

Time was when our taxes paid our governmental expenditures and left a little surplus—when our government lived within its income. The reverse is true now, due in large measure to the heavy bonded indebtedness. In 1890 our taxes amounted to 7.2 per cent of our national income while our govenmental expenditures totaled 7.1 per cent. Since 1890 the trend has been in the opposite direction, as is shown thus:

Year.	National Income.	Taxes. P. Ct.	Expenditures.
1890	$12,082,000,000	7.2	7.1%
1903	20,000,000,000	6.7	7.7
1913	34,400,000,000	6.4	8.5
1919	66,251,000,000	12.1	23.4
1921	50,000,000,000	16.7	20.5
1922	58,500,000,000	11.9	16.5
1923	67,000,000,000	11.5	15.0

By these figures we see how, since 1890, the government has been developing the habit of spending from one to ten per cent more than the governmental income. Only by governmental divisions, however, do the figures reveal the real reason why our taxes no longer cover our total governmental expenditures. The following table shows that except for the war period, which greatly increased the national expense, the blame for the discrepancy between governmental income and outgo can be laid at the door of the state legislatures, the county courthouses, and our city halls.

Year.		Taxes. (in millions of dollars)	Expenditures.
1890	Local	405	487
	State	96	11
	Federal	374	291
1903	Local	706	913
	State	155	182
	Federal	521	487
1913	Local	1,219	1,844
	State	307	383
	Federal	668	692
1919	Local	2,395	3,557
	State	570	640
	Federal	5,069	11,333
1923	Local	3,601	5,139
	State	892	1,450
	Federal	3,223	3,459

A study of the above figures will show that our state and local governments are chiefly to blame for this piling up of indebtedness, and in the mismanagement of credit. Borrowing money through issuance of bonds is too easy. It is becoming a habit with our city, county and state authorities. And the result is something like this:

In 1912 the per capita indebtedness of the United States was $49.97. Today the per capita indebtedness stands at $283.70.

Including interest, the Illinoois roads provided for by a recent bond issue of $100,000,000 will probably cost, before the issue is retired, in excess of $300,000,000.

There is nothing of news in the remark that the financial standing of European nations is not healthy. Here is one reason, found in an analysis of figures presented by the New York Trust Company: Of the $788,005,000 financed in this country by foreign governments during 1924, over $210,000,000 was for the purpose of refunding old debts. The total of all classes of financing in the United States last year was $6,3327,086,000—of which almost one billion dollars, or nearly one-sixth, was for refunding. Unless we reverse our tactics, that one-sixth will grow to a much larger fraction by 1935, 40 or 50 per cent, when many of the road, school, bonus, and "improvement" bond issues mature.

We have developed a terrific credit inflation—and somebody must pay the fiddler. In business the man who misuses credit fails. In government, unfortunately, the politician who misuses credit "points with pride" to his supposedly administration of economy. When we see 16.5 cents out of every farmer's dollar going for taxes (as against 8.7 per cent in 1910) we wonder how long we can stand the strain—how long it will be before something cracks. We are not paying as we go, and unless we get back to that fundamental principle soon, we will leave posterity a fine crop of promissory notes as heritage. Just now we are living pretty much off the kids.—Russell Byron Williams in the Dearborn Independent.

THE "GREAT ADVENTURE" IN CANADA.

After nearly a quarter of a century of discussion, three great Protestant denominations in Canada—Methodists, Presbyterians and Congregationalists—have at last made their union effective. It might have been accomplished in half the time, but our Dominion brethren wisely decided that the basis of the new movement ought to be thorough and satisfying to all, even down to the minutest point.

To put aside the traditions of a past age, including a train of memories that have been held as almost sacred, is not an easy task; but Canada's Christian leaders have shown themselves men of strong faith and clear foresight. They regarded co-operation as indispensable to the progress of the Church, both in the home and foreign fields, and did not hesitate at sacrificing such denominational differences as stood in the way. Nothing vital or essential is affected, and the same faith is held by all the three great bodies of believers under the new order of things that has been treasured from the beginning of Christian Church history in the Dominion.

We congratulate the United Church of Canada, which has taken so important a step in full faith and courage! Who can foresee the mighty influence that may be awakened by these three denominations, two and a half millions strong, when the union sets its face to the work before it in earnest! The "great adventure" may become a guide to the nations to follow. Our American Churches, several of which were discussing organic Church union seven years ago, will be interested observers, and the Churches of Scotland and Australia are said to be already moving in the same direction. Canada's experiment may prove to be the forerunner of the great movement in the Churches of Christ which Jesus foreshadowed in His prayer: "that there shall be one fold, one Shepherd."—Christian Herald.

MISSIONS

REV. J. O. ATKINSON, D. D., Field Secretary.

STEWARDSHIP AND PROMOTION

WARREN H. DENISON, Secretary

Lieutenant Governor of Virginia Recommends Tithing.

J. E. West, Lieutenant-Governor of Virginia, a member of our Suffolk Church, and President of the Mission Board of the Southern Christian Convention, takes his stand with other outstanding laymen and ministers such as Roger W. Babson, U. S. Senator, George Wharton Pepper, William E. Gladstone, Dean Brown, of Yale Divinity School, Dr. J. H. Jewett, Dr. Robert E. Speer, upon the scriptural duty, joy, blessing of tithing when he says, "I believe in the tithe as a minimum standard for giving unto the Lord and I have practiced it for twenty-five or thirty years. The Old Testament clearly taught it and the New Testament did not abrogate it, but seems also to teach stewardship, a still higher standard. The Christian who does not practice the tithe will not have a proper conception of stewardship. Tithing brings joy to the giver and solves all financial problems of the Kingdom of God. Try it."

Renewing the Forward Movement Subscription.

Celissa Griffith, Annapolis, Illinois, writes, "I Shall never be able to move a mountain, but I hope always to be able to renew my pledge to the Forward Movement of the Christian Church as the years go by; so you may count on me to make an effort every year to renew my pledge."

Such interest, real appreciation of what the Forward Movement work has meant to the Christian Church and the Kingdom is what helps to maintain the work. If you have so far failed to renew your subscription let there be no further delay. The work needs your personal, sacrificial, annual subscription. We would kindly request all Conference Presidents to emphasize the great need for such funds in their annual address.

Rev. A. W. Hirby, Walnut Hills Church, Dayton, Ohio, with his finance committee, sent out a series of five letters, one a week for five weeks, to each family in his church constituency, preceding his annual every member canvas. It was one of the best series of letters we have ever seen sent out for such a purpose. They will be very suggestive to pastors and copies of them may be had from Mr. Hirby by requesting them. You should send postage at least.

A Stewardship Atmosphere

Every leading denomination, so far as we know, is stressing the importance of Christian stewardship. It is an outstanding message and need for our day and our own people. The following methods will greatly help this Bureau create such a stewardship atmosphere in our churches and homes:

a. A thorough presentation of the subject on the Conference program this year.

b. The election of an active Stewardship Secretary as one of your regular conference officers.

c. A simultaneous Every-member canvas by the churches of your conference.

d. Arranging for a series of stewardship institutions in your conference this year.

e. Putting on a regular stewardship program in your church this year, apart from the raising of money, during November and December, a well planned program.

These things will greatly help our work of arousing our people for a great spiritual blessing.

LIVING EPISTLES.

I began tithing when working in a store for $5.00 a week and was paying $3.50 for my board and washing. Fifty cents a week was a lot to give but then I had a dollar margin. The practice has been a great blessing.

HERMON ELDREDGE, Dayton, Ohio.

Tithing is the most spiritual, scriptural, inspirational, practice, and helpful method of giving known. For almost eight years I have found great joy and blessing in tithing.

A. W. SPARKS, Everett, Pa.

Giving becomes a joy when one gives according to the plan God gives to us. I have been tithing for a number of years and would not think of going back to the old method of giving.

MRS. C. W. JOHNSON, Urbana, Ill.

The principle of tithing became my rule when a struggling student for the ministry and it has never ceased to be a blessing. It gives me the consciousness that I am square with God and that my stewardship is being accounted for in a systematic, constructive, and spiritual manner.

W. P. MINTON, Dayton, Ohio.

I have been a tither for five years. I really believe that I accomplish more on the nine-tenths by laying aside one-tenth for God than I can by using all God has given me for my own desires. If Christians would try this one year they would never go back to the old hap-hazard way of giving.

C. E. BOOZ, McPherson, Kansas.

Tithing means the spiritual enrichment and enlargement of the tither. It means the consecration of both self and substance to Kingdom service. It puts system into Christian activity, provides for the needs of the church and sends the Gospel to those who know not our Christ.

G. O. LANKFORD, Burlington, N. C.

Before I became a tither, giving was something of a burden. Now after paying the tithe there is a joy in giving and both the joy and the giving grow from year to year.

CARRIE ROBISON, N. Springfield, Pa.

I supposed, thought and estimated for years that I was a tither. However, I finally decided that my financial attitude to the Church and the Kingdom deserved the same consideration and exactness in accounting and bookkeeping that any other financial dealings or investments should have. Then, I began to keep accounts and render strictly to the Lord His tenth as it came to my mind.

Since then tithing has had a new meaning: 1st. By having something to give and knowing what I could give to every church and benevolent appeal. 2d. By being enabled to give cheerfully and systematicly because the Lord's treasury in my accounting always had something. 3d. Whatever beyond the tenth I have been permitted to give has been a scource of real joy and sacrificial delight.

J. O. ATKINSON, Elon College, N. C.

From Tithing Testimonials.

CHRIST, THE MODEL TEACHER.

Jesus said to the world: "Follow me." He spoke as man never spoke. He made no mistakes in judgement, committed no faults in morals, his exemplification of divine life in toil, and teaching, in trials and suffering, in self denial and self sacrifice find no parallel in the history of the world's best men. And He uttered a doctrine, and gave a system of religion which is absolutely faultless.

Perfect God he was, at the same time perfect man. He became so allied to human nature and all its wants that He lived and died with a perfect human experience, and a perfect character. We have a living and loving teacher who knows and helps us to learn of Him. With such advantage of discipleship how rapidly we may develope into his likeness. No other being since time began could have said "Follow me." Paul said, "Follow me as I follow Christ," but in this injunction he held up first of all before us, Christ as the model whom he himself illustrated. No human being, in himself, and in the light of his own excellence, could say, "Follow me"—that is in the sense of a pattern for eternity.

He could say, "Come unto me and learn," for in the school of Christ the soul could find rest and refreshment from God's wisdom.

As teacher and exemplar, Christ eclipses all the school masters of time, tells and shows us how to live, and how to die, and brings with mind reality, and accuracy the panorama of eternity before our eyes. He was the impersonation of meekness and humility always found in greatness and goodness. His child-like innocence and simplicity, coupled with the lion-hearted courage and majesty of manhood, brought together two extremes of human nature, between which pride and ambition, ignorance and prejudice have ever marred the glory and happiness of the human family.

It is through the example of Christ that we behold today the sublimest illustration of manhood on earth, in imitation of our great and only Master.

The sublimest triumph over the world was taught us in this doctrine of forbearance and forgiveness, and the best way to hurt an enemy was to heap coals of fire on his head by returning good for evil. In all things Jesus demonstrated the value of happiness of passion, in its control and subordination to good. He is the way, the truth and the life, and no other finger has ever pointed us across the hills of time to the hills of eternity. The way of the cross is the only truth, the life of the cross is the only life. Nothing but perfection incarnate could have ever transformed the Cross, the symbol of human iniquity, human shame and human punishment into an ensign of divine grace, divine honor and divine justification. However hampered by the infirmities of the flesh, or tempted by the devil, and crucified by the world, Jesus Christ lived and worked and died the Son of God. If Christ had not been the absolute one He would have said "I am the moon shining by night." Finally, how inspiring and transforming to stand perpetually before this model, under the chisel of truth, handled by the Holy Spirit.

What is the world by the side of Christ, the living stature of perfection, before the gaze of every Christian and of the world? Are you sorrowful? Behold the man of sorrows, who bore our griefs and takes them away. Are you sinful? Look upon Him by whose stripes you are healed. Are you weary and heavy laden? There He stands, who said "Come unto me and ye shall find rest." Are you ignorant? He only is wisdom and truth. Are you proud and ambitious? I am meek and lonely of heart." Are you full of hate, malice and revenge? Return good for evil, blessing for cursing, love your enemies. Are you guilty, ruined, lost in despair? Behold your Redeemer and Saviour.

What is it that Jesus is not to, or does not for, the saint or the sinner? He is all and in all. There are wonderful teachers here on earth, none preaching and teaching the wonderful works of Jesus, but they are obliged to teach after Him. If not, their teaching will not amount to any thing in this, or in the other world to come.

THE ESSENTIALS OF PROGRESS IN THE BIBLE SCHOOL.

By J. E. Foster.

1. Better building equipment.

Our Sunday School buildings are more and more being constructed from the inside out than from the outside in, that is, we are building more for efficiency and convenience than outward looks Many farmers make more preparation for their stock than their children. We must prepare to teach through the eye-gate as well as the ear-gate, the world recognizes this. It is estimated that ninety-three per cent of the crime committed originated on the screen of the moving pictures. Our churches should be built four square, that is, we should keep the physical, mental, social and spiritual needs in mind. This is indicated in the life of Christ as recorded in the second Chapter of St. Luke, and Jesus increased in wisdom and stature and in favor with God and man.

2. A vision of the possibilities of the Bible School.

We do not have the right conception of the Bible School. This is indicated by the fact that only one member of the Church in four attends the Sunday School, and of every dollar contributed by the Church only two cents goes to the Bible School. The Church has not yet fully realized that a Christian education is the only thing that will save this old world from ruin. The very life of the church itself depends on Christian education and training of children and young people. The Honorable Lloyd George has said, "All that I am and whatever I have accomplished I owe to the Sunday School." It is estimated that the average criminal case in the United States costs enough money to maintain a Sunday School of one hundred members for ten years. Judge Fawcet said, "I have had 27,000 boys before me and not one of them was a regular attendant of the Sunday School at the time he committed the crime," he said, "Sunday School scholars do not come to see me."

Eighty to eighty-five per cent of our Church recruits come through the Bible School, eighty-five out of every one hundred of our Churches was once a Sunday School and developed into a Church. A member of the international staff was holding a Sunday School Convention in Idaho a few years ago, when he met an old gentlemen somewhat crippled who was then seventy-three years of age, by the name of Benjamin Dix. He seemed very much interested in the Sunday School and Mr. Waite asked him what his happiest Sunday School memory was, he replied my happiest Sunday School memory is a class of four boys in a Methodist Sunday School in Ohio. I still receive letters from them on my birthdays. He said the first he received on his last birthday was from Central Africa, where Charles Conway a missionary sent his message; from D. R. Chrissinger, who has since become the chairman of the Federal Reserve Board, came the second message; third, George J. Chrimmon, President Harding's private Secretary, wrote from the White House, and the fourth one was from none other than Warren G. Harding. the President of the United States.

3. Conquest.

Dr. Dawson says, "Churches like armies live by conquest, when conquest ceases meeting begins." There is about 120,000,000 people in the United States and about 20,000,000 of them in the Bible School, what a challenge. There must be a definite program of conquest there is no warrant in Gods Word for simply opening doors and expecting them to come in, the command is to go out and bring them in. We must go after them systematically, personally and persistently.

Steven Paxton was saved by the Bible School, and he founded over 1300 Sunday Schools before he died and hundreds of them developed into Churches. It is stated that the United States Government spent enough money in its campaign to catch Villa to build a Church, an orphanage and a school house in each of the twenty one states in Mexico and maintain them for ten years and then they did not catch Villa.

Every child, yea every church member, in the bounds of this Conference is a challenge to this convention and we go forward only as we meet the challenge of the outstretched arms of youth and childhood.

4. Trained Leadership.

Study to show thyself approved unto God a workman that needs not be ashamed, rightly dividing the word of truth. The tasks of the world are done by the people that know how, knowledge does not come by chance or in tin cans; it comes by study, hard study, and preparation. The Sunday School teacher has entered the greatest work in the world, that of teaching immortal souls, made in the image of God, who will tell the tale in another world. Using the Bible, the greatest text book in the world, and teaching in the Church, the greatest institution, is the world-work. The office of the teacher cannot be over estimated. Christ himself was a teacher and in his great commission he sent his church to teach everywhere, everybody. We meet in conventions and discuss the big boy and other problems, but in the last analysis there is no big boy problem it is a question of leadership. I am convinced and more thoroughly convinced as the days go by that outside of the presence of the Holy Spirit the greatest need in the Church today is a trained leadership. I went to a little church by the name of Bethel two weeks ago to help organize a Sunday School and one at Vaughan last Sunday. We had two efforts at the latter place, the parents and children were there, but nobody to lead them. We finally succeeded in getting a man to come up from Rileysville two Sundays in the month and the Layman's League from Luray supplied the other two. There are scores of such places as these. We have not the time to emphasize training classes, institutes, summer camps and other places as these, but the only way to get competent leaders is to train them.

A father on one occasion had been telling his little boy the Bible story of the sheep that went astray. To make it a little more real to the boy he indicated that the sheep had probably got out through a hole in the fence, the boy listened with keen interest and when the story was finished he asked Papa did he fix the fence. The last thing I would do would be to knock Sunday School teachers and workers, because I have a warm place in my heart for them and I believe that if you would try to find another body as large, loyal, consecrated and efficient, you could not find them in this old world, but what I am pleading for is that we fix the fence.

5. Our teaching must lead to service.

The organization that goes forward must have plenty of exercise as well as good food. The church building should be a beehive of activity. The teacher that succeeds must lead his pupils into service, I am thinking of one of the best teachers in Page. He makes great preparation and is a splendid instructor, yet he is a failure because he fails to lead his scholars into activities. I paid his school a visit sometime ago and his class was small, and as the boys say, there was nothing doing. I am thinking of another young man less brilliant, I talked with him sometime ago about his class of boys. He said they were getting along fine, he just asked them a short time ago what they could do to help the school and one boy said we can put in a cement walk in front of the Church and work was done nicely. We are living in a new day, the teacher that was an ideal teacher ten years ago is not an ideal teacher now, unless he has the vision and tact to service. Excuse me for reference to my home School, Leaksville, sometime ago they put in a lighting system, they are now helping the church to buy song books, they have tested and tried Dr. Atkinson's challenge of a monthly offering to the orphanage and one to missions, and I would like to say that his offer has been a blessing to the orphanage and missions, but a far greater blessing to the local school that accepted it.

A new day is dawning. This is layman's day. What do all of these Billy Sunday Clubs, Crusaders, and all kinds of layman's organizations mean? It means that the great sleeping giant of the Church is being aroused and going forth to translate the teachings of Jesus and his Church into service. The Chairman of the Layman's League at Luray said to me a few days ago, "wasn't that a wonderful spirit in our social." I said, "yes; the Master has said, 'if we go he will go with us.'" Let me say as I close, we get life by giving life. You are familiar with the story of the man that was freezing to death in the Alps. He had lost his way, when he lay down in the snow to die, he discovered a log ahead of him covered with snow and decided to creep to that log and lay his head upon it for a pillow as he died. As he laid his head upon the log, it did not feel like a log, and brushing away the snow he found a man he supposed was dead, but upon examination he found signs of life and with energy he went to work to bring that man back to life. He did everything he knew, rolling, slapping, and rubbing him, for two hours he worked with this man and finally he came back to life, but the first man who had given up to die was tingling with life he had no thought of dying now.

Young men this convention may be the challenge for which you are waiting, it may be the best place to invest your life. And now get the last two words of my message to go forward, but first get ready, forget every thing else that I have said, but remember those two little words "get ready."

TUBERCULOSIS CAN BE AVOIDED.

You can avoid tuberculosis by:

Not moving into a house or working where a person who has had tuberculosis has lived until it has been disinfected by the board of health or your doctor. Fumigation alone will not kill the germs. The free use of disinfectant, followed by sunlight and fresh air, and then whitewash, calcimine or fresh papering will remove danger of infection from germ-laden rooms.

Not spitting yourself or allowing anyone about you, sick or well, to spit where it cannot be burned up or thrown into the sewer.

Admitting sunlight and air to every room in your house or work place, and keeping these rooms as clean as possible.

Taking care of your body and those of your family. Eating good, not poorly cooked food, taking a warm bath once a week, avoiding late hours and dissipation of all kinds, spending as much time as possible out of doors.

Wearing loose, light clothing that does not cramp your lungs. Not stooping your shoulders or allowing your children to do so.

Not letting your children come in contact with people who cough, because children take tuberculosis easier than grownups. You need not be afraid of a careful, cleanly consumptive, but avoid the careless and keep your children away from them.

RELIGIOUS EDUCATION

By H. S. Hardcastle.

MISS PATTIE COGHILL, Field Secretary, 11 East Newton St., Boston, Mass.

INTERNATIONAL UNIFORM SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON.

July 12, 1925.

Subject: "Behold, I have given him for a witness to the peoples, a leader and a commander to the peoples."—Isa. 55:4.

Lesson: Acts 13:13-52.

Devotional Reading: Isa. 9:1-7.

Paul and Barnabas had the impulse to go into all the world and to preach the gospel to every creature. And they obeyed that impulse. They left the Island of Paphos, where we found them last Sunday, and went on to the mainland, to Perga, in Pamphylia. For some reason unknown to us, John Mark left the company here and returned to Jerusalem. Paul thought his action was unjustified, for when he and Barnabas were to start out on a second missionary journey, Paul refused to take Mark along, and the contention became so sharp that Paul and Barnabas separated, Paul choosing as his companion Silas, while Barnabas took Mark. It is interesting to note, however, that Mark later became a "faithful minister" unto Paul. Many men will redeem themselves if given another chance.

The method of the missionaries was simple. They went to the Jewish synagogue, knowing that they would have a point of contact there. When they came to Antioch they went into the synagogue there and took a seat in the congregation. It was customary for some member of the congregation to expound the Scriptures, and either because Paul and Barnabas gave evidence of being unusual men, or because they may have spoken in advance, the rulers of the synagogue called on them to speak. So Paul, as the spokesman, stood up and addressed the people.

It is always refreshing to read one of Paul's sermons. He takes many texts, but he has only one theme—Jesus Christ. For Him to live was Christ, and both in his living and in his preaching he made Christ central. His sermon at Antioch was no exception. Starting with the early history of the Hebrew people—he knew that the Jews would never tire of hearing that—he led the people up to the culmination of that history in Jesus Christ risen from the dead. He declared that "God hath fulfilled the promise unto us, their children," and said that the message was "glad tidings," of which they were witnesses. Knowing that he was speaking to men who were under the law, he declared that through faith in Christ men were justified from all things which they could not be justified from in the law of Moses. So convincingly did he speak that after the Jews had gone out of the synagogue—the Jews, like many people today, were not open to new ideas in religion, or elsewhere—the Gentiles besought him that he would declare these things on the following Sunday.

But by the time the next Sabbath had come, religious bigotry and prejudice had done its work, and the Jews spake against the things which Paul had spoken, and contradicted them and blasphemed against Paul. Paul saw in all this a fulfillment of an eternal principle in religion. "He came unto His own, and His own received Him not." As for Paul and Barnabas, they saw that their mission was to be to the Gentiles, and they henceforth gave themselves to this great work. Many of the Gentiles believed, and through them the word of the Lord was published throughout the region.

Jealousy goes to extreme ends at times, especially when it is born of religious sentiments. The Jews stirred up the leading citizens of the city and raised a persecution against Paul and Barnabas and expelled them from the region of Antioch. They shook off the dust of their feet against the city in obedience to the Master's commands and went on to other cities to preach the word. It is a serious thing to have committed to one the gospel to be preached, and every minister should spare no pains to declare the truth in sincerity and love. But it is also a serious thing to hear the gospel and not to respond to its appeal. The human will is the sealer of its own destiny, and men should take care how they choose.

Teaching Points.

1. Christianity has as its genius the impulse to go to others.
2. The Scriptures culminate in Jesus Christ.
3. The gospel is good news.
4. God fulfills His promises.
5. God presents the way of life, but men must choose it.
6. The man with a closed mind presents a tragedy.
7. All men do not want to hear the gospel.
8. The most bitter persecutions have often been made in the name of religion.
9. Preaching the gospel has its obligations, and so does hearing it.
10. He who cannot work in one place can find another place to work.
11. Christian living demands courage.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

July 12, 1925.

Topic: "The Beatitudes of the New Testament."—Matt. 5:1-12; John 20:29; Rom. 4:7.

Some Bible Hints.

Admission to Christ's kingdom does not depend on legal acts, but upon a mental condition. (V. 3.)

Christ's road to happiness is the very opposite of the world's road of ambition, power, wealth. (Vs. 4-9.)

The doubting mind is not happy. Joy belongs to faith and trust. (V. 29.)

The sense of sin is a gnawing misery. Happiness comes when we know it is forgiven. (Rom. 4:7.)

Suggestive Thoughts.

The word "blessed" means "happy." It suggests the clean happiness of goodness and of pure love.

Jesus spoke from experience when He said that they are happy who know the word of God and keep it (Luke 11:28). It was one source of His own joy.

The faithful are happy (Luke 12:43). There is joy, even in secular toil, in the consciousness that work is well done, and that employers' desires are fulfilled.

In 1 Tim. 1:11, Paul daringly speaks of "the gospel of the happy God." Yet, how natural it is! God is the Fount of all true happiness. Happy Himself, He wishes to make His children happy.

A Few Illustrations.

How beautiful, how strong that tree is! Yes, but to be what it is it has had a long struggle against wind and storm. Sometimes happiness comes after struggle. "Happy he who has endured temptation" and come through (Jas. 1:12).

As young animals and children find happiness in activity, so in the Christian life joy comes through deeds (Jas. 1:25).

The moment the sea stops giving up its water to the sun, all life begins to wither. Life demands a constant giving forth, that the world may be blessed (Acts 20:35).

Our dead friends, who, indeed, are not dead, are happy, for heaven is happiness, and knowledge of the will of God, seen in that clear light, is fullness of joy (Rev. 14:13).

To Think About.

What New Testament blessedness have we experienced?

What often brings discord and pain into our lives?

How can we and our society make others happy?

A Cluster of Quotations.

To climb a thousand mountains seeking joy,
Then find her in the valley, at your call;
To delve in stubborn mines in search of wealth,
Then find it, bared, within a garden wall!
—Thomas Curtis Clark.

Let us never forget that an act of goodness is of itself also an act of happiness.—Wisdom and Destiny.

The girl had a wrong impression of Christianity who said to her toy donkey: "My dear donkey, I am sure you are a Christian; you have such a nice long face."—Lucy Elms.

To be happy, we do not need a great many things. A multitude of things may bring misery. What we need is the right attitude toward things, few or many.—J. P. Squires.

NEW SCHEDULES IMPROVE SERVICE.

Schedules of a number of important Southern Railway passenger trains were shortened and improved on Sunday, June 28th, when the full summer tourist service was inaugurated.

Trains Nos. 3 and 4 were placed in service for the summer on the following schedule: leave Columbia 12:10 A. M., Spartanburg 4 A. M.; arrive Asheville 7:40 A. M.; leave Asheville 8:15 P. M.; arrive Spartanburg 11:40 P. M., Columbia 2:50 P. M. They handle sleeping cars between Charleston, Wilmington, Macon, Atlanta and Asheville.

Thirty minutes was cut from the schedule of the south-bound Crescent Limited, No. 37, putting it in Atlanta at 5:20 P. M., and in New Orleans at 8 A. M. No. 39 now arrives Atlanta at 5:10 P. M. instead of 5:30 P. M.

Better service between Asheville and Augusta and Washington and the East results from shortening the schedules of Nos. 31 and 32 and 15 and 16.

No. 31 arrives Salisbury 5:10 A. M., Charlotte 6:40 A. M., Columbia 9:50 A. M., Augusta 1 P. M. No. 32 leaves Augusta 2:05 P. M., Columbia 5 P. M., Charlotte 8:30 P. M., behind No. 38, Salisbury 9:50 P. M., arriving Washington at 7:45 A. M., and New York at 1:30 P. M., as formerly.

No. 15 leaves Salisbury at 5:20 A. M., arriving Asheville at 10:00 A. M., forty-five minutes earlier than formerly; and No. 16 leaves Asheville at 4:30 P. M., forty minutes later, arriving Salisbury at 9:30 P. M., connecting with No. 32 for Washington and New York.

Christian Orphanage

My dear little Friends:

For a long time I have been writing letters to the grown-up folks, but this week I am going to write to my little friends and tell them something of our work here and something of our one hundred and thirteen little children we have here. Think of it—one hundred and thirteen little children here together, to play together, and sleep together, and just be together all the time! Don't you know they have a wonderful time here. We have little girls and boys here from eight months old on up—just think of a little baby eight months old, can't even walk or talk! How would you like to be here to help look after our babies? Maxine is the name of our baby here, and she is the sweetest and one of the prettiest and best babies I know of; all the children just love her to death, and she loves the little girls who play with her and rock her to sleep each day.

Now, little friends, I want to tell you that, although our little folks are happy, they are not so happy as you are, because they do not have a real father and mother to love them and care for them as you have. A real mother to put them to bed each night and cuddle them close to her; but they are happy that they have a good home and kind friends who will do their best to take the place of their good mother. Now, just let me tell you something else. We have about fifty little folks begging us for a home; they have lost their dear mother and father and have no home and no one to love them. Think of them, little children like you, not only without a mother to love them, but without a home and friends. Now, don't you want to have a part in giving these little children a home? I just wish that all the little girls and boys who read this letter would ask their father to let them have a little part in building a home for these little children who are all alone. Just think—a very small amount from a crowd of little boys and girls would be a great help to us in giving a home to the fifty little homeless boys and girls! Let's just see how many little boys and girls will fall in love with our little folks here and send a small contribution to help us on our new building. Watch THE SUN and see if any of your little friends' names appear on the list. Let's just see how many will send 10, 25, 50 cents, or so on, to help us and to help our babies at the Christian Orphanage.

THE FAITH OF A CHRISTIAN.

"And Nathaniel said unto him, Can there any good thing come out of Nazareth? Philip saith unto him, Come and see."—John 1:35-51.

Jesus constantly makes appeal to a man's reason. He is eager that they shall discover all the facts for themselves. For him, there is no warfare between reason and faith. Religion is not intended to divorce these two. The infidel terms himself a "free thinker." None are more free in their thinking than the Christian. Some boast that they are "rationalists," if by this is meant that they use their reason. "Come and see," says Jesus; "I will prove to you that my claims are true."

The challenge of Christianity to an open-minded faith, after the amplest inquiry, is clear. "O taste and see that the Lord is good. Blessed is the man that trusteth in Him." Paul says, "Try the spirits. . . . Prove all things. . . . Tell the things you see and hear. . . . These things were not done in a corner."

These are two methods by which we arrive at truth. One, on the authority of others, and the second by our own experience. All truth comes to us through our faculties. The appeal to experience is legitimate.

There is nothing at the heart of modern science more rational than this. What comforted Nathaniel? A personal interview with Jesus. He might have refused to see Him. The cry of prejudice, which is prejudgment, would be: "How can any good come out of Nazareth?" The cry of the Christian is this: Come and see." It is a scientific challenge. It is an appeal to reality. It means that the Christian challenges the worldly man to examine the Bible, to study the historic Christ, and to read the long pages of Christian history. When they do this they change their minds. They repent. They follow Jesus!—Ernest Bourner Allen.

Prayer.—Lord's Prayer.

TUESDAY.

THE MAN WHO RAN AWAY FROM GOD.

"Jonah rose up to flee . . . from the presence of the Lord."—Jonah 1:36-6.

Jonah was annoyed because God told him to warn the people of Nineveh. He tried to run away from God. Where would he go? If God made the world, He should be at home any place in it.

God had done much for Israel. Jonah did not show gratitude in refusing to do what God asked. Perhaps, because the Ninevites were not Jews, he did not wish them to have God's favor and protection. He was renouncing that favor so that they might not be favored. That was ruining himself to injure them.

Many are running away from God these days. Jonah seemed to be seeking some place where God would not think it worth while to trouble him. In one day, men try to go to some place or get at something in which they will forget God. But will forgetting God make Him forget them? If He does not forget them, it is like closing their eyes and stepping into disaster. Closing their eyes does not remove the danger. It is not likely that God will ignore the disobedient. It is safer and wiser and pleasanter to warn a thousand Ninevehs than say to God: "I'll not mind you." His requirements are for our good, and our obedience will be richly rewarded, but it is utter folly to refuse when God says "Go." If gratitude and the sense of duty are not enough to make men obey, fear should. "If thou wilt not observe, Jehovah will rejoice over you to cause you to perish."—J. H. Mills.

WEDNESDAY.

"First of all, we must observe that in all these matters of human action the too little and too much are alike ruinous, as we can see (to illustrate the spiritual by the natural) in matters of strength and health. Too much and too little exercise alike impair the strength, and too much meat and drink, and too little both alike destroy the health, but the fitting amount produces and preserves them. So, too, the man who takes his fill of every pleasure and abstains from none becomes a profligate; while he who shuns all becomes stolid and insusceptible.—Aristotle."

THURSDAY.

A JOY OF WORK.

"Even so let your light shine before men, that they may see your good works and glorify your Father who is in heaven."—Matt. 5:16.

"Do your work—not just your work and no more, but a little more, just for the lavishing's sake; that little more which is worth all the rest. And if you suffer as you must, do your work. Put your heart into it and the sky will be clear. Then out of your very doubt and suffering will be born the supreme joy of life."—Dean Briggs.

"The man who reaches the top is the one who is not content with doing just what is required of him. He does more.

"Every man should make up his mind that if he expects to succeed, he must give an honest return for the other man's dollar.

"Grasp an idea and work it out to a successful conclusion. That's about all there is in life for any of us."—Edward H. Harriman.

Prayer.—Our Father, reveal to us, all the way, that we are created for good works, and help us to walk in them, and whatsoever Thou givest us to do may we do it with all our might. In His name we ask it. Amen.

FRIDAY.

THE LOVE THAT NEVER FAILS.

"And I, if I be lifted up from the earth, will draw all men unto me."—John 12:32-36.

There is one force in the world which never fails. It is the force which wins hearts and grips them like cords of steel. It stirs them and brings them to tears of penitence and loyalty. It is the force of suffering love.

We remember the story of the prodigal. What was it that set him on his feet with his face toward home? Was it not the vision of his loving father, hoping for his return, praying night and day, loving him and caring for him still, even though he was in a far country? That suffering love of his father was a powerful force which the wayward youth could not resist! The richest experiences of our religious life are centered about the love which suffers, endures and is patient. It is the quality which makes great friendship possible, the virtue which cements homes together, the only power that can hold any human group permanently together.

The most dynamic spiritual symbol in history is the cross! As the innocent Christ was lifted up in agony, there was set going a spiritual force there on Calvary which will forever continue to draw men to Him. His love was perfect, wonderful, tender, unlimited! But He crowned it all when He suffered. He has been lifted up, the supremest example of uttermost love, and that love will be for humankind perpetually irresistible.—Rev. Vincent G. Burns.

Prayer.—Lord's Prayer.

SATURDAY.

THE PURPOSE OF SUFFERING.

"For in that He Himself hath suffered being tempted. He is able to succor them that are tempted."—Heb. 2:16-18.

The most fortunately situated human life is beset, sooner or later, by suffering. It has been said, "God had one Son without sin, but never one without sorrow." The purest life, the holiest heart, was that of Him who is described as "a man of sorrow and acquainted with grief."

If we seek to know the uses of adversity, to apprehend its meaning, and to extract from it what there is in it of good, we may discover the solution of the ancient riddle, "Out of the eater cometh forth meat, and out of the strong, sweetness." A recent author discusses the purposes of suffering and suggests three possible solutions of the problem. The first is that which regards suffering as nature's method of securing the survival of the fittest. The second considers it as nature's method of limiting the population. The third is the Christian thesis that all life, with its admixture of pain and pleasure, suffering and ease, is a field for the development of the discipline of the soul.

This is the interpretation that outshines and overshadows the others, and satisfies the hunger of our hearts as no philosophic or scientific theory can. Now we understand what life is for. Now we see the soul's high destiny. Now we know how sublime a thing it is "to suffer and grow strong." "Through the closed prison bars of pain that shut thee from thy kind, God stoopeth down to make thee one with Him."—Rev. C. C. Albertson.

Prayer.—"Our Father, we would learn anew the habits of devotion and worship. May we learn to seek Thy blessing in the early hours of the morning. May we come to Thee again at the close of the hurried day, to lay at Thy unsleeping presence our thanks for the day's victories over evil. And the praise shall be Thine. Amen."

SUNDAY.

KEEPING THE HEART.

"Keep thy heart with all diligence; for out of it are the issues of life."—Prov. 4:23.

All our actions are determined somewhere in the deep place of our nature. What we are there, we become in word and deed. All the destinies of life are born in the hidden depths of our hearts. The human heart is to the person what the kernel of the seed is to the plant; it determines whether the seedling will grow to be an oak tree or a jimson weed.

There are hundreds of people who want to live good lives. They wish to be upright. They want to be successful. They would give anything if they could control their fiery tempers; they would be willing to make any sacrifice to bridle their tempestuous passions. But they blunder on in this life, all oblivious of the real way to adjust life's delicate balance. They do not realize that their moral failures, their wrecked lives, result from too frequent heart-carelessness; that is, there are starting in their deep natures motives, desires and wishes which are incompatible with the life of honor they seek, and which inevitably will spring up in action some time. The heart is the source and spring of life. This is the reason no man can live a noble life who neglects his deeper nature.

Kiddies' Korner

MADGE FLEMING MOFFITT, Editor.

Dear Kiddies:

One morning Jack and Jill hopped up from the breakfast table and put on their skates and started for school They heard a merry cry:

"Jack and Jill, it is not wise
To take this time for exercise."

Little Elf Exercise danced into the middle of the road, shaking his merry bells on his little red cap. Jack and Jill said, "If we must keep still after each meal do come inside and tell us what to do."

Well, Little Elf. Exercise hopped on top of Jacks cap and they went indoors.

Little Elf danced on top of the piano keys and his words sounded like a song, as his tiny feet played the tune of "Twinkle, twinkle little star:.'

"Every child is wise
Takes some time for exercise,
But be patient—do not run
Right away when meat-times done."

Jack and Jill learned the song and in ten minutes they all started for school. Little Elf Exercise said as they went to school:

"To rest a little is often best.
Our food needs some time to digest."

At recess Little Elf Exercise was here and there and everywhere. He sang:

"A child can do well if he tries,
Play is the finest exercise."

He caught the ball in his tiny hands and was the last one to go in when the bell rang.

He said, "We should have a regular time for work and play, and that we should exercise outdoors all we can," said Jack, when they went home after school—"And, well, I think Little Elf Exercise is right, don't YOU?

Your editor,
MADGE F. MOFFITT.

Maybe the Kiddies Korner would like to have been here to see our Chinese Tea last Friday night. The invitations read like this:

"The Chinese people delighted will be,
If you will consent to come and take tea,
On June nineteenth—very soon after eight,
With Mei Chu, and Ching Fong and Wei Ping and Me."

(Signed,) ELIZABETH HORNER, President Willing Workers Missionary Society.

Your editor went out to Shallow Ford last Sunday, and Oh, oh she had the bestest time— A new Willing Workers Missionary Society was organized, with twenty new members to start it off, and each one of the twenty is so happy over their new Society! Let's ALL make a GREAT BIG WISH —and wish for that new Society to be the BESTEST Society in Alamance County.

MY NEW DRESS.

My mother buys a piece of cloth
To make a frock for me;
She cuts it up in little bits,
Though, why, I cannot see.
She cuts it up in little bits,
And then, with might and main,
She sews and sews and sews and sews,
And sews it up again!

—Selected.

We invite you to our Bible School!

IN EVERYLAND

BY BETTY NICHOLSON (11), KANS.

As I look across the golden sand,
I catch a glimpse of every land,
As far away as I can see
Are folks—just folks like you and me,

WHICH WAS COLONEL BROOKS?

In a big, sunny barn chamber stood a basket filled with hey. In this soft nest a proud mother-cat was purring her four babies off to sleep.

One was Maltese, with sky-blue eyes. Two were black and white. But one was black all over—not a white mark to his foot nor even a white necktie under the dear little chin. He was the one I chose.

I named him Colonel Brooks. A pretty big name for a kitty baby, wasn't it?

Well, he was a darling from the very start. He loved and trusted everybody. You should have seen him step up to our big dog Rufus, without a sign of fear, coaxing him to be friendly with the sweetest of love-making.

And old Rufus, who up to that time had hated the very sight of a cat, fell in love with the little colonel on the spot.

Colonel Brooks had never slept by himself, so he would have been very homesick if Rufus had not shared his bed with him. Uncle Will made it his business to see that they went to bed early.

But one night, when Uncle Will was very late in coming home, he found a black kitty on the front doorstep, crying to be let in. He supposed. of course, it was Colonel Brooks. So he picked him up, put him on the cellar stairs, and told him to go straight to bed.

Then Uncle Will seated himself to read the evening paper. But no sooner was he settled in the easy chair than a black kitty, for all the world like the colonel, jumped into his lap, purring like a small steam-engine.

"Is this you, Colonel Brooks!" cried Uncle Will. "Didn't I just put you down in the cellar? How did you get up here?"

Uncle Will hardly could believe his own eyes.

So he took the cat under his arm, and went down the cellar stairs to have this strange matter explained.

But, when Uncle Will reached the foot of the stairs, the queerest thing happened. Another black cat came out to meet him. And, what was the most puzzling of all, the cat on the cellar floor was just like the cat in Uncle Will's arm, and the cat in Uncle Will's arm was just like the cat on the cellar floor.

Not a white hair on either of them, and just the same size. Oh, dear me! How was Uncle Will ever to know which was his own dear kitty?

Just then a snore came from the box where Rufus lay asleep. "Oho," cried Uncle Rufus, "I'll take both cats over to Rufus. He'll know which is Colonel Brooks inside of two minutes." Inside of two minutes! I should say so! In just one tail-wag, Rufus knew what to do. He gave a growl that sounded like a small clap of thunder.

And, lo, and behold! the kitty under Uncle Will's right arm leaped to the top of the woodpile, hissing with anger and fright. But the little black kitty under Uncle Will's other arm gave a spring straight into the heart of Rufus' warm bed, and began to rub noses with his big friend.

Then Uncle Will knew that this one was Colonel Brooks. But if it hadn't been for that wise old Rufus, he might never have found out to this very day.—Emily J. Langly, in Youth's Companion.

IN MEMORIAM.

Our esteemed bother, John King, died on the 8th day of June, 1925, at his home in Suffolk, Va.

Bro. King was a member of the Suffolk Christian Church and of this class, and was an active Sunday School and Church worker. His love for his Church, pastors and the members was one of the elements of his loyal and faithful life as a Christian. He was cheerful in adversity as in prosperity, and was always ready to give words of comfort and courage to the weak.

His home life has been well described by Dr. W. A. Harper in the following words: "As a husband, his affection for his wife not only beautified her lovely character, but filled every heart privileged to associate with them with the joy that comes of contact with a situation of perfected beauty."

In his dealings with his fellow-men, he was especially tender and kind to the poor, respecting the needy as much as the influential and rich, and treating all alike in the performance of his conscientious duty. His life was a useful and beneficial one to the city and community, and his loss will be felt by all.

His memory will abide in this Church, Sunday School and community as a good and exemplary life of one who was willing to bear his share of the burden and do his part of the work.

Therefore, resolved, That we will cherish thoughts of Bro. King that will inspire us to the performance of our duty in his spirit of willingness and love.

Further resolved, That a copy of this expression of our sincere love and feeling for Bro. King be entered upon the records of this class and sent to the bereaved widow of our dear brother, and published in The Christian Sun, with our sympathy, our love and our prayers.

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT.

Whereas, it has pleased God, in His infinite wisdom and mercy, to remove from the Ladies' Aid Society of Burton's Grove our beloved member, Mrs. C. A. Freeman, she shall ever occupy a large place in our memories. In her passing from the earthly labors to heavenly reward, we feel keenly our loss; therefore, resolved:

First, That while we mourn her departure, we realize our loss is her eternal gain, and that God, who gave, has taken her spirit unto Himself to live in perfect happiness, in the home prepared for us.

Second, That we register our appreciation for that part of her life we call ours as friend and worker with us.

Third, that, although our hearts, as well as those of her companions, children and relatives, are deeply grieved, yet we rejoice in the hope that all is well with her.

Fourth, That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family, a copy to The Christian Sun for publication, and a copy be spread on the minutes of our society's record.

COLE—STUART.

Mr. Charlie R. Cole and Miss Elnora Stuart were united in marriage at the Methodist Church, Hemp, N. C., June 13, 1925, in the presence of a few witnesses. Mr. Cole is a son of Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Cole, Eagle Springs, N. C., and a member of the board of deacons of his home Church (Big Oak), where he is engaged in the lumber business.

Mrs. Cole is the daughter of Mr. J. K. Stuart, of Jackson Springs, and a member of the Presbyterian Church. They left for a trip to Asheville and other points in Western North Carolina. On their return they will be at home to their friends at Jackson Springs, where they will make their home. Their many friends join in wishing them much happiness. The ceremony was performed by the writer. C. E. GERRINGER.

LEONARD—ALLRED.

At the home of the writer, Hobert Leonard and Florence Allred were united in marriage in the presence of a few friends. The bridegroom is a son of a widow lady of Ramseur, N. C., and the bride is a daughter of W. E. and Belle Allred, Ramseur, N. C., Route 1. After the ceremony, the writer and wife were invited to go and take supper at W. E. Allred's, where we found the table loaded with good things.

The bridal pair will make their home at Ramseur, N. C. They were married June 14th, at 8 o'clock P. M.

JOHN M. ALLRED.

THE RADIO CHURCH.

The old "outlaws' cabin," a stone building in the mountains near Tonopah, Nev., has become a church. Formerly it was a rendevous for desperadoes planning stage hold-ups or raids on neighboring settlements, or meeting after a foray to share their booty. Now, with a new boom bringing gold miners again to the vicinity, it is a meeting place for Christian worship.

Moreover, it is a meeting house of a new kind, which might make the place notable without its black past. It is a "radio church." There is no pastor there, and no religious organization in the ordinary sense. The congregation is a loose, voluntary assemblage that comes to hear a church service 500 miles away. The local pastor is merely a radio receiving set.

Is the radio destined to "keep people away from church?" Perhaps. Yet there is much compensation in taking church to the people. There will be radio churches like this scattererd in all the waste places of the world.—Johnson City, (Tenn.) Chronicle.

THE AVERAGE MAN'S MISTAKES.

The average man, at the end of life,
Sat counting his life's mistakes,
And half of them, as he said to his wife,
Were those that rashness makes.
And the other half (here he lifted his head)!
He could scarcely believe his vision—
Yes, fully the other half, he said,
Were caused by indecision."

CASTOR—DAWSON.

A beautiful marriage was solemnized at the home of Rev. and Mrs. T. B. Dawson, Elon College, N. C., Wednesday, June 24, at 4:30 P. M., when Mr. Frank Stevens Castor led to the altar Miss Fanny Pearl Dawson. She was given in marriage by her father, her dame of honor being her sister, Mrs. Raymond McDonald, of Tampa, Fla. Mr. DeKime Castor, Concord, N. C., was the groom's best man. Sarah Virginia Hook was flower girl, and Irene Hook, both daughters of Dean Hook, of Elon College, was ring-bearer.

Just prior to the ceremony, Mrs. W. A. Harper sang "O Promise Me," and Miss Mary Lee Foster presided at the piano. The Dawson home was beautifully and very tastefully decorated for the occasion, and the improvised marriage altar, with its charm of fragrant flowers and tallow candles, made the ceremony solemn and impressive.

An informal reception was tendered the bridal pair immediately after the ceremony. They are to make their home in Philadelphia, where the groom is practicing his profession as pharmacist. They have the congratulations and best wishes of a host of friends. The ceremony was performed by the writer.

J. O. ATKINSON.

TERRILL—SHERIN.

At the residence of Mr. George Marion Cord and Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Moore, in Franklinton, N. C., Mr. W. H. Terrill and Miss Mildred Sherin were united in marriage. Flowers were used in abundance for decoration. Mrs. Moore, a sister of the groom, was greatly aided by Mrs. Temple Cord in making the home attractive. Little Virginia Dare Moore was ring-bearer, and Hilda Rives Moore was flower girl. The ring ceremony was used.

Birmingham to Be Honored.—

The quadrennial session of the World's International Sunday School Association will meet in Birmingham April 13th to 19, 1926. President Coolidge is to deliver one of the addresses, and committees are already busy perfecting plans for the meeting. This meeting is one of the greatest assemblies which has ever met in the South, and Southerners should take advantage of it.

Automobile Export Trade.—

According to figures given out by the Department of Commerce, the United States exported 378,000 automobiles and trucks during 1924. This was only 5 per cent of the total manufacture; but, even so, it was more than the exports of Italy, France, Canada, Germany and England. This may be thought of as indicative of the great business progress which this country is now making.

The Children Build.—

The children of the Episcopal diocese of New York gave as their lenten offering for missions $41,000, and an equal amount was given toward the erection of the children's arch of the Cathedral of St. John the Divine. The children are building with souls and with stone, and their building shall endure. We need to teach the love of giving to children in their tender years so that it will be a part of the hearts and lives which they grow.

Largest Protestant Congregation.—

Chicago has been claiming the largest Protestant congregation in the form of Olivet Baptist Church, a negro organization. Now we learn that New York has recently been host to Rev. F. Hallgrimsson, who is leaving his Lutheran congregation at Baldur, Manitoba, Canada, to become co-pastor of the Lutheran Cathedral at Reykjavik, Iceland. This congregation claims a membership of twelve thousand, which goes the Chicago negro Church about two thousand better.

Bishop Won't "Brighten the Corner."—

Bishop Wilbur T. Thirkield is telling the ministers under his charge that the Church music of the day simply leaves you where you were. He says that "Brighten the corner where you are" will do nothing but leave you in the corner. The bishop is making an effort to dignify Church music, an effort which a number of churchmen need to make. He says that the organ is an instrument of God because you cannot go to war with it, and you cannot dance to it. He further believes that vestments are the best protection against a display of spring millinery in the choir loft. Who knows but that the good bishop is right?

Lynching Decreasing.—

Lynching in the United States is on the decline, according to figures given out by the committee on race relations of the Federal Council of Churches. There were only sixteen lynchings in the United States during 1924, according to this report. Forty-five communities prevented lynchings. These figures show a great improvement over those of 1914, only a decade ago. During that year, there were only seventeen preventions and fifty-two lynchings. This decrease shows in a striking way what the focusing of the public conscience on a social evil can do. We need to focus the public conscience on a good many other social evils in this great country of ours.

The High Cost of Crooks.—

The yeggmen, bandits, and other crooks of high and low degree in this country collected enough in plying their trade last year to have run the United States government. Over three billion dollars were collected by these gentry last year. This amount, taken in the aggregate, is appalling, but we cannot comprehend such gigantic figures; but when we figure it down so that the loss of every man, woman and child, including infants in arms, lost $27.20 each, it becomes a little more comprehensive. Apparently, the business of burglary seems to be the largest conducted in this country. This support of our underworld in such a lavish way is another of America's unenviable records.

$500,000 Bonfire.—

The fire loss in the United States for 1923 amounted to more than half a billion dollars, or about five dollars and two cents per person. This tremendous loss is due in a large measure to the recklessness and carelessness of the citizens of this country, and far exceeds the fire loss of any other country. While the fire loss in this country is $5.02 per person, in Great Britain it is only 72 cents per person; in France, 28 cents; in Germany, 28 cents; in Australia and Italy, 25 cents; in Switzerland, 15 cents, and in Holland the fire loss per person is only 11 cents. America leads in many things, and in many of them there is no honor attached to the leadership. This is one of them. It brands us as the most negligent race in the world, and the most wasteful.

An Illiteracy Problem.—

There are enough qualified voters in the United States who cannot read and write to control an election if they were properly organized. Out of a potential voting population of fifty million, 4,333,111 cannot read and write. In this respect the United States is far behind the European powers. England, Holland, Germany and the Scandinavian countries have reduced illiterarcy to a negligible figure largely confined to the mentally defective. Over one million seven hundred thousand of the nation's illiterates are foreign-born. These are distributed, for the most part, in the industrial States, where educational systems are good, and most of them are older people, with whom time will deal and bring about a solution of the problem. In the South and elsewhere where the native-born illiterates live, the problem is not so hopeful. There are 1,842,161 negroes and 1,763,740 whites. These are scattered through the rural districts for the most part, and the South has far above its proportional part of them. There are 110 counties in the United States in which one-fourth of the population cannot read the printed page, and in some of these the percentage exceeds one--half. The figures are given out by the National Education Association.

About Polar Explorations.—

The recent expedition of Commander Amundsen, the Norwegian discoverer of the South Pole, and his associate, Lincoln Ellsworth, an American, who left Spitzbergen on May 22d and was practically lost for twenty-eight days, brings to light a number of interesting facts about polar explorations. Amundsen and his party landed on the ice at 87 degrees 44 minutes north—the farthest point any man other than Commodore Peary has ever reached. They were there forced to abandon one of their airplanes, and the party of six made the homeward trip in one plane. They went within 160 miles of the pole.

Some of the landmarks in the efforts to explore the Far North are the voyage of Pytheas in 325 B. C. He was a Greek navigator, and was probably the first white man to approach the Arctic circle. In 1194, Norsemen discovered Spitzbergen, about 80 degrees north. In 1610, Henry Hudson, sailing under the Dutch flag, discovered Hudson Bay, and in 1616 Baffin explored some of the country north of Hudson Bay. Vitus Bering, in 1728, discovered the straits between North America and Siberia which bear his name. There were voyages to the north by Sir John Barrow, Edward Parry, and John Franklin, and others, including Scandinavians, in 1815. In 1894 to 1896, Dr. Fridtjof drifted across polar ice to 85 degrees 5 minutes north. In 1897, A. Andree, a Swedish aeronaut started from Spitzbergen in a balloon to sail across the pole, and was never heard of afterwards. In 1901, Roald Amundsen visited the north magnetic pole. Robert E. Peary discovered the north pole in 1909. Since that time, a number of expeditions have attempted to reach the pole again, but none have so far been successful.

NOTES-PERSONALS

President Harper reports that application for entrance of students at Elon in September are coming in quite hopefully, and the prospects for a good opening are good.

Suffolk Church has secured something over $67,000 in available cash or collateral in its campaign for funds to build a larger and more adequate Church plant. They plan to begin building at an early date.

Rev. W. T. Walters has resigned as pastor of the First Christian Church, at Richmond. Last Thursday morning, Dr. and Mrs. Walters left for Winchester, Va., on account of the extreme illness of Mrs. Walter's mother.

The following is gratefully acknowledged: "Rev. and Mrs. T. B. Dawson announce the marriage of their daughter, Fanny Pearl, to Mr. Frank Stevens Castor, on Wednesday, 24th of June, 1925, Elon College, N. C."

Rev. Wm. T. Scott, in passing through Richmond, gave THE SUN office a brief call the first of this week. Mr. Scott was assistant pastor of the Norfolk Temple last year. This Church is commonly spoken of as Dr. Smith's Church.

Rev. Wm. T. Scott, who is now working in the interest of Elon College, preached for the pastor of the First Christian Church, at Richmond, last Sunday. The pastor, Dr. W. T. Walters, was absent on account of the death of the mother of Mrs. Walters.

Dr. J. U. Newman, of Elon College, is at Defiance College, Ohio, for ten days, giving a course of lectures there before the Pastors' Summer Conference held annually at that institution. Those fortunate pastors will hear something from Dr. Newman that is worth while.

Rev. Elisha Bradshaw has resigned the work at Mt. Carmel and Johnson's Grove, effective after the close of this Conference year. He will be open for work the coming year. He reports the work at both of these Churches in good shape and having a hopeful future.

It is greatly to be deplored that the work on the new dormitory at Christian College, Franklinton, N. C., has had to be suspended because of lack of funds. Our colored brethren and friends are doing their best, and they deserve and should have help in this time of real need.

If missionary societies and Sunday Schools will redouble their efforts and liberality in behalf of our Rocky Ford building fund for the next sixty or ninety days, we shall see that long-promised and overdue building going up. Here indeed is opportunity for worthwhile investment in kingdom work.

A Bible thought for these times of need and strain in kingdom's service: "Give, and it shall be given unto you: good measure, pressed down, and shaken together, and running over, shall men give into your bosom. For with the same measure that ye mete withal it shall be measured to you again."—Luke 6:38.

South Norfolk, Va., is to have one of the best and most attractive and impressive houses of worship in that thriving city. The cost, when complete, is to be about $75,000. Pastor O. D. Poythress and his people are making heroic sacrifices to achieve the great purpose they have in mind for the upbuilding of the kingdom in their city.

SUN readers will be glad to know that Mrs. W. A. Harper, who underwent a serious operation more than two weeks ago, is improving hopefully, and the prospect is that she will be returned to her home before many more days. Dr. Harper's hopeful smile tells the story of her progress in recovery to the friends who see him day after day.

Have your Sunday School and Christian Endeavor elected delegates to your Convention, to be held now at an early date? Every school and society needs the help, information and inspiration that these Conventions give, and the Conventions, in turn, need the presence of delegates from every school and society to help plan the work for the coming year.

Rev. L. E. Smith, D. D., Norfolk, Va., is spending his usual two weeks of summer study at Union Theological Seminary, New York. Dr. Smith carries a load that would crush ordinary men, but his periodical courses of Bible study at a seminary and his attendance at inspirational conferences and conventions help carry that load and keep him fit for the task of ministering in holy things to a great and ever-increasing city congregation.

Rev. J. F. Morgan, who has been pastor of First Christian Church, Winchester, Va., the past three years, has tendered his resignation as pastor of that Church, to take effect September 1st. Bro. Morgan has accepted the pastorate of Rosemont and Berea (Norfolk) Churches. Bro. Morgan has done excellent and efficient work at Winchester, and the people there give him up with great regret and reluctance. Rosemont and Berea are to be congratulated.

The following is gratefully acknowledged: "Mr. and Mrs. John Robert Foster have the honor of announcing the marriage of their daughter, Sallie Warren, to Mr. Eston Gibbons Norwood, Saturday, June 27, 1925, Burlington, N. C." Miss Sallie was exceedingly popular at Elon, from which she graduated several years ago and has been a successful teacher since. Mr. Norwood is a successful business man of Bennettsville, S. C., where they will make their home.

What do SUN readers think of a country Church with a Sunday School numbering 200 on its roll, and an average attendance per Sunday of 160? That is the record that Bro. McCauley gives from one of his Churches, and it is indeed a most enviable one. Evidently Pastor McCauley recognizes the worth to him, as pastor, and to the Church in having a live, wide-awake Sunday School, and lends his active aid to increasing interest in the Sunday School.

The Daily Vacation Bible School of the First Christian Church of Richmond, Va., held June 29th to July 3d, was quite a success. The total enrollment was about fifty-five, and the average attendance over forty. The school was under the management of Mrs. W. T. Walters, who was ably assisted by workers from our own and other Churches. Owing to the death of Mrs. Walters' mother, Rev. W. T. Scott took charge the last two days.

Time may have been when, from lack of equipment or accommodation at Elon, parents in the Christian Church found excuse for sending their sons and daughters elsewhere; but that day has passed. Elon's equipment and accommodations, even for the most exacting and fastidious, are equal to the very best offered by any Church college any where. If our parents and possible patrons don't appreciate this, and respond to it, we shall be surprised and disappointed.

The following is gratefully acknowledged: "Mr. and Mrs. Marshall R. McLean invite you to be present at the marriage of their daughter, Katherine Doris, to Mr. William B. Terrell, Monday evening, July 13, 1925, at 8:30, at Frieden's Evangelical Lutheran Church, Gibsonville, N. C." Miss Doris and Mr. Terrell were both graduated at the recent Elon commencement and have many acquaintances among SUN readers, who will join us in wishing them all happiness. Bro. Terrell is one of our promising young ministers and is at present pastor of Pleasant Grove and Ingram Churches, Halifax County, Va.

Not only will our Winchester Church part with Rev. J. F. Morgan with deep regret, but the Ministerial Association of Winchester, of which he was secretary and treasurer, and the Virginia Valley Central Conference, of which he was vice-president, and the Missionary Association of that Conference, of which he was president, will miss him very much and are quite loath to give him up. Bro. Morgan is one of our very active and strong pastors, and endears himself to the people whom he serves by his unstinted efforts in their behalf. While Winchester gives him up with great reluctance, Rosemont and Berea congregations will feel and will respond to the impact of his powerful Christian life and activity.

We are sending to missionary societies and to Sunday School superintendents and secretaries this week a bulletin, "Missionary Facts and Suggestions." This bulletin sets forth elaborately and succinctly the facts, the present status and the prospects of our missionary work in Carroll County, Va. It is believed that our societies and Sunday Schools will relish these facts and they are sent to these officials with the expectation and supposition that they will be read to societies and schools. See to it, reader, if you receive one of these bulletins, that the facts they convey are lodged in your missionary circle or society and in your Sunday School and Christian Endeavor. Besides the facts, there are five large pictures on the bulletin which convey to the eye an idea of what we have and what we are doing in and about Fancy Gap, Va.

From the Winchester Evening Star of Thursday, July 2d, it is learned, with sorrow, that Sister Sarah J. Richards, wife of Bro. A. B. Richards, of our Winchester, Va., Church, died at her home about noon Thursday, July 2d. Sister Richards was one of the charter members of our Winchester Church, and remained faithful and true to the Church to the day of her going away. She was the mother of a large family, and was a Christian woman, whose influence was felt not only in Church and community, but went out through her home to many parts and communities. The sons and daughters surviving are: L. Adolph Richards, Washington, D. C.; Harry Austin Richards, at home; Boyd R. Richards, Alva C. Richards, Nelson F. Richards, and Roy W. Richards, all of this city; Mrs. Claude V. Turner, Bartow, Fla.; Mrs. Charles Cooper, of the county; Mrs. Walters, wife of Rev. William T. Walters, Richmond, Va., and Mrs. Ralph G. Pollard, of the county. Bro. Richards, the bereaved husband, and the entire family, all of whom are acquaintances and friends of THE SUN'S editor, have our sympathy in this hour of their bereavement.

REV. W. T. WALTERS QUITS PASTORATE.

Board of First Christian Church Takes Action on His Resignation.

Rev. Dr. W. T. Walters, for more than five years pastor of First Christian Church, resigned the pastorate of that Church last night, effective October 1st, it was announced today.

Dr. Walters tendered his resignation to the board of managers a year ago, but they declined to accept it. At another meeting, last night, the board agreed to permit him to relinquish the charge. His reasons for resigning were not learned, and it was stated that he has no plans for the future.

Dr. Walters came to Richmond on March 1, 1920, and organized First Christian Church on April 4th of that year. Since that time the handsome new home at Grove Avenue and Shepherd Street has been built, and the Church has property worth $100,000. A total of 156 members have been received.

The retiring pastor of First Christian Church is a vice-president of the Richmond Ministerial Union, and of the Richmond Council of Churches, member of the Interdenominational Board for Religious Work in State Institutions, of the board of managers of the Virginia Bible Society, president of the Virginia Valley Central Christian Conference and chairman of the Board of Religious Education for the Southern Christian Convention. He also is a member of the board of Elon College.

Mrs. Walters is president of the Citizens' Law Enforcement League, and holds the position of treasurer of the Woman's Mission Board of the Southern Christian Convention, as well as being active in other religious work.

Dr. and Mrs. Walters left today for Winchester, owing to the illness of Mrs. Walters' mother, Mrs. A. B. Richards, of "The Maples," Winchester.

Before coming to Richmond, Dr. Walters organized and built a Church at Winchester, the building being paid for before he left.—News Leader (July 2d).

TO OFFICERS OF S. S. & C. E. SOCIETIES.

With Sunday, June 28th, our Convention year comes to a close. Now is the time of reports. CROPS IN VIRGINIA.

"With seasonable temperature and occasional showers, all crops made rapid growth, and cotton, corn and tobecco are in good to excellent condition in most parts of the State," declares the synopsis of weather and crop conditions in Virginia.

"There is still need of more moisture, however, in many localities," the report states. "The scant rainfall of the season has been favorable for cultivation, and as a result fields are quite free from weeds and grass. There is considerable acreage not planted in tobacco, on account of dry weather, which will be diverted to other crops.

"Early potatoes are only a fair crop in the interior, but reports from the Eastern Shore are quite favorable. Sweet potatoes and peanuts are in fair to good condition and are doing well in most localities. The harvest on wheat is about completed, and reports on this crop are very favorable where threshing has been accomplished. The June drop of apples is reported as rather heavy in the Piedmont region."

PRINCIPLES OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

(1) The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.

(2) Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.

(3) The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.

(4) Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship, and of Church membership.

(5) The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by, all.

THE PURPOSE OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

The purpose of this Church is to cultivate a spirit of union among the followers of our Lord Jesus Christ of every persuasion, and to secure, if possible, the associate efforts of all true religious teachers in pointing the wicked to "the Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world."

The peculiar doctrines and tenets which have confused and distracted the Christian world are remanded to private judgment, and hence cease to be matters for debate, only in so far as may be necessary to prevent a sectarian influence from entering the Church.

This Church requires no compromise of faith on the part of any child of God in order to communion or fellowship; here, denominational distinctions cease to exist, and Christian love binds the brotherhood together.

The purpose of this Church will be consummated in the conversion of the world and the union of all Christians.

THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

THE SUN'S editor, on occasion, indulges his delight in that immortal classic Gibbon's "Decline and Fall of the Roman Empire." It is a classic, and one becomes intoxicated in the maze and mystery of the man's magic as writer and historian. But, with all his charm, his great learning and incomparable scholarship, Gibbon was a sceptic, agnostic, a perpetual doubter as to the validity, weight and worth of our Christian doctrine. To a great degree, he develops his doubt from his declaration that in searching the secular archives and chronicles of the day, he finds very little record—almost no mention, in fact—of the events and incidents on which our Christian faith is largely based, and from which our Christian Church and its history have been developed. The incidents of the acts of the apostles, which to us of the Christian Church and faith mean so much; such as Peter's release from prison and of Herod having the prison-keepers put to death; of Paul's trials and tribulations—Gibbon calls in question, because he finds no state papers or records worthy of use or of mention in history.

One need not be surprised that the state and secular records, so-called, make little or no mention of these salient facts. God's kingdom is not established through the magnificent display of the mighty and the spectacular. The leaven which the woman hid in the meal, that leavened the whole lump, was an act in itself calculated to attract little or no attention and the process was not spectacular. Nevertheless, the work was done, for the lump was leavened. The grain of mustard seed did not create a blast nor make any noticeable disturbance in the soil when it was sown. Its sprouting and growth were not matters of particular notice or any sort of violence or noise. However, the mustard seed gave birth to the plant that sprang forth and did the work whereunto it was sown.

The heavens declare the glory of God, and the firmament showeth His handiwork, but does not require voice or speech to herald their appearance, nor even the eternal declaration they make. Their lines have gone out to the ends of the earth, but the speech they utter is silent, abiding and divine.

The deeds and achievements of our Churches, newspaper makers tells us, are poor reading. The spectacular, the unusual, the violent and the criminal occupy front pages and appear in large headlines. The Church goes forward with its work in its divinely appointed way, and the still small voice speaks as in times past. The lightning and the thunder, the magnificent and mighty, may and do appeal on occasion and manifest a power that is divine and omnipotent. It is to be observed, however, that a power no less divine and a display no less magnificent may be read in every blade of grass that grows and in every flower that blooms and in every blessed tree that bears its fruit, good for the taste and appetite of man. Very often the mightiest forces in the home, in the community, in the State, are the silent forces which attract little or no unusual attention and which go unheeded and unobserved by the historian looking for the unusual and the spectacular.

Our Christian Church, having its divinely appointed task in the world, works away according to divine plan, day by day, year in and year out, like the coming and going of the seasons, quietly, orderly, triumphantly, gloriously. Surely God's ways are not as man's ways, and the things of greatest might, main and majesty with Him scarcely attract the thought and attention of mortal man. That which is least in the sight of man often turns out to be mightiest in the power and hand of God. And he who is least in the estimation of man often turns out, in the wisdom of God, to be mighty—yea, even powerful in the pulling down of strongholds to the glory of God, though without any glory from his fellow-men.

SAVED BY HOPE.

There are primary and fundamental virtues which one must not neglect. Hope is of this number. And one may well wonder if we appreciate and cultivate the virtue of hope as we should. Paul laid great store by it; "For we are saved by hope" (Rom. 8:24). And we are. The tides of life run at low ebb when hope is gone.

Jacob A. Riis related somewhere in his life's story that he had despaired. In such mood, he went, in a deep hour of the night, to end it all by flinging himself overboard and drowning. His confiding dog followed him, and while Riis was preparing for the fatal ordeal at the water's brink, the lean dog looked into his master's face with an appeal that showed the dog's dependence and confidence. Riis declares that the dog's trust and hope in him inspired hope in his own breast, and then and there he declared to his dog that he would not betray his hope and confidence. It was a dim spark indeed, but it kindled in the man some gleam of hope that he might somehow be worthy, not only of the confidence of his faithful dog, but that of his fellow-men also.

We know something of how Riis lived to win the confidence, not only of one, but of millions; for it was of him President Roosevelt in his day was speaking when he declared that Jacob A. Riis was the most valuable and distinguished private citizen of America.

Paul was speaking of a different strain and degree of hope—that hope that maketh not ashamed, and steels one to activity and virile effort. Hope saves not one, but many, for Paul was speaking not in individual, but in universal language. The psalmist was speaking in similar tongue when he said, "Hope in God; for I shall yet praise Him, who is the health of my countenance, and my God" (Psa. 43:5).

These lines are written against the dark days that may be and must come. One who loves his Church will frequently despair because results are not as promising as one had expected; growth seems slow and progress goes at snail's pace. Yet we are bidden to hope, and leave results to God. The pastor, realizing the slow development of his charge and field, becomes heavy-hearted and despondent. The Sunday School superintendent and teacher become impatient of results and almost despair. All who have responsibility and care for moral and spiritual development, growth and progress come to such days of despondency. It is well in such a time to remember Paul's wise words, "We are saved by hope."

It is well to cultivate this grace, this virtue, this vital principle of life. It is cultivated as any other virtue, by practicing it in prayer; by calling on Him, the God of hope, to give us more and more hope, and not to let the hope that is within us lose its gleam, its vigor, or its power.

In the vocabulary of the great virtues, the immortal triumvirate, faith, hope, love, love is put as the greatest; but in such wise as not to discredit or belittle hope. For if love is the dynamo that nerves us to unselfish deeds, hope is the flame that keeps the heart aglow to action and with the fuel of faith gives direction and plan to the achievements of love. "For by hope we are saved."

MONTHLY REVIEW.

In the Fifth Reserve District.

Conclusions on the business situation in the Fifth Reserve District at the middle of June are difficult to draw, conflicting testimony being much in evidence. In an agricultural section like the Fifth District, much depends upon crop prospects, but at the present writing these prospects are highly problematical. Early farm work was done from ten days to two weeks earlier this year than usual, but dry weather in April, cold weather and frosts in May, and hot, dry weather during the first half of June delayed seed germination and plant development to such an extent that much of the early start was lost. Fruit prospects appear considerably worse than a year ago. Taking the district as a whole, the tobacco outlook is not promising, and the weevil is seriously menacing the cotton crop in South Carolina and much in North Carolina. Truck crops, especially Irish potatoes, are turning out below early indications, and the hot, dry weather has cut the early hay yield very seriously. Business failures in the Fifth District in May exceed failures in May, 1924, in both number and liabilities. Textile mills have begun reducing their output as forward orders are caught up. The volume of construction work is showing signs of falling off here and there in the district, and the volume of retail and wholesale trade in May was somewhat below the business done in May, 1924.

On the other hand, debits to individual accounts figures show that a larger volume of business is passing through the banks of the leading trade centers than was the case a year ago. Labor continues well employed, and some improvement has recently been reported in the coal fields of the Fifth District. Corn and other grain crops are doing well and promise relief from the feed shortage on the farms. Bank deposits are increasing. On the whole, prospects for the near future in the Fifth District depend upon weather conditions.

WHY OMIT THE GREATEST?

President-Emeritus Charles W. Eliot, of Harvard University, was asked this question recently:

"If you were selecting out of all modern educational history the ten men whom you would want to put on the other end of the proverbial log, which ten would you select?"

Two groups were selected—one including the best ten in the last 200 years, and the other the best ten in the last 2,300 years, as follows:

Best 10 in 200 years: Adam Smith, Michael Faraday, John Stuart Mill, William Ellery Channing, Ernest Renan, Chas. R. Darwin, Ralph W. Emerson, Horace Mann, Herbert Spencer, Louis Pasteur.

Best 10 in 2,300 years: Aristotle, Galen, Leonardo da Vinci, Milton, Shakespeare, John Locke, Immanuel Kant, Francis Bacon, Isaac Newton, Ralph W. Emerson.

These twenty names are great and deserving of high esteem on the part of a grateful humanity. But what puzzles the writer is the omission of the greatest teacher of all—Jesus Christ. If Dr. Eliot had made any explanation as to why he failed to include Jesus, we would have been glad. Harvard's emeritus president is a great man, which makes the omission of Jesus all the more regrettable. Surely the great Dr. Eliot is not ignorant that every educational theory or method that men have ever advocated or practiced was perfect in the Teacher of Galilee. Why omit the greatest, Dr. Eliot?

OUR MISSIONARY NEEDS.

The needs, and the deficit, of our Mission Board are signs of progress and should have the deep concern of all who care for the future growth and development of our Christian Church. Certainly there are those who say the Mission Board should not have gone in debt or allowed a deficit. Possibly these wise ones are correct; but are their judgments not hasty and immature?

When have SUN readers known a local Church board to build a house of worship and not get pressed or get in debt? Not often, we fancy. Now, multiply this situation, mentally, by scores. The board is trying, has been trying, to encourage and, wherever possible, to aid in erecting houses of worship for real needy congregations. In our zeal we may have gone too far, but it was zeal for the Lord's house and the Lord's work.

Another fact that many lose sight of. Each local congregation feels that its needs is the most urgent, and its opportunity for service is largest. Whenever a congregation—particularly is this true of a mission point—is ready to build, its building is the most pressing necessity in all the bounds and reach of Conference or Convention. These facts, with their appeal, are fraught and laid upon the heart of the Mission Board. Is it any wonder that there is constant struggle and frequent stress with the board?

We are trying to grow. These sounds we hear, these disturbing noises are the utterances of those suffering from the pains and pangs of growth.

If all who subscribe to our special mission fund for a period of five years, and paid those pledges, would agree to continue them indefinitely, as some are doing, it would indeed help a most worthy cause.

MAY HELP MISSIONARY OPERATIONS.

These figures, as reported under the heading "Federal Reserve Bank Operations," not only concern commercial operations, but also may be weighed in the consideration of Church and missionary operations. For this purpose, the following is reprinted here:

The volume of rediscounts held by the Federal Reserve Bank of Richmond increased between May 15th and June 15th this year, rising from $46,201,000 to $52,707,000. An increase in reserve credit in the Fifth District between the middle of May and the middle of June is an unseasonal development, spring credit demand for fertilizer purchases and crop planting usually passing its peak before the period mentioned. The spring credit expansion has been marked this year, however, as pointed out in our "Review" last month, and is probably due chiefly to the decreased money returns from most of last year's crops and to such a wide difference between cash and credit fertilizer prices this year that every farmer who could borrow funds paid cash for his fertilizer. Between May 15th and June 15th the outstanding circulation of Fifth District Federal Reserve notes declined from $73,352,000 to $71,206,000, and the cash reserves of the Federal Reserve Bank of Richmond dropped from $83,684,000 to $78,208,000, but member bank reserve deposits rose from a total of $60,824,000 on May 15th to $64,040,000 on June 15th. As a result of the changes mentioned, the ratio of cash reserves to combined note and deposit liabilities declined during the four weeks from 60 77 per cent to 57.40 per cent.

The volume of reserve bank credit outstanding was larger in the Fifth District on June 15th this year than on the same date a year ago. Between June 15, 1924, and June 15, 1925, the total of loans to member banks increased from $45,674,000 to $52,707,000, but the circulation of Federal reserve notes declined from $74,806,000 to $71,206,000, and member bank reserve deposits rose from $60,544,000 to $64,040,000. The cash reserves of the Federal Reserve Bank of Richmond dropped from $96,190,000 on June 15, 1924, to $78,208,000 on June 15, 1925, and the ratio of cash reserves to combined note and deposit liabilities fell during the year from $68.76 per cent to 57.40 per cent.

"DISTRIBUTORS OF SUNSHINE."

There is a philosophy in epitaphs. Huge granite piles often attempt to visually portray the magnitude of the character whose mortal remains lie beneath. Magnificent shafts that neither time nor the elements seem to mar, in many cases mark the last resting-place of one whose character neither the passing years nor the beacon of truth can impair, and whose fame increases as time intervenes. Delicate sentiments carved on polished stone bespeak of the affection which those who yet live had for the departed one. Finally, countless little heaps of earth with no sign of marker, or only a simple plate, tell in mute language of the "short and simple annals of the poor."

Sometimes, in the solitude and silence of the graveyard, it is inspiring to reflect upon those lives, the remembrance of which prompts their friends to rear monuments, and to attempt to write upon stones, an appreciation of their characters.

Five years ago a familiar figure passed from the ranks of Tennessee Masons. At the head of his grave, upon the occasion of the fifth anniversary of his death, his brethren by whom he was beloved placed a memorial slab. No elaborate verse of prose ornamented its face, but there was an epitome of his life in the one short phrase: "Distributor of Sunshine."

Let us thank God for those kind souls who go through life relating warmth and friendliness among all with whom they come in contact. The Craft is honored by such personalities, and individuals are made better by their having lived. Some men fight wars and their names cover the pages of history. Others win success in their chosen field and are remembered by their accomplishments. But what man could wish to be remembered in more noble fashion than to have engraved upon the hearts of his friends as well as his tomb, "Distributor of Sunshine?"

"INTERCOMPREHENSION."

The British papers, we are told, are having much to say concerning the cultivation of the spirit of amity and concord with the United States. Of course, these two great Anglo-Saxon nations ought to be in perfect harmony. And they ought to act together to promote the peace of the world. But in the discussion, I notice the use of a word of which I wish to make a wider use. "Intercomprehension" is the new term used to express the need of a better mutual understanding of each other. "Intercomprehension!" Isn't that the first long step towards Christian union? We are not half acquainted with each other yet. One of our most widely known brethren who has been lecturing in many of the leading Churches—Roman Catholic, Protestant Episcopal, Presbyterian, Methodist, etc.—said he was surprised to find out how small were our differences, compared with the vital things which we hold common. We have been emphasizing, and, therefore, exaggerating, the things about which we differ. What is the first step towards Christian union, then? Is it not "intercomprehension?" Let us, then, proceed to put away our prejudices and seek to understand each other better. No doubt there are real differences, but these will grow beautifully less in the atmosphere of Christian love and desire for unity.—Exchange.

Canada and the United States lie closer together than any other two nations in the world. The boundary line extending from the Atlantic to the Pacific is 3,000 miles long. Except for that part of it which runs across the Great Lakes, its whole length is through an open country with no natural barriers. The only thing to show that the line exists is a series of stones set up along its course. From one end to the other there is not a fort or a gun or a soldier on guard. This state of affairs has existed for 110 years. During this time there has been peace between this country and England and so there has been peace between this country and Canada. Twelve years ago extensive preparations were being made in the United States and Canada to celebrate the completion of one hundred years of peace between the mother and daughter on one side and another daughter on the other side. But the breaking out of the World War put an end to these preparations. Canada is now proposing that the 110 years of peace shall be celebrated. It is earnestly hoped that the United States will join heartily in the movement. So far as we know there has never been in the history of the world such a complete state of peace for so long a time between two nations lying as close together as Canada and our country, and there has never been a case where neither country felt the need of armed protection against the other. The explanation of this happy state of affairs is that these two countries are governed by unselfish Christian principles. When all other nations are governed by the same principles, there will be universal and continued peace throughout the world. The countries have a great mission in the world to show how nations may and can live at peace one with the other.—Presbyterian Standard.

The young Christian should know his Bible. He should know that if he is to know his Bible he must spend days and nights of prayerful study over its lovely golden pages. There is no magic way by which the Bible is learned. Its treasures are yielded up only to those who search for them.

SUFFOLK LETTER.

The Tide-Mill at Mobjack Bay, in Matthews County, Va., is one of the historic reminders of the truth that "necessity is the mother of invention." Mills were a necessity long before the great mills of modern times began to grind wheat and corn to make bread for mankind. The women of ancient times ground the grain by hand. Dams were built across streams, water wheels were constructed, and the mill ground the grain by the river's help. In the course of time, the tide-mill was constructed and the ocean was used to turn the wheels. Such a mill was built at Mobjack Bay before the War of the Revolution. That mill ground corn and wheat for Washington's army while they were besieging Cornwallis at Yorktown. It ground again for the soldiers in the Confederate Army until General Kirkpatrick's cavalry put it out of commission for a time. It continued to grind after the Civil War.

The big water wheel turns both ways. It turns as the tide comes in and turns the other way as the tide goes out. It ceases to turn about two hours on slack tide. Then the miller has rest. One thing about this wheel that turns the millstones is that it has behind it the power of the ocean, which flows both ways. God's power is behind everything that serves mankind. In all the modern electric power plants, God is working for man. The power of the sun works with the rain in that energy which produces the harvests of the world. The very air is surcharged with divine power. A point for that old mill, now perhaps in decay, was selected where the tide entered through a narrow inlet and where the curve of the hill made the tide enter stronger than through a level marsh.

This old mill teaches Christian people a good lesson. There are flood-times and ebb-times in business; times when money flows in, and times when money flows out. Church members are too much disposed to pay into the treasury of the Lord in flush seasons, and then neglect religious obligations while the crop is waiting for another rain. The thought-mill should be so framed that God's interests should be supported all the year round. Forethought and forework makes the tide-mill operate both ways. Action and reaction are the same, and God's tides work all the time. If a Christian tithes, his tenth should be a systematic support of the cause of Christ the year round. All plans should be laid in Christian giving to keep the mill running whether harvest is coming in or going out. A tide-mill that runs only on floodtide leaves the people without bread part of the time; and the current support that comes only at flush times leaves the Church without life.

ELON LETTER.

My friend Roger W. Babson, of the Babson Institute, Babson Park, Mass., has just issued one of his perennial notes of advice to young people just graduated from our colleges. The beauty about Babson's perennialness is that it is annual, but always different. His originality, his sincerity, his deep vital piety and religious faith are tonics at all times.

But to return to his message, the best thing to do is to quote it verbatim, et litteratim, et punctuatim—without change of jot or tittle. So here it is:

"To the Sons and Daughters of My Clients:

"Many of you have just graduated from school or college and are about to try your own wings. Some of you are going to work for the first time; others of you are getting married. I wonder if you would take a word of advice from one who has seen considerable of this old world! If so, here it is:

First.—Let me say that the fun of life is in growing, rather than in possession. Every successful man will tell you this. We really enjoy only the things which we ourselves make or earn. This is the reason why your parents think so much more of their own children than those of their neighbors. Moreover, you will love your children some day only in proportion to the sacrifices you make for them. Now, to grow and enjoy growing, you must start at the bottom. Be content to start work at a small salary and live on that salary. Millions of others get on without asking Pa for help on the salary which will be offered to you, and you can do so as well. When you get married, be content to start in a humble way, as your parents did. Don't try to start where your parents now are. Remember that almost every great and successful business man started work in a cellar or a garret.

"Second.—Make up your minds to work! Get to your job before you are required to be there, and don't ever leave until closing time. Do a little more, and do it a little better than the boss expects. It's all right to suggest changes and improvements in the business after you have made a success yourself; but first buckle down and make a success of just one job—yourself. You can't grow without working. I have always heard about "easy money," but I have never seen any of it. All the successful men whom I know are dynamos for work. They may have ugly dispositions and other failings, but they all are great workers. Men who get their money through speculation or inheritance usually lose it. The really big men of America have won their spurs by doing what they didn't want to do when they didn't want to do it.

"Third.—Develop the habit of thrift. Never mind if you don't need to save. Because your father has money today is no reason why he always will. The older a man gets, the more likely he is to lose his money. Instead of inheriting a million from the 'old man,' you may yet have to support him. Hence, acquire the habit of saving. We can just as easily learn to get on without things as with them. Very few things are really necessary. Put some money in a bank savings account every month. You can do so just as well as not, and people will have more respect for you. Only by building up a bank account can you later be sure of having capital for going into business for yourself. Remember that most employers are employers because they always spend a little less than they receive; while most employees are employees largely because they always have spent all they have "Fourth.—Remember these few simple maxims, which are based upon the experience of millions of people during the past centuries:

"Never go with a girl you are not willing to marry.

"Honesty is not only the best policy, but it is the foundation of civilization.

"The time to save money is when you are making it.

"Keep out of debt. Be generous in giving, but avoid accommodation loans, and never endorse.

"No elevator will take us up in the business world—we must climb.

"Boost the other fellow and he will boost you, as we are usually repaid with our own coin; and judge not.

"The way to make friends is by being a friend; and to have friends when we need them, we must be friendly to others first.

"Specialize on one thing. To succeed, it is only necessary to do some simple thing better than any one else in the community can do it.

"Don't try to buck either the Ten Commandments or the multiplication table.

"Finally, pray for spiritual guidance and power. Join some Church and be a useful member of your community.

"Forgive me for this lecture. If, some week-end, you'll come to Wellesley and rough it in one of our tents, I will promise not to give you a word of advice. I try to be at the Babson Park Clubhouse each Sunday afternoon from 4 to 6, and shall be glad to see you. Moreover, if you will be our guest, sleep in one of the tents and cook your meal in the stone fireplace, it will give you a good start toward thrift, and thereby make a good hit with your Dad." W. A. Harper.

LYNCHBURG CHURCH.

It was my privilege on Sunday, June 28th, to worship with the people of our new Church—the United Christian Church at Lynchburg—and it was indeed our inspiration to see the devotion of these people to their newly discovered Church home. That freedom is born out of the heart and experience of men and women made its profound impression upon me as I fellowshiped with these people. That same quest for freedom as was made real in the experience of O'Kelly, Stone, Smith and the heart of others is also clearly manifested a reality among the membership of the United Christian Church. This Church is happy in the discovery of the Christian Church and is zealous in the task of promoting its principles for Christ's sake.

The United Christian Church is anxious and exceedingly so, that it become a definite part of our great Christian Church. They are supporting its every institution. Already its Sunday School is giving one Sunday's offering each month to missions and one to the Orphanage, and at the opening of Elon College this fall one of their fine young men will enter to prepare himself for the gospel ministry. Plans are being made for representation at the Elon Chautauqua.

Rev. M. F. Allen and his good wife, the leaders of this people, are loved by all. There is a mutual devotion by pastor and people, and this devotion is combined in the noble work of making the Church.

The auxiliary organizations of the Church are active. The memberships and percentage of attendance in the Sunday School promise gratifying results.

The Christian Endeavor Society represents interest such as I have rarely seen, and the consecrated leaders are reaching standards of efficiency. Plans are being made for organization of missionary society circles in the near future.

The services of the Church are held twice each Sunday, at 11 A. M. and at 8 P. M., and on Wednesday night a prayer service at 8 o'clock, followed by a public-speaking class for the young people. On Thursday afternoon a cottage prayer meeting is held in the community.

Should you have occasion to be in Lyuchburg, don't miss the opportunity to look up Bro. Allen. The Church is located in the Fort Hill section, a section which is rapidly becoming populated by the city.

May God bless and prosper Bro. Allen and the membership of the United Christian Church in the wonderful things already accomplished, that still greater work may be realized.

MISSIONS

REV. J. O. ATKINSON, D. D., Field Secretary.

STEWARDSHIP AND PROMOTION.

WARREN H. DENISON, Secretary.

How Much by September 30th?

With that date, our Church-year closes. All funds pledged to the Forward Movement are due, and greatly needed. Five years ago and more we undertook, with fine enthusiasm, a mighty movement forward for the Christian Church. God has wonderfully blessed us in this effort. A proof of this is that the needs of every cause today are not less, but far greater. That is God's way. He increases our responsibilities with the increase of our ability. We should now complete our Forward Movement subscriptions. Thousands of individual members have paid their pledges in full. Some have paid more than they pledged. Many others are continuing right on annually the same subscription they gave at first. They rejoice to have a part in the continuation work. Our immediate need is to have all others pay their pledges in full. The Christian Church must not retrench or fail. The honor of the Church is at stake. For a Christian, a pledge must always be a pledge—a solemn promise to Almighty God. The needs of the kingdom, our love for Christ and our Church call upon us all to share in the work according to our ability. With allowance for exceptional cases, the integrity of the individual and the honor of the Church call for the full payment of every subscription.

If you are in arrears, may we look for your payment before September 30th? If our work is to grow, if we are to expect God to bless us, we must serve, sacrifice, be true to our promises and to our better selves.

The Bureau of Stewardship and Promotion.

This bureau is endeavoring—

1. To help make the financial side of your Church life pleasant, agreeable, worshipful, and as interesting as any other phase of your Church work.

2. To help you avoid coming up to the end of each Church-year with a deficit to make up.

3. To help you to enlist among your active workers those names on your roll that you call inactive.

4. To help you greatly increase the man-power of your Church.

5. To help you enlist the 50 per cent of those on your Church roll in the support of your local Church expenses, and the 65 per cent on your roll who are not doing anything for the extension work, benevolences of the kingdom.

6. To help you simplify and make more efficient your Church organization, so that there may be harmony in carrying out the plans and work of our whole Church.

We invite correspondence, and have a real desire to be of such assistance as we may.

The Value of Tithing.

One of our leading New England pastors—Rev. E. R. Caswell, Laconia, N. H.—sets forth four values arising from tithing:

"Value 1. By tithing, one may express his appreciation of the continuous blessing of God.

"Value 2. By tithing, one is enabled to bear testimony by personal example to a high standard of financial stewardship, which is appointed and approved by God.

"Value 3. By tithing, one makes a larger contribution to the service of God than human nature is usually willing to present.

"Value 4. By tithing, one has the approval of Him who claimed the tithe as His portion."

THE FIJI ISLANDS—TODAY.

BY MARY G. WRAY,

Associate Editor Moody Bible Institute Monthly.

Less than a century has passed since the Fijians were cannibals, and their Christianization is one of the marvels of missionary work. Now their national hobby is religion—they talk and sing, think and act the Christian religion.

The Fijians are essentially "children of nature," without traditions to hamped them or settled forms of worship from which they must break away. When their chiefs were converted, the people usually followed gladly, but neighboring tribes were threatened with slaughter if they failed to conform. Thakambau, one of the last of the cannibal chiefs to be converted, was a revolting, blood-thirsty monster with a legendary authority over all the islands. He drove out the early missionaries, but they continued to visit him and preach to him. As more and more of the petty native rulers accepted Christianity, the people became correspondingly restless and could not hide their hatred for the cruel Thakambau, who was at last forced by public sentiment to admit the missionaries. His chief argument against his own acceptance of Christ was: "But I could no longer kill and eat!" At last he yielded and published the manifesto requiring all his subjects to become Christians or be slaughtered. He lived, however, to learn that Christians must be tolerant and forgiving.

The 90,000 Fijians are now practically all Christians—at least in name. Their Churches are wholly self-supporting, and they contribute to missionary work in other fields. This crown colony of Great Britain contains her most law-abiding citizens. Scarcely ever is a man imprisoned except for non-payment of taxes, due to carelessness or laziness. The residential tax on foreigners, a pound a head, is a source of irritation to the East Indians.

Most of the Fijians go to Church, and it is impossible to get a man to work on Sunday. Children are well behaved and obedient, and some are already organized as student volunteers. Each village supports a Church and a native teacher and pastor. The religious work of the islands is administered by the Methodist Church of Australia, which appoints a supervisor, for whom the natives supply a bungalow.

One of the native virtues is hospitality. Missionaries or tourists are often invited to occupy a native house, the family moving out to make this possible. The Fijians are cleanly in their habits and keep their villages free from rubbish. Every night the street crier goes up and down calling the names of workers and tasks assigned for the next day's village cleaning. The natives, having no ambition to earn money beyond their immediate needs, willingly contribute their labors to the community welfare.

"Community sings" in Fiji long antedate war days in America. Christian hymns are their favorites, and it is common for twilight groups to gather for song on the village plaza. Good singers, with a fine sense of rhythm, they love singing and make their own harmony.

Missionary work in Fiji is now conducted principally in behalf of the East Indians, who maintain their pagan worship and introspective philosophies wherever they live. They are more inclined to disorder than the Fijians, who are gentle and courteous. Any public disorder or law breaking is caused by the Indians, about 60,000 of whom constitute the industrial element. At first, they were imported for work in the sugar and pineapple industries, but they now control many lines of business. Every taxi and milk cart driver is an Indian. Some Chinese and Japanese are employed in stores, laundries and gardening, and there are at least 2,000 whites in the islands.

As evinced in their hospitality and general community spirit, the Fijians are extremely generous. If a man is wearing a new coat which another admires, the first promptly removes it from his own back and presents it to his acquaintance. They are great gift-givers, and upon special occasions, particularly at weddings, they heap their gifts at the feet of the honored persons.

This spirit makes their annual meeting, with its prolonged offering, a great delight, sometimes continuing until midnight. The collection is the last feature of the meeting, and is a formal procedure, to which groups or individuals respond, as their names are called. The people bring all the money they have, sometimes getting it changed into small coins, in order to prolong the joy of marching up front many times with various groups. Not until the last coins are deposited is the meeting adjourned.

One of Mr. Weavers' most interesting stories is a graphic illustration of the natural generosity of the Fijian augmented by his Christian consecration. Josiah, a native pastor, who contracted leprosy, was sent to a leper colony on another island. Seeing the great need for spiritual teaching and consolation among these people, he wrote to the chamberlain of the district, asking appointment as pastor there. He preached and taught among the lepers, but after some time, under treatment, and because of his splendid condition previously, he was cleared of his leprosy and given his papers for return to his own home. Josiah then wrote again to the chamberlain, reporting his release, but asking to be continued as the pastor there, since the need persisted. At last accounts, he had again contracted the terrible disease.

OUR MOUNTAIN WORK.

We are planning on beginning our Rocky Ford building by the first of August. It will be necessary for us to secure some more money in order to build the Church. For about three years we have been promising these people a building, and have not yet given it. I am sure, could our good people realize the need and great opportunity for service, we would have no difficulty in getting the money. We are grateful for the following donations that have been sent in since our last report. We hope each and every donor will feel assured that these donations have been appreciated. T. L. Felts, $15.00; Will Thompkins, 50 cents; Miss Clemer, $1.00; Dr. and Mrs. Clack, $8 00; Richard Mitchel, $1.00; Mr. Boggs, $5.; Liberty, Vance, $30.00; Henderson, $10.70; Reidsville, $16.00; Miss Anna Helfenstein, $5.00; 4 boxes of clothing and 1 box of Sunday School papers, Circle No. 4, Burlington; 2 boxes clothing, Mrs. Teague; 2 boxes of clothing, Durham; 1 box of magazines, Reidsville, Mrs. Gerringer; 2 boxes clothing, Miss Alice Marquart. A good collection of books from Albany, N. Y.; a collection of papers from Dayton Publishing Association; a collection of literature from Brushton, N. Y.; 1 large box of clothing from Pleasant Grove, Va.; Mrs. Elby, $5.00; a good collection of literature from Miss Roberson.

These donations have been received by Miss Morey or myself. M. T. SORRELL,

ELON CHAUTAUQUA AND SCHOOL OF METHODS.

The people of the Christian Church are recognizing that the work done in the summer schools is most worthwhile, and for this reason several new ones have recently been added. Last year, Keswick (Ontario) and Bethlehem College were added, and this summer a young people's session was added to the school at Defiance College and a new school at Starkey Seminary, in New York State. The work which the Christian Church is doing in its summer schools compares very favorably with similar work of this type which is being done by other denominations and interdenominational organizations. The movement for special training during the summer months, through Schools of Methods, Conferences and camps, has become so popular that many thousands of people will attend this summer and will return to their local Churches better trained for service and with a broader vision of the opportunities for service.

The School of Methods in the Southern Christian Convention began with the Chautauqua which was established at Virginia Beach in 1914. The leaders realizing that the colleges should be the center of training for Christian service, moved it to Elon College. Since it was moved to the college, the sessions have become increasingly more popular. This gives old students an opportunity to visit their alma mater, and members of the Church who have never had an opportunity to visit their college such a chance; it gives our Church people an opportunity to visit the Orphanage. This summer, many people will be especially interested in seeing the five new buildings and the campus, since grass has been planted and cement walks laid. The college has been generous enough to furnish the dormitories, with light and water, free of charge to visitors, the auditorium for evening sessions and the Mooney Christian Education Building for classes.

The School of Methods program has been arranged with the classes of people in mind, namely, the ministers, young people and laity at large. The program will be especially helpful to ministers whose fields of labor make it hard for them to keep up-to-date in the best methods of Church work and pastoral service. Our Churches can never rise above the ministers, and each Church should co-operate with its minister in attending the School of Methods. It will be especially helpful for rural ministers, whose work keeps them busy all the year around and who do not have the privilege of belonging to a ministerial association or hearing helpful lectures during the year.

Secondly, the young people of the Churches should have an opportunity to do special training in Church work and to enjoy the fellowship of other Christian young people. Some of them will never have an opportunity to attend college, and others in college will be too busy to concentrate on definite Church methods as they are able to do by giving their entire time to it for ten days.

Thirdly, the program has been planned with the laymen in mind—those faithful Christians who have worked for years in our Sunday Schools as superintendents and teachers; in missionary societies, on Church boards, and other important positions in the Churches without ever having a chance for special training. Their responsibilities are such that they cannot go to college, and often their means are too limited to buy the newest books on their special subjects. The School of Methods gives them a chance to get, in a short period of time under the best possible faculty, just the type of training they need.

The Chautauqua and School of Methods meets at Elon College this summer from July 27th to August 7th. The extension of time from one week to ten days has made possible a much larger program than in the past. The additional time came as a result of many requests from people who have attended in the past who have felt that more and better work could be done in a longer period of time.

The program includes morning worship and Bible study in groups, international credit courses in child psychology and methods (primary and junior), Bible, youth and the Church, and the organization and administration of the Church school; a course for young people in "What Shall I Do with My Life?" and the Christian Church; pageantry and dramatics, stewardship, Christian Endeavor with a series of lectures for young people on "What it Means to Be a Christian," missions (two courses), worship in the Church school, music (for young people), evangelism, daily vacation Bible school for leaders, and Church organization.

Mrs. E. L. Burkholder, of Richmond, Va., who has had wide experience in teaching music and in conducting community sings and pageants, will have charge of "Happy Hour," and teach the course in music. Mr. W. A. Welch, of the Y. M. C. A. in Henderson, N. C., who has been very successful there and at other places in directing recreational activities, will be the director of recreation. He, with the assistance of one young person to every ten delegates, will have something planned for the entertainment and pleasure of every one present. Rev. E. H. Rainey's series of lectures on "What it Means to Be a Christian" deserves especial mention, as they have been prepared for young people and attempt to help them solve some of the problems which arise in their early Christian experience.

The daily vacation Bible school under the direction of Prof. S. A. Bennett and his helpers, the evening lectures, commencement with the awarding of certificates, the Sunday services, and special exhibits, promise an interesting time for all who attend. Those who desire rooms in the dormitories should reserve them in advance. For further information, write to the Field Secretary, Elon College, N. C. PATTIE L. COGHILL.

RELIGIOUS EDUCATION

By H. S. Hardcastle.

MISS PATTIE COGHILL, Field Secretary, 11 East Newton St., Boston, Mass.

INTERNATIONAL UNIFORM SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON.

July 19, 1925.

Subject: "The Gospel in Lystra."

Golden Text: "Blessed are they that have been persecuted for righteousness' sake, for theirs is the kingdom of heaven."—Matt. 5:10.

Lesson: Acts 14:1-28.

Devotional Reading: Psa. 46:1-7.

"When they persecute you in this city, flee ye into another," said Jesus. That was not because the Master was commending cowardice, but because He was commending prudence and common sense. And Paul and Barnabas obeyed this counsel of strategy. When they were persecuted and driven out of Antioch, they went to Iconium. And when, after a long sojourn in Iconium, during which they spake boldly in the Lord and did a great work, an assault was made upon them, and they went unto Lystra and Derbe. There were too many places that needed the gospel to spend their time in a place where effective work had become impossible. Furthermore, the word had been sown. Some of it had fallen on good ground. In due time, it would spring up and bring forth fruit.

The missionaries had an interesting experience at Lystra. The fact that there was no synagogue there, did not deter them from preaching the word. They simply held an open-air meeting and "preached the gospel." One is impressed with the zeal of these men to make the "good news" known. Great things would come to pass if we had as much zeal and enthusiasm in the Master's work. One of those who heard Paul and gave him his attention—it is not difficult to believe that Paul could get the attention of his hearers—was a cripple: a man who had been lame from his mother's womb. There was something in the man's expression that attracted Paul's attention, and perceiving that he had faith to be healed, he commanded him to stand upright on his feet. "And he stood up and walked." This is typical of the power of Christianity. It takes men who are living on the lower levels of life, men who are not able to walk in the way of righteousness, and makes them stand upright, restores the dignity of manhood, gives them power to walk in paths of righteousness and service. This is a miracle in itself.

The people, steeped in superstition, and ignorant of the power of the living God, thought that their gods had come down in the likeness of men, and the priest of Jupiter, together with the people, would have done sacrifice unto Paul and Barnabas, whom they called Mercurius and Jupiter. Disclaiming any credit for the act, and using the opportunity thus afforded to drive home a spiritual message, Paul declared that their purpose was to deliver men from the bondage to just such vanities and to turn them to the living God who had not left Himself witnessless, even in pagan lands. Here again we see the genius of Christianity. It seeks to turn men from the vanities of the world, from the things that are material, and hence temporal, to the things that are spiritual and hence eternal. One of the tests of growth in the spiritual life is the increasing faith in and emphasis on spiritual forces.

The zeal and the enthusiasm were not all on Paul's side. The Jews had those qualities in large measure, and in spite of the fact that it was one hundred miles from Iconium to Lystra, they followed Paul and attacked him, this time bodily. They stoned him and threw him out of the city, thinking he was dead. But with an amazing vitality, and with an even more amazing courage, Paul rose up, and actually went back into the city. When we think of the courage of the man, and then think of how often we deny our Master because of fear—not fear of physical persecution, but fear of ridicule or public opinion—we ought to be put to shame.

After a visit in Derbe, where they preached the gospel and taught, the missionaries retraced their steps and visited the cities from which in every case they had been driven. They "confirmed the souls of the disciples, exhorting them to continue in the faith," and warned them that, through much tribulation, they must enter into the kingdom of God. In doing this, they were following the Master's example. He never pictured the Christian way of life as easy. In fact, He made it a very difficult way of life. Let no man think that he can drift to heaven on flowery beds of ease. The Christian way of life is by the way of the cross.

As an aid to discipline and strength, Paul appointed elders in the Churches which he had established. Then they started back on their long journey to the mother Church. One is always interested in an address by a foreign missionary, for he can tell at first hand of the things he has seen. And as I read that "when they were come and had gathered the Church together, they rehearsed all that God had done with them," I wish that I could have been there. What great things Paul and Barnabas must have recounted to the eager hearers. And how they must have rejoiced when they realized that they had been workers together with Paul and Barnabas. If we could visit the mission field in person, or lacking that great privilege, if we could have missionaries in sufficient numbers often enough to tell us of the conditions and needs and accomplishments on the mission field, perhaps we would do more in this the supreme business of the Church.

Teaching Points.

1. Sanctified common sense is an essential quality of a useful Christian life.
2. The essential task of the missionary and the minister is to preach the gospel.
3. Christ brings division.
4. Christianity bids men stand upright.
5. Faith is an essential to victory.
6. Christianity banishes superstition.
7. God has come down in the likeness of men.
8. The difference in what men accomplish in Christian service is not always a matter of ability, but of consecration.
9. Christianity comes not to destroy, but to fulfill.
10. Christianity finds a foundation even in pagan religions.
11. God hath not left Himself without witness, even in heathen lands.
12. Christianity calls for courage today as in other days, even though it be of a different type.
13. Converted people need confirming help.
14. Preaching and teaching go hand in hand.
15. The Christian life is a struggle.
16. Personal testimony of what God has done for one is an inspiration to others.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

July 19, 1925.

Topic: "Great Women of the Bible."—Luke 10:38-42; Esth. 4:1-17.

Some Bible Hints.

Martha is the type of the woman who serves, who thinks of the comfort of others, a splendid, unselfish type. (V. 40.)

It is not well to let responsibility rest too heavily on one. Comfort is good, but spiritual knowledge is better. (V. 40.)

Mary chose the best dish when she listened to Jesus and tried to understand Him. What is our favorite dish? (V. 42.)

Many women, some of them missionaries, have shown Esther's courage in facing known danger to save life. (V. 16.)

Suggestive Thoughts.

Miriam, Moses' sister, was a prophetess (Exod. 15:21), and probably her influence shaped her brother's career in Egypt. All women have influence.

Hannah, Samuel's mother (see 1 Sam. 2), is a type of consecrated motherhood that gladly gives her children to God. Woman's prayers count.

Deborah's ode in Judges 5 shows that women were not all ignorant in ancient times. There is no inferiority of heart or intellect in woman.

A Few Illustrations.

1 Pet. 3:1-6 suggests that women discovered long before man did that the art of ruling is to yield. Sarah obeyed! Today we need more yielding on both sides.

The story of Abigail, who afterwards became the wife of David, is that of a wise woman. She wins by humility what force never can achieve.

Jezebel (read 1 Kings 16:31, 18:4, 19:2; 2 Kings 9:30) is the type of passionate wickedness, a solemn warning of pride, prejudice, and the misuse of power.

Ruth stands forth as the great example of friendship; the woman who is faithful, who is true in dark days as well as in sunshine; the woman with a heart of gold.

To Think About.

What lesson have you learned from some woman of the Bible?

How did women in Bible times exercise their influence?

What was the sin of Lot's wife? (Gen. 19:26.)

A Cluster of Quotations.

"To be womanly is the greatest charm of woman."—Gladstone.

"A good and true woman is said to resemble a Cremona violin—age but increases its worth and sweetens its tone."—Oliver Wendell Holmes.

"Great men have sought the battle in their pride,
Hewing a path to glory as they fell;
But women, braver still, have grandly died
In silent struggles fame may never tell."
—Anon.

"Her voice was ever soft, Gentle and low; an excellent thing in woman."
—Shakespeare.

The teacher was giving the class a lecture on "gravity."

"Now, children," she said, "it is the law of gravity that keeps us on this earth."

"But, please, teacher," inquired one small child, "how did we stick on before the law was passed?"

Striking manners are bad manners.—Hall.

Christian Orphanage

Dear Friends:

Our Burlington Church Leads them All.

Our Burlington Church takes the lead as a Church in coming to our aid in our new building program. Your superintendent had the pleasure of visiting our Burlington Church and Sunday School on Sunday, June 21st, and presented the new building program. We also gave out pledge cards to each Sunday School class to be used in making subscriptions.

We asked the Burlington people to raise, as their quota, the sum of three thousand dollars. Last Sunday, June 28th, when the cards were returned and counted up, they found they had subscribed forty-three hundred dollars, and felt confident within another week to make it five thousand. Our Burlington people are great folks, and we did not expetc anything less of them. They work and do things. May the Burlington Church spirit grip many of our Churches and inspire them to greater deeds.

Our farmer boys are happy over their big wheat and oat crop. They had the Orphanage threshing last week and made two hundred and forty-two bushels of wheat, three hundred and sixty bushels of oats, thirty-two bushels of rye—six hundred and forty-two bushels in all—and then added one hundred and twenty bushels of Irish potatoes to the farm income. They are happy because they beat everybody in this section in threshing the most bushels, and feel that they are getting on the map as farmers. We think they did well—don't you?

Joe Jones is still smiling as he brings in from thirty to forty gallons of milk each day from his Holstein cows. Joe says it takes milk to make good bread, and it is mighty good to drink, too.

Wilson Collier says he must not be left out, as it takes eggs to feed the sick and to aid the matrons who have charge of the cooking in making good things to eat, and then the children like them for breakfast, too. Wilson comes in with a smiling face every other day with a basket full of nice fresh White Leghorn eggs. About sixty-five dozen each week.

The Ellis Machine and Music Company, of Burlington, gave the baby home a good second-hand organ to be used for the joy and pleasure of our little children. It will be quite a blessing to us, as the little folks like to sing.

CHAS. D. JOHNSTON,
Superintendent.
